

RUSHING SEASON TO LAST TWELVE DAYS THIS YEAR

Shorter Period Deemed More Advisable Than Usual Season by Interfraternity Council.

Rushing rules for 1932 went into effect last Monday, September 19, with the beginning of the first period of silence, which will continue through Saturday, September 24. The thirteen days following this latter date will constitute the 1932 rushing season.

Invitations accorded by the various fraternities to those members of the freshman class whom they wish to visit their houses were filed in the registrar's office yesterday. These await delivery during the next two days.

The rushing activities of Sunday, September 25, will be confined to the fraternities entertaining the freshmen at their houses for that day. At this time the new men are extended bids to visit the houses of those fraternities from whom they have received bids. The rushing season properly begins the following—

NEW UNIVERSITY SCHOOL HEADED BY W. C. JACKSON

Cherished Plan of State Leaders Finally Realized in School of Public Administration.

A long-cherished project of men who have the interest of North Carolina and its advancement at heart has at last been realized with the establishment of a school of public administration at the University. Cooperation between this new school and the state-wide institute of governmental officers recently organized under the leadership of Professor Albert M. Coates will mean much in the improvement of public welfare and government in North Carolina in the immediate future.

The establishment of such a school here on the campus is expected to bring the students to a fuller realization of their obligations as citizens and leaders in the commonwealth which has provided their educational resources.

Dr. Jackson Heads School

Dr. W. C. Jackson, formerly vice-president of N. C. C. W., accepted the headship of the new school and will begin his work this fall. The organization of this school will cause no other addition to the faculty other than that of Dr. Jackson.

The University, throughout its long history, has always had strong social interests, great faith in the ultimate soundness of democratic government, and a responsibility for serving the state as a laboratory in governmental research and a training ground for future governmental leaders.

A leader in the above point of view was former President Edward Kidder Graham, who said when he brought Dr. E. C. Branson here and established the department of rural social economics: "Its business is to teach North Carolina to North Carolinians; not the North Carolina of day before yesterday but the North Carolina of day after tomorrow."

Dialectic Senate Will Meet Tuesday Night

The initial meeting of the Dialectic Senate is planned for Tuesday at 7:00 o'clock. At this time, the president for the fall quarter, Charles G. Rose, Jr., will make the regular inaugural speech. There will be no bills discussed at the meeting.

Those freshmen who indicated their interest in debating and forensic work in the questionnaire sent out by the dean of students were sent invitations. These freshmen are especially urged to attend, and any other students who are interested are asked to be present.

MEMBERS OF '32 CONTRIBUTE $247 TO LOYALTY FUND

J. G. deR. Hamilton Receives $400 to Further Work of Historical Collection.

The Alumni Loyalty Fund office announced yesterday that the class of 1932 had pledged the total sum of $247 to the "Hope Pledge Fund" founded a year ago. The pledges were made under the supervision of Felix A. Grisette, director of the Alumni Loyalty Fund.

The class also contributed $400 to the Southern Historical Collection. This gift has been turned over to Professor J. G. De Roulhac Hamilton, Kenan professor of American history and director of the University's activity in southern historical research.

Pledges to the fund ranged from one to ten dollars and included a representative number of the baby members of the alumni body. Fulfillment of the promises was left to the convenience of the donors, none of whom pledged to pay later than January 1, 1936. One member bound himself to meet his obligation with "the first money received as wages."

A private donation of twenty dollars will be lumped with the—

FIFTY FRESHMEN ATTEND Y MEET

Outstanding Boys From Leading Schools Invited by Y. M. C. A. to Attend Pre-College Retreat.

The University Y. M. C. A. this year sponsored a pre-college retreat for fifty-seven outstanding freshmen from Saturday, September 17, through Monday, September 19.

From one to three boys out of each leading high school and prep school who had the best record for interest and participation in the religious, social, and activity life of their communities, were invited to come to the campus two days before the remaining number of new men convened. The purpose of the retreat was to bring to the campus, in advance of the rest of the class, a specially selected group of freshmen and give them a three-day program that will acquaint them with the customs and traditions of the University, its leaders, and methods.

The idea of a pre-college retreat has been growing rapidly among the leading universities of the country for the past decade, having become a part of the program at the University of Pennsylvania, University of Georgia, Cornell University, Vanderbilt University, and University of Texas.

PLAN FOR YEAR'S WORK AT GRAHAM MEMORIAL BEGUN

Mayne Albright, Newly Chosen Manager, Expects Busy Season At Student Union.

Mayne Albright, '32, newly appointed manager of the Graham Memorial building, announced yesterday his tentative plans for the running of the building this year. Albright, last year's student body president, succeeds Noah Goodridge who resigned to take a position with International Cash Registers company of Philadelphia.

Albright announced the addition of several new games to the game room. He has put in two shuffle boards which have proved very popular and also added two skill-ball games and one called play-bow. He stated that on the opening night of the building approximately eighty boys were using the facilities of the game room.

The dormitories will meet at the Memorial building at specified times for the purpose of electing dormitory presidents and their representative for the University forum which meets regularly at the Memorial building. After the meeting the game room will be turned over for the use of men in the various dormitories. Albright plans to have informal dances weekly. These dances will be sponsored by various campus organizations and will be free of charge.

MUSICAL TALENT FOR COMING YEAR SHOWS PROMISE

Harold S. Dyer Plans Extensive Programs for University Band and Orchestra.

The outlook of the musical university for the coming year is the best in several years, according to Harold S. Dyer, head of the department of music. Advance reports collected by the music department indicate that both the band and orchestra, with the exception of the trombone sections, will be stronger this year than last. This year's freshman class is expected to bring with it a great wealth of talent from all over the south, most of which will come from North Carolina.

Doctor Dyer has outlined a rather extensive plan of work and entertainment for the year. The band under the direction of T. Smith McCorkle gets under way tonight and is scheduled to be on hand tomorrow for the opening game. In addition to its work on the football field during the fall the band plans to present several concerts. Two trips have so far been arranged for the band.

Symphony Orchestra Work

The University symphony orchestra begins its work next week under Dyer's direction. Four major concerts during the ensuing year have been planned by the department, and in addition to these there will be a series of matinee programs especially for public school children. The orchestra is also planning to cooperate with the Chapel Hill Oratorical society in the presentation of a Christmas concert in the same manner in which they gave Elijah.

Although the glee club has made no definite arrangements for tours yet, a series of campus concerts have already been—

STUDENTS TO GET SPECIAL SECTION IN KENAN STANDS

To Avoid Federal Tax, Students Will Use Only Designated Seats At Football Games.

If Carolina football adherents wish to witness gridiron battles this fall without paying an extra charge for that privilege, they must sit in a designated section set aside by the University Athletic association. Sections 17, 18, 19, and 20, rows A through Z have been given the student body. These seats are on the south side of the field in the center sections and are the most desirable in the stadium.

In the last session of Congress when a tax on admissions to athletic contests was drawn up, it was first decided that student admissions to games would be taxed. Only after a hectic battle by various athletic associations in the country was this tax removed, the Internal Revenue department eliminating it on one condition: that certain sections of seats be set aside for each game for students only. Therefore students cannot sit in seats outside these sections without paying full admission price plus the ten per cent Federal tax.

Coupon books must be presented at gate 5 for admission. Any fraudulent use of the student athletic book will result in its forfeiture.

FLORIDA RAILWAY BEGINS SUIT FOR UNIVERSITY FUND

Three People, Including President Graham, Are Named Defendants in Fight.

As a beneficiary of the will of the late Henry Flagler's widow, the University has become involved in a lawsuit which threatens to deprive it of the Kenan foundation. Scott M. Loftin, receiver for the Florida East Coast railway, filed official papers in the supreme court of New York in mid-July. President Frank P. Graham was named as a defendant in the case as were William R. Kenan, Jr., and Lawrence Haines, trustees of the estate of Mrs. Mary Lily Flagler Bingham.

Mrs. Flagler, to whom Flagler is reported to have left $1,000,000 at his death in 1913, established a trust fund for the University which gives the institution $75,000 annually. The money has been used to augment salaries of certain professors, known as "Kenan professors," and for a wide variety of scholarly research activity.

Neglect Alleged

The trustees were accused in the formal complaint of having neglected to apply the proceeds of the trust fund to the maintenance of the Florida railway, a stipulation which appeared in Mrs. Flagler's will.

The supreme court has been requested to interpret the will to the effect that the trust fund was established for the benefit of the railway, to issue an order directing the trustees so to apply the income, and to grant an injunction restraining the trustees from disbursing any funds without a court order. If granted, this action would render only the railway a beneficiary of the will and thus deprive the University of the Kenan grant.

Big Pep Meeting Is Scheduled Tonight

A special pep meeting has been called tonight in Memorial hall at 9:15 o'clock. All freshmen are expected to attend and bring their Handbooks.

The chief cheerleader has requested that all new men familiarize themselves with the yells before attending the meeting. A special program has been arranged with several pep talks and the cheerleaders are looking for a large crowd. Coach Bob Fetzer will speak.

This will be the only pep meeting before the Carolina-Wake Forest football game tomorrow.

STRINGFIELD TO RECEIVE TRIBUTE BY MUSIC WORLD

Composition of Native Composer To Be Presented Over Radio In General Electric Hour.

The musical world will again pay tribute to North Carolina's foremost native composer Monday night when the General Electric symphony orchestra under the direction of Erno Rapee presents as the feature of the evening Lamar Stringfield's Cripple Creek.

It is North Carolina's turn in the "Parade of the States." Monday night's program will consist in the main of things of and about the Old North State. Bruce Barton, well known lecturer and writer, will deliver a short address on North Carolina. It is not yet definitely known what phase of the state he will discuss, but it is expected that he will speak on North Carolina as a place in which to live.

Although Lamar Stringfield's composition is to be the highlight of the evening, other North Carolina musical numbers will also be rendered. A melody of the college songs of the state will be included on the program, concluding with a symphonic arrangement—

HI-Y BANQUET IS SET FOR TONIGHT

Principal Address of Evening Will Be Made by President Frank P. Graham.

The annual Hi-Y banquet, which is given by the University Y. M. C. A. for new students, is scheduled in the banquet hall at Graham Memorial tonight at 6:00 o'clock. Jack Poole will act as master of ceremonies, and the principal address will be made by President Graham. Dr. Graham has made this talk for the past several years, and even before he became president of the University, this event had become somewhat of a tradition. Bill McKee, president of the Y. M. C. A. will also make a short talk, welcoming the new men in behalf of that organization.

All members of the various Hi-Y clubs in high schools and prep schools and all other freshmen who are directly interested in Y work are invited, as the organization of the Freshman Friendship Council and the election of its officers is planned at this time. The meeting will adjourn at 8:00 o'clock, at which time the freshmen will go to the various churches in the village, where receptions for new men will be held.

Tickets for the banquet may be obtained for fifty cents at the Y. M. C. A.

MEMORIAL HALL TO BE SCENE OF FORMAL OPENING

President Graham and Kemp Lewis Will Speak at Exercises This Morning.

The University of North Carolina, oldest American state university, will formally throw open its doors to old and new students at exercises in Memorial hall this morning from 10:30 to 11:30 o'clock.

President Frank P. Graham of the University and Kemp Lewis, president of the General Alumni association, will be the principal speakers.

Official Opening
The exercises this morning will be the official opening of the University though new students entered the regular orientation program Monday, registering Wednesday, and upperclassmen registered yesterday.

Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, will also give a short address of welcome.

Since the exercises will begin at 10:30 and last until 11:30, the 11:00 o'clock classes will begin a half an hour later than their regular time.

DAILY TAR HEEL STAFF TRYOUTS THIS AFTERNOON

Editorial Writers to Meet With Editor in Offices of Paper at 3:00 P. M.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL, which today begins its thirty-ninth year of service at the University, will offer all members of the student body interested in collegiate journalism the opportunity to try out for the different divisions of the staff this afternoon in the offices of the publication, 204 Graham Memorial.

Both new and old men interested in reporting and sports writing will gather at 1:30 o'clock for the try-outs, while at 2:30 o'clock city editors of last year will meet in the offices of the paper. Editorial writers will confer with the editor at 3:00 p. m.

Upperclassmen Invited

The try-outs set for this afternoon are primarily designed to introduce freshmen to the operation of the paper and to allow them an opportunity to display their ability on the different divisions of the staff. Previous experience is not necessary. An invitation is also extended to upperclassmen to work with the publication and their try-outs are set for this time.

A large number of men try out for positions on the staff at the beginning of each year. This work affords experience in journalism as well as recognition in a leading campus activity. In addition, the publication awards charms for excellent work.

Today the paper enters its thirty-ninth year of existence on the University campus and its fourth year as a daily. Beginning in 1893 as the weekly publication of the athletic association, the paper has had a notable history and a number of prominent men throughout the state were connected with the publication in their college days.

In 1908 THE TAR HEEL became a bi-weekly and in 1922 was taken over by the Publications Union board, when it be—

Another Editor's Aspirations

Now that summer vacation has ended and everyone is getting back into the old routine again, there are being built up in the minds of the various individuals visions of what they hope to accomplish during the coming year. And like everyone else THE DAILY TAR HEEL also has aspirations for what it is to do before the school months are far spent. But, knowing full-well that these aspirations are realized only as a result of a great deal of perspiration, the management is not permitting its visions to carry it beyond the realm of possibility.

For the past few years the size of the student body has increased to such an extent as to prevent regular mass meetings to discuss various topics of campus interest. Consequently there is only one medium through which the students can exchange their ideas. This is the college paper. It was for this purpose that the publication was established, and for this purpose it shall be continued.

The Open Forum column offers special opportunity for free expression of student opinion on all sides of any question, while the editorials will present only that side which to the management seems to be for the best interests of the student body.

With the departure of the daily assembly for the entire student body the students also lost contact with what was going on about the campus. Thus the second primary function that the paper must perform is that of keeping the students posted concerning campus news.

Having been established to function in these two capacities, THE DAILY TAR HEEL justifies its existence in one sense of the word when it fulfills these duties. But the management is not satisfied to stop here.

There are numerous other things which must be done before this journal can be considered a college paper worthy of any sort of recognition. And although the management shall be working all year with the two primary purposes foremost in its mind, it shall at the same time attempt to bring in those other factors which make a paper something more than a bulletin board of student announcements and student opinions.

By means of an exchange of weekly news columns, the readers will be kept in touch with the important news events on other campuses as well as the student opinions from other colleges on subjects of mutual interest. With the aid of various types of columns and feature stories the readers will be supplied with reading material for entertainment and, in some cases, instruction. A full sport page will enable them to keep up with the various athletic events. And a liberal editorial page will attempt to give them a few crumbs for thought.

With all this, together with a well-balanced make-up and a collection of snappy, intelligent headlines THE DAILY TAR HEEL will this year attempt to do more than merely justify its existence. It will be striving to make this journal not only a worthy publicity agent for the University on other campuses, but also one of the few truly liberal college journals being published in the States.

Of Age

Next, perhaps, to a conference football championship team or a row of billion dollar fraternity houses, a university's most prized asset is its tradition. Traditions of every vintage and description ranging from the wearing of freshman caps to the avoidance of walking on the sacred grass of the Hoppendale quad or sitting on the senior fence, keep alive the good old flavor of American college life. In one college tradition dictates that all sorority women wear only a certain brand of clothes which has been approved and tagged as "stylish" by a committee of female judges; at another institution the southern gentleman must not appear on the campus sans his coat; and the women of Snobingdale-on-the-Hudson wear black uniforms and ride bicycles to classes. All this is ignominiously classed under the head of tradition. About ninety-nine per cent of it is as empty as a cotton broker's safety deposit box.

The American college student is gradually coming of age. He is awakening to the realization that tradition of the worthless variety tends to disrupt the intrinsic qualities of education in its highest order.

One of the oldest and most senseless of these ivy-clad-hand-me-downs infecting the college campus is the discrimination between freshmen and upperclassmen. Its handmaiden is hazing and its stepdaughter is fraternity paddling. Happily, there has been no marked distinction here outside of the classroom in the social and extra-curricular differences between the first year man and the upperclassman. Hazing is unknown. The freshman is often mistaken for a senior or some other previous incumbent. The student body has turned to more serious things than freshman cap-wearing, ducking at the pump, and other customs or traditions that ignore the important issues of college life. This change is only recent, but it is growing. The next step is the elimination of fraternity neophyte slavery. We come of age, but slowly.—D.C.S.

To the Wise

A word to the wise is sufficient. No one considers a freshman wise, not even he himself. And so, every year the older heads of the University, from president to prig, issue volumes of advice in letters, pamphlets, talks and lectures to the incoming men.

In view of the beginning of the fraternity rushing season on Sunday, this editorial is intended to offer more enlightenment and advice, this time on the subject of fraternities. It is considered well that the fortunate forty per cent of the freshman class who will receive fraternity invitations should be fortified with a sane point of view with which to confront the ballyhoo barrage of the big game hunters.

There is hardly to be found one writer on the DAILY TAR HEEL staff, or even one student on the campus, who can impartially present the case of the fraternity to the new men.

What is a fraternity? What is the purpose of a fraternity? Should I join a fraternity or not? What will fraternity membership mean to me? If anything?

For an unbiased answer to these questions we turn to one of the many pamphlets written by Dean of Students Francis F. Bradshaw, a detached observer of fraternity life for many college generations.

"The college fraternity, in theory," says Dean Bradshaw, "is a group of congenial students associated together for mutual help in getting an education, for mutual pleasure in social life, and for mutual convenience in maintaining a campus home. It is inaccurate and harmful from all points of view to regard the fraternity as a social aristocracy. . . . So understood, fraternity life becomes an experience to be enjoyed without undue pride or passed by without bitterness."

Now, freshman, having read these words, choose ye this day whom ye will serve. Long may the seat of your britches be preserved against all manner of evil.—E.C.D.

Education Re-Defined

With hundreds of thousands of eager students flocking in increasing numbers to our many colleges the debate over the value of a college education arises once more. Despite the ever growing number of college students, there exists yet a firm belief in the minds of many men that a college career is a waste of time and money. There are those who maintain that the school of hard knocks and experience is the only one capable of fitting the young man for the earning of his living, and to a great extent they are correct. It is undeniable that a college education delays for four years the inevitable plunge into the maelstrom of the struggle to survive. This is true despite the attempts of the colleges to meet this situation through business schools and similar work. The general truth is that experience and practice are more valuable than the theories of the universities—where the making of money is concerned.

There can be no detracting from the vital importance of making a way for ourselves, that is the foremost rule of nature. There are, though, many other important features of life to be considered. It is almost superfluous to direct attention to the enhanced meaning that life acquires through conversance with the arts, science and philosophy. Acquaintance with the fruit of man's learning through the ages is the study of the growth of the human mind. The wiser the man, the greater and broader the scope of his outlook, the richer and happier his existence. Interest and knowledge provide a reason for the being of the soul. Interest is evinced through the desire for education manifested by the number of students that fill our schools. Knowledge should be their gain and goal, fostered by the sincerity and enthusiasm of the teachers. Perhaps the future years may not witness so many men rolling in fabulous wealth and blind to everything but material gain. Perhaps they will witness instead legions of cultured and broadened men and women concerned with fully living well rounded lives and deeply interested in the dissemination of knowledge.

The partisans of the hard knocks school and the advocates of the college career are debating two different points. The utilitarian that decries the waste of four years is correct in his contention. The supporters of the higher education have, however, a stronger case. They propose something broader and finer, not merely the acquisition of wealth but the acquisition of interest and culture. The development of a philosophy and a point of view that may make far more valuable material gain, or transcend whatever failure or disaster may attend the search for wealth. They favor the gaining of a key to a richer and more complete enjoyment of man's short span. Whether this is preferable to business success is debatable, but the youth of America have made their choice.—J.F.A.

College Clippings

Many of our old contemporaries were on hand in the office to welcome us back to work yesterday. The Oklahoma Daily, Daily Illini, Daily Texan, Daily Pennsylvanian, Butler Collegian, Purdue Exponent, Southern California Daily Trojan, and the Daily Californian of the University of California have their first editions off the presses. The Daily Texan ("The World's Greatest College Newspaper") printed three sections of twenty six pages for its initial number, as did the Daily Illini. The Daily Trojan and Daily Californian have been operating for several weeks, if we read their edition numbers correctly. The Daily Pennsylvanian welcomes its freshmen with a sixteen page edition, mailed to their homes before reaching Philadelphia.

When all loyal Pennsylvanians raise their voices to the glories of Alma Mater and The Team this fall, the last chorus of "The Read and Blue" will run like this:

"Drink a milkshake at day-break—
Be good fellows while you may,
For tomorrow you may borrow
What the milkshake costs today.
Tell the story of the glory
Of Pennsylvania
Drink a milkshake, and for Pete's sake
Save the rep of dear old
Penn!"

The United Press reports from Washington that a "Depression University" with a faculty that works for board and room only, will be opened this October in the Virginia hills. There will be no football team, for instance, but all undergraduates interested in athletics will have a chance to win their "D" in fishing. Hunting will also be a major sport. Figure that after a hard day on the athletic field the students can bring home their dinner. While cost of a year at school including room and board won't exceed $250.

Some enforced rulings for freshmen at the University of Southern California this year in the tradition line are: freshmen must wear their "dinks" every day and all day until further notice; freshmen do not use the senior bench or the walks of the Administration building and Old College; they must carry their freshmen bibles while on the campus; they can wear no jewelry, monograms, and they must sit in the balconies at all assemblies. Only junior and senior students at Southern California wear cords.

Out-of-State Tuition Raised to $100 Extra

Due to last year's reduction in the State appropriations to the University, the Board of Trustees have found it necessary to increase the out-of-state tuition to $175 a year or a raise of $8.33 a quarter. Before this new decree out of state students had to pay $75 a year more than state residents, but this has been raised to $100 extra.

It is not thought by the Board that this additional fee will in any way decrease the out-of-state enrollment, but it was felt that even though this might be the result, the extreme need of the University made such a step necessary.

NEW MEN BEGIN CAREERS DURING FRESHMAN WEEK

Program of Orientation Period Will Close Sunday with Special Services

Approximately 600 new students at the University began their college careers at Chapel Hill this year with a week of orientation activities which began Monday afternoon and will last until Sunday when local churches will offer special services for the new men.

The new men followed a carefully worked out program which attempts to accustom them to their college environment before the actual beginning of the University year.

The group, gathering in Memorial hall Monday afternoon, was greeted by Dean of Students Francis F. Bradshaw who explained the orientation program. Following this were the English placement, mathematics placement, and mental alertness tests, while Tuesday morning the French and Spanish placement tests were given. Interspersed throughout these various tests were physical examinations and meetings with faculty advisors and student assistants.

Tuesday night the new men were received by President and Mrs. Graham and members of the faculty in Graham Memorial. Following this the new students were guests of the Carolina theatre at a special showing of "White Zombie."

Freshman registration and student government lectures were set for Wednesday while yesterday the groups into which the new students were divided conferred with their respective deans.

The freshmen, along with upperclassmen, will attend the formal exercises opening the University, which will be conducted in Memorial hall this morning at 10:30 o'clock. President Frank P. Graham will speak.

Classes scheduled for 11:00 o'clock this morning will be opened at 11:30 to allow a full hour for the exercises.

The local churches will welcome the new students at receptions tonight, and there will be special services for them in the churches Sunday.

This year's freshman class is "apparently better prepared for University work than usual," according to Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., Dean of Admissions, and Dean of Students Francis F. Bradshaw, who have made a study of the records of prospective students.

"A study of the records reveals that fifteen out of every sixteen of the freshmen, where they have come from North Carolina high schools, are better prepared than an average North Carolina high school senior," reported Dr. Bradshaw.

Book By Russell Will Be Issued In October

Brentano's of New York has announced that Harvesters, a new book by Phillips Russell, is to be published October 14.

Russell is acting associate professor of English in the University and during the coming year will have charge of another class in creative writing, open only to juniors and seniors in the college of liberal arts.

This will be Russell's sixth book. It will deal with seven famous men, whose lives extend over a period of 700 years, and will include a biographical study of Thomas Jefferson. The treatment, it is said, will be from a viewpoint that is new both in biography and history.

SEVERAL CHANGES MADE IN FACULTY

Former Members Attracted to More Advantageous Positions by Higher Salaries

The University enters the new year with several changes in the ranks of the faculty, according to R. B. House, executive secretary. Many of the men, drawn by the promise of higher salaries, have left the University to accept more advantageous positions elsewhere, while a few have dropped from the ranks to turn to other walks of life.

Dr. L. R. Wilson, former librarian and director of the school of library science here, who tendered his resignation to the board of trustees last spring, relinquished his duties here the first of September to take up his work with the University of Chicago as dean of the graduate library school. Dr. Wilson's resignation was a heavy blow to the University. He was not only one of the nation's foremost librarians, but he was also an energetic builder and supporter of the University.

Downs Acting Librarian
R. B. Downs, formerly assistant librarian, has been appointed acting librarian by President Graham pending the action of the board of trustees at their meeting September 28.

Another vacancy has been left in the school of library science when Donald Coney, assistant director, resigned from the University to accept a position with the Newberry library in Chicago. Miss Susan Akers has been acting director of the library school on appointment by President Graham.

Although the school of library science has suffered the greatest loss, resignations have not been confined to that department. E. Ray Mosher, professor of education here for several years, and Thorndike Saville, professor of hydraulic and sanitary engineering, have left the University to go to New York colleges.

Johnston Enters Ministry
Another loss which the University will feel keenly is the departure of Henry Johnston, who for the past several years served as assistant to the dean of students. He is planning to enter the ministry and has enrolled at the Episcopal Theological Seminary at Alexandria, Va. James A. Williams, graduate of the University law school, has taken over the duties of assistant temporarily.

These losses to the University faculty will be repaired by the arrival of several new members. W. C. Jackson, former vice-president of the North Carolina College for Women, will be the dean of the newly-formed department of public administration.

Saville's position in the department of engineering will be taken temporarily by Harry N. Jenks, and F. E. Coenen will replace R. S. Collins, departing instructor of German. Coenen has recently returned from a year's study in Germany and comes here from the Virginia Military Institute.

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the great painter of the American Indian, N. C. Wyeth... inspired by the massacre of Custer's dauntless band at Little Big Horn, Montana, by the savage Sioux Indians, June 25, 1876.

They are not present in Luckies... the mildest cigarette you ever smoked

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

Student Leaders Make Reply To Accusations Against University

Petition Drawn Up by Campus Leaders Answers Charges Of Radical Tendencies

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following petition was drawn up in May, 1932 by students here on the campus in answer to accusations made by David Clark of alleged radical tendencies here at the University. Although written last year this petition answers to a word the recent L. A. Tatum petition presented to Governor O. Max Gardner.

Because of lack of space in the final issue of THE DAILY TAR HEEL last year this petition was never printed in a student publication. And in order that some permanent record might be kept in the files of this paper it is being published in this issue.)

As citizens of the State as well as members of the University of North Carolina student body, we the undersigned wish, on our own responsibility, to make the following statement concerning the life and policies of the University. Living and working on the campus, we believe ourselves in a position to judge fairly of these things. In our opinion, the University has been misrepresented to its friends by unfriendly agencies. Such misrepresentations we wish herein to correct.

During our stay at the University we have found that it has a mentally wholesome and a morally inspiring atmosphere. We believe, quoting the Student Government pamphlet, that "the University offers the opportunity for a richer life—intellectual and social. It offers freedom that is at once a challenge to one's capacity for self control, and a stimulus to the building of moral fibre in the individual."

In particular, we have found no reason to object to the University's policy as regards freedom of speech, publication, teaching, and research. In our opinion, this right is not abused by either the faculty or the students.

1. There are no courses offered in the University that teach communism, atheism, free love or the doctrines of "other subversive forces."

2. There has been no speaker under the University auspices who, from the University's rostrum, has sought converts to these doctrines.

3. Bertrand Russell, brought here two years ago under the auspices of the Student Entertainment Committee and introduced by Dr. Archibald Henderson, spoke, as he was asked, on philosophy and did not mention free love.

4. Langston Hughes, negro poet, brought here by the Y. M. C. A., and the sociology department, gave a respectful, restrained and humorous story of his life and work. He did not read from the University platform his objectionable poem, "Christ in Alabama," which was published in a non-student magazine of which he is an associate editor.

5. No official University publication or organization is in the hands of Socialists, Communists, or any other factional group. These groups, as well as the Democrats and Republicans, have their private organizations. There are two student members in the Communist club and eight in the Socialist organization, out of a student body of 3,000.

The University's Policy

The University's policy of inviting speakers representing both sides of every question has been attacked. It has been charged that the administration has deliberately planned a course of radical lectures to persuade students to Communism, Socialism and atheism.

Yet, the University officials have made clear their policy in this regard, a policy that emphatically contradicts these accusations. Apparently, the University's accusers have disregarded or misinterpreted this statement, although they have had opportunity to read and hear it expressed in unmistakable terms.

In a single sentence from his inaugural address, President Graham gives the substance of the whole creed: "The University's platform should never be an agency for partisan propaganda, but it should ever be a fair forum of free opinion."

Still, the University has been censured by some members of the press for presenting speakers whose views are "bitterly opposed by a substantial majority of the people of the State." The answer to this charge had already been given long before it was made: "In the University should be found the free voice not only for the unvoiced millions, but also for the unpopular and even the hated minorities." At the same time, President Graham does not lose sight of his responsibility. He adds: "Freedom should never mean a loss of the sense of lawful and moral responsibility to the trustees and the people from which the University came and to whom her life returns manifold."

It is President Graham's belief and it has long been the creed of the whole University that "along with culture and democracy must go freedom. Without freedom there can be no university. Out of the very organic structure and quality of the University issue its democracy and its freedom." This freedom of the University means simply "the freedom of the scholar to read and report the truth honestly without interference by the University, the state, or any interests whatever."

Confirming his support of the creed, with a spirit of sympathetic understanding, President Graham spoke before the Southern Textile Association, saying, "We must have a deeper spiritual faith than those who would have us strike down the freedom of speech and publication because it has been abused."

Finally, there are those among the University's attackers who recognize freedom of speech and publication but who contend that the University has violated this right. David Clark, editor of the Southern Textile Bulletin, made the assertion that no university "would dare to publish the complete list of speakers who have appeared before the students because it would disprove their allegations relative to both sides being given to the students in equal measure."

That which Mr. Clark dared the University to do it has done through the Alumni Review. An article in the May issue of that publication gives a complete list of the speakers who have addressed the students during the year. This list alone offers evidence that more than vindicates the integrity of the University's position.

Some 75 speakers appeared on the campus this year. "The number of conservatives invited to address the student body always outweighs the number of liberals," says the Review, "and a check-up of addresses reported in the DAILY TAR HEEL since September shows that the only speakers, besides Norman Thomas, who could be classed as radicals are Langston Hughes, negro author, listed in Who's Who; E. S. Fraley, a radical speaker, and Marcus Graham, editor of An Anthology of Revolutionary Poetry; and possibly Michael Gold, editor of New Masses."

We the undersigned students, wish to declare our faith in the policy above outlined. We believe in its honesty and are willing to defend its principles. And, in no way, do we believe that its conditions and its promises have been violated to the detriment of student character or to the discredit of the University and the State. In no respect does it break faith with the University's traditional ideals or with the duty to the people.

Our understanding of the purpose of this policy is the same as was expressed by Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, on the occasion of his introduction of George W. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, at the University. Mr. Daniels said: "Here at Chapel Hill, while there is a whole wide world of freedom of discussion and debate and in weighing the merits of this and that theory about great issues and questions, the dominant purpose is to come to a conclusion, to look to finding the truth, and when the truth is found to embrace it and fight for it. . . . The goal, of course, is that when men find the truth the truth will make them free."

These corrections and statements of policy are not offered as a gesture of defiance to the people or the press. We consider, simply, that the University has been wrongly accused and attacked. It is our duty as members of the student body in responsible positions to protect her honor and good name.

The statements herein presented are to our knowledge true in every detail. With this belief we extend a friendly invitation to the critics of the University to visit our campus and to verify the statements which we have made. Especially do we ask that David Clark come and get his information about the "subversive forces" which he asserts are rampant on the campus from reliable, first-hand sources. Hitherto, he has taken and used much misinformation from persons and publications unassociated with and inimical to the University. In all friendliness, Mr. Clark is invited to make full and free use of the University's platform and to inspect every function and movement of the University machine.

We are confident that anyone who comes to know the University, its ideals and its spirit, will agree with Dr. Fletcher Sime Brockman, 20 years a missionary in China, a leader in the Christian Youth Movement and a Christian statesman, who has this month said, "No educational institution in the world is illustrating more sincerely the wholesome life of intellectual freedom, courageous idealism, and spiritual strength than the University of North Carolina. Your very freedom is fundamentally a part of your moral idealism and spiritual faith."

CAROLINA FACES WAKE FOREST IN SEASON OPENER

Collins May Use Two Elevens Against Deacons; Light Drill To Close Preparations.

Football, a la 1932, will be on exhibition tomorrow afternoon at Kenan stadium when the Tar Heels engage the Wake Forest Deacons at 2:30.

Coach Collins all but finished preparations yesterday for the Wake Forest clash, sending his huskies through a light dummy scrimmage, stressing line plunges and forward passes. A light drill is also scheduled for this afternoon.

Two Teams Used

Two complete elevens were used in yesterday's workout, and the probabilities are that these two squads will bear the brunt of service against the Deacons.

The first squad consisted of: Walker and Brandt, ends; Hodges and Smith, tackles; Barclay and Newcombe, guards; Underwood, center; Chandler, quarterback; Croom and White, halfbacks; and Lassiter, fullback. On the second squad were: Cozart and Frankel, ends; Tatum and Adkins, tackles; Kahn and Philpot, guards; McIver, center; Peacock, quarterback; Phipps and Hubbard, halfbacks; and McCaskill, fullback.

New Rules

One feature of the opening game tomorrow will be the display of the 1932 rules to the critical scrutiny of the fans. Several radical changes have been made in the regulations, and if the reception to these changes in other parts of the country is any criterion, there will be many heated discussions pro and con about the rules.

The most significant changes have taken place in the divisions entailing the kick-off, substitutions, use of hands, occupants of the sideline benches, and the question of dead ball.

This year the ball, on the kick-off, may be drop-kicked or kicked from placement. When the rules first were revised last

CANDIDATES FOR FROSH FOOTBALL GET EQUIPMENT

Several Good Prospects Report to Sapp and Howard in Group of Over Seventy-Five.

Over seventy-five freshman football candidates reported to Coaches Sapp and Howard yesterday at the frosh field. Only light equipment was issued, and limbering up drills were scheduled for the remainder of the week. Heavy work will start next week, and until then, no definite line can be drawn about the squad.

Candidates included a 280-pound tackle and several star high school and prep school players. Among these are: Arthur, Asheville school center; Kanner, all-southern high school center; McCachren, triple threat man from Oak Ridge; Montgomery, Yeager, and Moore, Kiski stars; Joyce, Chicago; and Womble,

SCHNELL CHOSEN NEW INTRAMURAL ATHLETICS HEAD

Extensive Program Planned for Year To Include Competition in Football, Track, and Tennis.

H. W. Schnell, who has been connected with athletics for the past few years at the University, is to direct intramural athletics for the 1932-33 session of Carolina. Mac Gray, past director, resigned after getting his lawyer's degree last spring.

The intramural department will run off the various tournaments in much the same order as they were conducted last year. Football is scheduled to open the season with tennis, boxing, wrestling, cross country, baseball and fencing following. Last year was probably the most successful season intramural sports have had at the University and the outlook for this year is as good or better.

Schedules for tag football have not been made yet but Schnell will arrange them as soon as possible in order to start the games next week or the week following.

GRANT PLACED AT NO. 2 POSITION IN COLLEGE RATINGS

Cliff Sutter Receives First Place With Keith Gledhill at No. 3.

Exhibiting excellent form in the outstanding tennis tournaments of the summer, Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, ace of the University of North Carolina coterie of racquet wielders, reached spectacular heights in the tennis world by virtue of his play against some of the best men in the country.

In the national intercollegiate, a mecca for the best college tennis luminaries, Grant fought his way to the finals only to lose to Cliff Sutter of Tulane in five hotly contested sets. In a recent authentic ranking made by court critics, Grant was given second position among the collegians, Sutter receiving the premier choice with Keith Gledhill of Stanford in third place.

Lott Beats Grant

Vanquishing his old rival Sutter at Memphis, Grant went to the finals of the national clay court play, meeting George Lott of Chicago, former Davis cup star. In five gruelling sets, Lott outlasted "Bitsy" to win the title.

In the tournaments at Newport, Rye, Seabright, and Forest Hills, all of which attract the outstanding tennis players of the world, Grant advanced to the quarter finals losing in close matches. In the national championships at Forest Hills, Grant lost to Kawahara, Japan's number one man, in five sets.

At the present time "Bitsy" is in California participating in west coast meets. He may return to Carolina for the winter quarter.

Class Schedule

Classes will be run off according to schedule despite conflicting rumors to the contrary. Friday's classes will be run off in regular order except the 11:00 o'clock classes which will not meet until 11:30 due to the President's formal welcoming speech to the new men at 10:30.

Saturday only those classes which are scheduled for Saturday will meet.

LARGE SQUAD OF VETS BACK FOR CROSS COUNTRY

Early Practice Planned in Attempt to Uphold Record of Undefeated 1931 Team.

With a squad of fourteen veterans and a flock of likely looking sophomores back in school, Coach Dale Ranson is optimistic over the prospects for the coming cross country campaign. Of the fourteen veterans there are seven who have won their insignia and one, Clarence Jensen, won the southern conference championship last year.

To add to their undefeated season last year, which was closed by the winning of the southern conference title, Coach Ranson has started his men early in anticipation of the three meets carded this fall. The Tar Heels have captured six of the eight conference cross country titles.

Captain Bob Hubbard heads

the list of lettermen made up of Louis Sullivan, Pratt, Jensen, McRae, who placed second in the conference meet last year, Cordle, Groover, and Henson. Mark Jones, co-captain elect, was the only letterman not to return. He is out due to academic difficulties. Along with these there are Kimrey, Rodin, Farr, Henry Sullivan, and Donnell, all left over from last year's team. Coming up from the freshman team with the best chance of breaking into varsity competition are Curlee, Waldrop, and Harry Williamson.

The schedule for the cross country team this year consists of three meets. The first of these is with Florida, here November 4. Duke is next November 12, and the season closes here November 19 with the ninth annual southern conference meet.

The inclusion of Stringfield's Cripple Creek is a decided honor. Stringfield is a native North Carolinian and in the past few years has become quite prominent in the musical world. His score for Paul Green's play, Tread the Green Grass, was most favorably received by the New York critics. Stringfield was instrumental in the organization of the North Carolina Institute of Folk Music and for the past year has resided in Chapel Hill pursuing his work with the institute. He is also the director of the newly organized North Carolina symphony whose work received such praise last spring.

MARX BROTHERS STAR AT LOCAL THEATRE TODAY

"Horsefeathers" Heads List of New Films Scheduled to Show Here This Year.

"Horsefeathers," starring the four Marx brothers at the Carolina theatre today, is one of the numerous "best" pictures scheduled to be shown in Chapel Hill this fall. Other features which are coming here include "Back Street," "Blessed Event," "Congorilla," "The Dark Horse," "Okay America," "The First Year," "Grand Hotel," "Lady and Gent," "Bird of Paradise," "Blondie of the Follies," "70,000 Witnesses," "Unholy Love," "Thirteen Women," "Movie Crazy," "Speak Easily," "The Washington Masquerade," "Tom Brown of Culver," "Strange Interlude," and "Schubert's Dream of Spring."

In accordance with the reduction in prices of necessities and luxuries everywhere, new theatre rates at the Carolina went into effect Monday—30c cents in afternoon, 35 cents at night.

The ballot box for Chapel Hill's Greater Prosperity contest may be found in the lobby of the Carolina theatre. Details of this contest, first prize of which is a trip to New York, may be seen on the screen in the theatre. The remaining prizes, given in order, are: table lamp, shoes, kodak, card case, basket groceries, sweater, roaster, meal ticket, groceries, car service, one quart sweet milk for one month, shirt, book pressing club tickets, theatre pass for one month, pair shoes half-soled, one hundred calling cards, one year's subscription to Chapel Hill Weekly, and smoking stand.

planned. This will be the first time that the glee club has presented home concerts in nearly two years.

Folk Music Continues
Another phase of music in the University which will continue this year is the Institute of Folk Music under Lamar Stringfield. The inauguration of the laboratory concerts by the institute last spring proved so successful that they will probably be continued this fall. It is the purpose of the institute to encourage students of the University to endeavor to express themselves with music, and to arouse interest over the state in North Carolina folk music.

Noteworthy among the plans for the coming musical year is the sponsoring of a Kreisler concert by Phi Mu Alpha, musical fraternity. Last year the Phi Mu Alpha was instrumental in bringing Madame Galli-Curci here, and following their same plan they have arranged for an appearance of Fritz Kreisler in Memorial hall February 27.

Kreisler has been in Europe for the past two years, resting and composing, and he plans to return to America early in October. This will be his first southern tour in ten years.

University Day Honorees

University day honorees for this year will be George T. Winston and Edwin A. Alderman, both former presidents of the University, Secretary R. B. House announced yesterday. University day is planned for October 12.

Placards bearing the official rushing rules in complete form have been posted as usual on all conspicuous bulletin boards as well as in all University dormitories. Interfraternity councilmen and members of the faculty state that there is accordingly no excuse for ignorance of rushing regulations, and that any freshman or any fraternity guilty of violation of these will be liable to the penalty prescribed in the by-laws of the council.

In order to make possible to all new men a full understanding of the significance of rushing season, invitations to fraternity houses, and bids to join fraternities, the Interfraternity Council intends holding a meeting of all freshmen and transfers from other schools in Memorial hall today at 3:00 p. m. At this meeting any question raised concerning fraternities by any new man will be answered by those in charge of the meeting. An approximate idea of the cost and any other such obligations connected with the joining of fraternities will be discussed.

fall, the ball could also be punted, but that has already been eliminated. Also there is an imaginary restraining line. That is, there must be at least five receiving players within fifteen yards from where the ball is kicked. The purpose of this is to eliminate the formation of the flying wedge, and thus cut injury to a minimum. In addition, there may also be a fair catch of a kick-off.

There have been some significant changes in the rule regarding substitutions. Last year a player taken out of the game in one half could not re-enter until the next half. This year, a player taken out in one quarter can be substituted in the following quarter. Now substitutions can be made only when time is out or when a substitution is made to relieve an injured player.

No others than the coach, managers and players will be allowed on the bench during a game.

Defensive players are allowed to use their hands only in a forward motion while charging and will be forced to limit this use to the opponents' shoulders.

In an effort to eliminate ing up, the rules committee have decreed that the ball is dead the moment the runner's knees or any part of his body besides his feet touch the ground.

Fraternity Council Meeting

All members of the interfraternity council are requested to be present at a very important meeting in Graham Memorial hall tonight at 7:00 o'clock.

SPEECHES MARK FORMAL START OF UNIVERSITY YEAR

R. B. House, Haywood Weeks, And President Graham Are Keynoters at Exercises.

The University school year 1932-33 was formally opened at exercises in Memorial hall yesterday morning from 10:30 to 11:30 o'clock. Dean Francis F. Bradshaw was in charge of the ceremonies, which were opened with a devotional led by Reverend A. S. Lawrence, rector of the Episcopal church.

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, was the first speaker. He acknowledged the gift of a pipe organ for Memorial hall which was presented to the University by the Public-Kinney theatres, owners of the Carolina theatre here. He was followed by Kemp P. Lewis, who welcomed the new and old students in behalf of the alumni association of which organization he is president. Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, then brought a greeting to the students from the student government.

President Frank P. Graham, president of the University, in his address declared that the institution throughout its history has maintained an "atmosphere that is free, moral, honest, and spiritual. The answer to error," President Graham said, "is now terror" but clean and wholesome freedom. Attacked the University makes no attacks. Threatened she makes no threats, amid misunderstanding she seeks to understand those who would strike her down."

The president told the new students that "discipline and contentment are not nearly so important as the attitude of one's mind. You may stand in the laboratory and look through

New York and New Jersey Send Largest Number of Out-of-State Students.

Unofficial figures compiled yesterday by the DAILY TAR HEEL show that this year's freshman class is the smallest in several years. Only 591 freshmen registered this week. Among this number, however, there are probably more states represented than ever before. Twenty-four states "from Maine to Florida" sent delegations to the University.

The Old North State of course tops the list with 458 first year men. Following North Carolina comes New York with thirty-two and New Jersey with thirty. Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Georgia, South Carolina, Maryland, Virginia, Illinois, Alabama, Washington, D. C.; Florida, Delaware, Mississippi, Ohio, Tennessee, Texas, Maine, West Virginia, Michigan, and Arkansas, follow in the order named.

Current economic conditions are considered as being the greatest reason for the decreased enrollment. The fact that out-of-state registration has increased is taken as an indication that the reputation of the University abroad is still growing as a center of learning and liberalism.

Freshman Y Cabinet Elects Its Officers

The ex-Hi-Y or freshman friendship council held their opening banquet last night from 6:00 until 8:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial. Eighty-five men were present and the meeting was presided over by Jack Poole president of last year's freshman cabinet. President Graham was the guest speaker for the evening.

The main business of the meeting was the election of officers for the coming year, and after spirited voting the following men were elected: Jessie Webb of Raleigh, secretary; and James Craighill of Rocky Mount, treasurer.

The work this year is under the direction of Ed Lanier, self-help secretary of the Y and Jim Steere, vice-president of the junior-senior cabinet. The first meeting of the year will convene in Gerrard hall Monday night at 7:15 and any freshmen in addition to those attending the banquet are invited to be present.

TOWN MERCHANTS OFFER NUMEROUS CONTEST AWARDS

Chapel Hill Prosperity Contest Lists Twenty Prizes to Liberal Spenders.

Chapel Hill's greater prosperity contest has as its center the Carolina theatre, in whose lobby the ballot box is receiving votes for and from all contestants. Participating firms are to award on October 14, the date the contest closes, twenty prizes, the first being a free trip to New York with all expenses paid.

The remaining nineteen prizes, listed in order and followed by the firm donating it, are: table lamp, given by the University Consolidated Service Plants; pair of shoes by Andrews-Henninger Co.; vest pocket kodak, by Foister Photo company; card case, by Alfred Williams Co.; basket groceries, by Food Mart; sweater, by Stetson "D"; roaster, by W. C. Lyon Hardware Co.; $5.00 meal ticket, by Gooch Bros. Cafe; basket groceries, by Model Market.

Car washed and polished, by University Service Station; one quart sweet milk for one month, by Durham Road Dairy; shirt, by Lipman's; book pressing club tickets, by O'Kelly Dry Cleaners; one month show pass, by Carolina Theatre; pair shoes half-soled, by Lacock's Shoe Shop; one hundred calling cards, by the University Printery; one year's subscription, by The Chapel Hill Weekly; one quart of sweet for one month, by Durham Dairy Products; and smoking stand, by Berman's Department Store.

One hundred votes are given by the participating merchants for every $1.00 purchase and every $1.00 paid on account. The committee in charge of ballots includes M. B. Utley, M. C. S. Noble, M. W. Durham, and Zeb P. Council.

PROFESSOR COUCH IS RECOVERING SLOWLY

Dr. John Couch, professor of botany, has been recuperating at Watts hospital in Durham for the past two weeks, following an operation for appendicitis. Couch's condition is still considered serious, and it is not known when he will be able to return to the University.

Phillips Russell Declares North Carolina Rich In Literary Promise

University Professor Finds Conditions in Old North State Favorable to Broader Cultural Life and for Tapping Of Resources in Fiction.

By Starlin Whitaker
(Reprinted from The Charlotte Observer)

A broader cultural life, free from obsessions and fear of expression, to which Chapel Hill and the University have already made outstanding contributions, may be eventually realized in North Carolina.

At least, that is the opinion of Charles Phillips Russell, biographer and author, member of the University faculty and a North Carolinian, who foresees many possibilities for broadening in the fields of arts and crafts, with North Carolinians as participants in this future accomplishment and our own natural scenery furnishing the background.

In North Carolina, where lies material galore hitherto untouched but in few instances by skilled craftsmen, the author of Ben Franklin, John Paul Jones, Thomas Jefferson and a number of short stories which have made him famous, has discovered in this state a field literally peopled with characters who may later find their places on the pages of literature.

Conditions Suitable
Nowhere else in the country are conditions more favorable, and nowhere else in the world could there be more literary products for persons prepared to garner the crops of fiction and history that awaits them here,

NEW STATIONERY STORE IS OPENED

Number of Local Business Establishments Increased by Three During Week.

Three new stores have begun business in Chapel Hill this fall. A new stationery store was opened by J. H. Ledbetter and A. C. Pickard, September 12. The store, Ledbetter & Pickard, is located on Franklin street near the Crescent Cafeteria. Ledbetter and Pickard will carry a full line of stationery, fountain pens, notebooks and other school supplies.

The Little Shop opened for business September 20th. It is owned by Miss Elizabeth Branson who has been with the Betsy Ann Shop for the past two years. Miss Branson has a complete supply of Misses suits and dresses. The Little Shop will present a fashion show Monday afternoon, from 4:00 to 6:00 o'clock. The latest styles in women's apparel will be shown. The shop is next door to the Durham Dairy Products store.

Last Monday the C and H Cafeteria served meals for the first time in Chapel Hill. The C and H Cafeteria is owned by C. V. Cummings and J. V. Hunter, who were with the old Friendly Cafeteria. The C and H is open for three meals a day. It is next door to the post office.

Vespers to Continue

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy will again present, at monthly intervals during the year, a series of vesper organ concerts. While the series begins in October, the exact date and further information about the program will be announced later.

To Offer Recital

Above is Albert Spalding, one of America's foremost violinists. His concert in Memorial hall October 18 will open the fall season of the Student Entertainment Committee series.

ALBERT SPALDING BEGINS STUDENT ENTERTAINMENTS

Noted Violinist Will Play Here
October 18 on Student Entertainment Program.

Albert Spalding, violinist of note, will offer a recital here October 18 in Memorial hall to open the 1932-33 Student Entertainment series. Four other attractions have been arranged by the joint student-faculty committee for the year while the group is negotiating for another entertainment.

Passbooks for the presentations during the fall quarter were delivered to students in the liberal arts, commerce, and education schools yesterday and students in other schools and townspeople may secure season tickets for these events at Dean A. W. Hobbs' office.

V. L. Granville will appear in "Dramatic Interludes" December 7 as the second presentation of the fall quarter. The Shan Kar Hindu dancers, January 11; the Boston Light Opera Company (in Robin Hood), March 2; and Cornelia Otis Skinner, April 12, are the other attractions secured by the group for the winter and spring.

Efforts are being made to bring Stuart Chase, economist and writer, here in April or May but no definite plans have been reached.

OLD THOREAU WORKS EXAMINED BY ADAMS

Dr. Raymond Adams, of the English department, spent two weeks in New England this summer, during which time he examined some unpublished Thoreau manuscripts.

While in Cambridge and Concord, Massachusetts, Dr. Adams examined several unpublished verses of a poem, and the naturalist's diary, a year of which is unpublished in the printed version of the journals. Dr. Adams is recognized as a leading authority on the works of Thoreau.

Pi Phi's Move

Members of the Pi Beta Phi sorority this week moved from their old location on Franklin street to the home of Mrs. C. W. Bain on East Rosemary.

BOARD EXPECTED TO PICK GREATER UNIVERSITY HEAD

Trustees to Take Up "Tatum Petition" at Meeting in Raleigh September 28.

Two questions which have aroused state-wide interest have been slated to come up at the regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Greater University of North Carolina when that group meets in Raleigh September 28. These questions are the consideration of "Tatum's petition" and the election of the president of the Greater University.

At this meeting the president of the Greater University is expected to be chosen by the board. According to rumor throughout the state, President Frank P. Graham, now president of the Chapel Hill division of the Greater University, will probably be elected to the post.

Under the plan of consolidation endorsed by the Board during the summer, each of the three divisions of the Greater University will have a separate head, while there will be a president in charge of the whole organization.

Petition to Be Considered
Another matter slated to come up at the meeting is what is designated by state press as "Tatum's petition," a petition signed by 243 persons of the state which condemns alleged radical tendencies here at the University.

This petition, presented to Governor O. Max Gardner three weeks ago by L. A. Tatum, Belmont man, has been referred to the trustees by the governor. Citing the visits of Norman Thomas, Bertrand Russell, and Langston Hughes to the University as radical tendencies and quoting alleged filthy passages

BOYLE LECTURES TO FRESHMEN ON RUSHING SEASON

New Men Tipped Off on Pitfalls And Traps of Fraternity High Pressure Work.

Representatives of the Interfraternity Council met in a special meeting in Memorial hall yesterday afternoon for University freshmen and men who have been transferred here by other schools for the purpose of aiding the new men to familiarize themselves with the rushing rules for this year and to understand the significance of the rushing season.

Irvin Boyle, president of the Interfraternity Council, and Alec Webb, secretary and treasurer, were introduced to the assemblage by Haywood Weeks, president of the student body. Boyle began by a careful explanation of the rushing rules for this season, during which he warned each new man to keep a level head.

He later went into a discussion of fraternities in general and made several suggestions which would be of value to men interested in learning of fraternity life at the University.

After the meeting was adjourned an open forum discussion was held and many direct questions from new men concerning fraternities were answered and discussed.

Public Administration Students to the Rescue

With the establishment of the school of public administration here, the University of North Carolina acquires another master tool with which it will help to shape the future governmental advancement of this state. For years has this school been a dream in the minds of loyal North Carolinians. But only until recently were they able to see their cherished vision realized.

Not only will this school aid in educating the future public administrators of this state to the duties which they will be expected to perform, but more important will it open the eyes of North Carolina's coming citizens to the responsibilities which their parents have in too many cases completely ignored.

The lack of this type of education heretofore is, no doubt, one of the causes for the present deplorable condition of a great many of the counties and municipalities in this state today. Rather than develop the plan of government from year to year, the majority of public officials have been content to leave the system the same as they found it.

When former President E. K. Graham established the department of rural social economics, he made the statement, "Its business is to teach North Carolina to North Carolinians; not the North Carolina of day before yesterday but the North Carolina of day after tomorrow." That same might be said of this new school. These public officials have been satisfied with the North Carolina of day before yesterday, and have worried not the least about the state day after tomorrow.

With the school of public administration here at the University now, there should be little fear for the State's government ten or fifteen years hence. But the problem now is to persuade the Legislature to pass a law requiring all public officials to secure a degree from the school of administration of the University in order to hold office.

If something of this sort is not done immediately there is little doubt but what the towns, cities, and counties, and, yea, even the State itself, will be bankrupt before students from this new school can take over the reigns—judging from the recent deficits reported in these different divisions of government.

Mental Hygiene In High Places

Three hundred leading citizens of the state of North Carolina became cumulatively alarmed at the Paganism and Communism—that is regularly being dispensed from professorial seats of wisdom in their beloved University. This alarm became articulate in a manifesto to the Governor demanding measures of correction. So bitter and unqualified were certain portions of the document that leading papers throughout the nation carried AP reports of the movement.

The tone of the protest is reminiscent of a portion of Menninger's brilliant work on the Human Mind. To quote: "This is not the first time that the Reds and Socialists, Pacifists, and their college professor allies have attempted to prevent, and have actually prevented murderers and other violators of the law from getting their just deserts. . . . I find that this bold, resourceful and able gang of enemies with ample funds are . . . instilling subversive doctrines into the minds. . . . A widespread assault is now being made on the sanctity of marriage and sacred family relations . . . with great success in leading colleges for women. . . . etc. . . ."

Menninger describes this excited statement as being the delusion of persecution under the head of dissociation, where the main consciousness is aware of one of several ideas but mislabels and misunderstands it. It is symptomatic of mental disease.

Paganism and Communism are terms used vaguely and comprehensively to cover all forces which terrify and mystify because they are not understood. The terms have been used in the same sense all over the world, in England, on the Continent, in the Orient, and, of course, throughout this nation. Attacks employing a vocabulary of this sort must be regarded as the expression of those who are in need of mental hygienic attention. Clear truthful information will quickly dissipate the terrifying delusions which have come to exist in their brains.

New students who come with preconceptions of Chapel Hill's being a vicious, terrifying, distorted place where insidious forces are at work playing upon their innocence will be quickly disappointed. The very fact that students can talk freely and without restraint of currents ethical and philosophical ideas appears to contradict the claim that "insidious forces," bought and well paid for, are at work. —R.W.B.

King Football For the Student

On the premises that University football contests are staged primarily for the athletes participating and students witnessing the half-dozen or so struggles featured in the Kenan Memorial Stadium this year, the student body and the DAILY TAR HEEL are led to wonder whether some satisfactory arrangement can be devised to prevent conflicts in seating arrangements of out-of-town patrons and students. The new federal tax levy, which stretches to permit students exemption from taxation on tickets, if they occupy a special section, may be misunderstood by patrons. Last year tickets were sold for student spaces and many were evicted by irate alumni and interested patrons of the University who sought privileges over the student body.

In order that such a situation may be avoided this year, it is asked that the actual tickets for the spaces be issued students, so that other spectators may not move into the student section and take over seats which may be more choice than theirs. Students were virtually herded from section to section in some games last year and then tickets were sold even for the sections their pass books were supposed to cover.

If tickets are not provided, many interlopers who have payed the ticket tariff plus tax will seek places in the student section and may only be evicted if the student can show his ticket to the seat. The tax requirement will eliminate some of the difficulty confronting the student, but the addition of a ticket

OUR TIMES

Words and Music

Mahatma Gandhi, who would see India free of her British oppressors, is at it again this week. The world press was full of Mr. Gandhi's gastronomical rebellion against the English this week and many readers opened their urban chronicles to discover startling streamers "GANDHI BEGINS DEATH FAST" and similar messages. With Jimmy Walker and the ferry boat disaster forgotten, the Mahatma steps forth again to champion the cause of bigger and better news. The "Mahatma," which is not a given name, but means one of a class of sages or adepts reputed to have knowledge and powers of a higher order than those of ordinary men, is as his title indicates, no man's fool. Educated in England in conformation to the very principles of civilization which he is alleged to detest, he is easily able to re-assume his native habitat and attract sympathy of the virtually ignorant. The latest Gandhi show doesn't give the British authorities any qualms for Mother India. Gandhi, as long as he adheres to his early principles, is a feather in the viceroy's cap. He pacifies his millions of followers and the government in return gives him ample opportunity to stage his show. It should be interesting.

A New Era

An item provided by the Associated Press in the mid-week's news reveals some illuminating facts on how they lived in "the good old days." Filed in Spartanburg, S. C., the story tells us of an old record book dating back to 1817 kept by a merchant in a Transylvania (N. C.) county store. Common entries were: "to Walter Hogshead, one pint of rum, 18 1/2 cents; Lambert Clayton, one-half gallon of whiskey, seventy-five cents, one dozen round of buttons, twenty-five cents."

Such an item should provide meat for some Anecdota Americana. But more than all else, it reveals the startling lack of luxuries which our forefathers possessed, and the amazing amount of money expended in those days for spirits, then thought a necessity. We wonder if times have changed. Today the agricultural frontiers are made more attractive with radios, patented stoves, phonographs, factory-made furniture and vehicles to enable the incumbent to keep in touch with the cinema, the circulating library in the nearby village, and the day's news in his suburban newspaper. Alcohol has no place on the farm. Every ounce of energy must be exerted to properly manage vast areas of cotton, grain, and tobacco. The farmer's mind must be alert to the problem of taking scientific care of his livestock. Today he spends his money for these little necessities that give him relaxation from his strenuous labors; yesterday he indulged in alcohol.

For the Frosh

Education for college freshmen advances even over a period of months. Freshmen this year were given placement tests in English, mathematics, Spanish, French, and an examination on general I. Q. Various tests in high school preceded those taken on the Hill. Tests were more difficult, sections more strictly limited, and every effort made to insure good ground work in the essentials. Several years ago such placement requirements were virtually unheard of.

designating his special seat will further clarify the situation.—D.C.S.

Dr. T. J. Wilson, dean of admissions, and Dr. Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students, announce that "freshmen this year are apparently better prepared for University work than usual." Educators are rapidly ascertaining curricular needs of the first year men and the latter strive to equip themselves to cope with requirements. Advancement is rapid.

Phillips Russell Says North Carolina Rich In Literary Promise

beauty to counteract the routine dullness into which our lives have tended to fall in the past years."

Having built for himself a reputation for writing, Phillips Russell, or Charlie, as he is known by his friends, speaks with authority on the subject nearest his heart. For he came back here last fall and took the man-sized job of teaching the fundamentals of writing, not until he was master of many of the principles, to the students in the University.

In a sunny cottage here, where between classes and official duties he may study, read and continue to write, the biographer, author and teacher, born in Rockingham, North Carolina, has prepared to live. Upon entering his home one is impressed with its simplicity. In a single corner of the reception room is his work-shop. There standing near the window is a small table and above it are shelves and pigeon holes where letters, manuscripts and the writer's personal records are kept. There is nothing pretentious about the place nor the owner, and no visitor needs complain about the hospitality he is certain to be accorded there. Informally he entertains all guests and informally he greets the passers-by.

It was with some difficulty when the time came for this interview, however, that facts concerning the author became available, for despite his courteousness he frankly refuses to talk of himself or his accomplishments. In an attempt to learn more of this North Carolinian who has traveled much and written more, there was only one available source from which to gather information concerning him personally. A visit to the library revealed that Louis Graves, March 1929, had this to say concerning "Charlie" in The Alumni Review of that date:

"Phillips Russell opened his eyes upon this big world on August 5, 1885, decided then and there that he was going to be a writer; shut his eyes and sank into a sound sleep. When he awoke and considered the matter of his career again, he was still of the same mind, and from that day on he never wandered.

Born in Rockingham

"His first published work was a report of a visit to an orphan asylum. It came out in the newspaper in his native town of Rockingham, North Carolina. The most discerning of his fellow citizens saw in it a quality that marked it as quite different from the ordinary school boy composition. The orphans that Charlie Russell had in the story were not the inmates of an asylum; they were creatures of the flesh and blood. Thus early he revealed the beginnings of talent that was to blossom forth, thirty years later, in a biography that won praise of critics the world over for its vividness and insight.

"When he wrote the piece about the orphans, and for a long time afterward, he was Charles Phillips Russell, or C. P. Russell, or to his friends Charlie Russell. The name of Phillips Russell was adopted when the young writer, coming to be well known, found that he was sometimes confused with another celebrated writer Charles Edward Russell."

As a student in the University Phillips Russell was editor of THE DAILY TAR HEEL. He contributed much material to campus magazines and publications and was always keenly interested in literary subjects and pursuits.

Worked on Observer

In 1904 he plunged into reportorial work on the Charlotte Observer. After two years there he went to New York where he was given a trial on the staff of the Press. His duties with the Press multiplied and he served in many capacities: as assignment man, special writer, reporter, on make-up, copy reading, and at times he did literary reviews.

Not having been in New York long Russell yearned to visit other cities and learn more of the work on metropolitan newspapers. This desire led him to accept work both in Philadelphia and Chicago.

Ten years later, in 1914, Russell, always adventurous, with practically no funds and accompanied by a friend in the same condition, left for Europe. Constantly on the move, they did whatever jobs presented themselves to them in the places where they stopped. In July they began hiking from Paris to the English channel. They reached England on the day after America had entered the World War. Russell was detained as a German spy but was soon released after proving that he was only a wandering American.

Begins Writing Biographies

It was during this visit abroad, which lasted for four and one-half years, that material was discovered which led to writing the biography of Benjamin Franklin. While in Paris a number of letters and documents were found and from these The First Civilized American was written. It was published in 1925. One year later Russell's second biography John Paul Jones: Man of Action came off the press. A novel, The Fumbler was published in 1928.

About the time of the appearance of Ben Franklin biographies came into conspicuous prominence in the United States. Previously America's presidents and notables had been moulded into perfect characters by American authors. No faults, or flaws, if any, had ever before shown up in the work of biographers.

"At first sight," one reviewer said, "it might seem that Phillips Russell's remarkable biography of Benjamin Franklin belonged to this class of 'destructive' biography, and was a product of this new movement. This is far from the case. Russell's Franklin is what so many of the new biographies are not; a deep and scholarly production, the result of long years of patient research reaching back to the time when the author, as a boy in Rockingham, North Carolina, ran on a school biography of Franklin and conceived an admiration for the statesman which resulted in the biography of Franklin becoming in a way, a life-work. If it seems to belong to the new character of biographies, it is because the North Carolinian has patiently gathered a vast amount of material never before published, and to this rich harvest of facts has brought an unusually human and humorous insight into the problems of life."

This, you will understand, does not keep Russell from being a warm admirer of Benjamin Franklin, who, he holds was not an unconventional character, but probably the greatest man, all round, the United States ever produced. "Whatever line of science or industry you follow," says Russell, "you will find that Benjamin Franklin bulged large in it. In politics, invention, electricity, music and even in such subjects as ventilation and printing, he was not only the greatest man of his time, but one of the greatest men of all time."

So, as his friend has written, Russell "never wandered" from his field of work and has devoted his entire life to it. He has contributed to magazines both in America and abroad and has done several short stories, the first of which was The Troubador and another notable story, One Day. He has written two small volumes of verse, Flowings and Meal and Honey, and a one-act play named, A Course in Piracy. He is author of Roads of Doubt, American Literature in France, The Best Epigrammatist Since Oscar Wilde, The Chimney, Red Tiger, and other articles and stories.

Carolina's Tar Heels will open their 1932 season against the Wake Forest Deacons in Kenan stadium here this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, culminating a three weeks' training period.

Pronounced in perfect shape physically by Trainer Quinlan, the Tar Heels will encounter the Deacons without a single serious injury, but will have a distinct disadvantage in that the Tar Heels will present one of the lightest teams to represent Carolina on the gridiron in recent years. The line of Walker and Cozart, ends; Hodges and Smith, tackles; Philpot and Newcombe, guards; and Underwood, center form a forward wall with an average weight of 181 pounds, while Chandler, White, Croom, and Lassiter, the starting backs, tip the scales for an average of 166 pounds.

However, an advantage will be the fact that it is also a fast and hard-charging team, and while he agrees that a good big man is better than a good little man, Coach Collins thinks that he has a well-balanced, driving and spirited machine that will combine to give Wake Forest and the rest of Carolina's foes plenty of competition.

June Underwood, shifted from tackle to center to fill the vacancy caused by the graduation of Red Gilbreath, is expected to carry on the tradition of great centers here at the University built up by such outstanding pivotmen as Harry Schwartz, Ned Lipscomb, and Gilbreath. Underwood, who is playing his last year on the varsity, is the second heaviest man on the squad, weighing 192, just eight pounds less than Harry Hodges, all-state tackle last year.

Coach Pat Miller at Wake Forest has six letter backs and such sophomores as the elusive Zeno Wall and Roy Myers from which to pick his starting combination. The Wake Forest backfield is among the strongest in the state and will outweigh the Tar Heel backs slightly. Dunc Wilson, shifty triple-threat star who hails from Dunn, is expected to give the Tar Heel forwards plenty of trouble, and beyond doubt is the man the Heels will have to watch.

The only injuries among the first stringers in the Deacon camp are Dusty Miller, letter end, and Malloy, center. Slade Hardie, rookie star, will take Dudley's place at end, while Charlie Owen, letter guard, has been shifted to center to fill Malloy's shoes.

Several of the Deacon linemen will be new this fall, but in Captain Bill Green and Dusty Dudley Miller has two of the best ends in the Big Five. The Deacon line also presents a light front, most of the first team forwards graduating from the Deac's fine yearling team of last year.

It has been said that Carolina is the place to learn about all of the "isms," but mechanism has recently been dropped from the curriculum of the engineering school of the University.

From The Bench

By Thomas H. Broughton

From the general consensus of opinion of the various sports writers over North Carolina, the Carolina Tar Heels are first choice to fight it out with Davidson or Wake Forest (for some unknown reason they always pick on those two for everything except upsetting the dope) for fourth and fifth position in the Big Five. In spite of our professional colleagues' opinions, varied as they are, we still put our last nickel on Coach Collins' charges to come through for the Big Five title. In fact we will go so far as to pick Carolina, N. C. State, Duke, Davidson, and Wake Forest to finish in the order named.

A fast, scrappy line, and a sterling array of veteran backs, plus several outstanding newcomers, the Tar Heel first team will be head and shoulders above anything in the state in our opinion. Pessimistic reports on the Carolina varsity are based on lack of reserve material. Which calls to our mind the old axiom of "a strong offense is the best defense." With a light, fast line and a more or less pony backfield of seven veterans and five rookies, numbering several of the outstanding backs of the section, the Tar Heels certainly have the offensive power which, adding two to two, leads us to believe we have the defense. In fact Coach Collins has already predicted that today's game will turn into a free scoring event.

By a curious coincidence the Tar Heels (although without a captain) have among their first stringers five former captains. Back in high and prep school days Stuart Chandler, George Brandt, Bill Croom, Frank Smith, and Tom White captained their respective teams. Not since 1930 have the Tar Heels had a regularly elected captain. That year "Strud" Nash led the Tar Heels and since that time the day's leader has been appointed just before game time by Coach Collins.

While disagreeing about the state race, we will agree with the majority on one point. The New York Yankees will be the next champions of the world, barring unlooked for accidents. However, the Cubs are conceded an excellent chance to upset the dope bucket, and although national politics have indicated that the country is in the process of going through a change, it may be that the Cubs will beat Joe McCarthy's flying Yanks, but we are aware of one thing, Joe McCarthy himself will be out for blood when the Cubs meet the Yanks in the 1932 series.

Business Picks Up

Chapel Hill is pretending that it isn't "depressed." Fifteen new buildings, recently completed or under construction, will cost approximately $70,000.

According to H. D. Carter, architect of the firm of Atwood and Weeks of Chapel Hill, there is more building going on here at present than in any other town of the state in proportion to its size.

Building operations here this summer have afforded support, directly to 320, and indirectly to 100, people. And at the same time owners have, on account of the reduced prices of material, proved their foresight.

Branch To Play Pro Ball For Charlotte

Johnny Branch, who was for three years star quarterback on the University eleven, signed a contract Tuesday to play professional football with the Charlotte independent football team which was established last week. Carolina's bad boy was the tenth star in this state to line up with the independents.

Others who have signed are "Jit" Benton, a former quarterback at Wake Forest, Bud Shore, 1931 Carolina guard, Roy Hunter, former Duke captain, Ed Williams, all-South Atlantic tackle from Wake Forest, Ralph Shoupe, star for Oak Ridge last year, Pete Deal, from North Carolina State freshmen, Bill Hicks, former Duke halfback, and "Potsie" Daniel, for three years guard on the Tar Heel team.

The independents are scheduled to play their first contest October 9 against Clancy Athletic Club of Norfolk.

ENGLISH CLASSES CARRY ON UNDER CHANGED SYSTEM

Freshman English Enrollment
Has Fallen Off Relative to Rest of University.

The registration of freshmen for freshman English is in arrears of the total registration of last year. At the present writing the total registration of new men in the college of liberal arts, the schools of commerce, pharmacy, education and applied science is 575, as compared to the registration of the entire first quarter last year of 719. It is expected that by the end of the quarter the difference between the two enrollments will be less.

Last year, under the direction of Dr. Hudson, chairman of the committee on freshman English, the entire course was reorganized. In place of a system requiring first-year men to take English five times a week for one quarter if they had been adequately prepared for the English presented here, and requiring the course to extend over two terms if the candidate was considered lacking in proper preparations, last year was substituted the present system of giving English three times a week for three quarters to all freshmen.

Still Use Placement Test
Carrying over a feature from the former plan this year the freshmen have been divided into three classes by means of standardized diagnostic tests. These three plans are: first, a section of about ten per cent not properly prepared for college work, who are being handled in a non-credit course lasting for one quarter and conducted by two experienced members of the staff; second, a group of about eighty per cent of the whole, who are prepared to take the regular course at average speed; and the remainder, about fifty students, whose special interests and abilities will be developed in proportion to their grasp of the subject, indicated by the test as better than that of the majority of students.

BOARD EXPECTED TO PICK GREATER UNIVERSITY HEAD

The meeting was originally scheduled for yesterday but was postponed because of a conflict with the opening of State College.

THREE CONTESTS FIND ALL BIG FIVE TEAMS IN ACTION

Duke-Davidson Game at Durham to Exhibit Product of New Coaching Staff.

With the Deacons and Tar Heels meeting on Kenan stadium today, the three other Big Five teams also swing into action. Duke tackles Davidson at Durham and State plays Appalachian tonight in Raleigh.

Probably the toughest opener will be the Duke-Davidson encounter. At Duke, Coach Wallace Wade is optimistic over his team's chances for the season and is counting on a victory today. Lowell Mason, who resigned the captaincy of the Blue Devils last year, was unanimously re-elected captain of the team at a meeting Wednesday. At the same time Coaches "Doc" Newton and his able assistant, Gene McEver, making their debut at Davidson, are just as confident that the Wildcats will take the Devils' measure. Last year the two teams battled to a scoreless tie, but the Wildcats show a much improved and heavier team this year. Coach Newton will present the heaviest team Davidson has had in years. The success of both these clubs depends on the showing of the sophomores and reserves.

New System Is Handicap
At Davidson the boys are handicapped by the appearance of a new system of football and Doc Newton reports that the men have been unusually slow in solving various defensive problems. The Wildcats are offering no alibis, though, and will be at full strength today. The Devils and 'Cats will each have a man that will bear watching today. Johnny Brownlee, the track star, is the surprise package at Duke and Johnny Mackorell is the big talk at Davidson. This is Mackorell's first varsity season at Davidson and Coach Wade admits he is one of the most promising backs in the state. Davidson also has Mills and Pearce to pit against Captain Mason and Nick Laney.

The State-Appalachian tilt will be played under the floodlights at Riddick field tonight and should result in a State victory. State has received more comment in the state this fall than any of the other Big Five teams. Consequently the eyes of the football adherents in this section will be on the outcome of the game tonight. Appalachian is admittedly the strongest team in the state outside the Big Five and Coach Clipper Smith is not taking the game to easily. The Raleigh coach has a veteran team returning and also some very promising material has come up from the freshmen. State will show Nelms and Greason, ends; Stroupe and Seitz, tackles; Duke and Tull, guards; Captain Espey, center; Bailey and Bohannon, halfbacks; Cumisky, fullback; and McQuage, quarterback.

Y Cabinets To Open Work Monday Night

The three cabinets of the Y. M. C. A. will conduct their first meetings of the current year Monday night at the "Y" building. The sophomore and the junior-senior cabinets will have business meetings in their old rooms on the second floor for the purpose of appointing committees, making plans for the coming year, and completing the organization.

The freshman friendship council will meet in room at the west end of the lobby. This meeting will be under the leadership of the new officers who were elected at the Hi-Y banquet Friday night.

Schwenning In Geneva Studies Dismissal Wage

G. T. Schwenning, professor of business administration of the school of economics and commerce, has been granted a leave of absence from the University during the fall quarter and is in Geneva, Switzerland, where he is collecting material for a book he is writing on dismissal wages and compensations.

Two other instructors in the commerce school who were away last year have returned to resume their work here. Malcolm D. Taylor, professor of marketing spent all last year working with the federal trade commission, making a special investigation of chain stores.

James G. Evans, professor of economics, has returned from the University of Chicago where he was engaged in teaching and in writing a chapter for a volume of The Economic History of Chicago.

Baseball Practice To Start Monday

Coach Bunn Hearn announced yesterday that fall baseball practice will start Monday on the intramural field at 3:30.

Coach Hearn issued the call to all varsity candidates and freshmen pitchers and catchers not participating in other sports. The fall practice will last as long as the weather permits. Following the plan of last year two teams will be picked and regular games will be played two or three times a week, the other days being spent in fielding and hitting practice.

This early practice is not offered with the idea of over-emphasizing baseball but rather to give the men here who are not taking part in other sports an opportunity to play and at the same time afford the baseball coaches a chance to see the men in action.

BOB FETZER ADDRESSES YEAR'S FIRST PEP RALLY

Approximately 600 students attended an enthusiastic pep meeting last night at 9:15 in Memorial hall. Billy Arthur, diminutive cheer-leader, ably abetted by his assistants, conducted the cheering, and Coach Bob Fetzer delivered an address on sportsmanship and its relation to Carolina. The enthusiasm displayed last night speaks well for the cheering which will be heard at today's game and those of the ensuing season.

All the churches on the Hill entertained the new men with refreshments and entertainment, it being the annual freshman night at the respective places of worship. This program has long been an important part of freshman week allowing the freshmen to meet students and pastors of their denomination.

GLEE CLUB BOOKS EXTENSIVE WORK TO BEGIN MONDAY

Harold S. Dyer Urges Interested Students to Try Out Monday Afternoon.

The University glee club will meet Monday afternoon at 5:00 o'clock to organize for the most extensive program planned in recent years. Director Harold S. Dyer of the club urges all students interested in making try-outs, as well as former glee club members, to attend.

As president of the South Atlantic glee club association Dyer is now at work with the executive board formulating plans for a contest among members of the group. The winner of this contest, according to Dyer, will quite probably be invited to the Exposition of Progress in Chicago. For the past two years this contest has been discontinued because of the prohibitive cost of travel, but three years ago the contest at Greenville, South Carolina, was won by the local club which represented the section in the national contest in New York, placing well up in the first rank.

The winner of the sectional contest will go on during choral week at Chicago in June.

Alumni Directors Will Meet Today

The board of directors of the General Alumni Association will meet today in the Graham Memorial building at 11:30 o'clock, it was announced yesterday by J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary.

Today's meeting will be concerned in the main with reports of the alumni secretary and other officers on the work of the association during the year just passed, and in outlining and projecting plans for the program of the new year. The association's fiscal year closes September 30, and a budget for the new year is to be adopted at today's meeting.

K. P. Lewis, of Durham, is president of the General Alumni Association, and will preside at the meeting today. There are two vice-presidents, and twenty-one directors, a number of whom have already accepted invitations to attend the gathering.

New List Of Room Agents Approved

Several changes in the personnel of the dormitory service room agents were made during the summer because of the failure of some of those appointed last spring to return to school. The revised list is as follows: Vance, J. A. Shuford; Carr, C. P. Randolph and Red Gilbreath; Grimes, Dan A. Kelly and Hubert Taylor; Manly, Wesley McKeithan and A. Oliverie; Mangum, B. C. Proctor and Thurman Vick; Ruffin, J. O. Stallings and Ben R. Wall, Jr.; Aycock, Clyde Boyles and C. E. Atkins; Lewis, Dave McCachren and James McCachren; Everett, Harper Barnes and V. W. Toller; Old East, D. P. Henry and T. A. Henry; Old West, E. A. Daniel and W. A. Jones; and Steele, C. H. Wall and Elmer Barnett, Jr.

These men were appointed by President Garham's self-help committee which is composed of C. T. Woollen, R. B. House, A. W. Hobbs, P. L. Burch, H. F. Comer, J. O. Harmon, F. F. Bradshaw, W. D. Toy, and E. S. Lanier.

Chaplin May Wed Again

A former Charlotte girl, Paul-ette Goddard, may be Charlie Chaplin's third matrimonial venture according to Hollywood gossip. The former movie comedian was often seen in the company of the girl who divorced her husband, a lumber magnate, to try her luck in the studios. On bidding the blonde North Carolinian adieu, Chaplin gave her a fond goodbye kiss, and the scandal mongers have plenty of inspiration for a month's tongue wagging.

Illinois Mine Trouble

Militiamen armed with fixed bayonets and tear bombs cleared the way at Langleyville, Ill., for 200 miners to resume work in picketed mines despite the presence of hundreds of jeering union workers. The trouble all began when the miners refused to work for a $5 wage scale. Machine guns looked menacingly down the streets from each end of the village. The pickets, re-inforced by townspeople, converged on the small mining town in small numbers, and as dawn came they were warned that no loitering or picketing would be tolerated.

Gandhi May End Fast

An understanding may be arrived at in India's electoral problem for the millions of India's lower class of untouchables before the day is out, and so enable Mahatma Gandhi once more to partake of food. Friends of the leader of millions expressed fear that he would find some flaw in the proposal and thus prevent compromise. However, Gandhi himself slept well on his webbed cot under a shabby mango tree in front of the jail, and as usual conducted his morning prayers.

Roosevelt in California

Carrying the presidential campaign literally to the doorstep of President Hoover's legal residence in Palo Alto, Governor Roosevelt was enthusiastically welcomed in Sacramento by a crowd estimated to number 100,000. Roosevelt declared himself pleased that liberal Republicans were giving a "remarkable response" to his plea to forget party lines. He coupled this statement with praise for Senator Hiram Johnson, California independent Republican, who has often clashed with President Hoover. At this half-way point in his 8,900 mile campaign swing, Governor Roosevelt was faced with a heavy program of speeches and conferences with state and local party leaders.

Farm Strike Idea Spreads

Organ Is Installed In Memorial Hall

The freshman-sophomore assembly yesterday morning formally christened the new organ installed this summer in Memorial hall. This organ was presented to the University by the Publix-Saenger theatres and was formerly used in one of their finest theatres.

The organ has all the variations of sound effects of which those instruments are capable. It is planned that this organ will be used in leading the singing of hymns and patriotic songs or in the accompaniment of athletic pep meetings, cheers or various forms of recreation. The flexibility of the theatre organ promises to be adequate to any public occasion.

The organ proper is installed in a specially built chamber on the west side of the auditorium rostrum. The manual is placed within the orchestra pit just in front of the rostrum.

E. Carrington Smith, manager of the local Publix-Saenger theatre, was instrumental in securing the presentation of this organ to the University.

RHODES AWARDS APPLICATIONS TO BE IN BY OCT. 15

Competition for Scholarships to Oxford Will Be Carried On in All States.

Candidates for this year's selection of Rhodes scholars must file their applications before October 15 with either Dean A. W. Hobbs, chairman of the local committee, or C. P. Spruill, member of the state committee.

The applicant must be in his junior year of college, and must be an unmarried male citizen of the United States, between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five. Candidates can apply either in the state in which he lives or in the one in which he has received two years of higher education.

Eight Districts

The competition for the scholarship will be in every state in the union, the forty-eight states being divided into eight districts of six states each. Each state community may nominate two men to appear before a district committee which will select from the twelve candidates the best four men whom it deems most representative.

All the scholarships are tenable at the University of Oxford. An appointment is made for two years in the first instance, but a scholar may remain for a third year upon presentation of a plan of study for that period satisfactory to his college and to the Rhodes trustees.

A Rhodes scholar may either postpone his third year, returning to Oxford for it after a period of work in the United States or, in a special case, may spend his third year in graduate work in some university in Great Britain or in Europe.

State elections are scheduled December 10, and the district committees will meet a few days later. Applications are due not

Graduate Club Has Cosmopolitan Group

Evidencing the trend of the University of North Carolina's enrolling many students from other states and countries, the Graduate club has affiliated with it this year students from South Africa, Kentucky and Oregon. While the majority of the men connected with the Graduate club are North Carolina students, more men from other parts are applying for enrollment each year. J. H. Kirk, the student from South Africa, is a research worker in sociology and is coming to Chapel Hill through the Commonwealth Research Fund.

As a result of elections last spring Mitchell P. Wells was named president of the Graduate club.

Juniors and seniors are urged to keep their appointments for Yackety Yack pictures, as it is desired that all pictures be taken by this fall.

The death of George Tayloe Winston, former president of the University, closed a career which began on the decks of a battleship and closed in the presidential chair of a great university. Constitutionally unfitted for a sea-faring life, Dr. Winston turned from the navy at an early age and subsequently devoted his life to higher education in the south.

KOCH TO DELIVER OPENING LECTURE OF DRAMA SEASON

Carolina Playmakers Will Present Philip Barry's "Holiday" as Initial Play.

With an illustrated lecture October 3, on "Our Adventures in Playmaking," Professor F. H. Koch of the English drama department will open the season of the Carolina Playmakers. After the lecture, which will be a summary of the past achievements of the Carolina Playmakers, there will be a meeting of the students who are interested in the drama.

October 9, Professor Koch will give his annual reading of Shakespeare, and he has chosen for his reading this year the famous comedy The Taming of the Shrew. The first production of the year will be an American comedy. The one now being given most consideration is Philip Barry's famous play, Holiday. The tryouts for this are scheduled for October 10, the production will be presented November 3, 4, 5.

Following this production there will be two more readings. The first will be an author's reading November 13. During the Thanksgiving season the playmakers will tour north to present some of their productions.

The first bill of original plays, written by Carolina students in the dramatic class, is December 8, 9, 10. Professor Koch will give a reading of Dickens's A Christmas Carol December 11, 12, ending the activities of the Playmakers for the fall quarter.

NEW METHODS TO BE USED IN WORK ON YACKETY YACK

Members of Year Book Staff Expect to End Photography Work Next Month.

The plan to be used this year in obtaining junior and senior pictures for the Yackety Yack is a radical departure from the former arrangement in that, by class vote, the photographer's fees are paid from class dues rather than by the individual student, affording convenience both to students and members of year book staff.

In conjunction with this plan, many Yackety Yack appointments were made at registration Thursday, and about one hundred of these have been filled since that time.

It is expected that by the new system and early start, the staff will eliminate many poor features of the old plan and be able to finish photography work by the end of October.

Co-operation of all upper-classmen is urged; and for their convenience, lists of those having appointments on that day will be published in THE DAILY TAR HEEL. In case students have lost appointment cards, duplicates may be obtained at Wooten-Moulton's.

Thus far, appointments have been made only for this week, but the staff plans to get in touch with those who have not been reached and make arrangements for sittings.

The editor has announced that there are several vacancies on the editorial staff, which will be organized about October 8.

INCREASE OF 700 VOLUMES IN LAW SCHOOL LIBRARY

Gifts by Alumni and Exchanges With Other Universities Main Sources.

Recent check-ups on books in the law school library show that the library contains at present 24,700 volumes, which is an increase of 700 volumes over the number there last year. This increase was made possible through gifts by prominent alumni, through the building up of certain sections, and through exchanges with other universities, mainly the University of Ohio.

In the special section on state statutes and compilations an increase was caused by the receipt of new reports and new volumes. The section on special reports made an increase by the purchase of new reports, mainly on aviation and compensation.

By writing to all the state departments, as the insurance, corporation, and industrial commissions, the library was able to obtain much material concerning the laws and reports of each body. Part of this material was in book form and the rest was in pamphlets.

Another increase in library material for the law school was made possible by a gift of fifty dollars, which was donated by the law school association. At the close of last year this association gave part of its balance to the law school library, and with this a five volume set of Wigmore on Evidence and a set of periodical shelves were purchased.

Phi Assembly Will Meet Tuesday Night

Officers of the Phi Assembly will convene for the opening meeting of the fall quarter on Tuesday night at 8:00 o'clock in New East building for the purpose of discussing plans for the coming academic year. At that time Dan Kelly, president of the Phi Assembly, will deliver the inaugural address followed by the discussion of new bills, among which, is the bill, "Resolved that the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring the immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus."

The officers of the Phi Assembly for the fall quarter include Dan Kelly, president; Donald Seawell, sergeant-at-arms; J. D. Winslow, reading clerk; J. P. Temple, treasurer; Leonard L. Hutchison, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee; K. Wharton Young and A. L. Hodges, members of the Ways and Means Committee; and Leonard L. Hutchison, reporter.

President And Executive Body To Control Greater University

First Steps Being Taken Towards Consolidation of State Institutions of Higher Learning; Committee Recommends Transfer of State College From Raleigh to Chapel Hill.

In adopting the recommendations of the investigating commission, the board of trustees of the Greater University of North Carolina in their meeting last July took the first step towards the consolidation of the three state institutions of higher learning. The commission, acting upon the report of Dr. George A. Works, chairman of the survey committee, unanimously recommended the findings of the committee and directed that they be transmitted to the board of trustees of the University.

The board of trustees, meeting with the governor, with but few changes adopted the recommendations of the commission. The first changes towards consolidation are scheduled to begin during this academic year.

Several Changes Adopted
Several drastic changes are among those adopted by the board. Power has been granted to the Presidential Directorate, a triumvirate consisting of the presidents of the three institutions which will control the Greater University pending the inauguration of the president, to make a study of the curricula and abolish such courses as may

RUSHING SEASON GETS UNDER WAY THIS AFTERNOON

Freshmen to Visit Fraternity Houses Upon Invitation Beginning at 2:00 P. M.

The interfraternity council met Friday night to make final plans for the rushing season, which is to begin at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon. The council has been delivering invitations from the various fraternities to freshmen since Thursday night, and the last ones were given out last night.

All men who received invitations will be required to visit each house to which they have been invited during the first two days of rushing, and at this time they will make dates for future visits.

Irvin Boyle and Alec Webb, president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the interfraternity council, will be in Graham Memorial from 2:00 until 4:00 o'clock to direct freshmen to the houses.

This period of rushing will extend over a period of twelve days, after which there will be another period of silence until the day that bids are distributed at Memorial hall.

Dollar Fee for Bids

Following the example of the fraternities in many other schools, the council decided to charge a fee of one dollar to be paid by each freshman who receives a bid on bidding day. This is to defray the expenses which the council will incur during rushing season.

Because many freshmen to whom the fraternities wished to send invitations were not listed in the freshman directory, it was decided that each fraternity would be allowed to find out the addresses of these from the men that visit them Sunday and to deliver invitations to them Sunday night.

be deemed unnecessary. Several courses of study have been removed from one institution and transferred to another. Under the present plan, the executive duties of the University will rest in the hands of the president together with an executive committee of the board of trustees. The president, who has not yet been elected, is to go in office not later than July 1, 1933. Immediately beneath the president will be a head for each of the three institutions.

Committee of Twelve

The executive committee is to be composed of twelve members elected by the board and from their number. It is planned that they shall be so appointed that the terms of three members shall expire each two years. The governor will remain as ex-officio chairman of the committee in addition to the regular twelve. The committee shall meet at least four times during each year, and shall be given full power to act for the board.

It is also the plan of the board to eliminate as many of the superfluous courses and departments as possible. Beginning with the session of 1933 the con-

Thanks to

E. Carrington Smith

Thanks to E. Carrington Smith, manager of the local Carolina theatre, and his willingness to aid the University in time of need, the Publix-Kinney Theatre Company has given to the University of North Carolina an expensive pipe organ to be placed in Memorial hall.

The organ is one which had been bought by the Publix-Kinney Company, owners of the local theatre, for one of their larger theatres in the state but was never installed. Knowing that the company had this organ on hand not being used and knowing that the University was greatly in need of one, Manager Smith was able to negotiate its donation for the new auditorium.

From the time Memorial hall was first constructed a few years ago there has always been an urgent need for an organ of some sort. Because of insufficient funds, however, the University has been unable to secure one. But even if the trustees had had the amount on hand it is certain that they would not have so much as considered purchasing as expensive and elaborate an organ as the one which has been so kindly contributed by the Publix-Kinney Company.

R. B. House as executive secretary of the University expressed the appreciation of the officials for this gift. And the DAILY TAR HEEL speaking as the mouthpiece of the students adds the sincere thanks of the entire student body to Manager Smith for the important part he played in negotiating the donation.

Of, For And By

Students at the University of North Carolina have to an unusual degree the control of their own affairs. The tradition of the University is that the students and not the faculty shall have the deciding voice in all campus matters. Carolina's honor system, by which the students themselves undertake the regulation of cheating, is nationally famous. A student committee regulates the University dances. The students themselves supervise the campus elections without faculty interference. THE DAILY TAR HEEL is the only collegiate daily in the country whose editor is elected by the student body alone.

Naturally, wherever the students have such power, campus politics is sure to develop. In most schools, however, it is merely an empty show. On many campuses the only duty of the student officers is to pose for pictures for the college annual and their only recompense is the glory of the title, "President of the Junior Class," or whatever the office may be. At Carolina, however, the student officials have real power. They can expel a student from the University. They edit an annual, a humorous magazine, a literary magazine, and a daily newspaper. And the class officers and members of the various student boards control the expenditure of thousands of dollars of the students' money. Politics on this campus really has significance. It is an important matter to every student, that able and honest men be elected to office. Embezzlement, inefficiency, and other forms of misgovernment are occasionally met with on this campus, as they are in national life. And they can be corrected and prevented on this campus, as in national life, only by a thorough system of book-keeping, and an active and intelligent participation in politics.

Besides the student's immediate personal interest in good government on the campus, the opportunities for political training should draw him into campus affairs. School politics here is state and national politics on a smaller scale. There are political parties, there are conventions, there are executive committees, and there are hot campaigns. The politically minded student will find opportunity for almost every sort of activity in that field, from the grand statesmanship which plans tickets and balances fraternities off against each other and directs the appeals to the voters to the grubby ward heeling which entails room-to-room solicitation of votes in the dormitories, distributing of political posters, and button-holing prospective voters at the polls. There is no better training anywhere for the rough activity of state and national politics than active participation in the campus elections.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL urges every student, and particularly those entering the University for the first time, to interest themselves in campus politics for their own training and for the betterment of the student government.—D.M.L.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Rah, Rah, Ah

Research by Dr. Irving B. Crandall and C. F. Sacia of the Bell Telephone Laboratories reveals that the loudest sound capable of issuing from the human throat is "Rah." "Ah," the basic vowel sound in most languages, is the easiest to produce because fewer throat and mouth muscles are tensed.

This explains the collegiate "rah, rah, rah," utilized as a method of vocal stimulation to the warriors of field and floor. Tests showed that the nearest rival sound "a" as pronounced "tap" rates next at forty-four, if a value of fifty is assigned to the loudest sound.

"A" as in "talk" ranks at thirty-seven. Women's throats pronounce the three vowel sounds with practically the same loudness. These are the sounds in "tone" "talk" and "rah."

Death and Taxes

The billion dollar revenue law begins to yield fruit. With the deficit climbing rapidly and already nearly four hundred millions since July 1, first returns of the new levy brought nearly eighty millions to the federal coffers in the month of August.

This was an increase of more than eighteen millions over the previous month and eleven millions over receipts of the same month in 1931.

The tax payer can well begin to breathe easier. We are fast rivaling Great Britain as the heaviest taxed nation. Much of this is due to our system of bureaucracy that requires county, state, federal, and often city and township agencies to take a portion of tax money. In the average city of more than thirty thousand people, according to Marcus Duffield, the governmental cost is seventy dollars a year to each and every resident.

Civics experts estimate that the same service could be rendered for fifty dollars, which in a large city, would amount to a gigantic saving per capita.

Economists state that one out of every ten citizens is employed by some branch of government supported by the tax payer.

Our national government has risen in cost from one and one-half billions in 1903 to thirteen and one-half billions in 1931; it has risen in dollars per capita from nineteen in 1903 to 108 in 1931. Yet the national income has only increased from six to twenty-two billions.

Government could operate on half the number now employed, were efficiency introduced with an eye to lightening the burden of the tax payer.

Yet the spoils system that so blackened our political escuchon a few decades ago is still spoken of in the past tense.

Chapple Hour

Universities play their part, however small, in big time politics. John B. Chapple, Ashland newspaper editor, won fame and the support of Wisconsin's stalwart Republicans for the senate by haranguing the state university with charges of radicalism and atheism. The charges were more or less successfully refuted by the university's staunch daily, the Daily Cardinal, at every turn, but Chapple was able to cash in on his attack to win a large majority over his opponent Senator John J. Blaine in party primaries. Cashing in on his publicity Chapple took unto himself an automobile and stumped the state.

Over last Tuesday's elections grumbled the Cardinal in a bulletin on its election story: "Political dopesters here (Milwaukee) early this morning predicted that John B. Chapple, arch enemy of the University of Wisconsin, the leader of the Republican primary for United States senator, will be beaten in the November election by F. Ryan Duffy, Democrat, who was unopposed in his party's primary."

As is practiced hereabouts, passive and mute resistance is best for educational authorities under fire from a publicity-seeking politician.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

The name Book Market has been repealed. The book shop in the "Y" building sails again under the aegis of its famous predecessor. Long live the BULL'S HEAD.

"THE LAUGHING PIONEER" by PAUL GREEN (McBride) (Revised by Mayne Albright)

In the novel, Laughing Pioneer, there is music not only in Danny Lawton's guitar and song, but in the descriptive passages which flow rhythmically from the fluent pen of Paul Green. The locale is eastern North Carolina, and the story a romance of the changing south.

A character, not admirable, but certainly admirably drawn, is old Judge Long. His decaying plantation, which like his own body is being lost through dissipation and neglect, is to him only a thing which "if God A'mighty wants to wash away—I'll not try to stop him." Miss Alice, Judge Long's proud but lonesome daughter, has nothing to look forward to but the Sunday calls of Rorie Armstrong, the last withered hope of the old aristocracy, hand-picked by the Judge as her mate. But then comes Danny Lawton with a song and with new life and love and work. Miss Alice, with a new interest in life, defies her community and the tradition of the old south to take him into her house as overseer and companion. The village people suspect the worst, but Danny sings and works and Miss Alice continues to defy them, until at last they defeat her and Danny goes singing on his way.

Laughing Pioneer is a story of a deep love, requited but never satisfied. If one insists on emphasizing the symbolic, it shows the Old South infatuated with the New, desiring and reaching for it but dying while the New South goes on.

During the summer we arranged a series of evening readings. We began by laughing over Of Thee I Sing with Harry Davis. We were given a clearer glimpse into some selections of modern poetry. At another time we learned a great many interesting things about printing and publishing from Mr. "Bill" Couch.

We plan to be "at home" in this same delightful fashion every Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock this year. And when it is cold and rainy we can promise the warmth of an open fire.—Mary Dirnberger.

Tar Heels And Deacons Play To Scoreless Tie

Croom Crosses Wake Forest Goal, But Play Called Back For Offside Penalty.

CAROLINA DEFENSE GOOD
Work of June Underwood at Center Stands Out; Backs Gain But Pass Poorly.

Failure to take advantage of the breaks cost the Tar Heels their chance for victory yesterday as they battled Wake Forest through sixty minutes of scoreless football at Kenan stadium. About 7,000 spectators braved an intermittent drizzle to witness the contest.

With the exception of the first few minutes of the game, the action took place in Wake Forest territory. So completely did the Blue and White dominate the play that the Deacons were unable to tally a single first down, while Coach Collin's lads were scoring no fewer than thirteen during the clash, but no legitimate scoring was done. True, Croom knifed his way forty-five yards through tackle but Carolina's sterling left end, Walker, was offside on the play and the score was nullified.

Tar Heels Threat
Carolina was in scoring distance throughout the game but whenever the Tar Heels threatened to push the ball over, the Deacon line held and that was that.

It was during the second quarter that Carolina made its first bid for a score, advancing the ball as far as the Wake Forest five yard line. After holding the visitors on the twenty yard line, Chandler returned Wall's kick nineteen yards, placing the ball in play on Wake Forest's thirty-eight yard line. Thompson handed McCaskill the ball and the Carolina fullback plunged eight yards before he was downed. A moment later Phipps made it a first down through the line, advancing the ball to the twenty-five yard line. Thompson carried the ball twice off tackle making nine yards and Phipps made it another first down on Wake Forest's nine yard line. Here the Deacons held and four tries were good for only four yards.

Deacs Intercept Pass
With three and a half minutes left to play, the Tar Heels appeared on the way for a touchdown, but an intercepted pass ended whatever chance Carolina had for breaking the tie. Wall's kick from the eight yard line was blocked by Underwood and the ball went over to Carolina. Wall redeemed himself by intercepting Phipps' pass giving Wake Forest possession of the ball. The game ended with Wake Forest in possession in its own territory.

Defensively, the Tar Heel line played excellent ball, but was unable to do much on the offense. Carolina's backs proved themselves good ground gainers, although the passing was not up to standard. For the Deacons, Wilson, Peters, Grant, and Green were outstanding.

Halfback Bill Croom, pictured above, was one of the spark plugs in Carolina's running attack in yesterday's game with the Demon Deacons. Croom scored the only touchdown of the game but was called back when the Carolina team was offside.

High Spots

OF THE GAMES

By Thomas H. Broughton

If a moral victory can be consolation, Wake Forest should certainly be consoled, in fact they should be extremely happy, possibly to the extent of getting collegiate and building bonfires.

The fine work of Carolina's line, which at times turned out to be a veritable stone wall, was more than overshadowed by the sloppy work of the Tar Heel backs, especially when it came to blocking.

Carolina's board of strategy appeared a little off today. Back where we came from, ten-yard passes are forgotten when a team gets to the eighty-yard line.

Little Zeno Wall, sophomore flash of the Deacons, reported to be another Johnny Branch, failed to live up to expectations. His running was off and his work at quarter had the appearance of a rookie in his first varsity game. We came up expecting to see Wall return punts a la Johnny Branch, and went away disappointed, especially after picking Carolina first in the Big Five and Wake Forest last yesterday.

Watching the game from the stands where Johnny Branch, Jimmy Maus, "Strud" Nash, Bud Shuler, Jim Magner, Pete Wyrick, and Rabbit Bonner, all outstanding stars of former years.

Perhaps the most disheartening part of the game was when Croom, after a forty-five yard dash for a touchdown, was called back after Walker was ruled offside.

Kay Thompson and Bill Croom were the outstanding backs for the Tar Heels. Thompson was seriously cut over the right eye, the extent of the injury being uncertain. Croom was the outstanding ground gainer for the Blue and White, gaining consistently until reaching the goal line.

Another cause for objection is the new rule making the ball dead the instant the ball-carrier touches the ground. They might as well turn football into a touch game. The new rule takes a great deal of the fight out of the game. Personally we like to see

V. P. I. ENGAGES FOUR EX-PLAYERS AS NEW COACHES

Gobblers to Open Football Campaign Against Emory and Henry at Blacksburg October 14.

Responsibility for the rise or fall of the V. P. I. Gobblers this fall can be laid on the shoulders of no one man. Four former Tech stars have been selected to carry the burden of the Gobblers' hopes this fall. MacCaulley McEver, Dick Esleek, Phil Hotchkiss, and "Maggie" Stark, all of whom have held high places in V. P. I. athletic history, will guide the destinies of the V. P. I. teams this fall.

McEver, former fullback, has for the last two years, served as assistant freshman coach and baseball coach. Esleek is coach of the V. P. I. mittmen. Hotchkiss has served as assistant freshman coach also for three years, and the one and only "Maggie" Stark rounds out the list.

Rumor has it that "Dolly" Brown, leader of last year's eleven, will be back as yearling coach, and with sterling material on hand, another outstanding Rat eleven is expected.

The schedule follows:
Oct. 14—E. & H., home.
Oct. 29—W. & M., Norfolk.
Nov. 14—Virginia, home.
Nov. 21—W. & L., home.

Stuart Chandler played a nice game at quarter, slipping a fast one over on the Deacons when a Deac end in the third quarter failed to ground a punt.

Vanderbilt's scouts certainly see a tough time for the Commodores next Saturday, after the way the Heels performed yesterday.

June Underwood looks like a find at center. The Sanford boy played in Wake Forest's backfield most of the time.

New York Yankees Favored In World Series Battle With Cubs

Greater Hitting Strength and Superior Pitching Staff of Metropolitan Club Believed Too Much for Chicago Team.

By Jack Bessen

On Wednesday afternoon, September 28, the New York Yankees, winners of the American League diadem, will play host to their interleague rivals, the Chicago Cubs, in the first game of baseball's annual fall classic.

The Yankees clinched the pennant about two weeks ago in Cleveland while Chicago's victory over Pittsburgh last Tuesday officially gave Charley Grimm's club the flag in the senior circuit.

Yankees Favored

As is the custom, National League rooters are flocking to the standard of the Cubs, while those of the junior are 100% strong for the Yankees, but there can be no doubt but that the McCarthy men are the better team on paper. The Yankees outclass the Chicago club in the outfield, infield, and in the pitcher's box, but whether the new American League champions can maintain their superiority on the field remains to be seen. Strange things have happened in baseball and a Chicago victory would have plenty of fans saying, "I told you so."

In the gardens, the regular Yankee trio of Ruth, Combs, and Chapman, rank as the best outfield in the majors and surpass Chicago's quartet of Cuyler, Stephenson, Moore, and Demaree in both fielding and batting. But in a short series, it's dangerous and the Cubs have two such in Cuyler and Stephenson. The Yankee outfield, led by Babe Ruth with a .350 batting mark, averages around the .330 mark while Stephenson is the only Cub fielder clouting the ball higher than .300. Demaree, Moore, and Cuyler hovering around the .270 mark. In addition the Yankee reserves, Sam Byrd and Myril Hoag, are excellent hitters.

The infields of the two ball clubs are more evenly balanced but here again, Yankee supremacy shows its mark.

Joey Sewell, the former Cleveland third baseman, has practically made the Yankee infield one of the most formidable inner defenses in the league by his sterling play at the "hot corner." But "Alabama" Joe's greatest value lies in his steady influence on the rest of the New York infield. Guarding third base for the Wrigley team is Elwood "Woody" English, a converted short stop and a mighty fine one at that. Weakness at the hot corner caused ex-manager Hornsby to convert English into a baseman, a move which the Cubs have not regretted. However, statistics show that Sewell is leading English in batting, runs batted in, and fielding, while English leads the Yankee veteran in stolen bases.

Koenig with Cubs

When the Cubs trot out into the field Wednesday, the Yankees will find a familiar face among the infielders, the young man in question being no other than Mark Koenig who used to roam in the short field for the Yankees in their heyday when for three years, 1926, 27, 28, they ruled the baseball roost. Today Mark is just another ball player out to prove that the Yanks made a mistake when he was released. Koenig can hit—he has shown that ever since he joined the Cubs in August. When he is right, he is a sensational fielder. On the other hand, the American leaguers have two "freshman" beauties in Lyn Lary and Frank Crosetti. Both boys are weak with the stick but are excellent fielders.

At second base will be a duel between the "find" of the rookies and a veteran who was about to be discarded at the beginning of the season only to make a wonderful comeback. The rookie is Bill Herman of the Cubs—the vet, Tony Lazzeri, who is having one of his best years in the majors. True, Tony has lost some of his speed, but he still is a fine fielder and he has a propensity for getting hits when it hurts—the enemy. His comeback is one reason why the Yanks will represent the American League in the World Series. Herman also is a fine money hitter, but he has a tendency toward erratic fielding.

Gehrig vs. Grimm

Two of the best first basemen in recent years meet when Lou Gehrig hooks up with Manager Charley Grimm of the Cubs. The latter is the finest fielder in both leagues and a dangerous hitter, while Gehrig's ability at bat is well known, although his fielding ability is only fair. It will be a hitter against fielder when these two athletes get together.

Behind the bat the Yanks will have Bill Dickey, baseball's best catcher. The Arkansas boy played marvelous ball throughout most of the season, but his recent letdown has caused Manager McCarthy to lose no little sleep. On the other hand, Gabby Hartnett, the Cubs' loquacious receiver, has been showing the form that made him the kingpin of National League catchers. Gabby's new lease on life dates from the release of Hornsby as pilot of the Cubs and his spurt has won quite a few ball games for the Windy City club.

Taken singly or as a group, the Yankee pitching corps completely outclasses that of the Cubs. Gomez, Ruffing, Allen, Pipgras, Macfayden, and Penock appear to be too strong for the Cub batters to hit often, while baseball writers do not expect Warnecke, Root, Bush, Malone and Grimes to offer many obstacles to the Yanks' long distance hitters. But there's a catch to it, inasmuch as Gomez and Ruffing have not been going any too well recently. Whether that is the natural layoff after a team has won the pennant or not remains to be seen next week.

To the writer it appears that hitting will be the biggest factor in the coming series, and if it is so, the Yankees should breeze through to the World's Championship, with a possibility of the series being limited to four games.

Another factor is that the series starts in New York where the Yankees have lost but fifteen games while winning sixty-two. The Cubs may return to Wrigley Field two down which won't make the National leaguers feel any too confident. At any rate it seems as though the World's championship will change leagues in 1932.

DUKE TRIUMPHS OVER DAVIDSON IN SEASON OPENER

Blue Devils Flash Power in Downing Fighting Wildcat Team by Score of 13-0.

A fighting clan of Wildcats from Davidson fell before the onslaughts of a powerful Blue Devil team from Duke University, 13-0, yesterday at Durham in the initial contest of the season for each team, the intermittent flashes of driving football by Wallace Wade's juggernaut allowing the 7,000 fans to go home with big expectations of the Satans in future encounters.

The scoring started in the opening quarter when Lane returned a Davidson punt from midfield to the twenty-six yard line. From here Captain Mason battled his way through the Wildcat line, aided by the fast charging Duke front wall, for thirteen yards and then the Duke speed merchant, Brownlee, tore off a twelve-yard jaunt to the two-yard marker. Mason plunged over for the touchdown. Ersler missed the try for goal. There were no scoring gestures by either team in the remaining time of the first half.

With the hopes that they could make the start of their two new coaches' careers auspicious, the Wildcats in the third quarter made a determined effort to score after recovering Brownlee's fumble on the Blue Devils' thirty-seven yard line but their tries via air and line were thwarted, ending the sole scoring chance Doc Newton-Gene McEver coached contingent had.

Two sophomores were greatly instrumental in producing the scoring punch for Duke's last touchdown, Cornelius and Bob Cox advancing the ball from midfield across Davidson's goal in seven tries, Cox smashing his way over in four attempts from the twenty-nine yard line. Cornelius kicked goal.

Clawing back furiously at the Duke spinners and reverses, the Wildcats fought back a last-minute barge at their goal by Lane, Mason, and Brownlee, the Blue Devils taking the ball on Davidson's twenty-five yard line when Pearce's kick was blocked and carrying it to the one yard line only to be held for downs.

The Durham aggregation presented a well-balanced line that charged fast, Crawford, James, and a sophomore, Porreca, doing the outstanding work. In the backfield Cox displayed plenty of drive, the tall Texan doing some excellent work the time he played. Cornelius looked shifty, while Lane and Mason performed stellarly. Brownlee, Duke's highly touted ace, was unable to get started on the long runs he was supposed to make.

For the lighter Davidson team Pearce and Peabody in the backfield did the heavy work while Captain Gardner did well in the line until he was injured in the first session. Morgan at end helped keep the Satans from making over seven first downs. Davidson made two first downs.

"Blonde Venus" and "70,000 Witnesses" Two of Week's Best Attractions.

"Blondie of the Follies", Marion Davies new starring picture with Robert Montgomery featured, opens this week's bill at the Carolina theatre on Monday. Besides the two leading players, the cast includes other stars, Billie Dove, James Gleason, Zasu Pitts, Sidney Toler, Douglas Dumbrille, Sarah Padden and Louise Carter.

Tuesday's showing is "Devil and the Deep", starring Cary Grant, young English actor. One of his first appearances on the American screen was in "This Is the Night", with Charlie Ruggles, Lily Damita and Roland Young.

Marlene Dietrich, German actress, features in "Blonde Venus," coming Wednesday. This is the fifth picture in which she has had the feminine lead, the others being "The Blue Angel," "Morocco," "Dishonored," and "Shanghai Express."

In producing "Bird of Paradise," Thursday's feature, co-starring Joel McCrea and Dolores Del Rio, the RKO company hired an entire village of Hawaiian primitives—all its occupants, men, women, babies, goats, dogs—for the spectacular mating scene.

Friday, Edmund Lowe has the leading role in "Chandu the Magician," from the radio drama by Harry A. Earnshaw. Included in the supporting cast are Bela Lugosi, Irene Ware, and Henry B. Walthall.

The doors of the theatre will open at 11:30 o'clock Friday night for a special midnight show, "The Night Mayor," a take-off on ex-Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York, with Lee Tracy and Evalyn Knapp.

Johnny Mack Brown, former football star at the University of Alabama, features in "70,000 Witnesses," on Saturday. Since signing with M-G-M in 1927 he has played opposite such stars as Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, and Greta Garbo.

UNIVERSITY LAW SCHOOL ENROLLMENT INCREASED

Classes began Friday morning in the University law school, which formally opened with an enrollment of 110 students. This number is a slight increase over the enrollment at this time a year ago, and with the usual number of late registrations this quarter it is probable that the law school will have a larger number of students than it had last year.

Spencer Hall Teas

The usual Wednesday afternoon teas at Spencer hall will begin September 28. All women students in Chapel Hill are cordially invited.

Boxing Notice

All candidates for the freshman and varsity boxing squads will report to Coach Crayton Rowe tomorrow at 4:00 o'clock in the Tin Can.

Erratum

Due to carelessness in the final proofing of yesterday's Daily Tar Heel two lines were left out of the freshman Y cabinet election story.

The men elected to office were: Jessie Parker of Wilmington, president; Marcus Lynch of Raleigh, vice-president; Dan Webb of Raleigh, secretary; and James Craig-hill of Rocky Mount, treasurer.

Says Debate Is One-Sided

The governor spoke before a crowd of 12,000 people.

President, Executive Body Will Control Greater University

(Continued from first page) solidated institution will operate under one director of summer schools. There will also be only one director of extension, beginning in the academic year of 1932.

Certain changes have likewise been made in the allocation of functions in the Greater University. The training of all elementary school teachers shall be transferred to Greensboro with the 1933-34 season, whereas the training of all librarians will be moved to Chapel Hill, abolishing the library department at Greensboro.

State to Be Transferred

Most drastic of the transfers advocated by the survey committee, but as yet unratified, is the transfer of State college from Raleigh to Chapel Hill. The committee in making this recommendation advocated the making of provisions for leaving a program of general education carried through the junior-college level at Raleigh.

In all transfers the committee recommends that the removal should be gradual. In the case of State college this will be done by not admitting freshmen to abolished departments, and in the training of teachers in Greensboro by not admitting students at Greensboro in the junior year.

Throughout the recommendations of the committee wherever possible preference has been given to Chapel Hill. It advocated that when the state resources permit the erection of new buildings, the first funds be spent on the development of the engineering plant at Chapel Hill with the idea of transferring the engineering work.

The adoption by the board of these recommendations is indicative of the unified outlook on the needs of the state which Governor Gardner so urged in his address to the General Assembly. "Our problem," he said, "is to view the entire higher educational effort of this state in terms of trends extending over generations and to direct these trends into channels which will prevent waste and insure to the rising generations the best training we can provide."

G. T. Winston, Former President Here, Was Educational Leader

gave him familiar acquaintance with the teachers of the state. His scholarly addresses, some of which were published gave him a high standing among cultured men. He had boundless energy, vigorous health, and a bold spirit, which feared nothing and was appalled by no obstacles...

Advances University

Crippled by the enforced closing, the University had an enrollment of only 198 students. Dr. Winston determined to increase the number and had placed at his disposal sixty free scholarships. By dissemination of circulars and personal speaking tours, in five years he increased the student body to 462. He also secured an appreciable increase over the $30,000 which had been the state grant to the University at the opening of his term of office.

While president Dr. Winston took a crusading interest in the moral and scholastic standing of his institution. A life-long prohibitionist, he was highly instrumental in the punishment of violators of the law which forbade the sale of liquor within four miles of the campus. Ever democratic and liberal, he sought to quell fraternity and non-fraternity bitterness by ruling that fraternity men could not be pledged until the fall of their sophomore year. This regulation, incidentally, continued for several years after Dr. Winston had been president.

His entire administration was a constant struggle for a greater University. That he won such a large measure of success was undoubtedly due to his personal zeal. He continually emphasized the opinion that "the University is the best property the state owns, that it educates many poor boys who otherwise could not get an education, and that many other states, notably Virginia and South Carolina were appropriating larger sums for their state universities."

President at Texas

At the end of five years Dr. Winston resigned to become head of the new University of Texas. He remained there from 1896 to 1899 and figured prominently in laying the foundation for the great University of the southwest.

In 1899 he assumed his third and last presidency by becoming president of State college. In the seven years which he served there Dr. Winston employed the same progressive and fearless tactics which marked him as one of the nation's educational leaders.

Back to Chapel Hill

His last years were spent as an invalid in the town which he knew and loved so well, Chapel Hill. Even when he was stricken with a mortal illness his interest in the University remained keenly alive. The friendship between Dr. Winston and Dr. M. C. S. Noble during the former final years was one of the most beautiful ever witnessed at the University.

His death last August elicited wide-spread eulogies, notable of which were those from President Graham and Josephus Daniels, Raleigh editor. Daniels wrote "He was the first of those men of new spirit in southern education who built on broader lines at the University of North Carolina and North Carolina State college. In Texas, as president, he performed a similar high service."

President Graham referred to Dr. Winston as "a casualty of the life militant, champion of religious freedom and educational democracy who synthesized the classical and the scientific, the cultural and the vocational in his own varied and brilliant life."

Grimes Dormitory To Be Entertained

Beginning Monday night there will be a series of entertainments in Graham Memorial for those rooming in the dormitories on the campus, with the double purpose of helping the men to organize for the year and of welcoming them to the use of the facilities of the union. Those rooming in Grimes dormitories will be the first to be entertained and all the other dormitories to follow, after which the fraternities will also be invited.

The program for Grimes tomorrow night will begin with the election of dormitory officers at 9:30 o'clock in room 214, where refreshments will be served. At 10:00 o'clock, the meeting will adjourn to the game room, where the games will be reserved free of charge for the members of the dormitory.

NEW MEN VISIT AT FRATERNITIES TO OPEN RUSHING

Rushes Are Entertained at Fraternity Houses to Which They Were Invited.

The rushing season for 1932 was officially opened Sunday afternoon when all the social fraternities on the campus were hosts to all the freshmen whom they are planning to rush. The period of visitation began at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon and continued until 12:00 midnight.

Each man was required to visit every house to which he had been invited some time during this period and to make any further dates he wished. However, the number of dates that he could make with any one fraternity the first day was limited to two, in order that no chapter would be able to monopolize his time and so prevent him from giving a fair consideration to all those which were rushing him.

Rushing Ends October 8

Yesterday, with the filling of the first dates, marked the beginning of the period of rushing that will continue through midnight Saturday, October 8. There will then be a period of silence of two days after which the bids will be given to the rushes in Graham Memorial Monday afternoon. At that time the men who are expecting a bid will write their first three choices in their respective order on a slip of paper. A faculty committee will then notify the man which of these fraternities has accepted him, and the pledge will then go to the house to be received by the chapter members.

During the period of rushing, freshmen are required to leave the house at which they are being entertained by 9:00 o'clock except on Friday and Saturday nights. The time for leaving on these nights is 12:00 o'clock midnight.

MANY APPLY FOR WORK AT SWAIN

Lanier and Harmon Report Great Increase in Applications For Self-Help Work.

According to statements by Obie Harmon, manager of Swain hall, the University dining room, and by Edwin S. Lanier, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. self-help bureau, the number of applications coming in for work in the University dining hall has exceeded those of all former years.

It has been noted that, as a general rule, in the past the number of applications increased steadily year by year. A tremendous pile of applications were sent in last year, but the number of inquiries concerning work in the hall which have come in this time has gone beyond any previous bounds.

Manager Harmon at Swain hall was unable even to estimate the number of applications for work this year that he has received, but he stated that many students applied to him early last year in an attempt to secure work this fall. Many more applicants visited him or wrote to him during the summer months; and he is already receiving applications for work in Swain hall during the terms of summer school next year, and even more for the regular term beginning in September 1933.

Financial Problems Are Discussed For New Men

Dean Francis F. Bradshaw spoke on the financial problems of the students in Memorial hall at the regular assembly period yesterday. He stated that what he had to say concerning finances would be of vital interest to approximately eighty percent of those to whom he was talking. After making it plain that their problem was not solved merely because they had registered and had started to classes, he urged the new students to arrange their financial problems in a business like manner and to promptly call at the office to take care of their notes and scholarships. As a feature of his talk he gave an original skit.

COUNCIL EVOLVES RULES FOR CO-ED PLEDGING SEASON

Sororities Will Begin Rushing in Ten Days; Truce Between Societies Is Now On.

The Pan-Hellenic council of the Woman's Association met Saturday night to evolve the rules which were to govern the campus sororities during their rushing season which will begin in about ten days.

The rules approved by the group Saturday night are:

1. There shall be a two weeks' truce at the beginning of each college year, dating from the first day of registration.
2. During two weeks' truce there shall be no fraternity or personal rushing. Anything that entails the spending of money by a fraternity member for the benefit of a rushee (drug store, picture shows, automobile rides, etcetera) shall be considered rushing.

3. Fraternity members shall be on their honor not to discuss fraternity matters in the presence of rushes during two weeks' truce.
4. Fraternity members shall be on their honor not to speak disparagingly of other fraternities and their members.

5. No rushing with boys shall be allowed.
6. No rushee shall be invited to stay with a fraternity member overnight.

7. Rushing by patronesses and agents of fraternities will not be allowed.

PLAYMAKERS TICKETS ON SALE YESTERDAY

Season tickets to the six major productions of the Playmakers were placed on sale yesterday afternoon. Priced at two dollars per book of six, they may be bought from various students selling them on the campus, at the Book Exchange, at Alfred Williams & Co., or at the Playmakers Theatre. The first production of the season, the name of which will be published in a few days, will be a modern comedy.

Scholarship Applications

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, yesterday announced that the scholarship books were closed at noon last Saturday. He stated that no new applications could be considered, but he will be glad to talk to any students who had their applications on file before Saturday and who are not sure yet as to whether they have received the scholarship or not.

Professor Edgar W. Knight Tells Of Economic Conditions In Iraq

University Professor as Member of Educational Inquiry Commission in Iraq Relates Impressions of Agricultural and Educational System of Country.

Professor Edgar W. Knight of the University school of education returned this summer from a leave of absence spent in Iraq as a member of the Educational Inquiry Commission, at the invitation of the government of that country. He traveled in the Near East from January until late May.

Iraq is one of the new states formed after the World War. It has a modern form of government imposed upon very backward economic and social conditions. The population, of about three millions, is made up chiefly of Arabs. Mohammedanism is the state religion. King Faisal the First became the ruler of the country in 1921 under a constitutional monarchy and, according to Professor Knight, he is in favor of highly progressive measures.

Iraq Very Backward

"Iraq is more backward than Egypt, Syria, or Palestine," declares Professor Knight. Agriculture is quite primitive, although some authorities believe that it could be restored to the rich position it must have occupied centuries ago. Irrigation, on which agriculture in Iraq must depend very largely, is carried on through outworn methods. The water is raised from the irrigation ditches to the fields as it was in the distant past by camels, donkeys, and water buffaloes, a slow and wasteful process. Mechanical pumps have been introduced at only a few places because they are so expensive and the average Iraq farmer cannot afford to have them.

With the introduction of suitable machinery it is believed that agriculture can be restored and that the agricultural products of Iraq can find a proper place in the markets of the world. These are chiefly dates, cotton, tobacco, wheat and other small grain.

Educational Facilities Poor

Educational arrangements are not numerous or extensive except in some of the cities. There are numbers of elementary and some secondary schools in the cities of Bagdad, Basra and Mosul. Besides there are small village schools out among the

Orchestra Meeting Scheduled Tonight

Students who play any orchestral instruments are invited to attend the organization meeting of the University symphony orchestra tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the Hill music hall.

Dr. Harold S. Dyer, director of the orchestra, plans one concert before Christmas, other than matinee concerts for school children. The highest type of symphonic literature will be studied and performed. In the past the orchestra has had a full instrumentation, many of the faculty and their wives being members.

Geology Department Offers New Course

The department of geology is offering this year a course in introductory geophysics taught by Dr. G. R. MacCarthy. Arrangements have also been made with the Bureau of Mines through Dr. J. H. Swartz, formerly a professor in the geology department, so that graduate students may get advance training in geophysics under the supervision of Dr. Swartz and make use of the Bureau of Mines geophysical instruments.

Local Women's Club To Start Work Next Month

Miss Mary L. Cobb, who will head the Association of University Women for the coming year, stated yesterday that the association's meetings have not yet begun but will get under way in October.

Buccaneer Staff To Meet For Try-outs

An important meeting of the Carolina Buccaneer staff is scheduled for tomorrow at 1:30 o'clock in their office on the second floor of Graham Memorial. Editor Bobby Mason urges all desiring to tryout and old members of the staff to be present and on time.

Since the staff has not been chosen, new men will have equally good chances of hooking up with either the art or the editorial staff of the magazine.

It is the desire of the editor to release the first publication by October 15. Therefore promptness and willingness to work will play a big part in the promotions.

DUKE HOST FOR Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. MEET SATURDAY

Bill McKee Will Preside at Conference for Better Relations Between Groups.

The executive committee of the North Carolina Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. Training Conference will meet Saturday night at Duke university.

Bill McKee, president of the Carolina "Y," is also president of the state-wide group. Other members of the executive committee are: Elizabeth Taylor, vice-president, of Greensboro college; Rosabelle Cash, secretary of Duke university; Sam Wiley, treasurer, of Davidson; Curtiss Spence, Duke "Y" president; Ed King, secretary of the N. C. State college "Y"; Miss Lucy Crisp, secretary of the Women's college "Y"; Mrs. Hazen Smith of Duke university; Miss Elizabeth Smith, national student Y. W. C. A. secretary; Claude Nelson, southern student "Y" secretary; and Harry F. Comer of the Carolina "Y."

The purpose of the committee will be to discuss the possibility of forming a Y. M.-Y. W. C. A. cabinet from the college "Y's" of the state which would meet thrice yearly; to discuss the problem of effecting better integration and cooperation between Y. M. C. A.'s and Y. W. C. A.'s of the state; and to form a delegation to be sent to the southern "Y" conference to take place at Atlanta during the Christmas holidays.

COKER AND VALENTINE ABSENT ON YEAR LEAVE

Professor R. E. Coker and Dr. J. M. Valentine, of the zoology department, will be absent from the University this year, furthering their scientific studies in France.

Professor Coker, on leave of absence for a year, is carrying on experiments concerning the heredity of small crustacea, at the University of Paris.

Dr. Valentine, who has been connected with the University of North Carolina for the past three years, is continuing studies of the evolution of blind cave-dwelling beetles.

Vining at Columbia

Professor Morgan F. Vining, chief of the bureau of lectures, short courses, and radio in the extension division of the University, is taking courses at the teachers' college of Columbia university. Professor Vining is working for a Ph.D. in education.

ALUMNI OFFICERS PLAN UNIVERSITY DAY CELEBRATION

Representatives of Fifty-Nine Clubs Are Invited to Assembly in December.

Plans were put underway yesterday by the board of directors of the University alumni association for University Day celebrations October 12th in fifty-nine alumni clubs in North Carolina and in alumni centers in other states.

The officers and directors of the University alumni organization met Saturday in the Graham Memorial, and in addition to initiating plans for University Day gatherings, also voted to conduct the annual Alumni General Assembly early in December, heard reports of the alumni secretary and general treasurer, and conducted other routine business.

Assembly Meets Here

To the Alumni General Assembly, which will meet in Chapel Hill, will be invited representatives of the forty-four alumni clubs in North Carolina and the fifteen clubs outside the state. The Alumni Assembly is the principal general meeting of the University's alumni organization.

The board elected Judge E. Earle Rives, of Greensboro, as a member of the board to succeed himself for a term of three years.

The meeting was presided over by Kemp P. Lewis, of Durham, President of the association.

Others at Meeting

Others attending the meeting were: R. G. Stockton, of Winston-Salem, vice-president of the association; R. Arthur Spauld, Jr. and Bowman Gray, Jr., of Winston-Salem; Tyre C. Taylor and A. L. Purrington, Jr., of Raleigh; Judge E. Earle Rives, of Greensboro; A. C. Lineberger, Jr., of Belmont; Judge James R. Patton, Jr., of Durham; and alumni secretary J. Maryon Saunders, of Chapel Hill.

The Other Side Of the Fence

President Hoover's opposition to the immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus was to be expected. On this issue, he again demonstrated his consistency in inconsistency.

It has been the policy of the Republican administration, in attempting to rehabilitate our bankrupt nation, to grant financial aid only to corporate organizations. None of the federal credit organizations, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Federal Reserve system, the Home Loan banks, the Agricultural Credit Corporation, or the Federal Farm Board, make loans to individuals. Farmers, home owners, and small business men seeking the use of federal relief funds must secure loans through the regular private channels.

The present administration does not believe in the direct method of returning prosperity by placing money in the hands of hard-pressed individuals. Rather, it pours dollars into the upper economic strata, hoping that a few nickels and dimes will seep through to lower levels.

The mass lobby on the Bonus Expeditionary Force in Washington and the American Legion in convention assembled have asked the administration to deny this principle in granting the bonus. Consistent with his inconsistent policy, President Hoover declared against the proposed veterans' raid on the public pantry.

Candidate Roosevelt's pronouncement on the bonus issue, scheduled for late October, is awaited with interest. Apparently, this politically shrewd opportunist is waiting late to see how many votes he will need in November and how many votes the veterans will be able to give him before he commits his opinion on the question.

It is significant that the American Legion did not censure President Hoover for evicting the bonus army, as it threatened to do. Another consideration for Governor Roosevelt is the fact that the Democratic party took no platform stand on the issue. Most probably, he would not get the complete support of the American Legion if he should declare for the bonus and he might run the risk of alienating a faction of his own party.

The picture of Franklin Roosevelt stepping down from his party's platform to play tag with the bonus boys would be as absurd as the boner (dry) that Charlie Curtis pulled when he went over to the blue nose backyard, leaving Herbert Hoover astraddle the prohibition fence, with a tenpenny nail from the prohibition plank in his pants.

Meanwhile, President Hoover is to be commended for his courage stand against the attempted bonus raid. It is to be hoped that Governor Roosevelt will be able to reconcile an anti-bonus utterance with his recently assumed liberal attitude. The bonus should not be made a partisan issue.—E.C.D.

Residue

Paradoxes confront anyone who will see them. The so-called bad men are often found to have gentle and sympathetic hearts; the so-called bad conventions or systems are found to be the best that we can use practically; and, so it is that in the process of fraternity rushing are to be found certain virtues that are buried in the hypocrisy and burlesque of the system.

That freshmen find themselves suddenly plunged in a feverish atmosphere during their first fortnight is undeniable. But in spite of full-blown and sometimes comic affectations and pretensions there exists something that every year remains after the panic of pledge-grabbing is over.

And what remains is something that all of the efforts of Y. M. C. A. and Administration have failed to provide; to wit, an intimate and significant introduction of the new men to the old men.

The average freshman, after his first month, knows more campus personalities than the average junior. And it is not being outlandish to point out that, with all of the damning characteristics of the "system," the many contacts formed during the two weeks of fraternity rushing are a happy consequence.

The succeeding two weeks present a substantial portion of the student body with an extraordinary, if highly organized, opportunity for acquainting themselves with many members of our University population. Not to recognize this is to neglect an obvious opportunity.—R.W.B.

Shooting Galleries And Adolescents

A most expensive and sub-adolescent game much in vogue last year has been revived since the opening of the present school year. Many times last year the municipal government found it necessary to replace large electric bulbs in the street lamps, which had been demolished by playful "college boys." These lamps cost the town one dollar and a half each. This sum when multiplied to a large degree presents a figure which makes quite a hole in the budget of a town as small as this. With the amount of suffering due to economic conditions as great as it is it appears that this amount could be far better utilized for purposes of emergency relief.

However, the streets must be properly illuminated, and as long as the destructive impulses of adolescent youth are allowed their full sway this distressing condition must continue.

Amusing as the sport may be, so great has the skill of the participants become that the mortality rate of the lamps has now made the game far too expensive for so modestly a financed municipality.

Were this activity confined solely to the freshman ranks, all might yet be comparatively well, but sad to say members of the upper classes are also guilty of this childish depredation.

A decade or so ago the campus was a victim of sustained pistol fire from the dormitory windows during the hours immediately after supper. As one of the professors said, "It was as much as your life was worth to cross the campus after supper." This situation was finally quelled, but only after disastrous results.

The University is generally conceded to be the center of liberalism in the South, but liberalism stretches just so far, and then the common welfare begins to take precedence over any inhibitions which may be aggravated by restraint from throwing rocks at street lamps.—O.S.S.

And if the country is in as bad shape as the Democratic orators say it is, we can't understand why so many of them want to be President of it.—Judge.

A novelist has confessed to a gossip-writer that his hobby is fishing. It is what novelists do for a living that causes all the real trouble.—Punch.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Books Make The Man

In a suspiciously smug editorial, the Asheville Times comments on the early literary life of Mr. Calvin Coolidge, president in the era known as the Golden Age of Calvin the First. The Skyland sheet lists fourteen volumes which Coolidge says formed his early intellectual stimulation, expounded upon in an article "Books of My Childhood" which appears in the Cosmopolitan magazine.

The list smacks of the variety of classics read by our great backwoods statesmen, and is slightly redolent of the odor of burning pine knots and home-made candles:

The Rangers or The Tory's Daughter.
The Green Mountain Boy.
Washington and His Generals.
Men of Our Times.
Biography of General Garfield.
Livingstone Lost and Found.
Hillard's Sixth Reader.
Choice Poems and Lyrics.
Captain John Brown.
History of the Indian Wars.
Young People's Bible History.
The New Testament.
Life and State Papers of Lincoln.
Orations of Cicero.

The Times remarks to the effect that the books indicate opportunity for good educational background but it seems a little skeptical as to just what qualities they might provoke in giving a college educated man, as is Mr. Coolidge, a modern political background. "They are in no sense great or by authors of marked talent."

Yet the real issue is avoided. Great books oftentimes are not so stimulating as those which fire the imagination and exercise the vocabulary. Inspiration is gauged in the manner in which the reader absorbs the good qualities of the book. Should he extract, in the heat of interest, but ten ideas and words from a volume which is attractive despite its mediocrity, he gleans something of value transcending a thousand dull passages from a thousand dull major classics.

Reynard On the Loose

Pete, a red fox in Central Park Zoo, found his way through the bars of his prison several days ago and made a short dash for liberty which culminated after a three blocks chase in capture by a mob of excited bystanders. The Associated Press tells us that Reynard now mourns the fact that he could not keep training after three years of incarceration, his flabby muscles abandoning him in the rigors of the chase. Some will compare Mr. Fox to John J. Business. The latter gentleman broke training on a memorable October morning just three years ago. He's had a pretty hard time pacing up and down in his cage, and when he tries a break, his untrained muscles give away as the ever alert pack closes in, eager to trap him before he gets a decent start.

Edgar W. Knight Tells Of Conditions In Iraq

tribes and innumerable mosque schools in which the principal subject taught is the Koran. But the masses of the people have not yet been reached by education. It is estimated that ninety-five per cent of the population is illiterate. Moreover, the masses are afflicted with preventable diseases, among the worst of which is trachoma and bilharzia, due in main, it is believed, to lack of sanitation and the filthy conditions that prevail generally in the country. Water is very scarce in Iraq.

The position of women and children is very low. The attitude toward children is almost brutal and the education of the women has long been neglected. But since the British came in during the World War and broke the power of the Turks, who had dominated Iraq for several centuries, some provision has been made for schools for girls and women. In Bagdad are a medical school and a very good hospital, still in charge of the British.

Raiding on Decline

Raiding which has so long been looked upon as a legitimate occupation of the desert tribes is rapidly on the decrease, being broken up chiefly by aeroplanes. By this means the Bedouins are moving pretty rapidly from a nomadic life to settled agriculture. The automobile also has been widely introduced in the country and has displaced the camel which has for so long been the chief source of wealth for the desert tribes.

With internal peace and protection (which the British government has guaranteed Iraq) from outside enemies, such as Persia might become, and given a strong national government as King Faisal shows promise of developing, the Iraq people may, Professor Knight believes, regain in part the high position which the Arabs held centuries ago, when Bagdad was the largest city in the world and the center of culture and wealth in the Near or Middle East.

But such reforms must be worked through education of the right kind—fundamentals in agriculture and economics, engineering, sanitation and health and preventive medicine. Objectives such as these were recommended by the Commission rather than the formal Western education which has been too much imposed, many observers believe, upon some of the Far Eastern countries such as China.

SELF-HELP APPLICATIONS REGISTER BIG INCREASE

Edwin S. Lanier, University self-help secretary, announced yesterday that there has been a considerable increase this year in the number of applications for work sent in by students to the University self-help bureau. About 1900 inquiries have been sent in, and nearly 1,000 formal applications are on file as compared with 1,500 inquiries and 625 applications last year. Lanier announced that up to yesterday, the self-help bureau had been instrumental in securing part time jobs for approximately 200 students for the year 1932-33. Last year at this time about 350 boys had been given jobs. It is estimated that 350 students are now doing work to help defray their expenses at the University.

The Self-Help bureau, of which Lanier is head, was organized by the Y. M. C. A., and it functions through the University self-help committee, appointed by President Graham, and the self-help secretary, who is a member of that committee.

Purdue Inaugurates Program Of Economy

(Big Ten News Service)

Economy is the item of the day in all circles at Purdue university this term. Fraternities have reduced their house bills, honoraries are cutting their expenses and lowering their initiation fees, the men's Pan-hellenic council has temporarily abolished homecoming decorations as an economy measure, and the same organization has removed the clause requiring member houses to take a definite number of tickets for their annual formal dance.

President E. C. Elliott speaking recently before a group of campus leaders urged the students to revise their social budgets and abolish unnecessary expenditures. The president cited two reasons: "That there is a larger number of students than ever before who are without surplus of resources, and that we are carrying on our work under a very critical eye."

The Purdue Exponent has adopted an economy policy for Purdue of five items, namely, the reduction in ticket prices of traditional and popular dances, the abolition of minor and inconsequential functions, reduction of honorary dues, abolition of class dues, and reduction in cost of cadet officers luncheons.

Greater Number Of Graduate Students In Commerce School

All previous records in the number of graduate students enrolled in the school of economics and commerce were broken this year by the enrollment last week of twenty-one students in the graduate school. This number is beyond that of the number enrolled during any past year and is an increase of seven students over the number enrolled last year.

In addition to being the largest graduate class the school of economics and commerce has enrolled, the wide distribution of the schools from whence the students come is astonishing. The following institutions of learning are represented in this small class of twenty-one: Duke, Columbia, University of Tokyo, Clemson, University of South Carolina, Mississippi A. and M., Peabody Institute, St. Lawrence university, Southwest university, University of Mississippi, Emory university, and the University of Virginia.

TALLULAH BANKHEAD STARS AT CAROLINA

Cary Grant, showing at the Carolina theatre today in his latest film, "Devil and the Deep," starring Tallulah Bankhead, ran away from home as a youth in his native England to join a theatrical troupe.

When going to the theatre, students are asked to deposit in the ballot box located in the lobby votes for contestants in Chapel Hill's Greater Prosperity Contest. LIBRARY AT DUKE STANDS FIRST IN SOUTHEAST AREA

Department at Durham School Takes Ranking Formerly Held by Library Here.

Duke faculty members and students beginning the fall semester at the university have access to approximately 328,700 volumes, comprising the highest ranking library in the southeast, taking first place over the library here. These volumes are contained in the general library of the university, the law and medical libraries, the woman's college library, and several departmental collections.

During the past year the Duke library has added 61,321 volumes and 145 periodical subscriptions. The total number of newspapers and periodicals now received amounts to 2,223.

In the manuscript department, the library contains about 200,000 letters, documents, diaries, account books, and other historical records. One of the rarest treasures in this department is a twelfth century illuminated manuscript of the New Testament.

Approximately 6,000 volumes of American and foreign newspapers dating from colonial times are also in the library.

GRIDDERS POLISH ATTACK FOR TILT NEXT SATURDAY

Commodores Bring 195 Pound
Line and 175 Pound Backfield.

The Carolina coaches began concentrating attention on offensive line-play yesterday, and indications are that the Tar Heel forwards are in for a siege of work before Coach Collins sends them out to block Vandy's massive front wall here Saturday.

Carolina's first and second lines both looked fine defensively in holding Wake Forest without a single first down last Saturday, but June Underwood, center, and Frank Smith, tackle, were about the only boys whose all-round work drew any praise from Head Coach Collins.

Underwood, a former tackle himself, played the whole game and looked genuinely good in every phase of play. Smith, who has just broken in as a regular, was a power on defense; his blocking was good on the whole; and it was he and Underwood who blocked Wall's punt and gave Carolina the last big scoring chance it squandered in the fourth quarter.

Coach Collins let slip a sarcastic comment and suggestion to the linemen yesterday which shows pretty well how he feels about the Wake Forest tie.

"On practically all the running plays the offensive men for Carolina formed their contact on the defensive man," he said, "and the interferences were able to get through very nicely."

"The only trouble was the blockers did not hold the defensive men out long enough to allow that all-important person, the ball carrier, to get through the hole."

"Our hope is that during the coming week we will be able to impress upon the offensive linemen that they should also, out of sheer politeness at any rate, allow the ball carrier occasionally to get beyond the line of scrimmage."

Heavy blocking practice has been ordered for every day this week, and with the players feeling about as badly about the Wake Forest tie as Coach Collins, all indications are that the Tar Heels will be a much stronger club Saturday.

They will need to be. Vanderbilt is packing a 195-pound line and a 175-pound backfield, with some nine regulars back from last year, and McGugin's Commodores are rated as one of the most powerful teams in the country and one of the biggest favorites for the Conference title.

Vandy will bring to Kenan stadium one of the greatest stars in the South, Dixie Roberts, who ran wild against Mercer last Saturday.

FROSH BOXERS REPORT

First tryouts of freshmen interested in boxing will take place today in the Tin Can at 4:00 p. m., according to an announcement by Head Coach Arch T. Allen.

Coach Allen, himself former captain and southern welterweight champion, in his second year as freshman boxing coach last year turned out one of the best freshman mitt teams ever to represent Carolina.

What the gentlemen in Congress appear to need is exercises in reducing.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

After Saturday's game, the majority of the spectators were ready to relegate the Tar Heels to the scrap heap for the year. The University team did not live up to expectations, but the grid-ders certainly aren't as bad as they looked. Although they failed to score, the Tar Heels were four touchdowns better than the Deacons, and with a little more work this week, Coach Collins will demonstrate that fact to Vanderbilt's crack outfit. Against the Deacons, Carolina used nothing but fundamental plays, but against the Commodores, the boys will "shoot the works."

E. K. Hall and his Rules Committee came in for plenty of criticism Saturday. Everyone the writer spoke to concerning the changes agreed on one thing—that the game was perceptibly slowed up. If Saturday's game was any criterion, football is not going to be the glamorous spectacle it was in former years. The change that came in for most criticism was the one which automatically made the ball dead when any part of the player's body except his feet touched the ground. And the way some of the Wake Forest players were pushing or bowling over the Tar Heel backs, many fans thought that there was a rule against tackling.

Tomorrow, weather permitting, about 75,000 persons will jam the Yankee Stadium to see the opening game of the World Series, with the New York Yankees and the Chicago Cubs providing the entertainment. Columns have been written about the stars of the Yankees, Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, while just as much space has been devoted to Kiki Cuyler, Lonnie Warnecke, and Gabby Hartnett of the Bruins. But the writer still thinks that most of the thrills will be provided by some of the lesser known players, who have that most annoying habit of "robbing the show" from the "star attractions." Personally the writer thinks that the players like Joey Sewell, Bill Dickey and Earl Combs of the American League champions, and Elwood English, "Hoss" Stephenson and Charley Grimm of the Cubs will be leading the runs batted in column.

Here and There

One reason why Chick Meenan was unpopular at New York university is that the players were bucking against his slave driving tactics. . . . If the 1932 World Series goes the seven scheduled games, a new gate receipt record will be made, the figure hovering around the $1,500,000 mark. Not bad for a year of the depression. . . . Although Vanderbilt and Tulane are pre-season picks for the Southern Conference Crown, Coach Al Howard thinks that the winner of the Tennessee-Alabama game will be the titleholder. Carolina plays Vandy, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, and Tech, all of whom are "pre-season champions."

DUKE LEADS RACE FOR STATE GRID HONORS TO DATE

State College With Crushing
Win Over Appalachian Looks Good.

Duke university, as a result of their 13 to 0 win over Davidson college, took the lead in the race for Big Five honors in the state. The University of North Carolina and Wake Forest were in second position after their battle which ended in a 0 to 0 tie. State has not yet met a Big Five opponent.

North Carolina State had a long lead in all scoring departments, as a result of their 38 to 0 victory over Appalachian college. Duke's thirteen was the nearest to State in total points, as none of the other Big Five teams crossed the goal line. Ray Rex, State's sensational sophomore fullback, was first in individual point scoring. The middle-west boy had a total of twelve, while two more State backs, McQuage and Komlos, were second with a touchdown and an extra point each.

Long's Shorts On Sports

By Morrie Long

Fresh from an unimpressive victory over Mercer, Coach Dan McGugin's Vanderbilt charges are favored to capture the clash this Saturday with Carolina. Led by Pete Gracie, all southern center and one of the finest in the nation, the Black and Gold squad includes seven veterans: Leyendecker, Talley, Beasley in the line, with Roberts, "Good" Fortune, and Henderson in the backfield. "Mighty" Close, quarter, is lost for the season on scholastic difficulties. Last year's setto at Nashville was expected to be a walk-away for the Commodores, but until the fourth quarter the battle was anyone's game, the final score ending 13 to 0.

Schmeling vs. Walker

Ireland's pride, Mickey Walker, is expected to lose the decision to Max Schmeling in their heavyweight bout, the younger and stronger German going into the fracas with betting odds of 3 to 1 favoring him. Johnny Risko who was knocked out by the Teuton and who holds a decision over Walker, picks the Irishman to win because of his damaging body punches. Schmeling looks too tough.

Ruth's Pitching Record

The most picturesque figure in baseball, Babe Ruth not only has accomplished things with his bludgeon, in previous world series, but he has a pitching record for the "freshman" twirlers to shoot at. He holds the record for hurling the most consecutive innings with no runs. The Bambino has made over a million since 1919, and his income for the rest of his life is set at $1,000 per month.

North Carolina State has a "Holdum" lad in her football squad while Columbia's roster includes a "Ketchum." Carolina fans may or may not be calling players' names before the season is over.

Blue Devils Good

Duke's Blue Devils looked good against Davidson last Saturday, the plunging of Laney, Mason and a new sophomore named Cox, and the line play of Nick Porreca, another newcomer, featuring the play. The Blue Devils will have to look plenty good to take the measure of Auburn next week, however, as the Chet Wynn coached team has

BASEBALL CALL BRINGS FEW MEN

Due to threatening weather the call for fall baseball enthusiasts was answered by only some twenty-odd men. Among this squad there were several letter-men, the most notable of which were Jim Griffith, Willie Powell, and Paul Dunlap. Others to report were Fred Crouch, pitcher, Red Mathewson and Bandy Parker, catchers, all of last year's reserves and several of last year's freshman team: as Zaiser, outfielder and Patterson, infielder.

Coach Bunn Hearn expects a squad of about thirty-five to report when the weather improves and then he intends to start the regular inter-squad games between the rookies and the veterans.

Yesterday was spent in hitting and fielding practice in preparation for the coming games.

PLANS LAID FOR NINTH CAKE RACE

Workouts for Run to Be Supervised by Varsity Cross Country Squad.

The ninth annual intramural Cake Race will take place this year Friday, October 21. Entrants will report to the track manager at the main gate to Emerson field this afternoon.

Everyone in the University is eligible, save men who have won monograms or numerals in cross country. At least six previous workouts are required before any student may enter the two-mile grind. All workouts will be supervised by members of the varsity cross country squad who will be at the Bynum gym every day from 3:00 to 5:30. No freshman will be excused from gym for intramural

POLICE OFFICERS NEEDED TO HALT FRAT INITIATIONS

A. T. O.'s and Theta Chi's Raise Hell During University of California "Hell Week"

Police squads were kept busy at all hours of the night on the University of California campus last Friday and Saturday at Berkeley when they were summoned by sleepless neighbors to quiet the various fraternities who were holding their annual "Hell Week" activities, according to the Daily Californian.

Alpha Tau Omega and Theta Chi, close rivals, were holding their initiations on the same street in the form of a hog-calling contest. The Theta Kappa Nu boys had the front door wide open, vacuum cleaners going full blast, and radios screeching when the riot wagon arrived at 3:00 a. m.irate neighbors were shouting imprecations from open windows across the street.

The law was assured by the chairman of the activities that all houses would be cleared immediately. Twenty minutes later they were summoned to the scene where eight men in a broken-down Ford were waylaying a private citizen. They were informed that this was merely another essential of the initiation schedule.

Local sororities also received their share of intrusions. Several Alpha Tau Omega pledges were scrubbing floors for sorority women. In a series of early morning raids, a steady stream of weary young men demanded miscellaneous merchandise at the doors of other sororities.

Two-Mile Course

The all-University run stretches over a course of approximately two miles and it has become one of the outstanding events of the fall program of the intramural department, and the general enthusiasm shown has firmly established this unique race.

Past winners of the race have been Harry Williamson, 1931; Hal Meade, 1930; Tom Watkins, 1929; June Fisher, 1928; Minor Barkley, 1927; Galen Elliott, 1926; Harry Thach, 1925; Luther Byrd, 1924.

For a team to score, at least four men must finish in the first fifty, and the score of these four will make up the team's score. Each man scores exactly the same number of points as the number of the place in which he finishes, with the team having the lowest score winning the race.

Many Prizes

The cake race has always received loyal support from the townspeople and business firms. Medals, shirts, socks, watches, hair tonic, theatre passes, shampoos, meal tickets, pressing club tickets, cakes, candies, and stationery have all been included in the list of prizes from year to year.

University Represented At Marine Laboratories

University of North Carolina was represented as usual this summer at the Marine biological laboratories, which are maintained by the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries.

Miss Ezda Deviney, Miss Nell Henry, Professor J. Paul Reynolds, Dr. W. C. George, and Professor H. V. Wilson spent a part of the summer vacation there in research.

World News Bulletins

Death Fast Broken

The "death fast" of Mahatma Gandhi, ended yesterday after lasting six days when the aged Indian leader received news that the British government at London had approved most of the compromise plan on the privileges of Indian untouchables.

Gandhi began his fast last Tuesday as a protest against that part of the recent British communal award which proposed special constituencies for the depressed classes.

Mrs. Roosevelt Joins Governor

While dispatches from Washington advised that Franklin D. Roosevelt is "on record as holding that payment of the bonus forthwith is not feasible," the Democratic nominee spent a quiet day at a ranch in Williams, Arizona. The Governor was joined by Mrs. Roosevelt who arrived by plane to accompany him home from his swing of the western states.

Believes League Is on Trial

President Eamon De Valera of the Irish Free State yesterday said in opening the session of the League of Nations' general assembly the League was "at the bar of public opinion." De Valera said the only way to silence justified criticisms is to execute obligations of the covenant on all states, whether weak or strong.

LIFE-SAVING INSTITUTE TO MEET AT DUKE SOON

Students interested in acquiring the junior, senior, or examiner's certificate from the American Red Cross have been asked to communicate with E. G. Egan at the Ranson House, behind Sutton's drug store.

RUFFIN MEN TO ELECT OFFICERS IN UNION TODAY

Graham Memorial Management
Will Be Host to Dormitory
Group at 9:30 P. M.

Members of Ruffin dormitory will be entertained at Graham Memorial tonight at 9:30 o'clock.

The dormitories, of which Grimes was the first to have been entertained, are being brought together for a double purpose at these gatherings. The men are by so doing better enabled to become acquainted with other men in their dormitories, become organized for the year's program of intramural athletics, and are welcomed to the use of the facilities of the union building.

First on the list of events for tonight is the election of a house president, two dormitory councilmen on each floor, an athletic manager and a union forum representative. Each of these officers is necessary for the carrying out of the extensive program planned for the coming year. Following the elections, refreshments will be served.

These necessary elections having been completed, the students will adjourn to the game rooms, where tournaments in ping-pong and shuffle-board are planned, and facilities for games of pool, checkers, chess, To-bowl, Target game and Skill Board are also present.

Engineers Not to Have Co-Op Work This Year

Co-operative work in the school of engineering will not be included in the curriculum this current school year. This department has been a part of the course since 1922 and grew steadily up to the present economic depression. Due to the great amount of unemployment, the students of the University will not be allowed to take part in the business of engineering firms throughout the state as these people are forced to replace one of their own men with one of the University's men.

"It is hard to compete with unemployment," says A. R. Hollett, co-ordinator of the school of engineering, "and we must suspend our program for a year. We hope that we will be able to take it up again next year."

BUILDINGS DEPARTMENT PLANS BOWLING ALLEYS

Plans for the building of two bowling alleys in the basement of Graham Memorial were completed yesterday, and construction will begin the first of next week, according to P. L. Burch, superintendent of the buildings department.

The alleys will be built under the portico in the student union where the rifle range has been heretofore. Burch estimated that the construction will take three or four weeks, and upon completion, the alleys will be open to the students of the University.

WESLEY STUDENT ASSOCIATION HAS INITIAL MEETING

The Wesley student association conducted its first meeting of the school year at the Methodist church Sunday, and organized three Sunday school classes for student attendance.

"Religion in the Old Testament," under Harry Comer; "Life of Christ," under Dr. Fletcher Green; and "International Sunday School Lesson," taught by S. W. Hawkins are the new classes.

One of the duties of the association is to take care of all student activities in the Methodist church, and the officers already have definite plans for student entertainment during the coming year. Miss Betty Durham, of Chapel Hill, is in charge of the student entertainment program, which will be begun this year with a weiner roast and later a Hallowe'en celebration.

Officers of the organization this year, elected last May, are: Luther Taff, president; John Entwistle, vice-president; Frances White, secretary; Billy Andrews, treasurer; and E. W. Winkler, E. T. Browne, and Harry Comer, faculty advisors.

Students of all denominations are welcome to the meetings of the association, at the Methodist church.

PLAYMAKERS TO PRESENT COMEDY TO START YEAR

Dramatic Group Plans to Present Two Bills of Plays This Winter.

The Carolina Playmakers will open their fifteenth season in Chapel Hill with a modern romantic comedy, which will go into rehearsal the first week in October. Philip Barry's sophisticated American comedy, Holiday; Bernard Shaw's You Never Can Tell, a satiric comedy; Sir James Barrie's, A Kiss for Cinderella, a comedy of romance; and New Brooms, by Frank Craven, and another American comedy, are the four under consideration. Negotiations with publishers to secure production rights are now going on, and final decision will be made within a few days.

A season ticket for the six major productions is again offered by the Playmakers, to sell at two dollars. Tickets will be sold by student agents and will also be on sale at the Book Exchange and Alfred Williams. Last year the Playmakers opened auspiciously with Saturday's Children by Maxwell Anderson, and this season's opener will be an important modern comedy from those mentioned above. The second show will be an original long play or a bill of three new one-act plays. Professor Koch states that the new playwriting class looks very promising, with students from a number of different states, and the prospects are good for another original full-length play which will rank in importance with last year's Strike Song, by Loretto and J.

EDITORIAL STAFF OF PAPER MEETS THIS AFTERNOON

New Men Wanting to Try Out for Openings on Staff Are Asked To Be Present.

The second meeting of the DAILY TAR HEEL editorial staff will be conducted this afternoon at the offices in Graham Memorial at 4:00 o'clock sharp. All members of the reportorial staff are required to attend and all persons interested in working with the publication are expected to report at this time.

The purpose of the meeting is to complete plans for organization for the year and work out several routine details which were not presented at the initial meeting. In view of this fact, all new men will be required to report for the meeting which will be necessarily short.

There are at present several openings on the staff of the paper and those who wish to try out will be given the opportunity to do so.

Henderson Publishes New Shaw Biography

Dr. Archibald Henderson's new biography of George Bernard Shaw, the noted English playwright and critic, is to be published next month by Appleton. Dr. Henderson, head of the mathematics department of the University, is widely known as a scientist, writer, and historian. Dr. Henderson is the official biographer for Shaw. The work is to be entirely independent of Dr. Henderson's earlier work on Shaw. This book is considered as the most comprehensive biography that has ever been written on any living man and is reputed to trace the whole course of Shaw's life and career down to the moment of going to press.

Y.M.C.A. APPOINTS COMMITTEE HEADS

McKee, President of "Y," Announces Appointment of New Committee Chairmen.

Announcement was made yesterday by Bill McKee, president of the Y. M. C. A., as to the appointment of chairmen for the various committees. These chairmen will come from the senior cabinet and they will have a sub-chairman working with them from each of the lower cabinets.

The appointments were discussed and plans of the committees were laid out Monday night at the meetings of the sophomore and senior cabinets.

The chairmen and their committees: Lee Grier, religious emphasis; Ike Minor, Bible study; Wofford Humphries, social entertainment; John Acee, social service; Graham McLeod, church co-operation; Alex Andrews, library; Roy McMillan, deputations; Bob Barnett, world fellowship; Clairborne Carr, publicity; Jim Steere, freshmen; Jim Curfrees, case work; Bill Spradlin, speakers; Ike Minor, finances; the boys' work committee, the conference committee, and the inter-racial work committee have their chairmen yet to be selected.

DEPUTATIONS TO BE ORGANIZED BY FRESHMAN GROUP

Jack Poole Outlines and Explains Work of Friendship Council in Assembly.

Jack Poole, former president of the freshman friendship council and now "a sophomore," as Dean Bradshaw introduced him, was the main speaker of yesterday's assembly program.

The program was opened with a devotion conducted by Reverend A. S. Lawrence of the Episcopal church and announcements by Dean Bradshaw, who then presented Poole.

Describes Work
Poole gave a full explanation of the freshman friendship council and outlined the program for the coming year. The purpose of the council is to give the boy a better spiritual life as well as social, he said.

One of the features of this year's program will be the organization of a deputation team from the freshman class. This team will be composed of eight men, four of whom will form a quartet, while the others will be speakers.

This practice was begun last year and carried out very successfully. The time for try-outs for the team will be announced sometime next week.

Bull's Head Reading

The initial reading sponsored by the Bull's Head will take place this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the lounge of the bookshop. George Horner of the English department is to read from Stephen Leacock's Afternoons in Utopia, a humorous parody on the flood of economic volumes lately published.

The event is a continuation of such afternoons which were inaugurated during the summer sessions to great success. Mary Dirnberger, manager of the Bull's Head, will act as hostess.

RULES ON CHECKS CITED BY MEDFORD

Chairman of Committee Reports 1,620 Worthless Checks Given Last Year.

The chairman of the student council check committee of the University, William Medford, reported yesterday that during last year, 1,620 checks, drawn by students for a total of $12,989.90, were returned by various banks, and called attention to the regulations on bad checks of students.

Bank failures were responsible for more than ten per cent of these and fifty-one per cent were returned for one of three other reasons: the failure of the student to keep accurate accounts; checks written with the intention of depositing sufficient sums and subsequent negligence in that respect; and misunderstanding at home. There were two students suspended, six were placed under suspended sentences, and sixty-five were put on probation. Thirty-nine per cent were returned for miscellaneous reasons.

The committee is composed of the members of the student council. This group receives a list of bad checks each day from the Bank of Chapel Hill and sends a notice to the offending student.

FINAL PLANS FOR EXTENSION WORK NOW MADE READY

Courses to Be Given Concerned Primarily With Administration of Public Schools.

R. M. Grumman, director of the University extension division, announced yesterday that final arrangements for the new extension classes are being made. These classes are conducted each year throughout the state under the direction of members of the University faculty, and this year will be concerned primarily with public school administration and are designed especially for those who are interested in public school administration and public school teaching.

Professor George Howard of the University department of education will teach two classes in Raleigh and Wake county in co-operation with the State College extension department. He will also have charge of classes on administration and educational administration in Roanoke Rapids, Nashville, and Rocky Mount, and will work with Miss Cecilia Bason on the same courses in Burlington and Mebane. Miss Bason will conduct classes in social science, natural science, and study methods in Roxboro, Sanford, and Fayetteville.

William J. McKee, also a professor of education at the University, will teach classes on social policy and education and psychology of elementary education at Lumberton, Rockingham, Oxford, and either Pittsboro or Siler City. W. E. Caldwell, professor of history, and A. C. Howell, associate professor of English, will conduct classes in their respective fields at Hemp.

SOCIALISTS NEED 2,000 NAMES FOR THOMAS PETITION

Lawrence Claims Ninety Per Cent of Local Professors Are Signers Of Petition.

According to figures released by Alton S. Lawrence yesterday, the attempt to place the name of Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for president of the United States, on the North Carolina electoral ballot for this year was 2,000 names short of the number required by the state laws. Lawrence said that the petition which requires 10,000 signatures before the candidate can have his electors on the ballot, had 8,000 signers. He also said that ninety per cent of the faculty members of both the University and Duke university had signed the petition.

Lawrence, who gives his address as Chapel Hill, could not be reached by the DAILY TAR HEEL yesterday to verify the report that ninety per cent of the faculty members here had signed the petition.

Socialists in the state were reported to be highly hopeful yesterday of securing the necessary number of names on the petition to have Thomas' electors on the ballot. The petition must be before the electoral board in Raleigh today as the time limit expires at this time.

Buccaneer Try-outs

Men interested in trying out for the Buccaneer, University comic magazine, will gather today in the offices of the publication at 1:30 p. m. A number met yesterday for the first try-out and opportunity is given for additional men who are interested in working on the comic. The offices are at 207 Graham Memorial.

Fraternity Row, Once Center Of University Social Life, Is No More

Moving of Chi Phi House Marks the End of the Old Fraternity Row Which Once Thrived With All the Noise and Excitement of College Life.

With the moving of Chi Phi fraternity to other quarters, Fraternity Row is no more. The houses, once thriving with all the noise and excitement of college life, now stand bleak and, for the most part, deserted. A slow process of decay has reduced Fraternity Row from the social heart of the campus to an obscure spot, harboring nondescript buildings.

Alumni witness the transformation with mingled wonder and sorrow. They recall the section as it was in its heyday. Entering the row by Swain hall, a visitor first encountered the old Kappa Alpha house at the head of the lane. Next came the home of Kappa Sigma, lying between the Kappa Alpha and Pi Kappa Alpha houses.

The Betas were just across the path which cut through to Columbia street. Around the corner and facing up the lane was the Deke house with porch reaching all the way around the sides. Further on around the curve, back of the Methodist church and facing the open field where the Hill music hall is now, were the Sigma Alpha Epsilons and the Sigma Nus.

EXECUTIVE GROUP OF BOARD MEETS IN RALEIGH TODAY

Trustees Expected to Select President of Greater University at Session.

Persons connected with the University are turning their eyes toward Raleigh today where the executive committee of the board of trustees of the Greater University of North Carolina will convene to consider several questions which have aroused state-wide interest.

President May Be Chosen

At this time the president of the Greater University is expected to be chosen under the power conferred on the executive committee by the entire board last spring. The man chosen will head the whole institution consolidated by the General Assembly of 1931 while each of the divisions, the University, State College in Raleigh, and North Carolina College in Greensboro, will have a vice-president who will head that division.

Tatum Petition Up

Among other matters slated to be brought up is the petition presented Governor O. Max Gardner three weeks ago by L. A. Tatum which condemned the University as allowing subversive teaching. Two hundred and eighty-three persons signed the petition.

The board may also make several new appointments connected with the institution, among which is the choosing of a librarian for the University to fill the place of Dr. Louis R. Wilson, who resigned last spring. R. B. Downes is acting librarian at present.

North Carolina Arising From Its Intellectual Stupor, Says Green

Paul Green, North Carolina's Most Famous Playwright, Discusses The State's Intellectual and Cultural Progress During the Past Few Decades.

Since 1905 North Carolina has awakened from an intellectual stupor of centuries to forge ahead industrially and culturally in the south, stated Paul Green, the state's most famous playwright, while conferring this summer with officials of the Fox Film Corporation in Iowa. Green was at the University of Iowa to witness and assist in the premiere of his Tread the Green Grass.

"North Carolina has no seaport," Green said, "so that in colonial times it was rapidly outgrown by Virginia on the north, with its harbor at Norfolk, and South Carolina on the south, with Charleston. During ante-bellum days the culture of the region centered about Charleston, Norfolk and Richmond."

This backward condition continued until 1905, which is generally accepted as the year of the cultural and industrial awakening of the state and the beginning of the Carolina renaissance.

"Two separate groups are responsible for the change," he thinks. The work of several distinct families account for industrial progress. "The Dukes, the Cannons, the Grays, the Hayneses, and the Reynoldses began building huge factories in the Piedmont."

Sharing in the intellectual and cultural development were a number of North Carolina's sons. "In the other group were such men as Walter Hines Page, then editor of a Raleigh newspaper but later ambassador to the court of St. James; Charles Brantley Aycock, the governor of the state; Edward Alderman and Edward Kidder Graham. These men were educators, leaders in the field of culture," he says. Alderman and Graham were each presidents of the University.

Paul Green, who for the past several months has devoted his talent to scenario writing for motion pictures, is a professor of philosophy here. One-time winner of the Pulitzer for playwriting, he has had four plays produced in New York. The No Count Boy was the first, followed by In Abraham's Bosom, The Field God, and more recently, The House of Connelly. At present he is in Hollywood adapting "State Fair" for a Fox photoplay.

Co-ed Tea Party

The Woman's Association of the University will give its first of a series of teas from 4:00 to 6:00 o'clock in the reception room of Spencer hall this afternoon. For the past few years, because of the increasing number of co-eds attending the University, teas have been given once a week to afford the girls a chance to get acquainted.

America—the Land of Political Corruption

The resignation of James J. Walker from the mayorship of America's greatest city and the profusion of corruption that was brought out by his hearing, focuses attention more forcibly than ever to the shameful political condition of the nation. Gross inefficiency and dishonest manipulation of public office have reduced this country to a moral level that would cause the nation's fathers to turn in their graves. What took place in New York under the Walker regime is merely a sample of what is transpiring in every town, county, and state in the land. Good government is the agency by which mankind exists and this most important function has been and is so misdirected and perverted that the name politician is synonymous with everything base and dishonest.

To protest against corruption in public office is in a measure to protest against human nature, yet there are bounds and limits to which both must be subjected if we may continue to exist. The malady is universal, but the United States possesses the most corrupt, lax, and inefficient system of local government of any considerable nation. There are many explanations, our great size, the character of our national strains, and the utter and bovine indifference of the masses to the conduct of their affairs are but a few. The spoils system introduced by Andrew Jackson set rolling a ball of political graft and rottenness that has accumulated such speed and size as threatens to destroy us. But the remedy and not the causes are the primary concern.

The outlook if no improvement is made is serious. If we continue as we are we must die the death of the ancien regime or Czarist Russia, who choked with their own decay sunk into a bloody oblivion. The guillotine in France and the firing squad in Russia are samples of the whirlwinds to be reaped by the unlucky politicians that flourish at the time when public indignation and action is aroused against its betrayers. There will be a change and the youth of today is the instrument that must effect it.

In England, remarkable for its long existence and the integrity which marks its government, the task of governing is a career. The candidate undergoes training, technical and ethical from his high school days and is given experience and instruction that enables him to honestly and efficiently fit into the system that has proved the most desirable. There is no reason why we should not profit by the example of the mother country, it will require time and effort but is a goal worth striving for. Politics as an honorable and scientific profession is far superior to a regime of cat-paws and ward heelers unfitted mentally and morally for the execution of a most demanding and vital of duties.—J.F.A.

Our Popular Hydra

Not many days ago the sophomore social orders began to make themselves conspicuous on the campus when their new initiatives perform—chiefly for the benefit of the freshmen, who alone will be entertained by the novelty of their demonstrations as they pass from class to class. Characteristically, the freshmen take it for granted that these organizations, along with most everything else at college, are "quite the stuff," but many students wonder what, if any, purpose they serve in college society.

Anyone who considers it worth his while to find out about the activities of the orders will discover that their members themselves are doubtful about their real usefulness and that there is considerable sentiment in favor of improving them and making them cease to be insignificant.

These social orders were originally started with the idea of bringing fraternities closer together, but having apparently lost sight of their avowed purpose they now seem to exist without any definite aim in view.

The DAILY TAR HEEL suggests that something be done to change them from useless appendages to necessary organs of campus activity.—W.F.B.

In This Democracy

Within the past two months the price of the stocks listed on the New York Exchange have risen phenomenally. This rise should ordinarily indicate a corresponding increase in car loadings, commodity indexes, corporation profits and various other "barometers" of trade, but this has not been the case. True, there has been some slight rise in these "barometers," but it has been so small as to hardly warrant the sharp upturn in stock quotations. This being so, what are the causes for this discrepancy, and what are its probable results?

We have the spectacle of this country, not yet out of one of the most terrible economic depressions known to history, busily paving the way for another, and probably still greater, depression. With the first sign of improved business the American public, that is, that part of the public with the financial means, rather than purchase good, sound, dividend-paying securities for investment purposes, has already begun an "orgy of speculation" that promises to outdo the mad rush to gamble in stocks witnessed in 1927-1928. Instead of the slow, steady upturn in business that would lead to a more or less permanent period of prosperity, we are viewing the beginning of another era of inflated credit and unprecedented pseudo "good times." But these "good times" will not be with us for long; the economic cycle is growing shorter, the machinery of business is geared too high. Before the realization is upon us, the entire inverted pyramid of modern credit business will have come tumbling down—irreparably, this time.

This is indeed a black picture, but not an improbable one. There is not much doubt that speculation in securities, unless curbed by federal legislation, will ruin this country. The original purpose of the Stock Exchange was to take the place of a lottery or a horse race. A market was wanted in which enterprises desiring expansion could sell worthwhile securities for the necessary cash. Why not stick to this original purpose, this ideal? If Congress would enact legislation forbidding the sale of stocks on margin, blind speculation with all its attendant evils would go—leaving the stock market to its legitimate purpose. No doubt such legislation would hit certain people pretty badly. The Morgans and the Mellons would certainly suffer untold losses. But what are the sufferings of a hundred million people compared to those of a Morgan? Perhaps, then, Congress WILL not, CAN not pass such laws.—M.K.K.

Fame And Fame Fortune

You have probably heard this story before. It is not about the traveling salesman. Nor will it make you laugh. It is the story of two college students. One was a grade A scholar; the other was a famous football star, a grade D scholar. There was also a merchant—a wealthy merchant who owned a large department store. This merchant advertised for a young man who could occupy a decent salaried position in his store. It so happened that the two aforementioned students applied. They appeared before the merchant at the same time. The grade A scholar gave his name and accomplishments. To which the merchant replied:

"I'll think it over."

The football star gave his name.

"Not Hunky Dorry, the great football star!"

"Yes'r."

The reader probably knows which was appointed to the position.

The merchant thought this:

"The grade A scholar is probably a good salesman and knows how to use his head. His grades in college show his ability."

On the other hand:

"The football star is nationally known. If people know he works for me, they will trade more in order to have him sell them something. Besides he has learned to use his brain power in football. I'll appoint him."

Too many business men have this same idea. They are mistaken, for a football star's name does not last very long (with the exception of a very few) after his popularity wanes, his grade D standing appears. Then, the businessman realizes his mistake, the grade A man may not have the immediate popularity of the football player, but his high college rating will aid him throughout his life—not letting him down as fame often does.—H.P.

In The Main

By MAYNE ALBRIGHT

Best unintentional pun I have heard this season: A freshman in the game room reading the gilt letters on the door of the Grill, remarked gravely: "Guess that's where they have the Grill Dances."

In return for the privilege of reading a new book ahead of its release date, I promised Mary Dirnberger of the Bull's Head to write something about it. I am glad nobody reads book reviews for, not counting the title line, there were two mis-spelled words in this one. But the book, (Paul Green's Laughing Pioneer) is really good and you should read it. You may have a course with the author later and find it comes in handy.

The Class of '36 got off to a propitious start when it rained during Freshman Week and a dog appeared on chapel program. Both good signs which occur every year. Old timers recall a solemn wedding, the recital of a great singer, and innumerable lectures which have been interrupted by interested members of the canine population of the village. But the howling during Alumni President Lewis' speech last week reached a new height. Now that we have a new organ they might play "The Whistler and His Dog" to call 'em off.

After giving one of the groups of pre-freshmen about twenty minutes of lofty stuff about the glories of Phi Beta Kappa and the rewards of the industrious,

I asked if there were any questions. There were: "When does rushing season begin?" "How long before the game room opens?"

And by the way, shuffle board, the newest addition to the game room is about to surpass ping pong in popularity. Probably because its on the free list. It's a great game, but the most exciting time I have had this year was 'big game hunting.' An enormous grasshopper flew into my office window and Slim Medford and I pursued him with darts from a target game downstairs. We never scored a fair hit, however, and he finally escaped by the window.

And speaking of Graham Memorial reminds me of the lost articles which have collected here. If they all belonged to one person and he came to get them, you might see him emerging from the marble halls equipped with a skull cap, a striped linen coat, a green slicker, a monocle, a French Horn, a green vase, and a dime. If you recognize any of these things as yours come and get them.

(Late Bulletin: Better hurry. The janitor has claimed the skull cap, the president of Women's Association the vase, and the manager of Graham Memorial the dime.)

The Ink Well

By Nelson Robbins

Welcome, freshmen, to Carolina... Where you can talk back to sophs... But had better not... Where you don't have to wear skull caps... Where you can be a socialist, communist, democrat, republican or baptist... But you will be a gentleman...

Where a certain math professor will take pains to explain to you with black-board work the smallest line and most insignificant figure... And another will work problems, very likely, in the clear air with his forefinger... Where English professors will require you to trace each word in the lesson back to the Latin roots... And a famous geologist will crack the same jokes on class each day and remind you frequently that "you are largely what you are, because you are where you are"... And will teach you an incredible amount of geology, notwithstanding.

Where co-eds are not liked... But are dated up weeks ahead...

Where juniors and seniors may get their names on the Dean's list and be given the privilege of cutting all classes, if they maintain an average of "B" on all studies... And have their names promptly dropped from the list, if they take too many cuts...

Where you are surrounded by the best moral and religious forces... And, where, seemingly, half the state comes to get drunk on the occasion of every big game...

Welcome to the oldest, the most inconsistent, the most liberal, and, often, the strictest, the most scholastic, and, above all, the grandest old state University in the country.

It might be mildly interesting to know how some folks get that way about chiseling in without permission at or near the head of a waiting line, as happened in the Tin Can on registration day and very frequently happens at the post-office and other places when people have to stand in line to be served, and each newcomer is by common courtesy expected to take his place at the foot of the line. It is, of course, rather a trivial matter, but no one who has been waiting for perhaps an hour, exactly relishes the idea of some person rudely breaking into the line ahead. Co-eds seem to be the worst offenders. An old southern sense of chivalry, or something, usually leads most of the male students here to proffer their places in line to any ladies who will wait for the invitation, but no one likes the idea of a girl strutting imperiously, and without permission, to the head of a line as if that were her inalienable right. With the women of our nation waging such a strenuous fight for equality for lo! these many years, it would seem that the dear ladies would not now require quite so much pampering. And, as for the male chiselers—it seems a pity that hazing in all forms is prohibited here.

Chapel Hill Beauty Spots: The Episcopal church by moonlight... the carrion tower in the rain... the old University well... the Thanksgiving crowd in Kenan stadium... Carolina Inn at twilight... the library.

Written on an eight-thirty math class:

Gentle Morpheus, I would dwell with thee—
While countless suns might set—
E'en through time and space and eternity—
To sleep and rest and forget.

Midnight. The soft, gentle sound of falling rain. Rhythmic rain. Little minor cadences of song come from the eaves and mingle with the louder tones from the tin roof. The ivy walls are dripping with the autumn rain. In the long hours from dark to dawn... lullaby of the rain... peaceful... little thoughts come like mice peeping from their holes and scurry back again... midnight... rain... thoughts of tomorrow... perhaps there will be no tomorrow. But tomorrow... is almost here... a few more hours of work before the dawn... and classes... O Tempore, O Morpheus, O Everything.

And New

Students in the commerce school who have registered for several advanced commerce courses are instructed to read Stuart Chase's A New Deal, the latest political pronouncement from the pen of the most prolific of our young economists.

After twelve years of a status approaching almost total aridity, economics 35 takes a new lease on life and adopts James Truslow Adam's masterpiece An American Epic, as the course text book. If the latter course can ever be interesting, now is its chance.

The mere fact that students are brought into contact with the modern slant of an allegedly jejune subject is gratifying in itself.

Several years ago Dean Carroll of the commerce school journeyed northward in quest of a new mentor for accounting courses in his school. He interviewed Chase, the same gentleman responsible for A New Deal, in an effort to induce him to come to Chapel Hill and take over the accounting division of the college. Chase was willing, but thought that his principles and particularly those of his wife, a more-than-ardent partner in his political views, might be too radical for Chapel Hill as he knew it. Chase professes socialism.

Thus is the picture of "little liberal Chapel Hill," "the New Haven of the South," the "focal point of Dixie culture," as seen by a modern thinker.

Gottterdammerung

Seven Greek letter houses have passed from the university, notes the Wisconsin Daily Cardinal. Five sororities and two fraternities felt the effect of last year's economic pressure and vacated their respective abodes. Which leads us to wonder if the fraternity system, which has long cluttered the campi of our large universities in disproportionate quantity is at last on the decline. Fraternities at the University of North Carolina have decreased from thirty-three to twenty-eight in numbers in the past three years. Other institutions report a similar decrease and observe that there is a tendency toward local instead of national organization in some quarters. Revenue from dues and initiation fees which cannot be raised due national centers is responsible for the latter movement.

Just as the textile, tooth paste, and automotive industries, the Greek letter trade is overcrowded.

George Bernard Shaw says that within 30 centuries children will talk as soon as they are born, which makes us rejoice that we live in the good old days.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Rain May Block Plans Laid For Opening Of 1932 World's Series

Yankees and Cubs, Pennant Winners in Respective Leagues, Meet Today in New York.

CHICAGO TO START BUSH
Lefty Gomez or Charley Ruffing Expected to Oppose Lanky Windy City Pitcher.

Jupe Pluvius may toss a monkey wrench into the plans for a gala world's series opening game today at the Yankee stadium when the Yankees, American league champions, meet the Chicago Cubs, pennant winners in the National league. A heavy rainfall came down last night in New York and it was predicted by the weather man that the rain would continue this morning and afternoon. If that is the case, the first two games will be played Thursday and Friday in New York, and the third contest in Chicago Sunday.

Two special cars, filled with Cub ball players and their wives, arrived in Gotham early Monday morning and Manager Charley Grimm has been sending his regulars through two work-outs daily at the Yank park.

Yank Starter Doubtful
Neither Grimm nor Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees have made pitching plans further than the opening ball game and even then the starting hurler for the New York team is undecided upon.

Guy Bush, lanky right handed hurler from Mississippi, has been named the Cubs' best bet in the first game while the choice of the Yankees lies between Lefty Gomez or Charley Ruffing.

The 1932 classic has put several men in unusual positions concerning the Yankees and the Cubs. For one thing, the Yankee pilot, McCarthy, managed the Bruins in 1929 when Chicago played the Athletics in the post season series. Incidentally, McCarthy is the only manager having led two teams of both leagues to the pennant.

Ruth in Tenth Series
Mark Koenig, new shortstop for the Chicago club, played three world's series as a member of the Yankees. Nor is Koenig the only member of the 1928 Yankees now on the Cub payroll, Charley O'Leary, having been the late Miller Huggins' chief lieutenant.

Two records will also fall this year. Babe Ruth, slugger de luxe, will participate in his tenth world's series as a player, serving seven under the colors of the Yankees and three with the Boston Red Sox.

Charley O'Leary will also take a share in his tenth classic as a coach.

The probable lineup:

Math Seminar Today

The first meeting of the mathematics seminar will take place this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock in Phillips hall. This meeting will be an informal gathering and will consist of a symposium on elementary methods of teaching mathematics.

EXTRA POLICE TO HELP IN HANDLING CROWD SATURDAY

Special arrangements to care for the traffic problem and to facilitate the seating of the crowd at the Vanderbilt game here Saturday were made known by Coach George Shepard yesterday.

About twenty extra policemen and a dozen state highway officers will be stationed in Chapel Hill in addition to a score of students to regulate and direct the traffic. Shepard has also designated a group of forty students as ushers in the stadium. To relieve the usual congestion resulting from parking cars, the use of Emerson field and the intramural field will be provided for this purpose.

Baseball Manager Try-outs

All freshmen who wish to try out for assistant managers of baseball are requested to report to Manager Taylor at the intramural field between 3:00 and 4:00 o'clock this afternoon.

O. Bailey.

Two Bills in Winter

During the winter quarter two bills will be offered, a revival of a period costume play in elaborate production, and another bill of original plays. Under consideration for the revival are Pinero's Trelawney of the Wells, a Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera, Goldoni's The Mistress of the Inn and others. The bill of original plays will probably consist of three new plays from the playwriting classes.

In the spring a bill of studio plays will be presented by Sam Selden's class in directing, including a dozen or more plays, both professionally written and new plays by University students. The final offering will be a Forest theatre production. Last year a Forest theatre show was tentatively announced, but proved impracticable and was replaced by The Butter and Egg Man. However, the summer production of Alceste in the stadium proved to be so popular that the present program definitely calls for an outdoor performance in the spring, and Shakespeare's comedy, A Midsummer Night's Dream, with Mendelssohn's music, will probably be chosen to close the year.

To Repeat 1932 Feature

During the spring quarter the Playmakers plan to repeat the new feature introduced last year by the performance of Cinderella by the Junior Playmakers of Chapel Hill. Harry Davis is working on his dramatization of the oriental fairy story, "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," for the Juniors' second bill.

Each quarter there will be a number of experimental productions of new plays, put on by young playwrights and production students. The Twelfth Night Revel and Annual Capers will also be celebrated, following the Christmas recess, and at the end of the year, respectively.

To Make Tours

A revival of the Playmakers touring activities is in prospect for this season. A Thanksgiving tour out of the state is practically assured, and it is also

TWENTY-FIVE OUT FOR PRACTICE IN CROSS-COUNTRY

Sullivan Twins Are Pace-Setters For Candidates Working Under Ranson.

Nearly a quarter of a hundred ambitious boys are working out daily with Coach Dale Ranson for positions on the Carolina cross-country squad, defending Southern Conference champs.

Coach Ranson seemed fairly well pleased with the prospects for this year's bunion outfit, but he declined to say what he thought the locals' prospects were for clinching their sixth Southern Conference pennant.

Sullivan Look Good

The Sullivan twins, Louis and Henry, have been the pace-setters in the early workouts. Captain Bob Hubbard is also looking in fine condition. Other likely looking prospects thus far are Joe Pratt and J. E. Waldrop.

A tough schedule has been arranged for the tracksters with such heavy opposition as Florida and Duke. The southern meet comes on November 19 here in Chapel Hill.

The complete list of men out for the squad is as follows: T. L. Cordle, T. H. Curlee, G. S. Donnell, J. B. Farr, W. C. Finch, J. J. Goldman, W. R. Groover, H. W. Gwyn, F. J. Haywood, T. A. Henson, Capt. R. B. Hubbard, C. A. Jensen, D. S. Kimrey, E. E. McRae, O. Morton, J. H. Pratt, J. S. Queen, B. Roden, H. S. Sullivan, L. G. Sullivan, J. E. Waldrop, N. J. Williams, H. W. Williamson, H. Willey.

MARLENE DIETRICH AT LOCAL THEATRE TODAY

Featuring today at the Carolina theatre is "Blonde Venus," starring Marlene Dietrich. This is the fifth picture for the German actress, who has previously taken the leading role in "The Blue Angel," "Morocco," "Dis-honored," and "Shanghai Express."

While still in her teens, Miss Dietrich joined Max Reinhardt's world-famous school of drama. Her first stage part was in the German version of "Broadway" which was followed by a musical comedy engagement.

Josef von Sternberg, American director assigned to make a picture for UFA, German producers in Berlin, saw her in a musical show and immediately picked her for the feminine lead in the film, "The Blue Angel."

planned to make a number of short week-end or over-night trips in the state.

Monday evening, October 3, at 7:30 o'clock, Professor Koch will lecture on "Our Adventures in Playmaking," showing a number of slides of early Playmaker activities, thus beginning a series of special lectures and Sunday night play-readings which the Playmakers will sponsor again this year. Each month there will be a Sunday evening reading of some particularly interesting play by a playwright or well-known theatre artist. The Taming of the Shrew, read by Professor Koch, will be the first of these, on Sunday evening, October 9.

Season tickets for the six big performances of the current season may be secured from the Alfred Williams company, the Book Exchange, the Playmakers theatre, and student salesmen on the campus.

INTRAMURAL TAG FOOTBALL SEASON TO OPEN MONDAY

All Students Except Varsity and Freshman Players Eligible To Play on Teams.

Herman Schnell, new head of the intramural department, has announced that the intramural season will be officially opened Monday afternoon with tag football. The department has been working all week getting teams entered from the dormitories and fraternities. While any group wishing to form an independent team will have to see Schnell in the intramural office between 2:00 and 5:00 o'clock.

Anyone will be eligible to play unless he has won his varsity football numeral or is a member of the freshman or varsity squad. A man will be allowed to play for any team he chooses but will not be able to change clubs after the start of the season. An exception is made in the case of a freshman being pledged by a fraternity he may change from a dorm to the frat he pledged.

Best House Title-Holder

Best House, in the dormitory league, and Sigma Nu in the frat loop, finished the season in first places in their respective leagues. Sigma Nu took its title only after an extra game was played, ending the season in a tie with Phi Gamma Delta. In the post-season contest Sigma Nu won by a one touchdown margin, which was tallied in the closing minutes of play.

Best House on the other hand took its title easily, winning all its games by shut-outs. The playoff found Best House still keeping its record clean by downing Sigma Nu 12 to 0. Both scores came as a result of long passes.

Another close race in the fraternity league is in prospect, as hardly any of the teams have been hurt by the loss of men. The dormitory flag chase promises to be much closer than last year, as Best House will be hardest hit by losses. The last year's champions lose Paul Edwards through graduation, and Jones, who is a member of the varsity football squad. Both men were star performers on their team. Most of the other teams will be intact from last season.

A schedule for the first week will be made after all clubs have been entered. This schedule will probably be printed in the Sunday issue of the DAILY TAR HEEL.

Lengthy Scrimmage Shows Vast Improvements In Carolina Attack

ATTENTION GIVEN BATTERY MEN IN FALL WORKOUTS

Coach Bunn Hearn concentrated his attention upon the work of his battery men throughout the second fall baseball drill yesterday afternoon, as Griffith is the only veteran pitcher available to the squad this year and the vacant catcher's berth left by the graduation of Pattisall must be filled.

The performance of Joyner, a sophomore moundsman, was particularly impressive. Mills and Spiers, freshmen, are showing unusual speed and consistent control in their offerings from the box and the hurling of Stern and Hutchison, both yearlings, was also pleasing to the jovial mentor. Among the catchers are Parker, Strayhorn and Mathewson, all with varsity experience, vying for the regular assignment.

Coach Hearn topped off the session with a fast and strenuous workout for the infielders, many of whom exhibited mid-season form, having seen activity on the diamond during the summer. Weather permitting, a practice game will comprise the program for today.

of elementary education, and an advanced course for school principals, while Mrs. Grace P. Woodman will teach classes in Asheville, Waynesville, Canton, and Marshall. Her courses will be: public school music, music appreciation, and sight singing and ear training.

Miss Gladys Angel, assistant professor of health and physical education, who has charge of this phase of instruction for the extension department, has charge of courses in physical and health education and folk dancing and pageantry at Whiteville, Wilmington, Clinton, and Buies Creek. Other classes may be formed at a later date in Wadesboro, Albemarle, Henderson, Hillsboro, Southern Pines, Hendersonville, and Warrenton, according to Grumman.

Coach Collins Continues Stiff Pace for Squad in Attempt to Find Best Combination.

FIRST TEAM IS SHIFTED

New Backfield Shows Woollen, Quarter; Croom and Phipps At Half; Lassiter, Full.

Driving his charges at the same furious pace that he set Monday, Coach Collins put his men through the most spirited scrimmage of the current campaign yesterday on Emerson field. In an effort to produce the offensive spark that was so sadly lacking against Wake Forest he had his first two teams scrimmage for over an hour determined to discover a combination that would click against the Vanderbilt Commodores this Saturday.

The work of the two teams on the muddy field was encouraging to the coaches as both elevens showed marked improvement in offense. The blocking of the backs and the linemen as well as better and the runner was able to slip through for nice gains. There still is room for improvement in the taking out of secondary men. In the scrimmage yesterday the defensive team's secondary made a good portion of the tackles and were many times just bumped out of the play rather than being out on the ground.

Coach Collins shifted his first team backfield yesterday in an effort to get more offensive drive. This new backfield showed Charlie Woollen at quarterback, Haines Lassiter at fullback, and John Phipps and Bill Croom at the halves. This quartet answered Coach Collins' call for drive time and again with neat plunges. Lassiter ran with his old drive and Phipps and Croom were both driving hard. Stuart Chandler was again on the sidelines watching the scrimmage. In his place, Woollen showed up well returning punts with a new drive.

The rest of the first team was made up of: Cozart and Walker, ends; Hodges and Smith, tackles; Barclay and Newcombe, guards; and Underwood, center. On the second team were Frank-el and Brandt, ends; Collins and Tatum, tackles; Kahn and Philpot, guards; and McIver, center. In the backfield for this team were: Jones, quarterback; McCaskill, fullback; and Hubbard and Burnett, halves.

WORKS OF LOCAL MEN PRINTED BY VIRGINIA REVIEW

C. T. Murchison Writes on Economics, While Phillips Russell Contributes Sketch.

Two University professors, Claudius T. Murchison, professor of applied economics in the school of economics and commerce, and Phillips Russell, well known author and biographer, have articles appearing in the current issue of the Virginia Quarterly Review. This magazine is published at the University of Virginia and is the leading publication of its type in the south.

Murchison's article is entitled "The Economist Answers," and is concerned with a discussion of the problems that confront the economist in times like these. In this discussion Murchison makes a reply to the question "What do you economists have to offer?", which is hurled so viciously at the economists at the present time.

Article on Tillman

In his article, "The Ploughboy from Edgefield," Phillips Russell gives a sketch of the life and political career of Ben Tillman, who was governor of the state of South Carolina for the term 1890-94, and who later went to the United States Senate.

Russell describes the class of white people between the negro and the upper white class that emerged in South Carolina following the Civil war, and discusses the effect of the career of Tillman on the lives of these people and on politics in South Carolina.

GRIMES ROOMERS MEET AT SMOKER IN UNION BUILDING

Residents of Grimes dormitory met for a smoker in Graham Memorial Monday night at 9:30 o'clock, at which time representatives to the Union Forum, were elected and the vacant office of athletic manager was filled.

Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, and Mayne Albright, manager of Graham Memorial, made short talks after which the following officers were chosen: L. W. Watson was made athletic manager, filling a post vacated by H. Colyer, who failed to return to school this year, Donald Kirmey was elected representative to the forum from the first floor, Guy Harris from the second, J. S. Cook from the third, and D. C. McIlhenny from the fourth.

within forty-eight hours, the student is placed on probation by the committee. If he does not report in person to the chairman of the committee within five days, he is given a technical suspension from the University. The technical suspension means that the student must appear before the student committee and explain his reason for failing to report. The council then passes judgment on the validity of the reason advanced.

Freshman Y Council Begins Year's Work

The freshman friendship council met in its first regular session of the year Monday night in Gerrard hall with a large number of members present despite the inclement weather.

Jack Poole, president of the group last year, led the opening devotions and Ed Lanier, adviser to the council, closed with a prayer.

World News Bulletins

Thirty Dead in Hurricane

The full force of a 120-mile wind struck San Juan, Porto Rico, Monday night and lashed the city. Thirty have been reported killed while hundreds were injured and the property damage is estimated to be greater than the disastrous 1928 blow.

Most of the dead, according to first reports, were in outlying towns. In the city the loss of life was lessened by the police who rounded up women and children in the more substantial buildings. The Red Cross chapter there has already begun relief work.

Explosion Wrecks Home

The home of Judge Webster Thayer, who presided at the Sacco-Vanzetti trial, was wrecked early yesterday by a dynamite bomb which injured Mrs. Thayer and a maid.

Middle Belt Markets Open

Light breaks, with prices averaging from $11 to $12.50 a hundred yesterday, greeted the opening of ten middle markets of the North Carolina old bright leaf tobacco belt. Large increases over opening day last year were noted.

Secondary Education In Jamaica Is Fast Gaining Strong Foothold

Eighteen Secondary Institutions on Island Either Endowed or Conducted by Public Bodies or as Private Ventures Receive Government Grants.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Frank Cundall, Secretary of the Institute of Jamaica, has prepared this article on Education in Jamaica especially for THE DAILY TAR HEEL.)

By Frank Cundall

In view of the conditions from which it has emerged comparatively recently, Jamaica may be regarded as being reasonably well provided with facilities for secondary and elementary education.

The colony keeps in touch with the older English universities through the Rhodes and Jamaica Scholarships, the external examinations held by the London university, in arts, science and theology, and the various Cambridge university local examinations. The Associated Board of the Royal Schools of Music, London, holds practical and theoretical examinations, sending out annually a special examiner for the purpose. The examinations of the Royal Drawing Society are held in the island, and also examinations in shorthand.

Rhodes Award Highest

The Rhodes Scholarship of 400 pounds per annum, awarded partly on the results of the Jamaica Scholarship examination and partly on the moral and athletic qualities of the candidates, is the most valuable monetary prize. Every third year it is restricted to boys born and educated entirely in the island. Of the sixteen scholars selected for Jamaica up to 1919, twelve played their part in the Great War, and of these three lost their lives. The educational blue riband, however, is the Jamaica Scholarship, worth 250 pounds per annum, tenable for three years, and awarded to the boy who has acquitted himself most creditably in the locally held Cambridge higher certificate examination. The winners as a rule have made their mark as successful professional men. A similar scholarship is awarded for girls on the results of the London matriculation examination, a condition being that candidates must be placed in the first class. Since 1928 an Agricultural Scholarship of 300 pounds per annum has been awarded, to be held at the Imperial College of Tropical Agriculture in Trinidad.

Commission in Charge

Secondary education is supervised by the Jamaica Schools commission, each school having its local board of managers; while elementary education is controlled by the Board of Education—both bodies being under the legislature of the colony so far as funds are concerned.

There are eighteen secondary schools in Jamaica either endowed or conducted by public bodies or as private ventures, which qualify for government grants, provided that conditions as to numbers, scholarship and satisfactory arrangements have been fulfilled. An important condition is the provision for twenty per cent of free foundation scholars. The school buildings are in most cases fairly modern, with good dormitory and classroom accommodation, and in almost all cases good playing-fields are provided. Upwards of fifteen hundred children attend these schools, either as boarders or day pupils, and the fact that the better schools have a long waiting-list testifies that a good education for their children is increasingly appreciated by the parents of Jamaica. There is a pension scheme whereby assistant teachers coming out from Great Britain for a period of years do not forfeit their pension rights at home, and the services of men and women of good ability and properly trained are readily secured.

Athletics Developed

The development of athletics in the secondary schools during recent years is noteworthy. Before 1902, though cricket and football were played and athletic sports held, there was a decided lack of organization. Of late years, thanks in great part to the introduction of junior cup cricket, the various football competitions, the establishment of miniature rifle shooting and the Jamaica championship sports, games and athletics have been placed on a far more satisfactory footing in all the schools. Some of this development is undoubtedly due to the allotment to Jamaica of a Rhodes Scholarship above alluded to, love of and success in sports forming an appreciable part of the necessary qualifications.

Sixty-five years ago some 300 elementary schools with an average attendance of about 12,000, not necessarily children, had been established by the various denominations, but the government's contribution to their upkeep was not more than 4,000 pounds per annum, or a little more than one per cent of the island revenue. The latest returns show that now, with a population of approximately 900,000, there are 655 elementary schools, under local boards of managers, with an average attendance of over 86,000 children out of 134,000 whose names appear on the books. The total annual expenditure by the government on education, including secondary, has risen to nearly 178,000 pounds; a little more being spent from other sources on elementary education, and much more from trusts and other sources on secondary education.

Elementary System Weak

Elementary education, however, must still be regarded as being in a transitional stage. In the early days the government did little and the churches (the Church of England, the Baptist, the Wesleyan, the Roman Catholic, the Moravian, the Friends and others; both the Roman Catholics and the Friends being recruited from the United States) almost everything to further the progress of education. Despite the enormous increase of the government's grants in aid, the system is still denominational and in a measure dependent on the churches, which in the great majority of cases provide the buildings, teachers' cottages and equipment of the schools, and are responsible with the aid of a government grant, apart from the teachers' salaries, for their general maintenance.

It is, however, becoming more evident every day that the various churches are not in a position to meet even the reduced financial strain, so that many of the buildings are falling into a serious state of disrepair, while sanitation and equipment in some cases are far from satisfactory.

Schools Increase

The number of government schools is increasing as financial circumstances warrant, and the accommodation has been increased from eight square feet to twelve square feet per place.

The education code is based upon its English prototype and, although perhaps somewhat overloaded, is fundamentally sound and adapted to the needs of the country. As befits an agricultural community, much stress is laid upon nature study and school garden work, though the teachers so far do not appear to have realized the full importance of this branch of the curriculum.

The children are entitled to eight years' free schooling, from seven to fifteen; but though attempts have been made in various centers to put it in force, compulsory attendance has proved to be impracticable. If he has attended school regularly, there is no reason why a Jamaica peasant child should not leave school as well equipped for life as an English one of the same class. Should he show exceptional ability, he can obtain one of the 400 free places in the secondary schools, and the university career provided by the Jamaica scholarship may enable him to reach a high position in the civil service.

This has been done in at least one case, and there are several living examples of men who, with little or no better educational foundation, have risen to high positions in the professional and commercial worlds and in the island legislature.

Native Teachers

The elementary teachers are natives of the island, and in the majority of cases have been trained for their profession at one of the four training colleges, one of which is mainly supported by the Mico Trust in England. The Shortwood Training College is maintained at the government's expense for thirty-six women students; twenty-five women are trained in the Moravian College at Bethlehem, while six more are in training at St. Joseph's, a Roman Catholic institution.

A farm school, conducted under the auspices of the director of agriculture provides a sound agricultural training for a limited number of pupils, but technical schools are expensive luxuries and lack of funds is the reason why so little has been attempted in the direction of vocational training beyond the provision of a few trade scholarships. The Technical Continuation and Commercial School in Kingston justifies the latter two-thirds of its name, and steps have recently been taken to put the technical side of the work on a more satisfactory basis. There are three continuation schools, one owned by the government and two by religious bodies.

Pensions Provided

Pensions are provided for elementary school teachers and for teachers at training colleges.

There is a Jamaica Union of Elementary Teachers which meets once a year in conference and deals with all subjects connected with the profession.

Various Clubs

On leaving school a number of scholars, in addition to joining various sports clubs and literary societies, join old boys' and old girls' associations of their schools, and do what they can to aid in their development. There are also a number of debating societies in which subjects of a general nature are discussed.

From time to time proposals have been put forward and supported in some quarters that Jamaica should have a university. Proposals have also been made for the founding of a West Indian University. Advantageous as such a local institution would be to students of limited means, it would seem that to finance such a scheme satisfactorily would be almost impossible. Secondly, the many advantages which students gain by mixing in the life of universities in the United Kingdom would be missing.

ALTON LAWRENCE TO SPEAK BEFORE SOCIALISTIC CLUB

Members of Local Socialist Club
To Hear Secretary of State
Socialist Party Tonight.

Members of the Socialist club will gather this evening in room 210 Graham Memorial, where they will be addressed by Alton Lawrence, state secretary for the Socialist party, who will review for the assemblage details of the campaign to get the Socialist candidate on the North Carolina ballot, and by Arnold Williams, president of the local Socialist organization, who will speak on "The Prospects of Socialism for 1932" and "Opportunities for the Young Man in Socialism."

Williams spent the past summer in the middle west, doing campaign work for the Socialist party, and in discussing the chances of the party in the coming election he said, "The party will poll a record vote in this year's election, with the number of votes running probably into the millions."

Organized Here

The Socialist club was organized in Chapel Hill last year, and it conducted meetings regularly throughout the year, at which members were addressed by many prominent speakers, including Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for the presidency of the United States.

Williams, in outlining the plans of the local club for the coming year, announced that many excellent speakers had been invited to visit Chapel Hill and to address the club. Prominent among this group is Powers Hapgood, labor leader and Socialist candidate for governor of Indiana.

REPUBLICAN CLUB TO HOLD OPENING MEETING TONIGHT

Young Republican Club to Outline Plan of Work for Year
At Meeting Tonight

University students and townspeople interested in joining the Republican club of the University of North Carolina are invited by that organization to attend its opening meeting in Gerard hall tonight at 9:00 o'clock. At that time plans for the completion of the club's organization will be discussed along with a general discussion about conducting a campaign on the campus and in Chapel Hill for the purpose of registering students and townspeople as qualified voters.

Duncan to Speak

Effort is being made to secure the presence of Chairman James S. Duncan of the North Carolina Republican Committee as a special feature. Mr. Duncan, a resident of Greensboro, had a large part in the Republican victory in the Presidential campaign in 1928.

As parts of future programs of the Republican club leading Republican candidates for state offices will be asked to Chapel Hill to give talks and lead discussions. At one meeting some Republican speaker of national prominence will be asked to deliver a speech at the University, according to John A. Wilkinson, head of the Republican club.

GRAIL TO STAGE FIRST DANCE OF YEAR SATURDAY

Jack Wardlaw, Back With New Band
After Year's Absence, Will Furnish Music.

The Order of the Grail will give its first dance of the season Saturday night in Bynum gymnasium. The price of admission will be the same as it has been in the past, $1.00. Tickets go on sale Friday morning and will be handled through Pritchard-Lloyd's and the Book Exchange.

Jack Wardlaw, who after a year's absence from the "Hill," is back in the University with a newly organized dance orchestra and will furnish the music for Saturday night's dance.

The Grail sponsors these dances at regular intervals throughout the school year, and are supervised by the new dance committee of the University. As the old custom stands, no freshmen are allowed to attend during their first year at the University.

PHI INDUCTS NEW LEADERS AT FIRST MEETING TUESDAY

Dan Kelly, New Speaker, Reviews History of Assembly
In Inaugural Address.

The new officers of the Phi Assembly were inducted into office Tuesday night at the first meeting of that organization for this year. The program was featured by the inaugural address of Dan Kelly, who is new speaker. Kelly opened his speech with a brief history of the assembly, which was founded on this campus over 136 years ago, reviewing the careers of some of the most prominent alumni of the society, whose pictures hang on the walls of the assembly hall.

It was pointed out that although the organization had lost some of its former powers and duties, it has now a purpose equally important in teaching students how to clearly express their views, in giving them experience in public speaking, and in presenting to them a cross-section of campus opinion on national subjects.

In concluding his address,

Mrs. Manning Makes Loan Plea To D. A. R.

Mrs. Isaac Manning of Chapel Hill addressed the Guilford Battle chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at the birthday luncheon which met Tuesday at the King Cotton hotel, Greensboro. Mrs. Manning made an inspiring plea for student loan funds of the University, her address being the highlight of the meeting, which opened the chapter's 32nd season.

Mrs. Manning reviewed a bit of the University's history and the history of the fund, and showed that the fund was a sound investment as well as one bringing dividends in service.

FRESHMEN VIE FOR BONEHEAD HONORS

ONE BRINGS BATHTUB; GRAHAM'S HOME A HOTEL

After the performance of Abie Spats, last year's wildest freshman, it seemed that a lasting high had been set for insane antics of the yearlings. However, two members of the class of '36 have already thrust themselves forward to challenge all records.

Some queer reports of the University's ablutionary facilities must have percolated through the hinterland in the past year. The impression has been conveyed to one person, at least, that the dormitories on the campus were lacking in bathing apparatus. Perhaps he thought that since the University is the nucleus of the Southern renaissance, the students here were ejulating their historical counterparts in not taking baths.

Whatever the motive, he did bring a bathtub with him. One of the good old-fashioned tin ones, such as grandma used to use. Perhaps it was his parents' advice which prompted this fantastic act. One can hear them say to him "Now, son don't forget that cleanliness is next to Godliness, so don't forget your bath on Saturday night."

It may be that he was influenced by the reports circulating about the state concerning the condition of the University exchequer and thus came to the conclusion that the students were reduced to living in tents. Or, pondering, as freshmen sometimes do, he blossomed forth with the idea that even if the University did supply showers, a fact which he strongly doubted, a real-all over bath would bring him nearer his maker than mere desultory rinsing under a shower.

Also, this naive specimen brought with him a first-class broom. Surely he didn't think University men took a personal hand in sweeping their rooms. No, of course not; he is probably a witch and needs the broomstick to ride on the Witches' Mass. Hallowe'en rioters please take note.

It is best to be circumspect about this young man's crowning piece of foolishness. Occupying a queenly place among his effects was a pot, de chambre. And this lad hails from a place but thirty miles from Chapel Hill.

His running-mate for honors has a more dignified accomplishment. Not having rented a room his first day of school, he looked around for a hotel. This freshman must be congratulated on his taste, for he selected President Graham's home as the most likely looking hostelry in town. The Graham family chanced to be absent at the time the freshman rang the bell, but the negro maid was not unaccustomed to visitors with traveling bags.

Accordingly, she showed the boy to one of the guest rooms. There in typical freshman manner, he made himself thoroughly at home. He kept the maid busy for four hours waiting on him hand and foot, until President Graham came home. Then he was invited to leave summarily, to say the least.

With such blazing starts these two gentlemen ought to go far on the road to University success. The bathtub hero will very likely wind up as an agent for Crane and company, while President Graham's uninvited guest should surpass the achievements of "One-Eye" Connelly and Tammany Young.

Fritz Kreisler, noted violinist, will give a recital in Memorial hall, February 27, under the auspices of the Phi Mu Alpha musical fraternity.

Tickets to the concert by the famous musician will be on sale January 1, and may be obtained through the music department. All seats will be reserved, and prices will be $1.00, $1.50, and $2.00. Tickets may be purchased through mail by writing to Box 609, Chapel Hill.

The recital will be given by the Phi Mu Alpha as a benefit in order to raise funds for music scholarships to the University.

DI ATTEMPTS TO REVIVE INTEREST IN ORGANIZATION

President Suggests Plan of Equal Student Representation in Literary Societies.

In his inaugural address to the Di Senate Tuesday, Charles G. Rose, Jr., contending that at present all student ideas are not expressed in the two literary societies, presented a plan whereby the various opinions of the student body would be more equally represented in the organizations.

President Rose severely criticized the lack of interest among members and the declining activity of the society. He pointed out that before the literary groups could achieve any measure of success on the campus through their bills, it would be necessary that they include a more representative membership of students.

Following his proposal, the president appointed Senators Bill McKee, Jule McMichael, and B. G. Gentry as a committee to carry out the proposed plan.

The meeting of the Di Senate, conducted in New West Tuesday night, was the first of this year.

Dance Committee To Meet Monday Night

Members of the dance committee of the University will gather for its first meeting of the year in Graham Memorial, Monday night at 8:00 o'clock to formulate plans for the coming year.

The dance committee which was organized last year is composed of representatives of several campus organizations and will act in the same capacity as the former committee which was composed of the executives of the German club.

At this meeting the rules for dances will be made and it will be decided whether freshmen will be admitted to the finals.

Recommending Graham.

TATUM PETITION IGNORED

Graham's Election Will Necessitate
Appointment of Head
For Chapel Hill Division.

The executive committee of the board of trustees of the Greater University, acting under power conferred by the board last spring, in a special session held in Raleigh yesterday unanimously recommended that Dr. Frank Porter Graham be elected president of the Greater University.

The action of the executive committee, though not final, will undoubtedly be adopted by the full board at its meeting in Raleigh, Monday, Nov. 14. The election for Dr. Graham will necessitate the appointment by the board of a vice-president to head the Chapel Hill division of the Greater University.

Under the plan recommended by the investigating committee on the consolidation of the three state institutions of learning and later adopted by the board, in addition to the executive head of the whole there will be three vice-presidents, one for each institution. The executive committee in its meeting yesterday made no recommendations as to these vice-presidents.

Tatum Petition

Several other matters which the committee was expected to take up were left to be handled later by the full board. No action was taken in reference to the petition drawn up by L. A.

GENE TUNNEY MAY ADDRESS STUDENT DEMOCRATIC CLUB

Tunney, Robert R. Reynolds, and
J. C. B. Ehringhaus to Address
Young Democrats.

Listing Gene Tunney, Robert R. Reynolds, and J. C. B. Ehringhaus as possible speakers, the Young Democrat club at the University plans to offer a full program of addresses here during the coming political campaign, officers of the organization stated yesterday.

Tunney, former heavyweight champion, now stump speaking for Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for president, is expected to include North Carolina in his itinerary and efforts are being made to bring him to Chapel Hill.

The local group will also attempt to bring Reynolds, nominee for U. S. Senator, Ehringhaus, nominee for governor, and other members of the party ticket to address the group.

The Young Democrat club was organized last spring as a part of a movement of the party to interest young voters all through the country in the Democratic organization. The college divisions will exchange speakers and further organize young voters.

At the organization meeting of the club here last spring, Hamilton Hobgood was chosen president; "Ed" Lanier and "Red" Seawell vice-presidents; and Dan Kelly secretary.

Essential to a Well-Rounded Education

With the organization meeting of the Young Republicans club tonight and a similar meeting of the Young Democrats in the next few days, there will be unofficially added to the University curriculum a course in national and state politics which might well be required of every student before receiving his diploma.

The education received in this sort of activity is essential to the make-up of a well-rounded college graduate. He is soon to become, if he is not already of age, a voting citizen, with the power to cast his vote on questions and issues of vital importance to the government. And unless at some time during his training he has learned to think seriously on political questions, he will be unfit to cast his vote intelligently.

To a great many of the college students today a national or state election is nothing more than a matter of course. Most of them consider it outside their field even to think about the outcome, much less to be interested enough to discuss the issues at stake.

But in taking this attitude they apparently overlook the fact that in the next few years they will be the ones upon whose shoulders will rest the entire responsibility of the elections. And by not taking an active interest in politics now and getting all the information they can about it, they are "putting off until tomorrow something that should be done today." When the time does come for them to take over the reins of government, they must of necessity begin anew an activity which they could, and should, have taken up while in college.

The Young Republicans' and Young Democrats' clubs on this campus will be meeting regularly during the next few months to discuss the issues of the coming campaign as well as to hear instructive addresses by various party leaders.

Those students who fail to join one of the organizations and take an active interest in the group's proceedings will be robbing themselves of an essential part of their college education.

High Priced Glory

The cost of actual war is negligible. In the experience of the United States, the aftermath of war is more than doubly expensive. It cost this country 24 billion dollars to engage in the World War. Its total bill for post-war beneficences will amount to 50 or 100 billions.

Annually, the United States government pays out 850 million dollars, or one-fourth of the total governmental expenses, to veterans of the War. Increasing each year, this figure will reach a peak of 2 billions per year in 1949.

Although it participated in the conflict during only one-third of its duration, the United States hands out more cash to veterans than England, France and Germany combined. While the number of those receiving government aid for war service has decreased in other nations during the past 14 years, veteran treasury-raiders in this country have increased.

The known truth of this situation is that soldiers who never saw over-seas service and veterans who received no injuries in combat are sharing equally in compensation with veterans who saw service and were wounded. While the need of disabled veterans and their dependencies can not be denied, it is also evident that a colossal graft on federal funds is being engineered. Upon the least imaginable pretenses, ex-soldiers are extorting money from a depleted treasury and bankrupt taxpayers. Abuses of this nature have multiplied by the hundreds.

The hopes and schemes of the veterans are sponsored by dangerous and selfish organizations with no ethically legitimate right to their political power. These groups constitute a vigorous minority. They are forever coercing and threatening political office-holders into granting their demands, which are usually antagonistic to the best interest of the whole people.

If Franklin Roosevelt will forget partisanship and stand with President Hoover in opposition to the immediate payment of the bonus, perhaps a setback may be given the forces of the avaricious veterans.—E.C.D.

Pay and Play Well

Yet again the devotees of American intercollegiate football are paying with one hand to witness games and seeking with the other to annihilate the sport for its commercialization. Reed Harris, fresh from a sensational tenure of office on the Columbia Spectator, frankly brands the game as a racket in his recently published King Football. And still the colleges insist that football is fought for the love of the game and the glory of Alma Mater.

The situation would be laughable, if it were not so decisive an indictment of the hypocrisy and double-dealing of the parties concerned. Since the public pays, despite its objections, the issue resolves itself into a moral one.

To rid the intercollegiate gridiron of the falsity and duplicity that now pervades it THE DAILY TAR HEEL suggests that football players be paid and paid well for their athletic services; that each college make public its salary list and advertise the fact its athletes will receive remuneration; and that the men be paid in proportion to their worth to the team and to the gate they draw.

If the Eastern Intercollegiate Association ratified and sponsored such procedure and the balance of the leading university organizations ratified it, the public would cease its yelping. The players and schools themselves would have a healthier background for their efforts. Subterfuge, small-fry diplomacy, and intercollegiate jealousy would be reduced to a minimum.

Aside from the resultant justice for this action there is the logical analogy to other university activities. The heads of publications, officers of societies, and non-faculty workers are all paid for extra-curricular work. Surely none would deny that football players are as deserving of pecuniary reward as are the editors of college papers.

By thus placing football on an open commercial basis, intercollegiate sport would be cleansed of the moral evil that now saturates it. Spectators at the games would be more wholehearted in their support and perhaps a higher type player would be developed. Surely the result would be nothing less than an opportunity for the institution to feel on the level once more—J.J.S.

Life and Letters

By Edith Harbour

Lives of great men all remind us we can make our lives sublime if we are willing to sacrifice greatness on the altar of sublimity, and the letters they leave behind warn us that we can't be too careful how we use our signatures. In the olden days the Life and Letters of prominent men appeared in two thick volumes at a decent interval after the death of the subject. These life-histories, burdened down with genealogical material, were generally written by a son, nephew, or other near male relative of the deceased. Thus any derogatory facts were carefully deleted and the hero was ever the virtuous knight in bright and shining armor clad. It is our humble opinion that men have always been men just as women have always been partly human beings and partly females in suspense.

Life may be a bowl of cherries or it may be a transparent, globular soap bubble reflecting prismatic rays of slanting light. Life may be rhythm or it may be discord. But whatever it is we believe in the good old theory of laissez-faire as applied to life and living as well as to the world's economic affairs. Which is merely our way of saying that we have no Grim Purpose in writing this column, for we discovered at a tender age that those fiery zealots who would reform the world had best begin their reformation at home. We are quite aware that there is much of art, beauty, and balderdash in life as well as in letters, but it's bad to have our kind of a mind wandering around with nothing to feed upon. And as every good Forsythe knows, rubbish which breaks into print is not rubbish at all—far from it.

Of letters there are various kinds. In the beginning the Phoenicians invented symbolic letters which formed an alphabet. Since when mere mortals have been inundated with business letters, friendly letters, love letters, letters of introduction, letters of credit, letters of marque from God, and belles lettres. Since it is easier to wire than to write home for money, it is the field of literature which is of primary interest to us. Anything worth reading which appears in this column may safely be said to have been plucked from out some quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore. We learned about life from books. In fact, we once worked for a couple of years in a library, one of those collegiate structures inside whose stately portals one might easily sleep in peace. It was there that an earnest student of men and manners asked for Henry Ford's autobiography of George Washington!

Lion's Share

This column is continually reminded that prices on student text books seem abnormally high in this year of economical embarrassment. Not infrequently students are requested to purchase text books ranging in price from four to six dollars, often several of them for the same course. Texts for higher English courses and curriculum in the field of applied science fall more into the latter category. Whether the publisher exacts too high a due from the book stores or whether the latter organizations ask the high price is not made public. Nevertheless there is dissatisfaction in the student body. Cornell and Wisconsin sell books on a co-operative plan. The student takes out membership in one of the organizations concerned in the peddling of text books and receives remuneration at the end of the school term on a percentage basis. The check to each member at the end of the year based on the size of his purchases through the term usually totals a handsome sum.

Light From The Darkness

John M. Gibson, an alumnus of the University, edits an admirable little journal The Sanatorium Sun, which this publication has been receiving recently. This attractive little news sheet has to do with life and progress at the North Carolina Sanatorium, Sanatorium, N. C., where its sunny columns are avidly perused by inmates broken in health and oftentimes despondent in spirit. Gibson graduated from the University in 1919 and continued his studies first at Columbia and then at the University of Paris. Following the beginnings of a brilliant newspaper career both here and on the continent he came to the Sanatorium in 1927 for tubercular treatment. After his release in 1929 he began to devote his journalistic talents to chronicling the events of his most recent home. An article "The New Surgical Treatment of Tuberculosis of the Lungs" written by Gibson appears in the Arts and Science department of a nationally famous monthly magazine this fall.

Kelly said that this session showed prospects of being the best in the last several years and urged all members to take an active part in the discussions and activities of the assembly.

After the speaker's address, the assembly discussed the bill: Resolved that the Phi assembly go on record as favoring the immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus. Representative Young, of the ways and means committee, introduced the bill, with representatives Greer and Boyles speaking for it and representatives Rankin and Griffin speaking against it. The question was defeated by an overwhelming vote.

Many University Alumni Prominent In Campaign For Political Offices

Both Republican and Democratic Nominations for Political Offices Throughout the State Bring Forth Many Names of Outstanding University Graduates.

Both Republican and Democratic primaries for nomination of candidates for major political offices throughout the state this past year have brought forth the names of many alumni of the University. And those graduates whose hats were not visible in the political ring have been pre-eminently active in directing the campaigns of their choices.

Both Democratic and Republican nominees for governor, are graduates of this University. In addition to gubernatorial possibilities, Carolina can claim as graduates, from either the University proper or its graduate school, all five of the justices of the State Supreme Court, twelve of the twenty solicitors, and seventeen of the Superior Court judges.

For governor of the state, J. C. B. Ehringhaus, '01, and C. Clifford Frazier, '09, Republican candidate, will hold the political spotlight in November. Boone D. Tillett, who did graduate work in law here during 1922-23 and 1926-27, will oppose A. H. Graham, '12, the Democratic nominee in the coming election for lieutenant-governor. Candidates for United States senator Robert R. Reynolds, '06, and John F. Newell, '00, both received their baptism of fire in politics here on the campus.

J. C. B. Ehringhaus, widely known candidate for governor who was nominated last July, is expected to hold the long end of the count over his Republican opposition. Ehringhaus received his college education here from 1898 to 1901.

Made Phi Beta Kappa

During that period, he found time not only to make Phi Beta Kappa but to participate actively in campus extra-curricular activities as well. He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon, Order of Gimghouls, Tau Nu Epsilon, and held the position of chief ball manager in his senior year, which corresponded to the present-day Carman Club leader. Publications too claimed his attention, for he managed the business end of both The Carolina Magazine and The Hellenian. Ehringhaus was also editor of the Tar Heel in his senior year.

Robert R. Reynolds, candidate for United States senator, entered the University in the fall of 1902 and attended the following three years. He studied law in summer school during 1907.

As a member of the Beta Theta Phi fraternity, Reynolds captained the scrub football team of 1904, played varsity the next year, and that same year was elected captain of the varsity track team. His love for sport led him to the position of athletic editor of the Tar Heel.

Like his Democratic colleague and candidate for governor, Reynolds began the practice of law in his home town, Asheville, in the fall of 1907. He was elected solicitor the Fifteenth Judicial District and held that office for four years. During the war he served as correspondent for the Cinema News Syndicate of New York City.

Frazier University Alumnus
C. Clifford Frazier, Ehringhaus's opponent in the gubernatorial race, attended the University from 1901 to 1904 and was graduated in the latter year with the degrees of A.B. and L.L.B. After securing his law license from the Supreme Court, Frazier practiced in Greensboro and has been attorney for the Southern Railway and other lines. His civil record as well as his college career has been noteworthy.

John Franklin Newell, opposing Reynolds for United States senator, attended the University and studied law from 1898 to 1900. Since one year after his graduation he has practiced law in Charlotte.

NEW YORK YANKS SWAMP CUBS IN BIG HITTING FRAY

Banging out a barrage of timely base knocks, the big guns of the New York Yankees' artillery opened fire on the fighting Chicago Cubs yesterday in the opening battle of the world series and in a free scoring orgy defeated their national league rivals, 12 to 6, while 50,000 baseball partisans braved the threatening weather to see the baseball classic at the Yankee stadium.

Aided by the hitting of his mates and the unsteady pitching of the Cub mound performers, Charles Ruffing, big right hander of the Yanks, was given a commanding six-run lead in the sixth inning, and from then on the encounter was never in doubt although the western club mustered four runs across the plate in the latter part of the game.

Replete with exciting and spectacular play, the contest started fast with the Cubs scoring two runs in the first session, Herman singling and scoring when English lined one into right field which Babe Ruth missed. Stephenson scored English with another single. Ruffing then settled down and held the Cubs scoreless until the seventh frame.

With the irrepressible Lou Gehrig clouting a terrific drive into the right field bleachers for a home run in the third inning, the Yankees took the lead 3 to 2, the ex-Columbian's blow scoring Combs and Ruth ahead of him. Five runs crossed the platter in the sixth, Guy Bush, Chicago's starting pitcher, who had hurled three-hit ball, leaving the game after walking three men and seeing Sewell and Ruth score on Dickey's single. Gehrig scored when Herman threw wild to the plate. With the bases choked, Grimes took the pitching duties for the Cubs and before he could retire the side Chapman and Crosetti scored on Combs' single.

Crosetti's error in the seventh paved the way for two runs. Herman and Cuyler scoring when Riggs Stephenson singled to give the Cub fans a throaty moment.

Two hits, a hit batsman, a walk, and a wild pitch permitted three more Yankee runs in the seventh. A double by Hartnett and a triple by Koenig together with a fielder's choice gave the Cubs two runs and new life in the eighth stanza. The last run of the skirmish was scored by the Yanks when Combs doubled to send in Sewell who had singled.

Charlie Ruffing allowed ten hits while Bush, Grimes, and Bob Smith gave eight safe blows to the Yankees. Ruffing sent ten Cubs back to the bench via the strikeout route. He allowed six walks. Though Bush permitted but three hits, he was too liberal with the passes, this leniency leading to his downfall in the fifth inning. Grimes and Smith were wobbly.

Gehrig with a homerun and a single in four times at bat and Combs with two for four led the

From The Bench

By Thomas H. Broughton

At last Europe has accepted lanky Ellsworth Vines at his face value and given him the coveted No. 1 position among the world's greatest players. Vines, who twice defeated Henri Cochet of France, for many years considered the world's leading player, during the summer just past, has been at the top of the American rankings for two years now, but this is the first time he has been given world-wide consideration. The young Californian is now in his prime and is rapidly taking his rightful place among the game's greatest players.

Opening workouts of the week for the Tar Heels have given new life to their supporters. The boys seem determined to vindicate their showing against the Deacons last Saturday by making it hot for Vanderbilt this week-end. The Vandy team is ranked at the top of the Conference in preseason dopings and a victory over the Commodores Saturday would certainly more than make-up for Carolina's poor showing against the Deacons.

Prominent among those mentioned to fill Dan Howley's shoes as manager of the Cincinnati Reds are Rogers Hornsby, Fred Lindstrom of the Giants, Edd Roush, former Red star, and "Sunny" Jim Bottomley, St. Louis first sacker. Bottomley looks like the best bet for the position right now. The only hitch is the fact that the Cardinals will want plenty for Bottomley's release. Ranking among the leading first sackers in the National League, the Cardinal may be worth more than the Reds will wish to pay. However Sidney Weil has expressed a desire to give the Cincinnati fans a contender and it may be that he will be willing to go high for Bottomley. The biggest drawback to Hornsby at Cincinnati is the fact that Hornsby is going to be boss of any team he manages, as was shown by his retirement as Cub manager. The Red owners seem to wish to keep a hand on the reins to a great extent, which wouldn't be possible with the Rajah manager, and which might be possible with Bottomley, who would be making his debut as a big league manager and who would be more susceptible to advice.

Latest news from North Carolina State, rated by many as the contender with Duke for the Big Five crown, has it that Ray Rex, 210-pound sophomore fullback, has been dropped to the third string backfield to make room for Phil Kinken on the first string. Rex will be remembered as the only State back to score twice against Appalachian last Saturday night in State's opening game. If Coach "Clipper" Smith has such an array of backs that he can switch Rex to the third team, it behooves us to watch State in the future.

Frank Nekola, former Holy Cross pitching ace, is slated to get another chance in big time.

CAROLINA ATTACK CLICKS IN THIRD HARD SCRIMMAGE

Thompson and Chandler Back in Action as Team Continues Offensive Improvement.

Unmindful of the sloppy weather Coach Chuck Collins put his charges through their third consecutive scrimmage this week yesterday on lake Emerson. The Tar Heels continued to show the same improvement they evidenced Tuesday and the timing and co-ordination that was an outstanding weakness in the Wake Forest game was yesterday a cause of encouragement to the coaches.

Kay Thompson and Stuart Chandler were back in action yesterday and took an active part in the scrimmage. Chandler took his place in the first team backfield at quarterback and Thompson ran at half on the second combination. Erwin Walker and Herb Newcombe were out of the rough work yesterday due to slight injuries received in scrimmage Tuesday. Walker was suffering with a "charley horse" and Newcombe had a slight knee bruise. Trainer Quinlan announced that both men would be in trim by Saturday.

The scrimmage yesterday followed a snappy dummy practice in an effort to polish off the Carolina attack. The Heel coaches realize that the Commodores with their hundred and ninety-five pound line will present a strong defense with Pete Gracey, all-southern center; Porter, two hundred and ten pound end; and two veteran tackles, Leyendecker and Barsley. The Commodores speed as well as weight and a brilliant array of backs is lead by Dixie Roberts, Fortune, and Henderson. "Mighty" Close another outstanding back has been ruled ineligible.

The first team taking part in the dummy scrimmage showed: Walker and Cozart, ends; Hodges and Smith, tackles; Barclay and Newcombe, guards; Underwood, center. In the backfield were: Chandler, quarterback; Croom and Phipps, halves; and Lassiter, fullback. In the heavy work which was interrupted temporarily by a light rain, Kahn took Newcombe's place at guard on the first team and Frankel replaced Walker at end. The second backfield combination worked behind this line and included Peacock, quarterback; White and Thompson, halves; and McCaskill, fullback.

Radio in Union

The students of the University may hear the broadcast of the second game of the world's series this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock in room 215 in Graham Memorial. All who are interested are urged to attend.

The Detroit Tigers exercised their right to draft Nekola. The former star came up with the Yankees, but was farmed out to Newark by New York. Only four players were drafted, the smallest number ever to be drafted by the majors. Three of the four, Nekola, Heving, and Nelson, are pitchers, while Homer Peel, former Cardinal outfielder, will go up to the White Sox.

There's still plenty of room for entrants in the ninth annual intramural Cake Race, and all men outside of the regular bunion boys of Coach Dale Ranson are eligible for the yearly feature Friday, October 21.

The track manager will be at the main gate to Emerson field every day from 3:00 to 5:00 o'clock to receive all the cake-minded lads who are interested in the cross-country event.

Six workouts will be necessary before any entrant is eligible to compete. All workouts will be supervised by Coach Ranson and his assistants.

Anyway, it will cost our creditors a cent more for each bill they send us.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

FIRST CALL FOR FRESHMAN TRACK

Call Issued for All Freshmen Interested in Cross-Country To Report Today.

First call for freshmen interested in cross-country will be issued today by Coach Dale Ranson at 4:15 o'clock in the athletic office at Emerson field.

Coming out for frosh cross-country does not in any way render such a candidate ineligible for the forthcoming annual intramural Cake Race on October 21. On the contrary, any boy who takes six supervised workouts for the regular team will have these workouts counted as the required ones for eligibility in the cake run.

PRACTICE GAME IS AGAIN POSTPONED

Unfavorable Weather Cancels Game Between Regulars and Rookies; Play Today.

Unfavorable weather conditions are retarding the progress of the fall baseball workouts as planned by Coach Hearn. The practice game scheduled for yesterday afternoon could not be played due to the condition of the field, but the batterymen did not escape their daily paces under the direction of the persistent mentor. As soon as the weather permits, today if possible, the squad will engage in the oft-postponed fracas between the regulars and the rookies.

FIRST INSTITUTE PROGRAM NOV. 16

Folk Music Institute Plans Four Laboratory Concerts for Coming Year.

The first of four laboratory concerts planned as part of the program of the year for the folk music institute will be given Wednesday, November 16, in Hill music hall. The laboratory concerts last year, the first of the type ever given in America, were instigated for the purpose of playing the music of living composers, despite their varying ability, and to endeavor to discover talent in the field of composition and give it proper impetus.

Danse Moronique which is the first number of a suite composed by Herbert Hazelwood, a student of music in the University, was first played in one of the concerts and led to nation-wide publicity for Hazelwood. His number will be delivered as part of a concert by the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D. C., November 13. Lamar Stringfield, research associate of the folk music institute, will appear at this time as conductor. The part Stringfield conducts is that entirely composed by living Americans.

In the last concert several North Carolina composers appeared playing their own compositions.

Graham Recommended To New Board As Head For Greater University

Tatum and presented to Governor Gardner in which the University at Chapel Hill was condemned for allowing subversive teaching. This petition, which was signed by two hundred and eighty-three persons, created a furor in the educational world when it was made public three weeks ago.

The committee also failed to make any recommendations for filling the numerous vacancies left in the institution.

Henry M. London, secretary of the committee, when reached last night by THE DAILY TAR HEEL refused to make any statements about the possible actions of the full board. However, he said, it is the purpose and desire of the board that the concluding steps in the consolidation program be completed as soon as possible to allow the Greater University to go into operation by July first of next year.

The election of Dr. Graham, if ratified by the board, will be the climax of a long and noteworthy career as an educator and citizen of the state. Born in North Carolina, attending the Charlotte city schools, in due course he was graduated from the University. Following his graduation he went to Raleigh to teach, later coming to Chapel Hill as an instructor in the University. When the war came he responded and served in the marine corps. At the end of the war he studied abroad and then came back to his University as professor of history.

In June 1930 he was elected to the presidency of the University. Despite much criticism he has in his brief career as University president won the esteem and praise of the state.

'BIRD OF PARADISE' IS PLAY FOR TODAY

Featuring today at the Carolina theatre is "Bird of Paradise," perhaps one of the best known plays ever produced. The story concerns the romance of Luana, a native girl, who becomes devoted to a white man. Her people wish to sacrifice her to Pele, the volcano, for having broken the tabu against mating with a white.

Luana is forced to choose between love for Johnny and the primitive terror or sorcery, and in the end makes a magnificent sacrifice, which climaxes the play.

Co-starring in this cinema are Dolores Del Rio and Joel McCrea, supported by a strong cast, including an entire village of Hawaiian primitives.

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

LARGE GROUP OF STUDENTS ENROLL FOR ENGINEERING

Electrical Department Leads Divisions of School With Sixty-Seven Registrations.

Two hundred and seventy-nine students are enrolled in the University school of engineering this year, with the electrical department leading with sixty-seven registrations, according to figures released by Dean H. G. Baity yesterday.

Following closely the electrical department in number of students are the chemical and mechanical divisions, with sixty-six and sixty-five students respectively. Fifty-four are registered in the civil engineering department.

The enrollment of freshman class this year is 112 as compared with 131 last year, although comparative percentages as to total enrollment at the University for the two years there are more freshmen enrolled this year.

The students in the various divisions are classified as follows:

Electrical, thirty-two freshmen, seventeen juniors, sixteen sophomores, eleven seniors, and one graduate; chemical, thirty freshmen, seventeen sophomores, ten juniors, eight seniors, and one graduate; mechanical, twenty-three freshmen, nineteen sophomores, fifteen juniors, six seniors, and two graduates; civil, ten freshmen, seventeen sophomores, ten juniors, nine seniors, and eight graduates.

Library Exhibition

An exhibition to commemorate the centenary of Sir Walter Scott's death is now being shown in the lobby of the library building. The material exhibited includes portraits, manuscripts, early editions of Scott's books, and scenes from his historical novels.

Robert Floyd Completed Eight Grades Of School In Three Years

University Student From Lumberton Accomplished Feat While in Rolling Chair.

Robert Floyd of Lumberton, who is known the state over for his feat of completing eight grades of school in three years while in a rolling chair, has entered the University law school this year as a special student.

Floyd was attacked with inflammatory rheumatism while in the third grade and has been a cripple since that time; his hands, legs and body badly drawn by the disease. For a period of ten years he was confined to a wheel chair. During that time he read constantly and four years ago, when he re-entered the fourth grade he completed the eighth before the end of the year. He finished his high school course in two years with honors, serving in his last year as president of the school's literary society.

Continues Education

After remaining out of school for a year following his graduation, he decided that he wished to continue his education. This was told to Mayor E. M. Johnson, of Lumberton. The mayor put his case up to the various service clubs of the town and a Robert Floyd educational fund

HENDERSON WILL SPEAK ON SHAW

University Professor Has Most Complete Collection of Material by Playwright in Existence.

Dr. Archibald Henderson, official biographer of George Bernard Shaw, will lecture tonight on his collection of Shaw literature. This lecture, which is open to students, faculty members, and others, will be given at 8:30 o'clock in the library school study hall on the third floor of the library building.

Dr. Henderson's Shaw collection is probably unique. It is far more complete than any in existence, including even that in the British Museum, or Shaw's own. It consists of first editions of practically all of Shaw's books, pamphlets, and tracts, and innumerable letters, playbills, portraits, speeches, etc. Much of the material has been incorporated in Dr. Henderson's new biography of Shaw. The lecture will be illustrated with a lantern.

ARTHUR LEADS CHEERING IN FRESHMAN ASSEMBLY

Yesterday's assembly program was in charge of Billy Arthur and his staff of cheer leaders who devoted the program to teaching the freshmen the various yells and songs. Much enthusiasm was displayed and there was a promise of organized cheering at Saturday's football game with Vanderbilt.

An announcement was made that all students who knew a Vanderbilt man and his home address would please turn it in at the office of the president of the Y. M. C. A. so the office could get in touch with them before Saturday's game.

Geometry Deficiencies

Dr. A. W. Hobbs, dean of the college of liberal arts, announced yesterday that he wants to see as soon as possible all students who have entrance deficiencies in plane geometry so that he will be able to arrange to have them tutored in this subject.

REDUCTION MADE IN TAX SCHEDULE FOR CHAPEL HILL

Budget for 1932 Reduces Taxes Eleven Cents on Dollar in Village.

Taxes for Chapel Hill have been reduced eleven cents on the dollar in the budget for 1932, according to John L. Caldwell, succeeding J. M. Foushee as city manager.

"The present city organization is making every effort to give efficient administration within the reduced budget, and, if possible, this tax reduction will be effected," Caldwell announced.

Caldwell was appointed city manager of Chapel Hill upon the resignation of the former manager, in July. Prior to his appointment, he was for several years connected with the Thompson Construction company of this city.

The first city manager of Chapel Hill, E. M. Knox, was appointed July 1, 1922. When Knox resigned to become city manager of High Point, N. C., Foushee took the office and held it until July 1, of this year.

F. H. Koch To Deliver Illustrated Lecture

The first important event in dramatic activities of the fall quarter will be an illustrated lecture by Professor F. H. Koch, Monday night in the Playmakers theatre at 7:30 o'clock.

His lecture "Our Adventures in Playmaking" will include one hundred stereopticon slides, showing scenes from Paul Green's early plays, from Thomas Wolfe's first play, in which the author took the lead, and from the Forest Theatre productions. There are also slides of the Playmakers, on tour with the "Show-Bus" en route from Georgia to Massachusetts.

After the lecture all Playmakers and those interested in dramatics are invited to remain and talk to Professor Koch.

Erickson Announces Publication Of Book

Dr. E. E. Erickson of the University English department has announced the publication of his new book, The Use of Sva in Old English. The work is published by John Hopkins Press. The subject material is taken from volume twelve of Hesperia; Seriften zur englischen Philologie and is in the form of intense research work dealing with the repeated and varied use of the modal adverb sua as used in Old English with incidental references to the corresponding word in Middle and Modern English, as well as in the related dialects; Old Saxon, Old English, Old Norse, Old German, and Gothic.

Dr. Erickson expects to continue his work and publications dealing with related subjects.

Pep Meeting Tonight

A special pep meeting for tomorrow's Carolina-Vanderbilt game has been called for 8:00 o'clock tonight in Memorial hall. A special program has been arranged, and freshmen in particular are urged to attend.

Students wishing to try out for positions as cheer leaders will be given an opportunity to do so this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock in the same building.

MANY STUDENTS APPLY FOR HELP FROM LOAN FUND

Five Hundred and Fifteen Students Depending for Aid From Loan Funds.

Five hundred and fifteen of the 2,500 students so far registered in Chapel Hill are depending on aid from the student loan funds during the fall.

These students have already applied to the dean of students for loans totalling $41,165. Applications are still coming in at the rate of ten a day.

Cash balance of $40,792 From gifts and collections of the past summer the student loan fund showed a cash balance before registration of $40,792, not quite enough to care for the applications already received.

There is hope, however, that continued collections from former borrowers during the quarter will amount to enough to meet the needs of the fall. The winter and spring quarters will depend on the continued success of President Graham's appeal for $200,000 to be given during the last year and this year.

Jim Baley Elected To Student Council

Archie Cannon, president of the University law school association, called a special meeting of the association Wednesday morning at assembly period for the purpose of welcoming the new men in the law school and of electing a new representative to the student council.

After Cannon had made a brief address in which he welcomed the first year men into the association, the group elected James M. Baley, third year law student from Asheville to be the student councilman for the association. This vacancy was caused by the failure to return to school of C. P. Randolph, of Green Mountain, who was elected councilman at the close of last year.

U. M. Rackley Resigns From Police Force

The resignation of Officer U. M. Rackley of the local police force was tendered and accepted by the town board last August.

Rackley, who gave no reasons for his resignation, was brought under considerable fire last spring following the Ashby Penn shooting. Although Penn has fully recovered, public feeling was never reconciled to the consequences of the case.

Officer T. L. Chandler, went on duty September 1, succeeding Rackley. Chandler, formerly deputy sheriff of Orange county, is serving until the vacancy left by Rackley is permanently filled.

Organ Audition

Walter B. Patterson, of Rochester, New York, who plays the organ every day for freshman assembly, will present an audition tonight at 7:30 o'clock in Memorial hall. He has been playing chapel hymns and marches each morning at the regular chapel period, but the purpose of tonight's audition will be to literally "put the organ through its paces" in order to reveal the real quality and versatility of the instrument. This organ was given to the University by the Publix-Kinney theatres.

CHANGES MADE IN CHEMISTRY STAFF

Eight New Assistants Added and Seven More Retained This Year in Department.

Changes in the personnel and the staff of the chemistry department included the addition of eight new assistants and teaching fellows, the retention of seven assistants, and the substitution of a new requisition clerk in the chemistry supply room.

The new men are as follows: W. H. Baskerville, Alabama Polytechnical Institute; J. K. Coleman, University of Wisconsin; H. O. Farr, Pennsylvania State college, Dan Fore, Mississippi college; R. E. Gee, Newberry college and University of North Carolina; G. C. Kayker, Carson Newman college; C. F. Wilkinson, Georgia Tech; and J. H. Addestone, College of Charleston; absent on leave to complete his work for a doctor's degree here.

The assistants being retained are: J. M. Early, R. H. Belcher, J. O. Turner, J. L. LeConte, T. B. Douglas, C. V. Harell, and S. T. Summerford. The new requisition clerk is Miss T. M. Dardan, a graduate in chemistry of N. C. C. W., to replace Miss Eleanor Lane who was married this summer.

DeWICK CHOSEN HEAD OF GRADUATE GROUP

H. N. De Wick of the psychology department was elected president of the Shirley Graves Graduate club at a business meeting Wednesday evening. G. Sensabaugh was elected vice-president; C. G. Pfeiffer, secretary; E. C. Hunter, treasurer; and E. A. Cameron, representative.

The various committees elected, follow: governing board, H. N. De Wick, H. T. Swendenberg, and L. G. McNairy; finance committee, E. C. Hunter, A. Williams, and J. B. McFerrin; entertainment committee, W. B. Patterson, M. S. Campbell, and H. E. Coleman.

Fred Sparrow Owns "Mad Stone" Reputed To Have Curative Powers

History Department Has New Teachers

J. L. Godfrey, Frank S. Hale and Paul Murray have been appointed to the staff of the history department as teaching fellows.

Godfrey received his A.B. from Roanoke college, in 1931, and his degree of M.A. from the University in 1932.

Murray, another graduate student received his graduate's and master's degrees from Emory university, at Atlanta, Georgia, and spent some time here in the summer of 1930.

Hale received his A.B. from the University of Louisville in 1925, and his master's degree from the University of Virginia in 1926. He has been a fellow in history at New York university (1926-1927) and at the University of Virginia (1925-1926). He also spent a year at Oxford, England, in research in history. He plans to work for his doctorate while at Chapel Hill.

C. G. Taylor Studies Abroad

Cecil G. Taylor of the languages department was traveling and studying in France and Germany during the past summer.

EDWIN ALDERMAN WILL BE HONORED ON FOUNDERS' DAY

Former President of University And Seven Other Prominent Alumni To Be Honored.

The unveiling of eight tablets in Memorial hall to famous sons of the University, and addresses made by various members of the faculty to alumni groups throughout the state will feature the 137th anniversary of Founders' Day, October 12.

The tablets to be unveiled are as follows: Edwin Anderson Alderman, '82; Marvin Hendrix Stacy, '02; Richard Henry Lewis, '70; Kerr Craig, '11 (matriculated first in 1863, but went to war and returned to graduate in 1911); Henry Ravenscraft Bryan, '56; John Washington Graham, '57; George McNeill Rose, '67; Charles Manly, 1814.

Principal Speakers

The principal speakers will be Dr. M. C. S. Noble, '81, dean of the school of education, who will address the audience in Memorial hall on Edwin Anderson Alderman, who was president of the University from 1896 to 1900; and Walter Murphy, '92, whose topic will be George Tayloe Winston, president of the University from 1891 to 1896. Alderman was later president of Tulane and Virginia. He died several years ago. Winston went from Carolina to Texas and State College. He died late this August.

Practically all alumni groups in the state will have banquet meetings on the night of October 12 and they will be addressed by various members of the faculty.

Co-ed Meeting

There will be a meeting of the twenty-seven freshman girls tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the woman's reception room at Graham Memorial. The president of the Woman's Association urges all these students to be present and on time.

Chapel Hill Man Has Small Oblong Rock Claimed to Cure Wounds.

"Mad stones," medicinal rocks reputed to possess marvelous curative powers for wounds, are no new charm for superstitious people—and for many Chapel Hillians just such a stone, in the possession of Fred Sparrow, of Hillsboro street, is an object of intense faith.

Mr. Sparrow believes intensely in the medicinal quality of his charm and assures that it has worked infallibly upon countless snake-bites since it has been his property. Chapel Hill negroes assume queer expressions when asked about the wondrous power, and some tell of its magic. However, Mr. Sparrow insists he is no magician, but that the healing quality is entirely from the stone itself.

Chapel Hills "mad stone," as such rocks have been called since colonial days, is an oblong piece, small enough to fit the palm of the hand, and rounded in perfect symmetry. There are no mysterious markings, as is popularly supposed, but the highly polished black surface is covered with tiny pores. The pores are probably the secret of the stone's success.

On to Greater

Heights

In recommending Dr. Frank Porter Graham as head of the Greater University of North Carolina, the members of the executive committee of the board of trustees have expressed their confidence in him as the most logical man to lead this state's combined educational forces.

The recommendation is more than a mere acknowledgement of the work Dr. Graham has done as head of the present University; it is a direct defiance to the attacks which have been made recently against higher education as Dr. Graham has conceived it here at Chapel Hill. It shows that the thinking people of the state at least are more than satisfied with his educational leadership thus far and are content to entrust to his care the destiny of the largest educational institution in the South.

No other man could be more interested and eager for this state's educational development. And no other man could be more capable of carrying on this development.

The present University stands high in the educational circles of America. But with the combined strength of the two other large state institutions of higher learning, the Greater University of North Carolina will go forward to even greater heights under Dr. Graham's guidance.

In This

Enlightened Land

The recently completed Georgia senatorial race in which Governor Russell participated and won presents a significant picture of the condition of American statesmanship.

Congressman Crisp and Governor Russell declared with benign sanctimony at the outset that their campaigns would avoid cheap mud-slinging—and contain only principles and ideals. But a few weeks put the whole situation in a different light for both of the candidates. They declared, each of the other, that the pact of political objectivity had been violated and forthwith both men launched into caustic personal attacks upon their opponent. So bitter became these attacks that the real issues of the campaign served more as vehicles for insinuations and insults than as subjects of political and philosophical importance in themselves.

The platforms of both candidates became negative and deprecatory. The lack of outright political policy was conspicuous. And one came to suspect that in the personal attacks upon each other the candidates found welcome relief from the need of constructive thinking.

While the results of the vote were being tabulated many voters began to consider seriously why they had voted for their favorite. Crisp supporters might have admitted that it was because he was a "fine Christian gentleman" (his use of prayer in the campaign was suspiciously sanctimonious); and, Russell supporters because he was a "young energetic, friendly fellow." These were the grounds for the fevered support the candidates for the Senate were commanded. Russell, the new Senator, laid a platform notoriously reactionary, containing planks so vague and stupid that it is a wonder he secured a single vote from the ranks of educated Georgians. He certainly was not elected because of this great platform. The whole campaign was patently free from display of rugged, courageous statesmanship.

Voters today find it difficult ever to vote "for" anyone or any platform. The ballot is thrown to one candidate in defiance of the other, the decision being based on a vague, "instinctive" feeling of distrust or loyalty.

During the forthcoming weeks unfolds the great drama of enlightened and intelligent democracy enacted on a grand scale. It bears close watching.—R.W.B.

A Method in Their Madness

Hooray! The circus is back! As regularly as the falling of the leaves comes the campus's autumn extravaganza of nonsense. Realizing that the Carolina student's life is at best a dreary grind of reading and study and lab work, certain campus leaders have hit upon a scheme to bring a little happiness and sunshine into the lives of the hardworking scholars. Every fall they take certain socially prominent young men on the campus—men of apparently otherwise sound mind—and dress them in certain strange garbs. Some wear turbans and sashes of purple and gold; others display neckties and hatbands of charming red, and yet others don embroidered undershirts and plumed hats and carry chains about with them.

These young men are sent forth upon the campus and made to perform certain strange antics. For days the solemn quiet that should invest the cloisters of the University is rent by the horrible cries of these poor unfortunates. Some, with commendable religious zeal but with a remarkable disregard of the geographical location of Mecca and the prescribed hours of worship, praise Allah many times daily with devout salaams and ear-splitting shouts of praise. Others see that the sweet song of the cuckoo, so admired through the centuries by the more poetic souls of England, is not forgotten in our own fair land. Still others, with a strangely perverted sense of self-abasement, announce to an undoubting world that they are the long-sought "missing link."

At one time there was no explanation available for the purpose behind these organizations other than the fact that the initiated would have the privilege of selecting the victims for the next year's orgy and paying a large sum as initiation fee when entering. Now, however, a sane solution to the mystery, surrounding these orders has been reached.

It is now believed that the whole purpose of the big show is to bring comic relief into the lives of the students and in particular to lighten the freshman's burden during his first few weeks of grinding study by amusing him as he walks about the campus between classes. And it probably does succeed in amusing the freshmen, for after all, they are freshmen. But a somewhat weary upper classman, witnessing for the fourth or fifth time the epidemic of sophomore society initiations, can only vaguely wonder if this is quite the proper sort of activity for young men presumably in serious pursuit of an education and if the freshmen couldn't just as well go to see Mickey House.—D.M.L.

Renaissance;

Dr. Urban T. Holmes of the comparative literature course says that there are three stages in the world's history, and that these are repeated over and over. The first period is the Renaissance, or rebirth. The second period is the Classicist. The third is the Decadence. In the renaissance, people gain in interest in certain subjects. These subjects are retained by rules throughout the classical era and finally die out in the period of decadence. This last period lasts many generations, usually from fifty to over a thousand years.

At present, we are at the end of a renaissance—the mechanical renaissance. Airplanes are being made safe. Automobiles and railroads have become a necessity rather than a luxury. New types of literature and art have been developed. Compare George Bellow's works with those of one of the artists of the great Italian Renaissance. Compare the poems of Robert Frost to those of some ancient poet. You will see that there are great differences between the ancient and modern in both cases.

Now consider our University. It is upon the verge of a renaissance. Look back on the few years past. When certain new courses were offered, people attended the University for those courses alone. That continued for a while, but now the popularity has waned, and the comparative literature, which used to have one of the largest followings in the University, now has barely enough pupils to keep it going. But it will not be long before we have another renaissance. The Institute of Folk Music began it, and there will be more to follow. It takes new things to attract people, and as the difference in ancient and modern literature shows, the University also needs a change.—H.C.P.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Oscar, the very, very Odd McIntyre comments from aboard ship: "Kenneth C. Collins, likely the most highly advertising man in the world, is a passenger. We have been mutual friends but never met until a tea roundup . . . he is youngish, alert, and shining with sophistication . . . one of those astonishing successes America so frequently spawns . . ."

Ten short years ago Collins found himself enrolled in Harvard's graduate school with a wife at home, a career teaching English and philosophy in an Idaho university, and a Ph.D. in the offing, and just barely enough money in his pocket to meet his college fees. So he borrowed twenty-five dollars from a fellow student (now a member of the English department at the University of North Carolina) to round himself and his wife over the Christmas holidays.

Then Fortune beckoned. Collins walked into a moderately imposing Boston department store a few weeks after the memorable Christmas and sought out the manager, dropping his pedagogical mien for one of the impatient business man. "You need a good advertising manager," he told the executive. "I can save you half your advertising bill."

It was a wild chance, but the manager, finding his manner and sincerity to his liking, instructed him to come back within a week. He did; within a few months he was earning a salary of more than three thousand dollars a year and had dropped half of his work at Harvard to give him ample time at his new post.

His friends quizzed him: "Kenneth, how in the world had you planned to save that man half of his advertising bill?" "Why, it was simple," he responded. "I only bought half the space."

Collins' ascent was rapid. Soon he was in New York at twice the salary as second in command of Macys' advertising force. Then he went out to Cleveland and became identified with a great electric company as advertising manager. Macys brought him back in a few short months and placed him as vice-president at the head of its advertising division.

Today his salary is estimated in the hundreds of thousands.

Yet he had no more education for his life work than philosophy and English.

Were Horace Greeley alive he might say, "Get into advertising" and in cinematic lingo "and 'go south' young man."

With Contemporaries

Quick,

Henry—

Have you ever asked the question, "What kind of a summer did you have, Gus?" and then settled yourself to a half hour of relaxation while listening to a boring series of anecdotes on what happened the night in Walla Walla or how screamingly funny it was when John fell off the hundred foot cliff and nearly broke the bull's neck when he landed?

There ought to be a law. Yes, there might even be two laws, on the subject. We should exterminate this recounter of vacation tales with the same avidity that we work on house flies and yearbook salesmen. Instead of the old line about "Quick, Henry, . . ." we should have another motto concerning the immediate and speedy choking of the pest who persists in telling about his summer when everyone knows that he stayed right at home in Bondville and didn't see anything more thrilling than the daily traction tearing through at thirteen miles per hour.

Sitting around a fraternity house we hear wild tales of how the wolf was killed just as he was about to murder in cold blood the pet dog of the family, and then we sink in clouds of utter boredom when they found out that it was merely a police dog that came to pay a visit to the newcomer in his prowling territory. Nothing is more dismal than the damp and scummy feeling that permeates the atmosphere when the annual ghost story contest is on following the summer excursions into the north woods or to worse places. Everyone had a night of horrors when they thought surely that a bear had them by the back of the neck to find that it was merely an innocent squirrel putting away the grubstake for the win-

Frank P. Graham Holds Open House For Students Each Sunday Evening

Daily Tar Heel Story on Freshman Boners Gives Wrong Impression of Hospitality at President Graham's Home; Many Students Have Been Entertained Overnight.

In comparing President Graham's home to a hotel the DAILY TAR HEEL's story about freshman boners was right enough, but in telling of a mistaken freshman who "was invited to leave summarily, to say the least" it was, as anyone who has visited Chapel Hill's "White House" knows, sadly off track. The warm hospitality of the Graham household is well known. Many a freshman, unable to find or to use his school quarters, has been entertained overnight in the home of the president.

None Asked to Leave

Many have wandered in thinking it a hotel, a boarding house, a fraternity house, or a private home with a room to rent, but none, it is safe to say, has ever been asked to leave. Parents, alumni, friends, and distinguished guests of the University are entertained so frequently that it might be mistaken for the "likely looking hostelry" of the TAR HEEL story.

Sunday evenings especially, the presidential home is crowded, because President Graham has reserved that one evening for an informal reception for those who wish to see him. Any freshman or upperclassman is given a welcome which will make him return again and again. Any Sunday evening will find a group gathered there on the cool porch or inside by a warm fire as the season may be.

And now that the presidential mansion is graced with a charming hostess in the person of Mrs. Frank Graham, the Sunday evening groups will probably be larger and more enjoyable than ever.

'CHANCHU THE MAGICIAN' SHOWS AT THE CAROLINA

"Chandu the Magician," from the radio drama by Harry A. Earnshaw, features the program today at the Carolina theatre. Supporting Edmund Lowe, who has the leading role, are Bela Lugosi, Irene Ware, and Henry B. Waltham.

The doors of the theatre will open tonight at 11:30 o'clock for a special midnight show, starring Lee Tracy in "The Night Mayor," a film exemplifying the life of ex-Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York. Evalyn Knapp plays opposite Tracy as the mayor's latest distraction.

Eugene Pallette plays the part of Hymie Shane, the mayor's political mentor, and the role of Riley, the gunman bodyguard is taken by Warren Hymer. Fred Fields, the newspaperman, is portrayed by Donald Dillaway. Others included in the cast are: Emmett Corrigan, Barbara Weeks, Astrid Allwyn, Gloria Shea, Vince Barnett, Tom O'Brien, Wade Boteler, Harold Minjir, and Wallis Clark.

Recently published figures show that flying is decidedly cheaper than it was last year. Evidently the cost of going up is coming down.—The Humorist (London).

ter to avoid the breadline and Hoover prosperity.

Perhaps we haven't made ourselves clear, but we can find nothing more boring on this campus than the stories put out by these one-satchel travelers who take a three dollar excursion to the state line for the first time, and then just can't help talking about the event for the next three years any more than Mrs. McGuffy can help bringing up her operation at the bridge club every Monday afternoon at four. Down with the tribe, we hate 'em.—Daily Illini.

Robert Floyd Finished Eight School Grades In Only Three Years

(Continued from first page) was created. As a climax to the drive, this organization staged a play, Ye Ole District Skule, for his benefit. The town of Lumberton showed its interest by filling the high school auditorium, making available a sum of more than $180. This amount is now being used for his further studies here at Chapel Hill.

Floyd's affliction obliges him to be wheeled about the campus to take advantage of the opportunities made possible by his remarkable manifestation of courage and spirit.

Carolina Tapers Off For Vanderbilt Contest With Scrappy Blocking Session

Linemen Spend Lengthy Drill on Timing and Co-ordination in Blocking for Commodores.

RESERVES BATTLE FROSH
First Year Men Show Promise in Their First Heavy Work Of the Season.

The Tar Heels worked hard yesterday in a brisk session as a final drive to polish up their attack and iron out any flaws that will prevent them from giving Vanderbilt a fierce battle Saturday.

Coach Collins had his men run through signals, work on the defense for the Commodore attack, and also spent some time perfecting the passing department. Linemen were divided into groups with the ends, tackles, and guards working on blocking. The men worked in a lengthy drill on timing in blocking. Coaches Fetzer and Collins seemed agreeably impressed with the improvement in this respect made by the first string line since the Wake Forest game. The whole forward wall worked with a drive and enthusiasm that bodes trouble for the Vandy forwards.

Backs Show Pep

The backs also cavorted around the field in their workout with speed and pep that means every one on the squad is anxious to vindicate their showing against the Deacons. The backfield that will probably start the game Saturday of Chandler, quarter; Phipps and Croom, halves; and Lassiter, full, was especially impressive in the passing drill.

Late in the session Coach Sapp brought a team up from his freshmen to scrimmage the varsity reserves. The reserves found the going pretty tough and a spirited scrimmage was held for about an hour. Coaches Sapp and Howard have a promising looking bunch of freshmen out for the Tar Baby eleven and should mould a powerful machine into shape by the first game which is with Campbell college here, October 15.

The reserves showed: Manley and Beale, ends; Barrett and Adkins, tackles; Folger and Caldwell, guards; and Gardner, center. The backfield with this team included Jones, quarterback; Burnett and Little, halves; and Shaffer, fullback. The freshman team was made up of: Yeager and Barwick, ends; Hobbard and Evins, tackles; Phillips and Joyce, guards; and Kanar, center. In the backfield were Whitaker, quarterback; Montgomery and Snyder, halves; and McCachren, fullback.

P. L. Burch Reports Additions At Kenan

To match the Kenan stadium field house, the three ticket booths and the information booth, which have recently been erected at the gates of the stadium, are now being finished in stucco with red imitation tile roofs, according to P. L. Burch, superintendent of the buildings department.

The booths have been equipped with iron grills over the windows and the ticket booths with cash drawers. Iron guard rails lead from the ticket windows to gates in order to prevent congestion and rushing. The both at the north gate, No. 2, will accommodate four ticket sellers, and the ones at gates 4 and 5 will hold three.

The booths are now being covered, and Burch said that he hoped to have them completed in time for the Vanderbilt game tomorrow.

Bowling Alleys Will Be Installed In Union

The bowling alleys that are being built for the use of the students by the buildings department of the University will be installed and ready for play by the middle of October. These will be under the front porch of the building. A door is being cut through the inside wall at the south end of Graham Memorial and the walls of the room are at present being given a first coat of white paint. Work will continue without interruption until the installation is completed.

TWO TEAMS PLAY TEN INNING TIE IN PRACTICE TILT

Neither Team Able to Score in First Game; Hutchison and McKerthan Pitch Well.

The initial practice game of the fall baseball drills took place yesterday afternoon, ending with no score for either team after ten innings of closely contested play. The game was featured by the pitching of freshman hurlers and the speed and accuracy of the infield candidates.

Coach Hearn divided the squad into two teams and started Hutchison and McKerthan, both freshmen, in the box for the first team and second team, respectively. Strayhorn started behind the bat for Team 1, with Terzini doing the catching for the opponents. Terzini was credited with the first hit of the afternoon early in the first inning. With the bases loaded, later in the same inning, Hutchison redeemed himself by striking out Brown and following immediately with an assist to first which retired the side. Thereafter, the work of both pitchers proved effective with several strike-outs going on the ledger for the promising frosh mounds-men. McKerthan possesses the unusual combination of pitching ability and handiness with the stick, seasoning these accomplishments with some clever base running. What little hitting was done was featured by Weathers, Barham, Temple and Spiers.

Coach Hearn changed the original line-ups frequently, giving Spiers and Crouch their chance on the mound and replacing Terzini with the veteran Parker in the catching role. The coach was disappointed with the lack of hitting but attributed it to the fact that very little batting practice has been engaged in thus far. He is looking over all the new material carefully and the men who did not see action in yesterday's game will be given their chance.

GRADUATE CLUB TO MEET THIS EVENING

George G. Killenger, president of the Edwin Greenlaw Graduate club, yesterday extended an invitation to all graduate students and members of the graduate faculty to attend the first meeting of that organization in the lounge of Smith dormitory tonight at 8:00 o'clock. The election of officers for this year will be conducted, and a social meeting will follow.

The features of the program will be speeches of welcome by President Graham, and Dean Pierson of the graduate school.

Tamblyn Will Speak

Ronald Tamblyn, new minister of the Presbyterian church, will speak at assembly this morning.

Tar Heels Strong At Tackle

Harry Hodges and Frank Smith Are Among Leading Tackles in the South.

With Frank Smith and Harry Hodges occupying the tackle berths on the Tar Heel forward wall this year, opposing backs will have a job on their hands making much yardage over Carolina tackles. Both these men are experienced and, along with June Underwood at center, form the nucleus for the Heel line.

Smith received his early training at Lexington, N. C., where he made all-state tackle his last two years in high school. The last year, 1928, he captained the eleven. He played on the freshman team here in 1929, but became ineligible for the varsity as a sophomore due to academic difficulties. Last year he began his first term on the varsity only to be hurt in the Florida game and lost for the season. Now he is playing his second season handicapped somewhat by a heavy knee brace, a result of last year's injury. Twenty-two years old and weighing one hundred and ninety pounds, Frank is headed for his best season and barring further ill luck will be a tower of strength to Coach Collins' line.

Hodges is also a product of a North Carolina high school, learning his football at Fayetteville where he was an outstanding star. His last year in high school Hodges played every position in the line. He weighed a hundred and fifty-three pounds his freshman year at Carolina but won a position as center on the 1929 Tar Baby team. Hodges put on thirty pounds before the opening of school in his sophomore year and was shifted to tackle where he alternated with George Thompson. This is his third and final year on the team and he weighs an even two hundred pounds. Standing over six feet in height Harry has been a pillar of strength in the line two seasons and is anxious to make this year his best.

MORE THAN FIVE HUNDRED IN GYM

Football Is Only Activity for Which Freshmen Are Excused From Classes.

Five hundred and ten freshmen are taking gym this quarter, while 137 were excused for freshmen football.

Dr. R. B. Lawson, director of physical education at the University, does not excuse any freshmen in the fall quarter for any activity other than football. During the winter quarter those who go out for wrestling, basketball, or boxing may be excused by these sports without conflicting with the gym work. The following spring quarter baseball and track are the only activities in which excuses from the gym classes are allowed.

Men excused from gym for an activity one quarter will be required to report for gym the other quarters if they do not take up another activity in which excuses are allowed.

The sophomores that did not complete their gym work last year will have to complete gym work before they can register this winter quarter.

The assistants of Dr. Lawson in gym work this year are: J. P. Jenrette, J. L. Hodges, and secretary G. W. Chandler.

G. K. Frazier Spends Year Studying League of Nations

Professor G. K. Frazier of the history department spent last year at Switzerland, studying the work of the League of Nations and attending the Disarmament Conference as an observer. He held a Carnegie Fellowship for that period and was on leave of absence from the University.

Students in Hospital

R. G. McPherson, a University student, was taken over to the Watts hospital late Wednesday night for a diagnosis. No word had been received yesterday afternoon concerning Thomas S. Bennett of Wadesboro or Alexander M. Gibbs of Columbia, South Carolina, both also taken to the Watts hospital in Durham Wednesday morning for appendicitis. Yesterday afternoon there were no patients at the Infirmary.

TENNESSEE VOLS LOSE BIG STARS BUT HAVE POWER

Feathers and Vaughn Groomed To Replace McEver; Line Vacancies Also Filled.

By Phil Alston

Any coach that loses such stars as Gene McEver and Herman Hickman and five other regulars has a right to complain and that's what Major Bob Neyland of the University of Tennessee is doing in a mild degree, but there are few who are willing to take the likeable Major's complaint seriously. On the other hand, fans and sports writers all over the south are ranking the Vols with the leaders of the Southern Conference again this year.

One good reason for not taking Major Neyland's pessimistic utterances too much to heart is that in 1930 he lost two of the best backs in the south, Bobby Dodd and Hackman, and two ends, Hug and Brand, and came right back with another strong team in spite of it. It seems likely that he will do the same thing again this year.

There's a sophomore in the Tennessee camp by the name of Pug Vaughan and, if advance dope is even half true, he'll give lots of teams a warm afternoon this fall. Vaughan is a half-back, and those who have seen him perform say that he's as good a passer as Dodd, and Dodd has been called one of the greatest passers ever and certainly the best the south has ever produced. Passing is not the only thing Vaughan can do and do well. He is an excellent ball carrier and can block with the best of them.

PRINCETON TURNS OUT SMALL TEAM

Light Weight Collegians Can Engage in Football With Men of Their Size.

Princeton is beginning its second year with a lightweight football team. The one hundred and fifty pound team was inaugurated last year and was quite a success. This year members of the team will be awarded a minor insignia.

Candidates for this rising sport at the eastern colleges are already reporting, and an active season is anticipated, with teams from Yale, Lafayette, the University of Pennsylvania, and Harvard in the field.

Lightweight football provides an opening for college men whose size prohibits their participation in varsity competition, but whose leanings are toward intercollegiate competition. Additional institutions are adding this activity to their program

WARNEKE SHADED BY LEFTY GOMEZ IN SECOND GAME

Gehrig, Dickey, and Chapman Bat in New York Runs in 5-2 Defeat of Chicago.

That long awaited clash between Lefty Gomez of the Yankees and Lonnie Warneke of the Cubs took place yesterday at the Yankee stadium in the second contest of the world's series with the New York hurler emerging the victor, 5-2. About 50,000 fans saw the contest in which the McCarthymen lengthened their lead over the Cubs to two games.

Gomez, tall, slim southpaw, showed his superiority over the equally tall and slim young right-hander of the Cubs, fanning eight, yielding nine scattered hits, and walking but one batsman. Warneke fanned seven Yankees, numbering Ben Chapman three times among his strike out victims. The Yankees hammered the Cub hurler for ten hits and four players were walked.

The Cubs started off as in the first game, denting the rubber once in the initial frame. Herman, the first batter, doubled down the left field line, and advanced to third when Cuyler's grounder to Crosetti was fumbled. Stephenson's fly to Combs in centerfield scored Herman.

The New York club came back in the second half of the inning, scoring twice on two hits and two walks. Combs and Sewell walked and Gehrig drove in the tying run of the game with a single to right center. Dickey's single to right scored Sewell, putting the Yankees into the lead from which point they were never headed, although the Cubs tied the score in the third inning on successive hits by Stephenson and Demaree. However, in their latter half of the inning the Yankees put the game on ice when Ruth walked, Gehrig singled, and Dickey was purposely passed. With two out, Chapman

University Library Gets Bibliographical Works

The University library is rapidly acquiring immensely important bibliographical works with the $30,000 grant made by the general education board last spring.

Among the materials so far secured are catalogues of other libraries and numerous trade, national, and subject bibliographies. Monumental sets, running in some cases to hundreds of volumes, are prospective purchases. By means of this grant the library expects to build up the fundamental tools for a graduate school surpassed in the field of bibliography by few universities in the country.

ALBERT SPALDING TO GIVE CONCERT HERE OCTOBER 18

Famous Violinist Will Make Appearance in Chapel Hill to Open Fall Entertainment Series.

Albert Spalding, famous violinist whose appearance here in a concert in Memorial hall October 18 will open the fall season of the Student Entertainment Committee series, enjoys a national recognition of which few, if any, other artists of his kind can boast. In his more than twenty years of touring, during which he has played in every part of the country both in large cities and smaller places, he has built up a clientele that has made possible nearly one hundred performances a year.

Plays Consistently

No other violinist known has consistently played so often over such a period of years as Spalding has. He has appeared more than eighty times in New York alone. His fees for concerts amount to almost a hundred thousand dollars a year. "There have been something like ninety or a hundred appearances a year," the violinist has stated. "Not every year, however, because some years I have spent a half or a third of my time in study and in working up new material."

During a recent year, beginning in October and continuing through to January, Spalding made fifty appearances in New York in four months. Then, more recently, he has given as many as sixty concerts there in five months from October to February. In addition to this, he appeared more than thirty times in Europe, bringing the total number of performances to about one hundred.

Spalding shuts off concert work during the summer and takes a long rest, always going two whole months without touching a violin. In this manner he claims he gets back his spontaneity and enthusiasm.

singled to right and Ruth and Gehrig scored.

Another run was added by the Yankees in the fifth when Dickey singled to score Gehrig who had singled and advanced to second on an infield out.

There will be no game today as both teams are traveling to Chicago where the series will be resumed Saturday at Wrigley field.

Briefs

The Cubs tied an old world's series fielding record by making four double plays yesterday. The most unusual one took place in the fourth inning when Combs and Sewell were trapped on the base lines after Ruth's ground-er to Warneke.

Al Demaree, who plays centerfield for the Cubs against southpaw pitchers, pulled the fielding gem of the series when he hauled down Crosetti's drive in left center. Crosetti's fly was labeled for extra bases, but Demaree, starting at the crack of the bat, caught the ball over his shoulder while running at full speed.

Ruth, by getting one for three, maintained his life time world's series average of .300 or better.

Yesterday's victory was the Yanks' tenth straight series win—a new record. They broke their own mark of nine straight set Wednesday.

Billy Herman opened the game with a two-base hit. Wednesday Herman found Ruffing for a single to start the game.

Joey Sewell, Ben Chapman, Bill Herman, and Bill Jurgens were the fielding stars of the game.

In seventy-nine games played at the stadium this year, the Yankees have lost but fifteen.

the boy who played such a whale of a game against Carolina last fall after the Tar Heels had succeeded in stopping the great McEver practically in his tracks every time he carried the ball. Feathers has been running better than ever this year and is considered the key of the Vol offensive.

In the backfield with Vaughan and Feathers will be Wynn and Brackett, both of them regulars last year, and both mighty fine secondary men. With Vaughan and Brackett doing the kicking and passing, Feathers, Vaughan and Brackett doing the speedy running, and Wynn doing the plunging, the Vols appear to have one of the most powerful and versatile backfield combinations in the conference.

Frank and Stewart hold down the guard positions, and Maples, a veteran with a fine record, is a fixture at center, Captain Malcolm Aitken will be at one of the tackles, but the other is problematical at present. At the terminal posts are Rayburn, a regular from the 1931 team, and Warmath, a sophomore.

In their opening game of the 1932 season last Saturday the Vols won over University of Chattanooga, 13-0, with Feathers and Robinson, a reserve, scoring the touchdowns. Tennessee had but two real opportunities to score and made the most of them.

SOCIALISTS HEAR ARNOLD WILLIAMS SPEAK ON RELIEF

Local Socialists Hold Meeting to Discuss Work of Party for Coming Elections.

Arnold Williams of the English department, discussed the effect of the economic situation on socialism at the Socialist meeting Thursday. Harold Glasgow, formerly of West Virginia; Alton Lawrence, state secretary of the Socialist party and a student at the University; and N. Jeffrey congratulated the assembly on their fine work in aiding the party in its victory Wednesday.

Williams, the mainstay of the local Socialist party, sketched vividly the unemployment situation, and the part that socialism and the Socialist party played in alleviating much of the distress and misery caused by unemployment. He described, briefly, the history of the Socialist party's constructive work, and voiced confident beliefs of the party's imminent success.

Battle for Ballot Rights

Lawrence reviewed the hard-fought battle for equal ballot rights, and mentioned that the success of the party, in having its candidates' names printed on the ballot, was only the first step in the crystallization of the victory which would come November 8.

Glasgow and Jeffrey both agreed that North Carolina was ripe for a Socialistic organization, and Mr. Jeffrey further

RONALD TAMBLYN SPEAKS ON LIFE UNDER CONTROL

Presbyterian Minister Says That Duty of Education Is to Control Power.

Ronald Tamblin, formerly of Greensboro and present minister of the local Presbyterian church, was the main speaker of yesterday's assembly program. Dean Bradshaw presided over the program with R. B. House leading the singing and Rev. A. S. Lawrence, of the Episcopal church, conducting the devotional.

Tamblin chose as his subject "Life Under Control." "The major task of education is to teach people to control their inner selves," he stated. "One of the dangers of life is in letting our power get out of control. Man can learn to control the power of machinery; and if he lets it get out of control, an enormous amount of damage can be done."

"Man should put back in society more than he gets out." He cited Bernard Shaw as an example of this. "A man of great character is one who can control his inner self. If a man is able to control not only his outward self but also his inner self, he has succeeded in life."

Rushing Ends October 8

Fraternity rushing ends Saturday, October 8, at midnight, according to an announcement by Irvin Boyle, president of the interfraternity council. Boyle called this to the attention of all fraternities due to a misunderstanding of the limits of the season which occurred after the Thursday night meeting.

Dormitory Students Will Select Officers

The series of smokers which have taken place in Graham Memorial during the past week will be resumed Monday night when the residents of Aycock will elect officers for the coming year. Tuesday the men from Lewis will gather at a similar meeting followed by those from Everett on Wednesday, the series being concluded with a meeting of the occupants of Sterling on Thursday. Besides the formal elections of officers the meetings in the past have consisted of various speeches by prominent campus men, and also of ping-pong and shuffle-board tournaments.

WOMAN'S RUSHING SEASON WILL OPEN WITHIN TEN DAYS

Sororities to Maintain Silence Until October 10 When Season Will Start.

The first phase of co-ed rushing, the two weeks period of silence between sorority and non-sorority girls, will come to a close Monday, October 10. At that time the rushing season for women will be officially opened.

Active rushing will consume only six days, which will be followed by another short period of silence that will continue from midnight the following Saturday to Monday, October 17. On that date, rushees will receive their bids from Mrs. Stacy's office in South building. A system of preferential bidding is used.

During the week between periods of silence, the rushing activities will include teas, bridge, and theatre parties.

TWENTY-TWO STUDENTS TAKE LIBRARY SCIENCE

Twenty-two students are enrolled in the school of library science this fall. The geographical distribution of the sixteen full-time students, and the six part-time students, is as follows: North Carolina, 16; Tennessee, 2; Alabama, 1; Maryland, 1; Oklahoma, 1; Indiana, 1.

Of these twenty-two students, three are men.

Sixteen members of the class of 1932 are now actively engaged in library work. Two are in public libraries work, three in schools, five in colleges, four in universities, and one is secretary-reviser of the school.

The school of library science of the University of North Carolina was provisionally accredited as a graduate library school by the Board of Education for Librarianship of the American Association of Librarians at its meeting April 27, 1932.

HARPER BARNES HEADS ROOM SERVICE GROUP

The twenty-four dormitory service room agents met with P. L. Harper Barnes was elected president, David McCachren, vice president, and J. H. Shuford, secretary.

The Service Room Association plans to meet on the first Monday night of each month at 7:00 o'clock in the Graham Memorial to discuss mutual problems.

Freshmen And Fraternity Men Have Many Amusing Rushing Experiences

Bonehead Errors Are Not Only Made by Bewildered Rushees But Also by Many Dignified Greek-Letter Men Who Are Trying to Impress the Greener Frosh.

Fatigued freshmen have spent the past week continuing the march to Carolina's twenty-eight fraternity houses to hear the high pressure sales talk of hoarse-voiced Greek letter men. At the same time, they have sought to make themselves acceptable by pulling as few "boners" as possible. Despite such earnest efforts for reserve on the part of both frosh and upperclassmen, faux pas and other unintentional humorous incidents have figured in the rushing.

A Generous Bidder

One lodge reports that a young high school graduate entered their house, suitcase under his arm, and announced that he had chosen that house for permanent school residence. "But you'll have to have a bid first," the members tactfully informed him. "O.K.," he said, "I can bid as high as the next man."

The week's best method of declining an invitation to visit again was produced by one bright rushee who obscurely plead that he had to stay home to shoo the roosters off his mother-in-law's grave.

Dame Rumour reports this one on the fraternities. A very talkative member of a local chapter of a large national spent several minutes trying to pledge one of last year's pledges.

Then there is the lad who, on reading of the sophomore orders' tapping, was all set to haul Pi Kappa Alpha up before the council for violating rushing rules.

"Beta Theta Nu"

His running-mate was the one who wanted to know where the "Beta Theta Nu" house was and whether Kappa Beta Phi had any relation to Phi Beta Kappa.

Another lad in the same locale proudly reported one night that he had met "a swell girl who was a Chi Phi."

And the embarrassing and inevitable instance during endless name swapping. "So your name is Schultz," inquires the conversationally inclined frater. "Boy, oh boy, I knew one fast little dame in Butte, Montana by that name." "Uh, huh," replied the freshman, "that was my sister Mamie."

Unconsciously, the neophytes furnish as much amusement as the weary fraternity men strive to show them. In spite of the tired and bored conversations and the heated "hot-boxing," rushee and rushee have found sweet relief at each other's expense.

Connor Sees Political Conditions In England And France During Trip

Two Nations Look Toward America for End of Depression and Return of Prosperity, Says Head of History Department on Return From Stay in Europe.

Dr. R. D. W. Connor, head of the University history department, returned this summer from Europe, where he spent almost a year in travel and research on the Kenan Foundation. In observing social and political conditions in the Old World, he discovered a strong interest in current events in America. Prohibition and the tariff were particularly discussed by European nations.

He remained in the British Isles from September of last year to this past March, during which time he took an automobile trip through Scotland and visited many of the usual points of interest such as Canterbury and Stratford-on-Avon. The greater part of this period, however, Professor Connor, spent in the British Museum in search of historical data concerning literature of the American Revolution.

Political Conditions

Happening to be in England during the general elections at the time that the Labor government was superseded by the new National faction, Professor Connor had ample time to observe the British political situation. He heard a speech by Ramsey MacDonald which chiefly involved economic problems. A much-discussed question at that time was the proposal to levy a higher tariff, from which might accrue revenue helpful to the financial condition of the country. A favorite argument used by its proponents, said Connor, was that it would improve England's balance of trade by raising a tariff barrier against the United States.

Although Connor admitted that the English system of holding elections and managing campaigns was very efficient, he declared that he did not feel it would be any more desirable than that of America. There was no lack of the usual campaign "hokey," he implied.

"Labor parties spared no violence in breaking up political meetings not in sympathy with their ideas," said Connor. He was highly impressed with "the rapid increase of crime in England"; the criminal element, which had limited itself to the Limehouse district, seemed to be stepping out more into the open by using automobiles in plying their trade, although "taking 'em for a ride" had not yet appeared as Americans know it.

Scotch Hit by Prohibition

"The Scotch attribute their unemployment to American Prohibition," stated Connor. And it was in Scotland, he said, that he noticed the only inebriates seen on his tour. There has been a definite decline of the popularity of alcoholic liquors and especially beer due to the high taxes levied on them by the government. One brewery alone lost 750,000 pounds by the upward turn in tax rates.

The French also are evidently looking to Uncle Sam to end the depression and bring back prosperity, believes Professor Connor. The coming election is anticipated with interest, but more that that, hundreds of thousands of quarts of champagne are waiting and ready for export to the United States—if John Barleycorn ever revives.

Y. M. C. A. Cabinets Plan Work For Year

A meeting of all the officers in the freshman, sophomore, and senior cabinets of the local Y. M. C. A. convened yesterday morning during chapel period.

It was planned to make this meeting a regular Friday morning affair during the student assembly period. At that time the programs and policies of the different cabinets were discussed, and plans were laid for the Monday night programs in particular.

The presidents of the various groups are Jessie Parker, Freshman Friendship Council; Claude Freeman, sophomore cabinet; and Bill McKee, senior cabinet.

WARDLAW PLAYS FOR GRAIL DANCE IN GYM TONIGHT

Limited Number of Tickets Will Be Sold in Order to Keep Floor From Being Overcrowded.

Tonight at 9:00 o'clock the first Grail dance of the year will be given in Bynum gymnasium. The usual admission price of one dollar will be charged. Tickets are on sale at Pritchard-Lloyd's and the Book Exchange, and only a limited number will be sold to prevent too crowded a dance floor.

These dances are sponsored throughout the school year by the Order of the Grail, averaging three each quarter, or nine a year. The dance will be supervised by the newly formed dance committee which has charge of all the dances on the Hill.

Jack Wardlaw, former popular band leader here, with his new band will furnish the music. Freshmen are not permitted to attend the Grail dances during their first year at the University.

Because of the Vanderbilt game today, it is expected that a number of out-of-town girls will attend the dance.

GRAHAM MEMORIAL HAS BUSY NIGHT THURSDAY

Thursday night was the busiest night that Graham Memorial has experienced. Every room was in use by one organization or another.

Those organizations conducting meetings were: The Order of the Grail; Alpha Phi Theta, scouting fraternity; the Socialist club, and the Dormitory Council.

Phillip Russell's class had its regular Thursday night meeting in one of the upstairs rooms; the law school's luncheon was also given. Many dormitory conveniences for one of the series of smokers being given for the various dormitories, elected officers and ran off tournaments in ping-pong and shuffle-board.

MEMBERS OF FACULTY MAKE TOUR IN EUROPE

Miss Sallie Marks, head of the elementary department of the school of education, Miss Elizabeth Hailey, and Miss Rosalie Thrall, of the library staff, and Miss Nora Beust, teacher in the library school, completed a tour of France, England, Scotland, and New York City in twenty-five days this summer, leaving here August 26 and returning in time for registration September 20.

Miss Marks has been collecting elementary text books used in the schools of various countries, and she brought back a large number of those used in France, England, and Scotland.

CHADBURN MADE FACULTY ADVISER OF 'LAW REVIEW'

Law Magazine Will Enter Eleventh Year of Publication In December.

J. H. Chadbourn, instructor in the University law school has been appointed faculty editor of the North Carolina Law Review, and will have charge of the first issue of the publication, which is to be released in December.

Chadbourn, as editor of the Law Review, succeeds Professor Robert H. Wettach, who has held the post of faculty editor of the publication for nine years, having begun in September 1923. When Wettach was appointed editor in 1923 he followed M. T. Van Hecke, now the dean of the law school, who edited the magazine during the first year of its publication.

The North Carolina Law Review, which enters its eleventh year of publication with the appearance of the December issue, is published quarterly throughout the year. It contains articles by the law faculty here and at other law schools, contributions from the faculty of the other departments of the University on subjects relating to law, comments and articles by law students, and contributions by judges and lawyers in this and other states.

The student editor of the Law Review for this year is William J. Adams, Jr., son of Judge Adams of the North Carolina supreme court, and he succeeds Travis Brown of Charlotte.

BASNIGHT URGES WOMEN TO VOTE FOR REPUBLICANS

Speakers at Organization Meeting Here Play Roosevelt and Defend Hoover.

The Young Men's Republican club met in Gerrard hall Thursday night for the purpose of getting more thoroughly organized and to map out plans by which they can increase the Republican vote in the coming election. S. H. Basnight, Orange county chairman of the party and keynote speaker, was introduced by John A. Wilkinson, president of the local organization.

In his speech, Basnight emphasized the importance of having the women of this state vote the Republican ticket and asked every student to write home to arouse the interest of mothers and sisters. He also asked volunteers to visit among the rural district of Orange county and "stump" the country school houses in their parties' behalf. In offering his aid to the local group, Basnight said that although he was kept very busy, he would arrange to give himself wholeheartedly to any problem that might face the young men.

Butler Pledges Support

Following Basnight's talk, Mossitt Butler of Clinton, nephew of Marion Butler, and a newcomer to the University, was welcomed into the party. Butler pledged his support to the party by saying that he would willingly carry on any work given him.

Forney Rankin, who during the summer was engaged in organizing similar parties throughout the state, exhorted the group to be more active. He

The White Man's Burden

The University has gone to great lengths to enable "poor but honest" young men to attend this institution of higher education. It provides a number of scholarships and makes many loans to deserving students. It maintains a dining hall where the most wholesome of foods are served at the lowest cost. It has reduced the rent in its dormitories. It has cut the prices at its laundry.

These efforts stamp the University as most liberal and democratic and are duly appreciated by the student body. But what availeth it a man if he gain all these fees only to expend the amount saved, on new books?

Each quarter in the past there have been murmurs of discontent in regard to the high price of text books. It is true that second hand books are available, but to what purpose can these used books be put? The almighty heads of departments seem to derive the most diabolical pleasure in changing the text books to be used in their department at least once per year.

It is quite evident that some courses are of so contemporary a nature that the facts taught in it are subject to change at certain intervals and so require a frequent change in books. But consider the innumerable courses in which the material remains the same year in and year out, and still the book list is changed.

It is truly commendable that the heads of departments should wish to give several publishing houses a "break" instead of confining their purchases to one, but it has always been said that charity begins at home. In this instance it is not only an act of charity to refrain from constantly manipulating the list of texts, but also an act of necessity.

In the romance language department we hear the cry that students crib books, and thus second hand books defeat the department's purpose of instructing the students in the reading of the various languages. Is not this paternal attitude in direct contradiction to the liberal policy of the University, which encourages freedom and individual effort? The department of Germanic languages does not indulge in this practice of shifting books, and it may be safely said that the students in those courses are as well instructed, at least, as those of the department in which new books are used with such exasperating frequency.

The faculty of the University is quite cognizant of its ten per cent salary cut. Please let them bear in mind that the salaries which support students here have been cut to an equally drastic degree.—O.S.S.

A Tragedy in Two Acts

THE CHARACTERS

Dives.....A rich man
Government.....His servant
Lazurus.....A poor man

ACT I

Dives is seated before a table which groans, though not as loudly as did before Dives started eating, with the weight of a sumptuous feast.

Dives (to Government): That was a fine meal. Well prepared and well served.

Government: Yes, it's easy to prepare good food, sir, when the garden is flourishing and the pantry is full.

Dives Well, since we enjoy such prosperity and abundance, it is only right that we should share it with someone. Suppose you give the remnants of my dinner to that poor man Lazurus who waits at the gate. I am sure that he, like everybody else these times, gets plenty to eat. But he will enjoy some fine food, for a change. After all, we do not need it.

ACT II

The time is one business cycle later. Dives is again at his dinner table. The groan of the table is not so loud as before.

Dives: Another fine meal, Government. But the food doesn't appear as plentiful as before.

Government: No, sir. We still have enough for the household. However, we are having to save every scrap in the kitchen.

Dives: You are right. In times like these we must economize, cut down our expenses where we can. And by the way, send that fellow Lazurus away. Tell him not to come back. It is all we can do to feed ourselves. We have been too good to him lately, anyway.—E.C.D.

A Dog's Life

Almost every one loves animals and the favorite of the human race universally has been and is the dog. There is something wrong with the man or boy who cannot enter into the spirit of mutual trust and devotion shown by these loyal and intelligent brutes. And to the dog lover there is no more disturbing sound than the terrified baying and yelping which emanates at intervals from the medical building.

More disturbing by far than the actual noise are the pictures which they conjure up of white-robed young men performing remorseless and excruciatingly painful operations upon helpless canines. The mind recalls at once the many descriptions we have read in our science text books. Descriptions of experiments in which stomachs are slit open, limbs amputated, organs removed, and brains laid bare. Descriptions of diets that reduce the animal to a state of coma or dreadful disease and descriptions that glibly depict the stages of paralysis brought about thru brain surgery. There seems no limit to the horrid pranks science plays on man's best friend.

A passerby Friday morning might have seen two little darkies leading a disreputable-looking hound by a length of green rope. The trio disappeared behind the medical building and after a few moments the two boys reappeared without the dog. As they passed a bloodcurdling yelp came from the direction of the medical school.

It is not the intention of this editorial to decry vivisection. The greatest animal lovers have readily admitted that it is essential to the furthering of medical science and hence to the good of mankind. It does seem, however, that there might be more consideration shown for the sensibilities of the teachers and students who are forced to live or work within earshot of the laboratories in which these experiments are being conducted. There is no smoke without fire and many would like to know just what is occasioning the pathetic howlings. It would be an excellent plan for the medical school not only to subdue the noise but to publish a short reassuring account of how they are treating these canine martyrs.—J.F.A.

The Socialists Arrive

The Socialists of North Carolina meet their legal requirement to place the party's candidates on the 1932 ballot with the signatures of ten thousand petitioners.

More than two hundred party members, many of them University students, have thoroughly canvassed the state in an effort to get their party recognized. Yet there were many who had little faith in the success of the petitioners. Just where would ten thousand socialists be found? But they came to the front willingly, if not with the intention of voting for the party candidate at least in the interests of liberal and democratic government, which demands that any man, despite his political tendencies, be given the right to express his sentiment at the polls.

King Football

Justice tucks her bronzed balance under her arms and abandons her throne in equitable grace to H. R. H. Tyrannus II. From Thursday's DAILY TAR HEEL: "Due to the football game between Carolina and Vanderbilt here this Saturday afternoon, the Recorder's court will change from its regular session time of 2:00 o'clock Saturday afternoon to 7:30 Friday night."

The Forgotten Day

One hundred and thirty-six years ago the Phi Assembly raised its lovely head on the University campus. Phi officers point out to freshmen and new delegates in the group's first meeting that no longer do the Di and Phi possess such powers over this institution as in a happier day. Paved roads, jazz orchestras and other mania contributing to the go-on-a-week-end phobia strike more at home in intellectual circles than in any other institution of the University. Only fifteen years ago the campus was practically inaccessible, particularly on rainy days when Orange county's red clay was a veritable quicksand bog to buggy wheels and balloonless tires. Today intellectual stimulation is derived in "catching" the 7:00 o'clock show every night or yelling one's self hoarse while the gridiron gladiators proceed to block ends and black eyes.

In his reply to Garner the President takes a firm stand for good collateral. Nobody can borrow from the government unless he proves that he doesn't need the money.—The New Yorker.

With Contemporaries

Should Football Be Broadcast?

Modification of the Eastern Intercollegiate Association's rule against radio-casting football games probably has been viewed by a majority of spectators as a forward pass in the sport's progress. The association's vote to permit members to decide individually whether they will radio-cast the games leaves the ball in the air. Many followers of this sport, no doubt, will strive to complete the pass by urging each institution concerned to put its games on the air.

Despite the action of "three large conferences"—the "Big Ten," Southern and Eastern—which have opposed radio-casting this season, the differences between radio and football managers seem reconcilable. Some colleges and universities attribute reduced attendance to radio reports; small institutions, particularly, suspect that radio-casting of the more important contests keeps potential spectators away from games between the less accomplished teams. This argument is met with a claim that radio reports popularize the sport and thus increase the crowds by general advertising.

The schools base their conclusions on comparative gate receipts, but it seems reasonable to believe that any decrease during the last three seasons is attributable largely to abnormal business conditions. One possible basis of compromise was stated recently by Major John L. Griffith, commissioner of athletics of the "Big Ten" Conference:

"Athletic directors of the conference agreed unanimously last spring that broadcasting has cut down attendance. If the radio stations would advertise the games several days ahead of time instead of just broadcasting the games as they occur, then radio would become an asset to football. Programs could be broadcast during the preceding week, giving college songs, dope concerning the schools and their grid teams. That might solve the problem."

Such advance information by radio would be comparable to the pre-game reports ordinarily published in newspapers. Obviously, the news of forthcoming games would be less interesting than the results of such contests. If radiocasters adopt this plan, it will be because they recognize the unusual listener-interest in the events thus advertised.

Aside from the opinions of athletic directors and radio promoters, it seems fair to consider the public's preference. Alumni and friends of both the tax-supported and the endowed institutions often are unable to witness games which they might like to hear described.

Radio owners in general would like the widest possible choice of amusements; they may be on the Pacific coast, where the local conference games are broadcast, but prefer to tune in on a national program of alma mater and her traditional rival in the East, middle West or South. They hope that college officials and radiocasters can compromise, so as to make the best games available to radio audiences.—Christian Science Monitor.

Bringing Back The Bicycle

Possibility of a return of bicycles to popularity is seen in their increased use in some parts of the country during recent months and the announcement that the cycle trade of the United States will spend $200,000 advertising them. While the revival of their use is not expected to rival 'nineties, when their vogue was at its height, the trade is counting on a 20 per cent increase in production during the coming year.

If bicycles return in substantial numbers to American streets and highways, they will be welcomed as old friends. Many an old-timer who once pedaled his way to business or recreation will be tempted to mount a wheel again and try his mettle. Whether the boys and girls of this generation who get a bicycle will ever experience quite the thrill which their fathers and mothers did in the possession of one is open, of course, to doubt. They are too used to the luxury of the automobile, or even of airplanes, to experience the exquisite, pristine pleasure that one's first bicycle brought in the days of buggies, phaetons, and two-seated "pleasure-wagons."

For many a country boy the bicycle brought the first enlargement of the radius of his movements and interests. Before the days of bicycles horses which had worked all day in the hayfield were not to be used in the evening, so father said, for trips to town, even on the night of the strawberry festival or the one-night stand of a traveling show in the town hall. A bicycle, on the contrary, was as tireless as the farm boy who "washed up" as soon as the milking was done and rode his bicycle two or three miles to the land romance which the village typified.

A bicycle even made the road to the school house seem shorter. But it was on the Fourth of July, circus day, or at the time of the county fair, when a bicycle carried a boy as far as ten or twelve miles to the county seat, that it became indispensable. No matter if the road was deep in dust and sand and the town-line hill so steep that a dozen boys and girls cycling to Arcady together had to dismount and walk up, pushing their wheels beside them, there was always plenty of red lemonade and mountains of gingerbread waiting when they reached the fair smart as an automobile or afford grounds.

A "wheel" may not become as great a "cruising radius," but instinctively one thinks of a boy and a bicycle as natural companions, perhaps as much as a boy and his dog. If the modern boy doesn't believe that a bicycle is the proper vehicle for the road to adventure and wholesome fun, let him ask his dad.—Christian Science Monitor.

With a Nickel, It'll Buy a Coke

"Why, a master's doesn't mean a thing to them," thus spoke one student who donned his robes and received a master's degree last spring.

After three months devoted to finding a door in the outside world that such a degree would open, he is offering to work for nothing in order to acquire "Experience," the key to all doors.

"When you think how hard we have to work for it—"

And that, perhaps, is the reason his key would not unlock the door. He spent five or six years in the university for a degree.

And he is no exception.

Every year students enroll in the university with a degree dangling like a ripening fruit in front of their intellectual noses, and tempting them to put forth every ounce of strength to gain the plum. They center upon that one achievement and take all courses leading to their particular choice, forgetting that college is crammed full of interesting things; and that the greatest of them is not found in books, but from brushing against instructors and students who have

Carolina faces its first conference foe this afternoon when the Tar Heels and Vanderbilt Commodores meet in Kenan stadium at 2:30. Vanderbilt is rated at the top of the heap in the south and the game should be an interesting affair in view of the tremendous improvement shown during the past week by the Tar Heels.

The Vandy squad arrived in Durham Friday morning and worked out on Kenan field yesterday. The twenty-five huskies looked fit in their short snappy session, consisting of a short signal drill and work on kicking and passing. After the workout the squad retreated to the Washington Duke hotel in Durham where they are staying.

Coach Dan McGugin seemed pleased with the condition of his men but would make no prediction as to the outcome of the game. He is mindful of the game last year when the Heels were doped to lose by an overwhelming score and the Commodores barely eked out a 13-0 victory. He lamented the fact that both "Mighty" Close and "Good" Fortune were out of the play. The former was ruled ineligible and the latter is suffering from a dislocated toe. Still he has Dixie Roberts, Henderson, and Watkins to pester the Heels with.

Vanderbilt was weak in aerial defense against Mercer and Coach McGugin has moved Suhrheinrich from guard to end in an effort to strengthen this department. He seemed pleased with the result of the move.

The Tar Heels also worked out on the stadium field in a brief practice. McGugin watched the Heels in their preliminary exercises but made no comment. Woollen and Chandler were booting some nice spirals for the Commodore mentor's benefit. After warming up, the team went through a peppy signal drill and worked on their passing attack.

Coach Collins seemed pleased with the spirit and work of the team and anticipated a hard game today. Trainer Quinlan announced that the injuries of Chandler, Thompson, Walker, and Newcombe had healed and that the squad was in good shape physically.

"THOSE YANKS HAVE RIDEN to glory" was the comment of one of Carolina's most ardent baseball fans Wednesday after the American league champions had polished off the Cubs 12-6. Columbia Lou was the bright spot in the Yank attack Thursday as far as the game itself was concerned but the Bambino hung up five new records for the annual baseball classic, and he is adding to those records since. When he walked to his position in the first inning he began his tenth world series. Since then he has boosted his records for total series performances in runs scored, runs batted in, total bases, and bases on balls. In fact every time the Babe breathes in the series he is setting a new record.

CONNIE MACK STARTLED the baseball world the other day by announcing the sale of Simmons, Haas, and Dykes to the White Sox. No amount was attached to the announcement but the writer believes it was in excess of $165,000. Some wonder at the move but Connie seems bent on young blood and he has Cramer, Coleman, and Williams to fill in. It would not be surprising to read soon of the sale of "Society" George Earnshaw if rumors are to be relied upon as word has come south that George has been lying down for the Athletics.

Despite the fact that the 1932 Tar Heel tennis team will lose the services of Captain-elect Bryan Grant, second ranking intercollegiate player, and Lucas Abels, prospects for another national championship squad are, nevertheless, bright.

Shuford to Return

There was also some doubt as to whether Harley Shuford would return to school, but it was learned from reliable sources that Shuford will register next quarter. If that is so, Coach Kenfield will form his team with Wilmer Hines at number one, Lenoir Wright at number two, and Harley Shuford at number three. Harvey Harris, number one on last year's yearling team, will probably break in as number four, and the rest of the berths will be battled for by Ike Minor, Dave Morgan, Johnny Dillard, Sonny Graham, captain two years ago, Walter Levitan, and Ricky Willis, the latter two coming up from last year's frosh outfit.

VANDY READY FOR HARD GAME WITH CAROLINA TODAY

Sport Editor on Vanderbilt
"Hustler" Tells of Trip of Vanderbilt Team.

By Ben Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor,
Vanderbilt Hustler

The Vanderbilt squad numbering twenty-five left Nashville for Chapel Hill at 10:00 o'clock Wednesday night going by way of Atlanta. A stop-over and workout was held at Clemson college, former coaching ground of Josh Cody, and where Jesse Neely, another ex-Commodore, holds forth now.

The team proceeded to Durham Friday where they will spend the week-end commuting to Chapel Hill in busses for workouts Friday and the game Saturday.

The practices in Nashville Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday were devoted to pass defense and to improving the running attack. Vanderbilt's pass defense was outstandingly weak in her game with Mercer last Saturday, the latter completing eleven tosses.

The opening lineup will find Gracey, the Commodore's nomination for all-American center; Powell and Tally, guards; Beasley and Leyendecker, tackles; and Myers and Suhrheinrich, ends. The backfield will show Henderson, Beck, Roberts, and Askew.

Since Fortune had his big toe dislocated in last Saturday's game he has been replaced by Askew. Close will be back in the lineup by Saturday week. One of the outstanding changes that have taken place in first team lineup since the Mercer game has been the shifting of Suhrheinrich from guard to end. Paired with Myers on the other flank, Coach Dan McGugin believes Suhrheinrich will strengthen the Commodore pass defense considerably. Indeed, the genial coach seemed elated over the results of the last minute change in the final workout here.

VARSITY HITTERS WIN FALL GAME

Coach Bunn Hearn again appeared jovial yesterday afternoon when his tentative varsity squad romped to a 12 to 2 victory in a game with the second team. Hitting ability was much more in evidence than heretofore, with the varsity sluggers collecting seventeen hits off the rookie hurlers.

Weathers, giant second bagger, led the attack with a triple, two doubles, and three singles to his credit. Whitley and Stern worked in the box for the losers and proved ineffective while Glasgow, Mills, and Joyner for the varsity were invincible, allowing the reserve sluggers only three scattered hits throughout the afternoon. Parker and Strayhorn, catchers with varsity experience, alternated in that berth for the regulars with the capable, hardworking Terzini behind the bat for the rookies.

Teams Have Met Two Consecutive Years.

When the Tar Heels and the Commodores meet today on Kenan Stadium, it will be the seventh clash between these old foes. Although numbered among the oldest opponents of the Heels, the series having started in 1892, this will be the first time the two teams have played on successive years.

A win for the Commodores today will still leave the Tar Heels leading in the series. In the six games played, Carolina has won four, losing two, one of which was last year.

In the opening game in 1892, Carolina easily defeated the Vandy men by a 24-0 score. Michael Hoke, Charles Baskerville, and William Dion were the leading players on the Blue and White eleven. The "Southern Millionaires," as they were termed, were no match for Carolina's great team of that year.

Tar Heels Win in 1894

Two years elapsed before the two teams met again on the gridiron. Then the Commodores fell before the Tar Heels by a 12-0 score to keep Carolina's goal uncrossed by a Vandy player. George Butler captained the team of that year, with the honors of the game going to Quarterback Joel B. Whitaker, whose son, Myers Whitaker is carrying on the family tradition as tentative first string quarterback on this year's freshman eleven.

In 1897, the Commodores scored their first victory over a Carolina team, defeating the team captained by Arthur Bel-den by the overwhelming score of 31-0. Ernest Graves, brother of Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, was the star of that year's team. Samuel Shull was another member of the 1897 team.

In 1900 Carolina's iron man team took a 48-0 victory over

THREE GAMES TO OPEN INTRAMURAL RACES NEXT WEEK

Ruffin and Lewis Dormitories
Meet in First Game
Of Season.

Ruffin and Lewis dormitories will hook-up at 4:00 o'clock Monday afternoon in the first contest of the tag football tourney of 1932. Manly vs. Old West, A. T. O. vs. Phi Sigma, and Pi Kappa Phi vs. Pi Kappa Alpha will be the games to follow at 5:00 o'clock.

The football tournament is only the first of a diversified program which will be followed throughout the coming year. The intramural card which is being worked out by Bo Shepard, director, and Herman Schnell, newly appointed assistant director, will take in as many different sports as possible in an effort to interest the greatest part of the student body. Last year the majority of the students took part in one sport or another but it is hoped that still a larger number will take part this season. At present Schnell is working out the final arrangements for the opening tourney.

Forty-Two Teams Enter

The football tournament, which starts next week, will continue for six weeks with games being scheduled each afternoon, except Saturday and Sunday, between the various dormitories and fraternities. Thirteen dormitory and two independent teams have entered in the dormitory league; twenty-seven have enrolled in the fraternity loop, making a total of forty-two. Each club will play eight games and then winners in each division will play each other to decide the championship of the campus. All men not on the varsity or freshman football squads and men who have not received a varsity award in football are eligible to play for their dormitory or fraternity team. Many clubs are now getting in shape for the tournament and are holding practices at various places on the campus.

Other sports which will follow during the fall quarter are: cross-country or Cake Race, boxing, and wrestling.

At the close of the spring quarter a silver loving cup will be awarded to the individual scoring the greatest number of points for the entire season. A cup is also given to the team with the greatest total for the year. Points are scored by the number of times a person or club places in an event.

STATE Y CABINET WILL BE TOPIC OF MEETING TONIGHT

Representatives of Y. M. C. A.-
Y. W. C. A.'s Will Gather At Duke University.

The possibility of forming a joint state Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. cabinet will be the main topic of discussion at the meeting of Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. representatives this evening and tomorrow afternoon at Duke university.

The nucleus of the group to be present will be the executive committee of the State Training Conference, which includes the officers and employed secretaries. About ten other students, mainly association presidents, have been especially invited to the meeting.

Claud Nelson, student secretary of the Y. M. C. A. for the southern region, and Miss Elizabeth Smith, national student Y. W. C. A. secretary, are also expected to be present.

To Enlarge Program

The purpose of the joint cabinet would be to enlarge the scope and program of the present joint organization and to bring about better cooperation and more program exchange between various associations. The annual spring conference which is now regularly held, will not be discontinued under the new plan, but rather made an activity of the cabinet. The questions of the advisability of such a group, its functions, and probable membership will come up before the group.

The meeting has been called by Bill McKee, local "Y" president, who is also president of the present Y. M.-Y. W. organization. Other officers are Elizabeth Taylor of Greensboro college, vice-president; Rosanella Cash of Duke, secretary; and Sam Wiley of Davidson, treasurer.

JOHNNY MACK BROWN PLAYED WITH ALABAMA

Johnny Mack Brown, the Walter Clark of "70,000 Witnesses," showing today at the Carolina theatre, first came to the attention of film producers when he played with the University of Alabama team against the University of Washington at the Rose Bowl, Pasadena, California, in 1926.

A year later he was signed by M-G-M, and played his first screen role with Jack Coogan in "The Bugle Call." Later he was selected as Marion Davies' leading man in "The Fair Co-ed," and since that time has been featured with many of the screen's biggest feminine stars—Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Greta Garbo, and others.

Thirty-Four Lost in Pacific

Out of a crew of thirty-seven on the freighter Nevada only three survived through its disastrous sinking off the northern coast of Washington. These three swam to Amtnak island and remained there, weak from physical exhaustion and lack of food, until they were rescued by President Madison. When they were taken off the island they were too weak to relate their harrowing experience. The cause of the sinking of the freighter was unknown as the wireless messages from the sinking ship went silent soon after it had flashed its first S. O. S.

TWO BOOKS PUBLISHED BY FACULTY MEMBERS

Two new books by members of the department of sociology have recently been published. The first of these is a new and enlarged edition of Professor Ernest R. Groves' Introduction to Sociology, published by Longmans, Green.

From the press of the same publishers there has also recently appeared a new and well-edited Workbook in Sociology by Dr. Lee M. Brooks.

ENTERTAINMENTS WILL BE PLANNED

There will be a meeting of the Student Entertainment Committee next week to organize and make arrangements for the year. Before this meeting several new members will be appointed from the student body, one junior and one senior being selected from the school of commerce, one junior and one senior from the school of education, and one junior from the school of liberal arts.

Six or seven entertainments have been planned for this year. The price of season tickets for outsiders has been reduced from $3.50 to $3.00 and these tickets are on sale in the office of Dean A. W. Hobbs, chairman of the committee.

TENNIS TEAM HAS BRIGHT PROSPECT FOR THIS SEASON

against the best teams in the nation, among which are Pennsylvania, Yale, Harvard, Brown, New York University, and Navy. Princeton and Georgetown are tentative opponents. In addition to these dual meets, there will be two Pinehurst tournaments, the North-South in mid-October, and the state intercollegiate in April. Carolina will also send a team to White Sulphur Springs, Va., for the Middle Atlantic intercollegiate tournament. Wilmer Hines, winner of singles and doubles for the past two years, will defend both championships this year, and if the Tar Heel ace wins this season, the cup will be his permanently.

Most of the players have been actively engaged during the summer playing in invitation tournaments in the south and north. Hines and Shuford toured the south with more than average success. Hines, also captain of basketball, went to the finals of the Kentucky state championship, defeating Ted Burwell, one time southern intercollegiate title-holder, in straight sets, besides winning the North Carolina-South Carolina title at Greenville. Lenoir Wright toured the New England states.

Freshman Star

In addition to fine varsity prospects, Coach Kenfield will have several good freshman players, the most notable of whom are Bernard Friedman and Hunter Lott, both of Philadelphia. Friedman, the more brilliant of the two, is second ranking junior indoor player and ranks within the first four outdoor performers.

Coach Kenfield is due in Chapel Hill today, and practice will start Monday, with work-outs scheduled daily.

ENGINEERING SOCIETIES TO HOLD FIRST MEETINGS

The four societies in the engineering school will have their first meetings of the new year within the next ten days, according to information obtained from student officers and faculty advisers.

Professor Miller is the sponsor of the local chapter of the Institute of Electrical Engineers. F. S. Black is the secretary, and J. E. Hunter is the president. Professor E. G. Hoefer is adviser to A. I. E. E. as well as faculty adviser to the local chapter American Society of Mechanical Engineers, whose officers are George Gorham, president, and J. A. McLean, secretary. The local chapter of the American Society of Chemical Engineers has for officers C. M. Sawery, president, and L. C. Suprenant, secretary. The civil engineers society, the American Society of Civil Engineers, has for officers J. F. Geiger, president, and R. E. Frauenberger, secretary.

stated that there are as many Republicans as there are Democrats in North Carolina and the Republicans being the party for reform, it was up to the younger generation to come forth and give the party the power.

After Mr. Rankin's speech, McBride Fleming-Jones took the floor to explain a few plans under which they are to work during the forth coming campaign. He also stressed the importance of all Republican students writing home to see if they are properly registered to procure absentee ballots.

In closing the meeting Chairman Wilkinson attacked the administration of Roosevelt as governor of New York state, saying that both his farm and railroad speeches were mere generalizations with no detailed plan of relief.

Wilkinson stated that Jake Newell, candidate for U. S. senate and Clifford Frazier, candidate for governor of North Carolina, both on the Republican ticket, would visit Chapel Hill in the near future to address the students and townspeople.

stated that much depended on this University and Duke university to make the people realize this need.

Socialists' Work Praised

Williams described the plights of certain unemployed families as pathetic in their nature. He described the squalor and misery of the conditions under which some of these families are living and cited many examples of the constructive work that the Socialist relief committees are doing. He told the case of one unemployed counsel committee which is, at this time, advising the municipal officials.

He said that Socialism demonstrated a practical system: either taking the food from the farms, which are ignorantly accused of over-production, to the unemployed, or taking the unemployed to the farms. He claimed that the appeal to force by the capitalists presaged their downfall and concluded by saying that socialism now has the principle and the public confidence behind it which will enable the party to meet the situation when capitalism has disintegrated.

SUNDAY MOVIES TO BE SEEN IN CHAPEL HILL

E. C. Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre, stated yesterday that there will be motion pictures on Sunday. They will be run for the benefit of various charitable organizations. The shows will start, Smith said, either on the ninth or sixteenth of October, playing only for the two afternoon performances. The pictures will be first-run pictures for the most part, and certain other cinemas, which a number of people have requested.

journey to the north today in an effort to win intersectional laurels. South Carolina, Furman, and William and Mary play Villanova, Army, and Navy, respectively. Of these three the Gamecocks are the most likely to spring an upset. Coach Billy Laval has a team that averages two hundred pounds from tackle to tackle and also a group of fast, shifty backs. They were not very impressive in their season debut against Sewanee last week but neither were the Tar Heels.

IN ANSWER TO THE QUERY sent THE DAILY TAR HEEL early in the week concerning the colors worn in the Wake Forest game, Coach Bob Fetzter explains the color scheme. The original Carolina colors were Cambridge blue and white. Cambridge blue is not suitable for athletic wear, so the athletic association adopted navy blue. With the advent of the forward pass into football and the opening up of the game, the difficulty of distinguishing two teams with similar colors arose. With no idea of destroying tradition but simply trying to make it easy for the players to distinguish themselves from the opponents the athletic association again adopted a change of a strange specie of orange on the jerseys with royal blue numbers. Those numbers are not purple but rather a royal blue.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED BY GRADUATE STUDENTS

At a meeting of the entire graduate student body last night in Smith building, President Graham addressed the group. He was followed by Dean W. W. Also included on the program of the evening was an election of officers for the coming quarter.

Commodores To Meet Tar Heels In Seventh Contest Since 1892

Vandy Thursday, after defeating Tennessee's Volunteers on Tuesday by a 23-5 score. That was in the good old days when football was murder and a touchdown counted five points. Saturday of the same week, the Tar Heels topped off the week's play by holding a strong Sewanee aggregation to a scoreless tie. Performing for the Tar Heels were Francis Osborne, who captained the team, and Louis Graves, second team quarterback, who played a big part of the commodore game.

The Heels won their last game over the Commodores in 1914, barely managing to eke out a 10-9 victory. Robert Winston, Jr. and Dave Tayloe were the stars of the 1914 team.

Last year's clash, the first since war days, gave Vandy its second victory over Carolina in the entire series, a fighting Tar Heel eleven, doped to lose by an overwhelming score, led by the fine running and kicking of Johnny Branch, held the Commodores to a close 13-0 win, and threatened to cross the Vandy goal on several occasions.

Today the Tar Heels will go on the field, again picked to lose to a heavier Vandy eleven which averages 195 pounds in the line and 175 pounds in the backfield. Nevertheless, the Heels go into the game determined to fight to the last and a strong fighting spirit may more than makeup for lack of weight.

HENDERSON LAUDS ABILITY OF SHAW AS PAMPHLETEER

Playwright's Biographer Gives Lecture Illustrated With Lantern Slides.

Friday night at the library, Dr. Archibald Henderson lectured on George Bernard Shaw, great comic dramatist, wit and man of letters. Dr. Henderson possesses the most exhaustive collection of Shawiana in existence, and has just completed the authorized, definitive biography of Shaw.

The lecture was copiously illustrated with lantern slides of first editions, playbills, personal photographs, pamphlets, and correspondence from Dr. Henderson's most valuable collection.

The speaker was introduced briefly by Miss Beust, of the staff of the library school.

Early Fabian Connection

The lecture opened, after a few introductory remarks, with a discussion of the Fabian Society, a Socialist organization with which Shaw was connected early in his career, and whose chief interest lay in attacking the distinction between classes, that is, as Shaw phrased it, the difference between those with large appetites and no dinners, and those with large dinners and no appetites.

It was while Shaw was actively connected with the Fabian Society that he met Walter Crane, also an active member, one of the most celebrated artists of his day and who was later to make the designs for the fly-leaves of many of Shaw's books, and who did the same type of work for the innumerable English periodicals in which Shaw's work appeared.

Political Essays

His essays on the political situation, as published by the Fabian Society, are not what Shaw's reputation, as established later, might lead us to believe. They are neither funny or witty, but comprehensive studies of such questions and institutions

Numerous Local Authors Have Manuscripts Ready For Press

Paul Green's Book Published; Dr. Henderson, Judge Winston, Thomas Wolfe, Phillips Russell, Dr. Ericson, and Dr. Bond Have Writings to Be Printed Soon.

The usual fall publishing splurge is marked this year by an unprecedented number of books written by members of the University faculty or alumni. Virtually all of the noted current writers who bear strong Chapel Hill influences, are issuing works this autumn.

Paul Green has already published his first novel, The Laughing Pioneer, which deals with changing social conditions in the new South, a land and atmosphere to which Green brought a literary significance. Of this novel, the New York Times remarked that much of the author's excellent dramatic technique had been skillfully applied to his first attempt at fiction. For the last six months Green has been quite active in preparing scenarios for Warner Brothers and Fox Film company.

House Begins Week's Assembly Program

The assembly program for this week will include speeches by members of the faculty and student body.

R. B. House will address the freshman and sophomore classes Monday at assembly period. Tuesday Dan Kelly, speaker of the Philanthropic Assembly, and Charles G. Rose, president of the Dialectic Senate, will speak to the incoming students on the activities of the two societies. Wednesday the freshmen meet with their deans. Thursday, English Bagby of the psychology department will talk to the freshmen on methods of study. Friday the sophomores and freshmen will hear Dr. R. D. W. Connor, head of the department of history. Dr. Connor has just returned from an extensive trip to Europe.

SALON ORCHESTRA WILL PLAY OUTDOOR CONCERT

The Carolina Salon Orchestra, under the direction of Thor Johnson, will present a concert in the Forest theatre, Sunday afternoon, October 16. This will be the first time in its history that the open air theatre will have a musical program as its major attraction.

The Carolina Salon Orchestra is composed of about twenty of the University students and was organized last year under the leadership of Johnson. They have given several concerts here in Chapel Hill and in other cities throughout the state and have received considerable recognition.

Taylor Society Meetings Begin After Christmas

Owing to the absence of Dr. D. C. Schwenning, the Taylor Society will conduct no meetings until after Christmas. Schwenning is in Geneva on University leave, where he is collecting material for a book on dismissal wages, as they apply to the different countries. In addition to doing research in the libraries of Geneva, he is also traveling in Germany collecting information on the subject.

HIGH PERCENTAGE OF FRESHMEN ARE CHURCH MEMBERS

Protestants Show Strength With Methodists Leading in Membership.

Methodists lead the denominational representation in the freshman class at the University of North Carolina this year, according to a church census taken by the University Y. M. C. A. during registration.

The report shows that every member of the class indicates some religious preference and that more than eight of every ten freshmen are already members of some church.

Methodists Lead

The Methodists, who are represented by 175 first-year students, are followed by the Baptists with 127, Presbyterians with 100, Episcopalians with 100, Hebrews with thirty, Catholics with twenty-one, Congregationalists with seventeen, Reformed with ten, Unitarian with three, and Christian Science with two.

Among the group are nine sons of ministers and six candidates for the ministry, one of whom plans to be a foreign missionary.

The census from which those facts are obtained is made each year during registration. The church directory cards are immediately sorted by denominations and are put in the hands of the various ministers of the community. This paves the way for the ministers to get acquainted with the new men at the church receptions that are held at the beginning of each year.

RECORDER'S COURT FINES 7 STUDENTS CAUGHT BUMMING

Judge Henshaw Lightens Penalty on Plea of Ignorance of Penalty by Culprits.

Seven Carolina students from the freshman and sophomore classes, charged with soliciting rides while standing in a public highway, were brought before Judge C. P. Henshaw in recorder's court Friday night.

W. D. Lowder, H. W. Thompson, J. T. Danks, C. C. Wagner, L. W. Wilson, R. Hymer, and J. C. Shell, the accused students, admitted guilt but protested ignorance of the local ordinance concerning "bumming." The ordinance in Chapel Hill, it was stated, does not prohibit soliciting rides from the curb but applies only when the offender is standing in the highway.

Since the guilty students were not familiar with the law, Judge Henshaw suspended judgment upon payment of one-seventh of the costs, $2.11 by each student.

Another case on the docket for Friday night, in which Jesse King was charged with assault and battery upon John T. Johnson, trial was set for Saturday, October 8.

The case of James Hargraves, colored, charged with possession of intoxicating whiskey, was called, but the defendant failed to appear.

President Frank Graham will be the principal speaker at the N. C. C. W. Founders' Day exercises in Aycock auditorium, October 5.

ROTARY GOVERNOR ADDRESSES LOCAL CLUB ON RELIEF

Governor Phillips Exhorts Chapel Hill Rotarians to Continue Efforts for Poor Relief.

Now as never before Rotary has the opportunity to render worthwhile community service, Charles W. Phillips of Greensboro, Rotary governor for the fifty-seventh district, asserted in an address here this week at the regular meeting of the Chapel Hill Rotary club.

It was Governor Phillips' official visit to the club, and he was greeted by a 100 per cent attendance. He was accompanied by Mrs. Phillips who also was a guest at the meeting.

"There was a time when Rotary was a selfish organization, when men were even known to lose their membership because they refused to patronize a fellow Rotarian, but that day has long been past," Governor Phillips declared.

"Rotary today stands for fellowship and service—recreation through fellowship and community improvement and development through service."

Outlines New Program

Governor Phillips then went to cite numerous instances of how Rotary clubs could render their communities invaluable service. He told of one club that had been holding foodless meetings since July and had been donating to a needy community cause the money that would have gone to pay for these meals.

Rotary's program for this year, he said, "is to hold on to

DANCE COMMITTEE WILL MAKE PLANS FOR COMING YEAR

New Dance Regulating Body to Meet in Graham Memorial
Tonight at 8:00 O'clock.

Rules for this year's dances and the question as to whether freshmen will be allowed to attend the finals will be discussed tomorrow night when members of the University dance committee meet at 8:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial to make plans for the dances of the coming year.

Committee Is Representative

The committee is composed of men who represent several organizations on the campus and who last year were appointed to this committee, which acts in the same capacity as the former German club committee. These men are: Lenoir Wright, Gene Webb, and Charles Woollen, German club; John Manning and Bill McKee, the Grail; Arlindo Cate, senior class; John Leake, junior class; Frank Kenan, sophomore class; George Killinger, graduate school; Irvin Boyle, interfraternity council; Milton Barber, hold-over member.

This dance organization was organized last year to assure the University of a representative group to control social activities. Representatives on the body are three members of the German club, two members of the Grail, a member each from the sophomore, junior and senior classes, a member from the graduate school, a member of the interfraternity council, and a member from the former committee.

'Y' Shortens Meetings Because Of Rushing

The three Y. M. C. A. cabinets will convene Monday night at 7:15 in their second meeting of the year.

The Freshman Friendship Council will have its meeting cut short on account of rushing season, and there will be only a short business meeting.

All first year men who have not yet joined the freshman "Y" group are invited to come to Monday night's gathering and become members of the council.

Sophomore and senior cabinet meetings will also be curtailed on account of fraternity activities.

KOCH OPENS DRAMATIC YEAR TOMORROW NIGHT

Professor F. H. Koch will inaugurate the dramatic activities of the fall quarter tomorrow night with an illustrated lecture, "Our Adventures in Playmaking," in the Playmakers theatre at 7:30 o'clock.

One hundred stereopticon slides will be used to show scenes from Paul Green's early plays, from Thomas Wolfe's first play, from The Forest Theatre productions, and from the Playmaker's tour from Georgia to Massachusetts with the "Show-Bus."

All those interested in dramatics are urged to remain after the lecture and talk to Professor Koch.

GAME ROOM TAKES IN ABOUT $84 PER WEEK

The pool and ping-pong tables in the game room of Graham Memorial bring in an average of $12.00 to $15.00 per day to the management. Of the eleven different games, among which are shuffle-board, cards, checkers, chess, target darts, and pool table billiards, that are available to the student body, only ping-pong and pool have a charge placed on them. When the two bowling alleys are opened, they will probably be placed upon the charge list at about the same rate as pool.

Sedgwick Says So-Called 'Article' Most Acceptable Type Of Writing

Editor of "Atlantic Monthly" Says New Authors Have Every Chance in the World For Their Works to Appear in the Best Publications Because New Authors Sought.

"Aspiring young authors have every chance in the world of having their work appear in the best publications," said Ellery Sedgwick, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, in a recent interview with a representative of THE DAILY TAR HEEL. Editors are always eager for new viewpoints and the outlook held by the rising generation, he believes. The intelligent magazine cannot afford to ignore the efforts of men whose reputations are yet to be made.

To Sedgwick the most acceptable type of writing is the so-called "article," as distinguished from the literary essay or fiction. In his opinion, it is most important that the author have a definite social point of view. "Anything which is fresh, stimulating, and controversial has an excellent chance to be published," he stated.

All Fields Open

Although the sociological work interests him more than any other type, he insists that there is no field of literary endeavor closed to rising writers. He in-

GRADUATES FROM EDUCATION SCHOOL IN GREAT DEMAND

Enrollment in School of Education Increases Despite Impending Change to N. C. C. W.

With a total enrollment of 336, the school of education has four more students than were enrolled last fall term. This increase is in the junior and senior classes, the freshman group being exactly the same as that of last year and the sophomore enrollment showing a slight decrease.

There is a larger number of transfer students than last year, both from other schools on the campus and from other colleges and universities. There is, also, a larger number of girls in the enrollment this fall than ever before.

Increase Unexplained

Despite the fact that the plan for the consolidation of the three major state-owned institutions of learning into one greater university contemplates the removal of the elementary division of the school of education here to N. C. C. W., that division numbers more students this year than last. Indeed, several girls in the freshman and sophomore classes have indicated a desire to enter that division.

Last year, in the fall, there were seventeen students in the elementary division, all juniors and seniors. This term, there are twenty-five students—seven of them being freshmen and sophomores from town or nearby territory. As soon as the shorter-term schools close in the spring, this number will be increased by teachers now in service, the total number of candidates probably being destined to reach fifty before the collegiate year comes to a close.

Elementary Division Grows

sists, however, that, in conjunction with this social outlook, the author must have an authentic background from which to make his critical estimate. Taking issue with Phillips Russell of the University, Sedgwick believes that on beginning to write fiction it is not at all necessary that the writer select personal background. "This lapses," he said, "to quickly into the over-introspective writing." Simplicity and naturalness are two of his prime requirements for issuing a story. "Let the younger writers be cynical, if they are sincere," he observed. "We want them to write not what they think will please us, or what will elicit favorable comment from the public, but rather what is their honest, frank conviction. We want them to be themselves." Refreshing indeed was Sedgwick's statement that the letter accompanying a manuscript looms large in the editor's eye. This should contain something original and striking which will

Out of The Red

After two years as an "experiment" THE DAILY TAR HEEL last year proved its worthiness to be continued regularly when the final audit for 1931-32 showed a profit of over $1,000. During the first year the paper registered a loss of $4500; the second year this was decreased to $2,000. But when the fact is considered that last year even in the face of a decreasing amount of local advertising the paper made a profit, the feat is even more remarkable.

Publishing a paper six times a week in a town no larger than 2700 persons, and making a profit in doing so, is a business enterprise which necessitates careful budgeting and level-headed management. Because of the small field of local merchants from which to solicit advertising the majority of THE TAR HEEL's collections must come from national advertisements—a field which to most of our contemporaries constitutes the minor part of their revenue.

Now that this paper is for the first time really on its feet, the national as well as the local advertisers will be much more willing to contribute ads. During the first two years before it was definitely known that the paper would be more than a mere experiment, the advertisers were naturally somewhat hesitant to make long-time contracts with the publication. Now, however, this doubt as to the paper's permanency will no longer be a worry to the advertisers.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL is out of the red. Its permanency has been definitely established. In the next few years it will not only be able to begin publication in a smaller and more standard type, but will also be able to hire an Associated Press wire—both of which will add much to THE TAR HEEL's usefulness and development.

The Lion and The Lamb

Mahatma Gandhi has won another victory. Exactly what were the terms upon which India's saint was recently able to agree with the British government has not been disclosed but the fact is that, rather than permit him to carry his fast to the bitter end, Ramsay MacDonald as foreign minister has made some concession, the news of which the Mahatma greeted with, "Satyagraha (soul force) has conquered."

This recent episode in India's history shows again the difference in the working of the English mind and that of the Indian. Mr. MacDonald had worked out what he considered a satisfactory solution to the problem of representation under India's new constitution. As a practical statesman he thought that if the untouchables were to receive any fair representation in the Indian Congress and in the provincial assemblies they would have to be segregated legally, as they were socially, into a separate electorate. But the Mahatma's mind works not on entirely practical considerations but on principles, to which he holds with fanatical zeal. He feels it his calling to help break down the barriers of caste and no sacrifice is too great to accomplish his purpose.

Gandhi, by such acts as his recent fasting, has initiated a tremendous emotional force not only in India but over the entire world. His principles and his spirit have so captivated people's minds that public opinion everywhere is back of him. If another chance appears for him to use his influence in uplifting India to a respectable place as a nation and of teaching the world another lesson in satyagraha, we may be certain that he will play his part—and to the utmost.—W.F.B.

The Greeks Redeem Themselves

In yesterday's TAR HEEL there appeared an article in which it was mentioned that Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity had won the scholarship trophy cup for the national fraternity with the highest scholastic average on the campus. This is the second year that the same fraternity has won this award.

This fact simply illustrates one of the most debatable subjects on the campus: Are fraternity houses conducive to studying? Taking the average for all the fraternities and comparing it with that of the non-fraternity group, it will probably be found that the fraternity group has as high, if not a higher average than the non-fraternity.

One of the most important questions in the life of a "would-be" fraternity man after his pledging is whether he is going to live at the fraternity house or not. The general custom is to have the new men stay at least one term at the house. Usually there are a few men in the pledge group who are very much interested in making good grades. These men are likely to demure and prefer to live outside on the campus, rather than in the fraternity house, because they are afraid their studies will suffer if they don't.

The splendid showing that the fraternity men made last year in scholastic achievements clearly illustrates the fact that fraternities do not apparently hinder the efforts of the studious, but are perhaps conducive to study. Therefore if there is any freshman who is afraid to join a fraternity because he fears his scholastic endeavors will be lessened, he should take note of the high rating held by fraternities on the campus.—E.J.

Enrollment Shows Increase

The total enrollment of the schools in Chapel Hill at the end of the third week was 658, fifty more than were enrolled last year. There are 268 in the high school with forty-two in the senior class.

OUR TIMES

Against Odds

A contributing factor in the diminished roll of the freshman class year has been the opening of the women's branch of the University, Greensboro's erstwhile N. C. C. W., to men students. Greensboro males seeking a higher education find it more economical to attend the Women's Division, from whence they will derive a diploma from the University of North Carolina, just as though they had attended the Chapel Hill branch. Some fifty-seven men constitute the male element of the student body. There are nearly two thousand women.

So, dog-eared old N. C. C. W.'s The Carolinian in its first edition of September 29: "Welcome, Co-eds!"

Revolution

Often have perspiring college newspapermen and freshman English theme writers struck "an" for "and," "thw" for "the," and other similar combinations in their efforts to peck out contributions to the enlightenment of the race on the most provoking of machine age contraptions, the typewriter.

For Dr. August Dvorak of the University of Washington has discovered a new keyboard combination in arrangement of letters that will reduce awkward combinations and subsequent misspellings from 10,500,000 to 1,500,000. The standard four-bank keyboard is responsible for more than ten million awkward combinations, but the new one, which will place most of the key letters A, O, E, U, I, D, H, T, N, in the middle line or home position of the machine, makes it nearly impossible to produce any word with either the right or left hand alone. The fingers are obliged to go to the upper line above the home position for only twenty per cent of the words and below for only ten per cent. Hence, a concentration of the fingers of both hands in a central position with greater accuracy resulting. Dvorak will meet with little difficulty in changing the mechanical details of the keyboard, but his greatest efforts must be concentrated in selling it to those who have learned and perfected the old system. But this is the age of speed and highly concentrated efficiency. Many old dogs will learn the new tricks.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

BOOKS

On these cool mornings doesn't it feel good to creep close to a cheerily blazing fire? We are thankful for the one in our shop. That and a warming chuckle from More Merry-Go-Round is the supreme combination.

Warwick Deeping's latest, Smith, has been added this week to the lending library of The Bull's Head.

Thomas Wolfe is alleged to have a new novel coming out this fall. It was announced first as October Fair, then as K-19. Now it appears that both titles have been rejected and that both publisher and author are open for suggestion. We have been assured "that like its predecessor it is going to be a big, lusty book."

CAROLINA

Tar Heels Swamped By Vandy In Scoring Fray

"Dixie" Roberts' All-Round Good Playing Helps Vandy Pile Up 39 to 7 Victory.

CROOM GETS ONLY CAROLINA MARKER

Pass from Phipps to 4-Yard Line Gives Tar Heels First Score Of Current Season.

A noticeable lack of pass defense and offense gave the Vanderbilt Commodores a 39-7 victory over Carolina in Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon before a crowd of approximately 13,000 people. Plays from the line of scrimmage gave the Tar Heels nineteen first downs, to the Vandy total of seven.

With the exception of Phipps at left half and Thompson at right half, the Heels' starting line-up was the same as that used against Wake Forest last Saturday. Vanderbilt started their first team, but practically every player on the squad saw action before the game was over.

Passing Game Unexpected

The game turned out to be an aerial display, much to the surprise of the fans who came expecting the heavier Vanderbilt line to keep the play on the ground. Although completing eight passes in the final quarter, the Tar Heel passing attack was hampered by having eight passes intercepted, several of which put the Commodores in scoring position.

Acting-captain "Dixie" Roberts won the toss from Acting-captain Stuart Chandler and elected the east goal. Underwood kicked to Roberts to open the game. Taking the ball on his own 6-yard line, Roberts returned it to the 46, Thompson nabbing him in a clear field. On the second play, Roberts fumbled, Underwood recovering. The Tar Heels' joy was short-lived, however, as Roberts intercepted Phipps' pass. Roberts made a first down, and culminated the drive with a 30-yard pass to Henderson on the 6-yard line, the Vandy signal caller carrying it over. Beasley's kick was good and the rout was on.

In the remaining part of the first quarter, Vandy was unable to score, although threatening several times.

Second Quarter

Beginning the second period, Carolina punted, failing to make the necessary yardage for first down. Burton was tackled by three Carolina players behind the line of scrimmage, but got away for fifteen yards, Walker making the tackle in an open field. Vandy was penalized for crawling, but on the following play Burton made a pretty falling catch of Henderson's pass to the 9-yard line. On the fourth down Roberts made it a touchdown by a foot. Beasley's kick was bad. Score, 13-0.

Vanderbilt's third touchdown came when Roberts on a cut-back off left tackle went seventy-five yards for a touchdown, passing the Tar Heel safety man, Woollen, without any trouble. Newcombe blocked Beasley's try for extra point. Score, 19-0. Beasley kicked short to Brandt who carried the ball to the 45-yard line. White to Daniels made it a first down. White made ten. Vandy offside gave Carolina a much needed five yards. Another pass, White to Daniels, carried the ball to the ten. White went off tackle to the five, where the gun put an end to the Tar Heels' first threat.

Third Quarter

Opening the second half, Beasley kicked to Chandler. Henderson intercepted a Carolina pass on the Blue and White 45-yard line. On the first play, a long pass, Roberts to Henderson,

High Spots

OF THE GAMES

By Thomas H. Broughton

Carolina fans, while disappointed, had a chance to witness the performance of several players who will be considered prominently for all-southern honors this fall. Leyendecker, Talley, and Gracey are three linemen who made practically all of the all-star selections last year. "Dixie" Roberts and Henderson are slated to make strong bids for backfield berths also.

Roberts went through the Carolina team as if he were on an unoccupied field on his 75-yard jaunt for a touchdown. When he passed the Carolina safety man, it looked as if the "Dixie Flyer" was passing through a small town. Roberts even forgot to blow his whistle.

Vandy's starting line-up outweighed the Tar Heels eleven pounds. The Commodores combined a 192-pound line with a backfield averaging 175 for their weight advantage.

One part of the game that seemed peculiar was the fact that Carolina made nineteen first downs to Vandy's seven. However, the Cubs out-hit the Yanks, but nevertheless they are still three games behind.

Carolina's passes seemed to be aimed in the general direction of a Vandy back practically every time. Roberts carried his 182 pounds lightly. The Vandy speedster is one of the fastest backs ever to grace Kenan stadium. He certainly lived up to his name yesterday.

The writer had the opportunity of seeing his first attempted drop kick yesterday. However, we still have to see successful attempt.

A glaring need of the Tar Heels is a reserve quarterback. Young Woollen's ability seems limited to punting, but he sure can get those away.

Bill Collins, younger brother of the Carolina coach, showed up well in yesterday's game, playing steady ball although he was not spectacular. Gordon McIver looked good at center also. The young Tar Heel broke through once to nail "Dixie" Roberts behind the line of scrimmage. Something that doesn't happen to that young man every day.

We happened to be sitting next to a Tulane scout, who came over to see Vanderbilt in action. He expressed the opinion that Vandy had a fair team. Vandy's scores came, not on straight football, but on errors by the Heels.

Tom White, Brandt, and Johnny Daniels showed up well in the backfield. White to Daniels looks like a good passing combination. Which reminds us that Stuart Chandler did some fine passing in the closing minutes. Easily the most versatile back on the squad, he seems to have an all-state berth cinched.

Right now it looks as if it will be a long time before the Tar Heels take a game. Georgia, Tennessee, Tech, State, Duke, and Florida are not easy meat for anybody and Davidson and Virginia may spring a surprise.

France has put a prohibitive tariff on American prunes. Since the imports of lectures from there are negligible, it is hard to know how to retaliate.—Detroit News.

RUTH AND GEHRIG HIT TWO HOMERS IN YANK TRIUMPH

Cuyler and Hartnett Also Hit Circuit for Cubs; New York Wins 7 to 5.

Led by Bambino Babe and Columbia Lou, the Yanks swept the Cubs into submission for the third straight time yesterday at Wrigley field, Chicago by the score of 7-5. Ruth and Gehrig led a home run procession with two circuit clouts apiece while Kiki Cuyler and Gabby Hartnett were also slamming one each. Root and Pipgras were the starting hurlers and a crowd of 50,000 including Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt watched the third slaughter of the series begin.

The Cubs yanked Root in the fifth inning with one out when he seemed to lose his effectiveness, allowing Ruth and Gehrig to hit successive homers. George Pipgras pitched fine ball all the way but was removed in favor of Penneck when Charley Grimm sent the dangerous Koenig in to hit for Tinning with Jorges on first.

Jorges, Cuyler Lead Hitters

Jorges and Cuyler were the hitting stars of the game each collecting three safeties. Jorges had a double and two singles while Kiki had a double and single with his homer. For the Yanks Chapman joined Gehrig and Ruth with two hits. Young Jorges also led in miscues with two bobbles. Herman and Hartnett each contributed an error to the Cub list while Lazzeri made the only Yank slip.

Ruth hit his home runs in the first and fifth innings, and his last was the fifteenth he has collected in world series competition. Gehrig did his clouting in the third and fifth stanzas.

The American league champions started the game off with a bang scoring three runs in the opening inning. Combs grounded to Jorges but the youngster threw wild to first and Combs stopped at second. Sewell was walked and both runners came home on Ruth's circuit smash into the right field bleachers. The Cubs were game though and scored one run in their half of the inning on a walk to Herman, and a double by Cuyler which scored Herman. The second inning saw each team fail to score.

Scoring in Third

In the third the Yanks pushed over a run when Gehrig smashed out his first homer but the Cubs scored two and almost tied the game with Cuyler's home run and Charley Grimm's hit which lashed through Chapman's legs and scored Moore from first.

The Cubs knotted the count in the next stanza when Jorges doubled, and scored when Lazzeri fumbled English's drive. The Yanks took the lead again in the fifth when Ruth and Gehrig both hit home runs in succession.

The Ruth-Gehrig act ended the scoring until the last inning when each team pushed another tally over. The Yanks scored when Hartnett muffed Lazzeri's fly and both Lazzeri and Dickey were safe as Herman dropped the catcher's fly in short left field. With two runners on base, Ben Chapman slashed a double scoring Lazzeri and leaving Dickey on third where he died as Pipgras fanned for the fifth time, a new world series record.

With their last chance before them and two runs behind, the Cubs began a desperate attempt. Hartnett led off with a home run into the left field bleachers. Jorges next up got his third hit of the game, a single to left. With the tying run on first Manager Grimm sent the veteran Koenig in to hit for Tinning. Fearful of Koenig's hitting, McCarthy called on Herb Penneck, a portside to retire Koenig. This switch in pitchers changed Cub strategy and Hemsley hit for Tinning instead of Mark. With a golden opportunity, Hemsley fanned, swinging at one of Penneck's tantalizing low curves. Herman next up, hit to Penneck who tossed him out at first. English ended the game hitting to Gehrig who made the out unassisted.

GURNEAU LOST TO STATE FOR YEAR

Star Athlete Finds Difficulty Making Scholastic Requirements at State College.

The poor scholastic standing of Sam Gurneau has robbed State college of one of its most important athletic figures this year, for the Superior, Wisconsin, boy has been unable to return to school for his senior year.

Gurneau earned seven monograms at State during his sophomore and junior years, starring in basketball and track, as well as on the gridiron. In his two years of competition with the varsity track outfit, he gained a first and a second place among individual performers at the state meets. As a freshman he captured the conference discus record with a toss of 137 ft. 10 1-2 in.

Carolina enthusiasts may remember Gurneau's 65-yard run for a touchdown against the Tar Heels two years ago when he played in the backfield. Last year he held down an end position.

Chapel Hill Wins Over Rocky Mount by 13 to 0

The Chapel Hill high school football team defeated Rocky Mount 13-0 in a fast moving game Friday afternoon.

In the first quarter Chapel Hill scored by a long march down the field and completed a pass for the extra point. The rest of that quarter was an exchange of punts. The second quarter began another march for the locals that was halted by the half with the ball on the five yard line. The half opened with Rigsbee making a thirty-five yard gain before he was finally downed. This was followed by a series of short gains and Partin plunged over. The try for the extra point was incomplete. The game ended with the Rocky Mount boys trying desperately to cross the goal line.

For the locals Rigsbee and Partin played nice games and Russ for Rocky Mount was a consistent gainer.

TAR HEELS MEET TENNESSEE VOLS NEXT SATURDAY

Travel to Knoxville to Tackle Second Conference Favorite In Third Game of Season.

ANCIENT SERIES IS CLOSE

Tennessee Has Won Five Games, Carolina Has Taken Four, With One Scoreless Tie.

The University of North Carolina will battle their second Southern Conference favorite in a row when the Tar Heels go out to Knoxville Saturday to play Tennessee's Volunteers a game which has a background that should make it a top-notch.

The Neyland-coached Vols have been scaling the heights of southern football more regularly than any other conference team for several years but the stubborn Tar Heels have fought them to 7-9 and 0-7 scores these last two years, and they will be out to win Saturday.

Tennessee has been too much for the Tar Heels in the four games played during the last half dozen years, but Carolina held the upper hand in the old days. So that the rivalry stands almost even.

The two institutions have met on the gridiron ten times at scattered intervals since 1893, with the series showing five victories for Tennessee, four wins for Carolina and one scoreless tie in 1919.

The Tar Heels will shoot the works Saturday in an effort to upset the conference favorites and to tie the ancient rivalry up again.

Both squads will be expecting and preparing for tough contests, for both are well fortified with lettermen and veterans who remember last year's epochal Carolina-Tennessee game in Kenan Stadium.

Johnny Branch was out, but the Tar Heels just played the harder. The stubborn forwards were tackling like demons, and the all-American McEver was smothered and the all-American guard Hickman battered until he had to be removed from the game early in the second half.

Tennessee outgained the Tar Heels, but the Carolina ball carriers showed their mettle, too. Every Tennessee threat was silenced except one and the Tar Heels might have won one of those scoreless ties and moral victories, had not a substitute quarterback fumbled a Tennessee punt on the 25-yard line and given the Vols their one big chance.

The 1930 game which Tennessee won 9-7 was another corker. The unforgettable Bobby Dodd generated them into

THEATRE BRINGS MANY PROMINENT STARS NEXT WEEK

George Arliss, Constance Bennett, Charles Ruggles, and Jack Oakie Among List.

A new George Arliss picture, "A Successful Calamity," opens the week's bill at the Carolina theatre tomorrow. The story deals with an American family of great wealth, so much wealth in fact, that no time is had for the enjoyment of real family life.

"Two Against the World," starring Constance Bennett, who is supported by Neil Hamilton, Hale Hamilton, Alan Mowbray and others, is Tuesday's feature. This cinema includes a court room trial in which a young society girl perjures herself to save her brother from electrocution and her married sister from scandal.

Unusual both in theme and treatment, "Life Begins," showing Wednesday, portrays the workings of a hospital maternity ward and the lives and tragedies of the women confined there. The management of the theatre has announced that no children under sixteen will be admitted to this show.

"Moon Madness," which plays such a prominent part in "Doctor X," coming Thursday, with Lionel Atwill, Lee Tracy, and Fay Wray heading an all-star cast, is said by Dr. Thaddeus Bolton, head of the psychology department at Temple university, to be an ancient hypothesis, long accepted by psychiatrists, and known to have a serious effect on the minds of persons afflicted with nervous disorders.

Charlie Ruggles, comedian featured in "The Night of June 13," coming Friday, is becoming one of the most frequently seen of all screen character players. In most pictures he has had the role of an inebriated gentleman, but in this he remains sober until practically the end of the picture.

New Men Wanted

His eagerness for new names was indicated when he said: "If I had a story by Rudyard Kipling on my desk, and one next to it by an unknown author which was almost as well done, I should run that of the lesser known man." Since the college graduates of today will be seated in the saddles of literature and politics tomorrow, it is extremely important that their views be public property.

Commenting upon the literary products of American collegians, Sedgwick remarked that they were little better than those of two decades ago. "It is a fairly static affair," he said. The wave of modernism has evidently made little change in the intrinsic value of the writings of university men.

There is a sharp difference between the writing in American and English universities, he believes. "If I want an article from England I know precisely what I will get. But the Americans are considerably less dependable. Where the British are highly polished and possessed of better technique, the native writers have more originality and dash to their work."

Italy May Quit League

Premier Mussolini in a speech before a midnight meeting of the Fascist grand council was expected to urge emphatically that Europe disarm for her own safety. In political circles it was intimated that Italy might possibly announce her withdrawal from the League of Nations. Sharp comment on the league and its failure to achieve disarmament have recently been made by Il Duce. At present, however, disarmament is said to be Mussolini's chief concern.

Lad Saves Three Lives

E. Bloomberg, youthful able seaman, yesterday swam through a beating surf, which a lifeboat could not dare, to rescue three survivors of a crew of forty-one of the freighter, Nevada. When it was impossible to launch the boats in the heavy seas, the youthful hero plunged into the cold waters with a line around his waist and swam with it to the stranded men. The entire crew of the President Madison, rescuing ship, volunteered to man the lifeboats, and several also volunteered to take the life line, but Bloomberg was chosen because of his swimming ability.

Chicago Welcomes Roosevelt

Nearly half a million people jammed Chicago's streets to welcome the presidential candidate of the Democratic party, Governor Roosevelt. The nominee had a busy day's program before him, including attendance at the third game of the world series, a conference with Illinois Democratic leaders, and a banquet, before continuing on to Detroit, the last stop on his far flung presidential campaign trip. Chicago's welcome was as tempestuous as any the Governor has received anywhere in his 8,900 mile jaunt.

Hindenburg 85 Today

President Von Hindenburg will celebrate his 85th birthday tomorrow. Germany's president was showered with messages of congratulation, flowers, wines, and other gifts sent to him. All German states dispatched congratulatory messages, and the papers printed columns of praise about the aged field marshal.

Max Sails for Germany

Max Schmeling, former world's heavyweight champion sailed for Germany early yesterday to spend the Christmas holidays. Since he has put Mickey Walker out of the picture, his next step towards regaining the championship will probably be a fight against Max Baer of California sometime in January or February.

Students' Classes At Baptist Church Active

The student classes of the Baptist church began their meetings last Sunday under the direction of new teachers. Dr. Cecil Johnson will teach the Young Men's class, while Dr. A. C. Howell will be the teacher for the Young Women's class. These classes are making plans for a larger number of students to hear the lectures of the new leaders.

Throughout the fall quarter, Dr. Howell will speak on the topic, "Some Fundamentals of Religion." Many sides of this question will be taken up each Sunday for lecture and discussion.

The B. Y. P. U. meets every Sunday evening at 6:45, and interesting programs with special music are planned for this quarter.

MANUSCRIPTS BY LOCAL AUTHORS READY FOR PRESS

lina, is scheduled to bring forth his second novel this fall. The title, which has been changed several times, is still a matter of conjecture; the book, however, will deal with the south and is the once announced as October Fair. Wolfe owes his literary beginning to the encouragement accorded his folk-plays by the local dramatic organization.

Russell's New Work

Still another volume of biography is Phillips Russell's latest work. Titled Harvesters, it will treat figures who, over a period of 700 years, have made definite contributions to man's advancement. Russell, who is a member of the English department, has also written important studies of John Paul Jones, Emerson, and Benjamin Franklin.

The more scholarly type of writing is represented in the publications of Dr. E. E. Ericson and Dr. R. P. Bond. The former has just published a philological work, The Use of Sva in Old English, while Professor Bond has written a definitive criticism of burlesque poetry in England in the eighteenth century. Both men are considered authorities in their chosen fields and are members of the English department here.

Those New Books

onment, the social and economic structure is changed. Believing these things, the author sets about to show how America has freed herself from her various social and economic orders: how she has in art and literature freed herself from the bonds of the imitative colonial complex, from the petty bourgeois mind, from the upper bourgeois attitude, from sectionalism. Finally, he believes that American literature—yea, American art as a whole—is now on the threshold of a new order; and he believes it is there because he believes the American social and economic order is also there. "An old America—an old world in fact—is in the process of dying, and a new one, still in the chrysalis stage, is struggling to be born." Hence Mr. Calverton would eschew Hergesheimer, Mencken, Krutch, Cabell, and T. S. Eliot, for they either cling to a dead world or build fairylands to live in; and he would cleave only unto John Dos Passos, Michael Gold, Lester Cohen, Granville Hicks, and Charles Yale Harrison, those writers "who are exponents of the proletarian outlook."

Mr. Calverton's thesis gets in his way at times, and he makes an occasional factual blunder. Moreover, one feels somewhat gorged on sociological pabulum, especial the terminology, for one may question such terms as "petty bourgeois" and other kinds of bourgeois also when applied to American life. One cannot avoid the reddish glare of the book. Nevertheless, whether one agrees with Calverton's prognostic action or not, he must in the main agree with the diagnoses. His analysis of our major social tendencies and their effect upon our culture in general and our literature in particular are valuable contributions to our knowledge of "main currents" in American life. The book deserves to be read.

We did not realize that Wednesday is the co-ed day to hold high tea. Henceforth we will have our afternoon at home on Tuesdays. We want the women of the University to feel free to drop in to the Bull's Head readings. We are an ex-co-ed ourselves.—M.C.D.

as: "The League of Nations," "Socialism: Principles and Outlook," "The Fabian Society: Its Early History," and "Is Free Trade Alive or Dead?" Dr. Henderson pointed out that the world could forget Shaw as a dramatist, a novelist, or as a critic of art and music, but he would yet be remembered as a pamphleteer, declaring that he is unrivaled since Swift.

The most important literary production of the Fabian Society was "Fabian Essays in Socialism," which contained essays by seven prominent socialists of the day, including Shaw. It was published in 1889 in England, and, unbeknown to the authors, almost simultaneously in America, where Shaw has always been well received and appreciated. The American edition, which was "pirated," that is, printed without permission of the copyright owners, is one of the rare Shavian items in the possession of Dr. Henderson.

Shaw's Novel Pirated

An amusing incident concerning "piracy" is told of Shaw's connection with the American publishing house which printed his first novel, Gashel Bryon's Profession, without the necessary permission. Shaw was at that time most anxious to obtain a foot-hold in America, and when he learned of this theft he gave the publishing house the right of publishing all his plays, as they had taken so much trouble and risk to print his novel. Shaw was spoken of as having objected to "piracy" only once, when Elbert Hubbard printed and edited to suit himself the famous little essay "On Going to Church," which has never been published in England, though it has been most popular in America.

Of especial interest to Americans was the dramatization of Gashel Bryon's Profession, which debunks the romantic spirit (Shaw once declared that he had got through romance at the age of nine) in which the climax is a prize fight. James J. Corbett, once the world's champion pugilist, played the title role in the original production.

A brief note to Dr. Henderson from Ellen Terry wishing him luck as her great friend's biographer, was of especial interest to those present who were familiar with Shaw-Terry Correspondence, perhaps the most outstanding book of non-fiction last year.

the lead, but about that time Rip Slusser and Jimmy Maus came into the Carolina backfield, cut the Vols to pieces in one long touchdown march, and were running them ragged as the game ended. The Carolina line was also going good that day, and after the game Bobby Dodd said he'd never been tackled harder than by Ellis Fysal, Carolina guard.

the first year that the degree in elementary education was conferred, there was only one graduate. There were six in 1930 and eight in 1931. In 1932, there were thirteen. Ten of these finished in the summer session. Thus, for its short life here the elementary division has enjoyed a healthy growth, and it is with great reluctance that friends of the university contemplate its removal.

The total number of graduates from the school of education for the year 1932 was ninety, sixty-eight being graduated in June and twenty-two at the end of the summer session. All of these graduates, save ten or twelve, have secured teaching positions for the year, this fact indicating that, despite the policy of retrenchment in public schools and the over-supply of teachers, the graduates of this university who are equipped to teach are in great demand.

what you have; to extend the membership without taking in new members just for the sake of new members, and to put on a real program of community service."

Governor Phillips' visit here was the forty-first official visit he has made to clubs in the fifty-seventh district since he was elected governor last spring. He always gets a most cordial welcome in Chapel Hill, where he spent his student days, and to show that he hasn't forgotten the folks here just before he began his address he called each member by his given name.

Vandy Downs Heels With Scoring Spree

was good for thirty yards, and a fifteen yard run following the pass made the score 26-0, Beasley making the extra point. A strong Vanderbilt offensive carried the ball to the ten yard line. Brandt nabbed Beck by the heel from behind on the 23-yard line, after the Commodore had broken through the entire Carolina team. Askew carried the ball over to make the score 32-0, Beasley failing to kick the extra point.

Carolina's only score during the game came in the third quarter when Phipps passed to Croom from the 19-yard line, the Burgaw boy scampering over from the 4-yard line. Phipps kicked the extra point to make the score 32-7, which incidentally was the same score by which Georgia beat Carolina last year.

Perhaps what was the oddest play of the game came in the closing minutes of the game when Jordan, Vandy's substitute center, intercepted a pass and ran thirty-six yards for a touchdown. Beasley kicked the extra point.

The game ended with Brandt making a beautiful catch of White's pass on the forty-six.

HARRY JENKS IS NEW PROFESSOR OF ENGINEERING

Harry Jenks, Recognized Authority in Field, Replaces Thorndyke Saville.

Professor Harry Neville Jenks, who is regarded as one of the foremost authorities in sanitary and hydraulic engineering in the United States has replaced Professor Thorndyke Saville in the school of engineering. Professor Saville has accepted a position at New York university.

Professor Jenks has had sixteen years of both teaching and practical experience, including four years at Iowa State college, where he was in charge of sanitary and hydraulic engineering, and at the same time, was sanitary engineer for the Iowa Engineering Experiment Station. He also is a frequent contributor to engineering periodicals and professional journals.

For the last two years Professor Jenks has been engaged as a private consulting engineer in Berkeley, California, during which time he handled quite a few large engineering undertakings. He is from Missouri, and moved with his wife, and their two children to Chapel Hill, September 1. He began his work in the University with the opening of the fall quarter.

LAW SCHOOL TO SPONSOR DANCE THURSDAY NIGHT

The entertainment committee of the law school will give an informal reception in the main reception room of Graham Memorial Thursday night at 8:00 o'clock.

The faculty will be presented to the law students at this time. After the presentation there will be dancing until 2:00 o'clock followed by refreshments. After refreshments are served the group of students and professors with their guests will attend a picture at the Carolina theatre, given through the courtesy of E. C. Smith.

The entertainment committee for this year is composed of the following law students: Archie Cannon, president of the law school student body; Archie Allen, Herman Merriell, and Carey Parker. They have many interesting features planned for the coming school year which will be announced later.

JUNIOR CLASS EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE WILL MEET

A meeting of the executive committee of the junior class has been called by Clyde Edwin Boyles, president, in Graham Memorial for Thursday night. The group will discuss plans of the class for the coming year and will hear the reports of the treasurer and secretary.

Harmon Will Be Honored

Francis Harmon, general secretary of the International Y. M. C. A. committee will be honored tonight at a special supper scheduled for 6:30 o'clock in the Duke university banquet hall. Immediately after the supper he will address the Duke "Y" assembly.

Delegates from Carolina will be Dean Francis Bradshaw, Bill McKee, president of the "Y," and Harry F. Comer, secretary of the "Y."

Students In Geology Traverse Continent

Four members of the advanced geology class and Dr. G. R. McCarthy of the University were members of the transcontinental study tour during the past summer. This tour lasted for eight weeks and visited southwest Canada, the Pacific Northwest, and the Olympic games at Los Angeles. The four students received college credits in geology on this tour.

Dr. John G. Douglas visited places of historical and geological interest in the British Isles, France, and Switzerland while he was abroad this summer.

Three other advanced geology students from the University took geology field courses at the University of Texas field camps in southwestern Texas.

PHI TO DISCUSS PARTY POLITICAL ACTIVITY ON HILL

Bills Concerning New Football Rules and Birth Control Will Also Be Discussed.

The Phi Assembly will convene in its second meeting of the year tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the Phi Assembly hall on the fourth floor of New East building.

Three resolutions are scheduled for discussion. The first is, "Resolved: That since the Young Democrats club, the Young Republicans club, and other political clubs on this campus tend to foster obsolete political animosities and have not established a place in an enlightened political atmosphere, their activity at the University should be abolished." The second resolution reads as follows, "Resolved: That the new changes in the football rules concerning the kick-off, substitutions, use of hands, and the dead ball have impaired the playing of the game rather than helped it, and that they should be revised to read as they were last year." The last bill, is, "Resolved: That the distribution of written matter and the giving of advice on birth control by licensed physicians should be legalized by congress."

Any students who are interested in debating and forensic work are invited to attend the meeting.

Two Students Undergo Appendicitis Operation

Six men were confined to the infirmary yesterday afternoon with slight illnesses. Their names are: C. A. Jensen, East Orange, N. J.; W. S. Rosenthal, Newark, N. J.; B. L. Lanier, Maple Hill; Lee Greer, Wilmington; Albert McMillan, Black Mountain; and C. D. Kellenberger, Greensboro.

Thomas S. Bennett, of Wadesboro, and Alexander M. Gibbs, of Columbia, South Carolina, were operated on for appendicitis last Wednesday at the Watts hospital in Durham. Although both cases were pronounced serious, the patients are recovering rapidly.

Entertainment Tickets

Books of tickets for the entire college year admitting the bearer to the complete series of entertainments given each year by the University can be secured for $3.00 in room 203, South building, between 9:00 and 5:00 o'clock every day.

Ed Lanier And Brother Give Own Version Of Good Samaritan Act

Self-Help Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and His Brother Give Up Their Beds in Room to Two Gentlemen Slightly Misinformed by Sign "Guest Room" Painted on Door.

Ed Lanier, self-help secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and his brother, Brasel, struck a new high recently for interpretation of the much-quoted Good Samaritan act.

The occurrence, which might be likened to the legend of the Arab and his camel, occurred last Friday evening. The brothers, who room at the "Y," went to the mid-night show. Thoroughly unaccustomed to returning to their domiciles at the unearthly hour of 2:00 a. m., they were keenly intent on getting to bed as quickly as possible.

Upon arriving at their sleeping quarters, they were astonished to find their beds occupied by two heavily snoring and apparently unconcerned young gentlemen. At this point, the Good Samaritan touch entered the proceedings. Showing a true Y. M. C. A. spirit of fraternity to all their fellows, they tip-toed out of the room to another directly across the hall. To their triple amazement, two more persons were as fast asleep there as their mates in the other room.

Sledding was getting hard now. After they decided to find the campus policeman, Blake, to arrange for a room in the basement of Steele, they encountered

Hamilton Hobgood who did his own Samaritan act by obligingly offering to take care of Brasel.

Despite his exemplary action toward the intruders, curiosity eventually mastered Ed and he returned to find out what those two fellows were doing in his room. When he reached his destination, he suffered the third shock of what must have been one astounding evening to him.

Just a Mistake

The invaders were wide-awake and thoroughly up and about. After profuse apologies, Ed discovered that they were led to enter the room by an erroneous sign on the door bearing the information "Guest Room." This sign was painted on the door some years ago, before Ed took over the room as permanent quarters.

The pair had just arrived from Wilmington for the Vanderbilt game and had evidently been well-informed of the hospitality and service accorded by the Y. M. C. A.

The general self-help director topped off the evening by telling his "guests" to go right ahead and use the room for a good night's rest. His own resting place that night is still a matter of conjecture.

P. U. Board Meets For First Time This Year

The Publications Union Board convened at its first official meeting of the year yesterday afternoon. Bill Hoffman, senior representative, failed to return to school this year and Haywood Weeks, president of the student body appointed Tom Walker in his place.

Officers elected for the coming year were: Robert Woerner, president; and Lonnie Dill, secretary. Other business brought before the meeting was the appropriation to the Yackety Yack for the 1933 edition, and a revision in the bonuses to the business managers of the various publications.

GREENLAW CLUB PICKS SWEDENBERG PRESIDENT

At a meeting of the members of the Edward Greenlaw club for graduate students Friday night in Smith building, Hugh T. Swedenberg, of Greenville, South Carolina, was voted president of the club. Elwood C. Hunter, vice-president; Andrew J. Mahler, treasurer; and Miss Helen Gores, secretary, were also elected.

Following the election of officers, Dean W. W. Pierson delivered a short address in which he showed the size and enrollment of the graduate school. He also mentioned briefly the progress made by the students in the school and told of the graduates from other schools. President Frank P. Graham attended the meeting but gave no address.

Book Market Readings

The Book Market has announced that the second in its series of afternoon readings is planned this afternoon in the book shop at 4:30 o'clock.

George Horner, of the University English department, will continue his reading from Stephen Leacock's humorous volume Afternoons in Utopia.

New Book Is Edited By Howard W. Odum

Dr. Howard W. Odum, head of the department of sociology and director of the institute for research in social science, has edited and arranged for publication the lectures of the late Franklin Henry Giddings under the title, Civilization and Society: An Account Of the Development and Behavior of Human Society. These lectures are taken from the late Columbia professor's personal papers. This book is a recent publication of Henry Holt and Company.

Dr. Odum has also contributed the last chapter on social sciences in a new book published by the Viking Press, Prospecting for Heaven: Some Conversations about Science And the Good Life, by Edwin R. Embree.

I. C. GRIFFIN ADDRESSES WILSON COUNTY GROUP

Professor I. C. Griffin, of the school of education, has returned from Wilson, where he attended the Wilson county and city principal's meetings Wednesday and Thursday of last week.

At the Wednesday meeting July B. Warren, secretary of the North Carolina education association, presented the cause of the association. Griffin then gave a short speech on "Supervision of the High Schools." Other out-of-town speakers included Dr. R. H. Wright, president of Eastern Carolina Teachers college, and Dr. W. K. Greene and Dr. A. M. Proctor, both of Duke.

Clubs Meet

Meetings of the local Kiwanis and Rotary clubs will take place this week as usual. The Kiwanis club will meet in the basement of the Methodist church at 6:30 o'clock while the Rotary club will conduct its weekly meeting at the Carolina Inn tomorrow.

New Instructors In Romance Languages

The Romance language department has two new teachers to take the place of two who have not returned this year. J. A. Hamilton, Jr., is teaching French in the place of Mr. Stabler. Mr. Hamilton taught last year at the Citadel. Mr. F. C. Hayes is a part-time instructor in Spanish, taking the place of Gallardo. Both of these new instructors are very capable instructors and are valuable additions to the department.

The Romance language department, with Dr. W. M. Dey as the head, is one of the most efficient and active departments in the University. Although it has been short of three men for offer able instruction.

LECTURE SERIES IS ARRANGED BY HENDERSON CLUB

Extension Division Will Conduct Group of Twelve Addresses.

Beginning October 13, the University extension division will conduct a series of twelve lectures at Henderson which have been arranged for the benefit of the Henderson women's club.

The series starts its second year with lectures to begin this fall. October 13 Dr. E. McNeill Poteat, pastor of the Pullen Memorial church in Raleigh, will lecture on "China." Dr. W. J. McKee, professor of education at the University will lecture on "India" October 2.

Dr. Knight to Speak

The third of this group will be a talk on Iraq by Dr. Edgar W. Knight, professor of education here. Following this Dr. Francis Hickman of the school of religion at Duke will speak on "Common Factors in Religions." Dr. Raymond Adams will offer two lectures, one on "Contemporary Puritans," and the other on "Thoreau and the Machine."

The club will hear Lamar Stringfield of the institute of folk music lecture on "Folk Music in Native Drama." Dr. Archibald Henderson will talk on "The Plays of Bernard Shaw," and Professor Frederick H. Koch will give a Shakespearian reading the title of which is to be announced later.

CHANGE IS MADE IN RESERVE BOOK FINES

A change has been made in the fines for delayed reserve books by the library department. The old fine was thirty cents for the first hour or fraction thereof and five cents for each additional hour or fraction thereof.

Students now failing to comply with the rules of the reserve reading books will have to pay a fine of twenty-five cents for the first hour or fraction, and ten cents for each additional hour or fraction thereof. Students failing to pay these fines are denied the privilege of using the reserve books.

Dormitories Entertained

Continuing with the series of smokers for the various dormitories, the management of Graham Memorial entertained the residents of Aycock dormitory last evening. Tonight, Lewis will be the guest, and Wednesday and Thursday the management will be host to Everett and Steele respectively.

PROFIT SHOWN IN RECENT AUDIT OF P. U. BOARD BOOKS

Publications Union Board Declares Profit for the First Time in Its History.

The University publications board showed a net profit for the year 1931-32 of $2,788.19, according to an audit issued last week by Professor J. M. Lear, treasurer of the Publications Union Board. The statement released showed that the Buccaneer was the only publication that was published at a loss, the amount being $44.90. This is the best year's operation for the past three years.

A similar statement issued last year for the year 1930-31 revealed a total net loss of $1,182. The greatly better financial condition this year results from increased student fees, lower printing costs, and a more efficient administrative policy, especially in the collection of bills.

During the year 1930-31, the Yackety Yack was the only publication that showed a net profit for the year, as compared with every publication showing a profit this year except the Buccaneer. This year the Yackety Yack netted a profit of $1,783.31, and THE DAILY TAR HEEL and Carolina Magazine showed a profit of $1,049.78.

ACTIVITIES DAY PROGRAM TO BE HELD THIS YEAR

Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, plans to continue the annual exercise known as Activities Day which was instigated by ex-president Mayne Albright last year. Activities Day marks the formal beginning of the year of endeavor and achievement in the various fields of activities here at Carolina.

The program will take place at assembly period during this month and calls for the presentation of the leaders in the different branches of student life here, and they will in turn give a short talk concerning their particular activity.

The purpose of this exercise is that the new members of the University, as well as the old, may know these various leaders, and hear the aims and plans for this coming year in their branch of campus life.

R. B. HOUSE SPEAKS AT FRESHMAN ASSEMBLY

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, offered many valuable suggestions to freshmen at yesterday's assembly. He stated that confusion and lack of concentration were the primary factors in causing so many men to fail during the first quarter. "Worry about financial matters, boredom and 'Thumbitness' (the excessive use of the thumb in waving passing motorists) are three things to avoid," he said. He stressed the advisability of using time to an advantage.

Students Defer Payment

One thousand and twenty-nine notes were signed by students deferring payment for their room-rents and registration fees at the beginning of the fall quarter this year. Totalling $75,515, these notes ranged from periods of five days to a month. The average note was for approximately $73.39.

Sanity in Argumentation

There is perhaps no more ardent supporter of the prohibition cause than the Christian Science Monitor. And correspondingly do the Scripps-Howard papers—such as the New York World Telegram, the Washington Daily News, the Cincinnati Post, and the Hearst papers—the Chicago American, San Francisco Examiner and the American Weekly, befriend the thirsty-man's issue. The odds in miles of ink printed in agitation on either side of the question undoubtedly favor the latter aggregation and a host of small wet fry, but what the dry cause lacks in numerical support it gains through the Monitor in fervence and sane argumentation.

Declining to go to the second rate editorial writer and prosperity-propheying near beer baron, the Monitor turns to statistics, statements of university professors disinterested in consummate pecuniary gain, heads of womens clubs, and welfare workers for pronouncements devoid of all but sincere convictions that their views are directed toward the betterment of American society. The "International Daily Newspaper" goes to such agencies as the president of the Nova Scotia Social Service Council, to Dr. William Bancroft Hill, author and lecturer at Vassar college, and to Dr. Thomas N. Carver, Harvard professor of economics for information and articles all in one issue. It is without argument that such an imposing list could not be motivated by selfish purposes. Thus, practically, morally, and economically, the Monitor advances the opinion of authority in highly specialized fields to propound the dry cause.

Let us of the anti-administration papers divorce ourselves from political sentiments and house-to-house polls of the already ill-informed voter and give them, if their cause is just, an un-biased and informative argument.—D.C.S.

Educational Progress

"University education," declares a University professor, "is about fifty years behind the progress of the world."

The superintendent of one of the state's largest public schools says, "The purpose of modern education is to teach children to enjoy a future age of leisure."

Surely and swiftly, technological advancement is precipitating civilization into an age in which leisure will be the rule and work the exception. Before this time shall be reached, considerable adjustment must be effected in the methods and rate of speed of the industrial machine. A two-hour working day is forecast by experts as a positive possibility in the future. Man has yet to free himself from the machine and to make the machine his slave.

But, in due time, these things will come to pass.

Meanwhile, what contribution is education making towards the inevitable future? Will it lag behind the times, as usual? Theoretically, education should be in the vanguard of progress.

Universities and colleges conceive their mission to be training for profitable employment, nothing more and certainly nothing less. The liberal arts degree per se is regarded with disfavor by students. Liberal arts graduates by the hundreds are taking commercial or technical courses after completing college.

The future is indeed dim and distant. By reason of the very methods, deliberate and sure, which it employs, education loses step with and falls behind progress. Unless it exerts itself to catch up, today's liberal institutions will find themselves tomorrow's citadels of conservatism.—E.C.D.

For Service Rendered

The faithful fire fighter who has ridden forth to many a blaze during a stated number of years finds at the end of this time that he is required to relinquish his position to a younger man. He is not, however, left without further means of support. He is pensioned. This procedure is followed not only to maintain the efficiency of the fire department, but also as a mark of appreciation to the elderly gentleman who has given his best years in the service of his fellow men.

This same system seems to be in use in virtually every vocation except that of university teaching. In this field a man is not recognized as being outstanding until he arrives at or passes the age at which in other walks of life men are contemplating retirement. Having achieved recognition, he still must continue teaching because salaries have always been low and he has not accumulated enough of the world's wealth to live comfortably in his declining years.

Thus the university professor goes on, each year losing more and more of his keenness and inflicting poor instruction and injustice upon those unfortunates who find it necessary to be enrolled in his course. If a merciful death takes him away, so many more students are spared his uninformative courses, and he is spared the drudgery of continuing what is by now a most monotonous task.

In this very institution a professor has, through bad sight and poor hearing due to infirmities of age, been known to give the mark made on a recitation to a student other than he who recited. This condition has existed for at least three years, and may continue for an indefinite time in the future. If such conduct is not unjust, it is at the very minimum inefficient. The elimination of inefficiency should be the prime aim of an institution of higher education.

It is most certainly true that this is not the time for the in-

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Man's Best Friend

Pertaining to an editorial which appeared in your paper last Saturday, entitled "A Dog's Life."

The editorial writer who composed this obvious space filler showed a depth of erudition seldom seen in a paper, where, alas, snap judgment and immature opinions are too often the rule rather than the exception. He has expressed his own opinion in a dangerous way by intimating that dogs are tortured by medical students and faculty for the fun of hearing them howl and seeing them gripped in the agonies of an excruciatingly painful death. . . .

Anyone who has ever had a dog or knows anything about them (we wonder if J.F.A. really ever had one) knows that they always howl when moved to new quarters, and also knows that when a group of dogs are left alone all start howling when one begins. Not infrequently a cat strolling leisurely and innocently across the floor will set all the inhabitants of "Caldwell Kennels" to a full use of their vocal apparatus. The "bloodcurdling yelp" heard was undoubtedly caused by no more an atrocious act than the janitor putting the "disreputable looking hound" in his pen, where at least he would be well fed and comfortable, until the time came for him to give his life that man might know more of life, and be better prepared to stave off the common fate of all, death.

Although THE DAILY TAR HEEL, through its writer, does not decry vivisection, it seems to have some idea that it is not being done in quite the right way in Chapel Hill. Suffice it to say here that the work of Dole, now known wherever physiology is studied, was done here, with the forerunners of these same dogs which jar the sensibilities of THE DAILY TAR HEEL. Also that the work of our own MacNider, known everywhere that medical science is followed, is dependent on these dogs. Many of us might not be here today had not the predecessors of these dogs taught students of the past the fundamentals of physiology, pharmacology, and immunology, so that they might be fit to render scientific service, not experimental guess work, to human patients.

When one knows something of the glorious history of the dog in man's fight against disease—how many thousands have given their lives that we might be able to combat in some measure man's greatest enemy, how some of the terrible scourges of the past are no more, and how, daily, new information is being gained in this never ending struggle, all through the use of animal experimentation—when one knows this, then one can truly testify that the dog is "MAN'S BEST FRIEND."

auguration of policies which will involve increased expenditures from the state's already sadly depleted treasury, but may it be suggested that measures be taken to alleviate this situation as soon as practicable. The elimination of such inefficiency is no more than our youth deserve and no less than is due our aged instructors, who have in many cases greatly helped to raise the name of their University to the high place which it now occupies.—O.S.S.

In The Main

By MAYNE ALBRIGHT

Some people still take signs seriously. For instance the two Wilmington boys who hitch-hiked to the Vanderbilt game. Not having any place to sleep they wandered into the Y. M. C. A., and seeing there a bedroom marked "Guest Room" they took it seriously enough—as Ed. Lanier, the owner of the bed, found when he came into his room about midnight. It should be added that Ed, good Yimica Clubman that he is, sought shelter elsewhere, leaving his room to his "guests."

I had heard of the Jig-Saw Puzzle craze that is sweeping the country and breaking up contract parties everywhere, and had idly wondered how it could be so fascinating. I no longer wonder. Wednesday night Dr. and Mrs. Leavitt came by Graham Memorial with a 266 piece set and I sat perfectly happy for five incredibly short hours until a beautiful electric train emerged from the jumbled pile of queer shaped blocks. There's nothing to it, but it gets you. Real Jig-Saw fans want bigger and bigger pictures cut into smaller pieces. Several places in town, including Graham Memorial, now have sets to lend, to rent, or to sell.

Mr. Phillips Russell has taken a long forward step in University teaching methods by holding a two-hour session with his class each Thursday night instead of the regular Thursday and Friday morning classes. There is an atmosphere of informality and sociability about these night meetings which prompts real interest in the discussions and in the work. You have a feeling of knowing intimately the authors under consideration, and you identify your own efforts with accomplishments instead of with credits.

Incidentally in his last lecture Mr. Russell aptly characterized one of James Joyce's wildest neologistic flights by saying "It takes a well educated man to understand even the explanations."

Nelson Robbins, who, from The Ink Well, dashes off such good descriptions of the University, has evidently never passed Dr. Collier Cobb's Geology 21, for the famed quotation about man's environmental influences must be repeated accurately word for word and each in its place before you may receive credit for this popular course. Dr. Cobb and loyal host of past members of Geology 21 are shocked, mortified, and offended at Mr. Robbins rendition: "You are largely what you are, because you are where you are." The correct version, of course, is "We are what we are largely because we are where we are." On such trifles hang the fate of nations and diplomas.

And since we are talking about typical sayings of our University professors, see how many of the following expressions you recognize.

1. "All my jokes are bound to be good—they've lasted since Greece was in its glory."
2. "In these old halls, and under these great oaks—"
3. "Speaking in terms of international relations we might see—"
4. "How much are you a part of society; how much is society a part of you?"
5. "I am a monomaniac. Everyone should be a monomaniac."
6. "I see in this morning's paper that 'The Sage of Northampton' that blankety-blank so-

The Campus and National Politics

Socialists are the only politically conscious students on the campus. They seem to be the only ones of a vast student population who are interested enough in their own and their country's welfare to try to do something about it. Colleges are becoming known as hotbeds for Socialism and Communism. There are plenty of loyal conservatives left on the campus but they sit idly by and leave politics to their parents and the political bosses. The college radicals are the only ones who are not afraid to blow their own horns and let the world know what issues they support.

HOW TO AVOID BONERS

THE UNITED STATES IS LOCATED IN THE TEMPERANCE ZONE

POOR BILL BONER—he just can't think straight. He thinks a person is safe from contagious disease if he is intoxicated!

But no college man ever pulls boners with a good pipe between his teeth. There's something about a pipe and tobacco that soothes a man, helps him think straight. That is, of course, if he uses the right tobacco. A recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite tobacco at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

If you're not already an Edgeworth smoker, there's new smoking satisfaction waiting for you. Edgeworth's blend of fine old burleys is distinctive, different. You'll know—after the first puff.

You can buy Edgeworth tobacco anywhere in two forms—Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed and Edgeworth Plug Slice. All sizes—15¢ pocket package to pound humidior tin. Or, if you would like to try before you buy, write for a free sample packet. Address Larus & Bro. Company, 120 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va.

Four Tag Football Games Open Intramural Season

Tag Football Games Open Ninth Season of Intramurals; Lewis, A. T. O., Old West, and Pi Kappa Phi Score Wins in First Day's Play; Games Close.

The ninth annual intramural race began yesterday when eight tag football teams opened their season. Intramural athletics this year are under the direction of Bo Sheppard and Herman Schnell and the teams will seek trophies won last year by the Best House, winners of the campus wide cup and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, leaders in the fraternity championship.

In the first game yesterday Lewis took a tight battle from Ruffin seven to two on first downs. "Snooks" Aitken was the big gun for the winners grabbing pass after pass for long gains on the offense also intercepting several Ruffin passes on the defense. Lowdermilk and Peacock did the passing for Lewis which netted the majority of their first downs. The kicking of Bell was the highlight of the Ruffin attack while Virgil Weathers was outstanding on the defense for the losers.

A. T. O. Rallies

Putting on a last quarter rally which netted a touchdown A. T. O. was victorious over Phi Sigma Kappa by three downs. Both teams got a touchdown while A. T. O. had eight first downs to Phi Sigma Kappa's five. The losers scored first in the opening quarter on a long pass thrown by Kaveny. A. T. O. however, took the lead in first downs as a result of Thompson's passing and Smith's running. The marker which made the winner's first downs the margin of victory came on a long pass from Thompson to Menge. Neither team was able to get the extra point after scoring which would have been enough to win regardless of first downs.

Manly Loses

Old West used a tight defense to down Manly five to two on first downs in the low score game of the afternoon. Neither team made a serious threat to count a touchdown. Old West took the game in the first half, scoring four of their first downs while in the final half both teams got only one first down each. Most of the winners' long gains were the result of passes thrown from Crouch to Beam. Crouch also did some nice punting for Old West. Kesselman was the outstanding player on the offense for Manly while Womble of the winners and Taylor of the losers starred on defense.

Pikas Beaten

In a slow and loosely played contest Pi Kappa Phi triumphed over Pi Kappa Alpha 14 to 0. The winners also had a long lead in first downs. Pool was the outstanding man on the winners' team, doing all the passing and punting and having a hand in all the scoring. Williams was best for Pi Kappa Phi on defense while Carpenter was the star of the Pikas' attack.

Theatre Is Sponsor Of Prosperity Contest

The management of the Carolina theatre, where votes for the Chapel Hill prosperity contest are being balloted, requests that those who are holding votes in order to deposit them at the last minute refrain from doing this. Although there are twenty participating merchants, the votes are coming in slowly due to the fact that they are not being deposited when received from the merchants.

It is not too late to enter new contestants, and those desiring to enter themselves or friends may do so.

WILMER HINES AND DAVE MORGAN GO TO VIRGINIA MEET

Members of National Championship Tennis Team Will Participate In Tournament.

Wilmer Hines and Dave Morgan, two members of last year's national championship tennis team left Sunday for White Sulphur Springs, Virginia where they are to play in the Intercollegiate tennis tournament held each year by the Greenbrier Golf and Tennis club.

Coach Kenfield accompanied the boys on the trip and the Tar Heels will strive to win the third leg on the doubles cup as well as take part in the singles competition. Carolina has won two legs on the cup and a victory this year would mean permanent possession of the trophy. Wilmer Hines and Hinky Hendlin won in 1930 and last year Hines teamed with Harley Shuford to take the second leg. The University of Virginia won the first time in 1929 when Alonzo Smith, ranking tennis player teamed with John Martin.

In a wire from Coach Kenfield yesterday he said that Wilmer Hines had been seeded number one in the tournament with Morgan following him on the seeded list. Wilkinson of Marshall college and Morrison of Virginia were the other seeded players being listed three and four respectively. The doubles team of Carolina was seeded number one in that competition.

DUKE ELEVEN IS HIGHEST SCORING TEAM OF BIG FIVE

Blue Devils Roll Up Total of Fifty-Seven Points; State Takes Second Place.

Duke University's Blue Devils went on a scoring spree at the hands of V. M. I. Cadets last Saturday afternoon to tally at will, running up a 44-0 count in the "Flying Squadron's" own stronghold. When this scoring orgy was completed the Duke gridsters won the right to the Big Five title in points scored.

The Blue Devils of Coach Wallace Wade have a total of fifty-seven points, just ten more than their next rival, the N. C. State Wolfpack. Despite the fact that the Duke gridmen won scoring laurels, they were unable to oust Ray Rex, stellar back on the Wolfpack, from individual scoring honors. Rex, giant sophomore fullback, has eighteen points to his credit; his nearest contenders are three cogs in the Blue Devil backfield, Mason, Cox, and Laney, each having tallied two touchdowns.

Although the field goal has become a rarity with North Carolina eleven, "Galloping Bob" McQuage, Wolfpack field general, managed to negotiate a goal from placement against Richmond college last Saturday. The points after touchdown are also quite rare, but Ershler, Duke back, has made two.

COLLINS SHIFTS BACKFIELD MEN TO GET DEFENSE

Phipps, Daniels, and McCaskill Are Newcomers in Varsity Combination.

There were several major shake-ups in the rankings of Carolina players yesterday afternoon. Head Coach Collins cited the shortcomings and errors of the Vanderbilt game and started the boys to work for the Tennessee game Saturday at Knoxville.

The team came through the Vanderbilt tussle in good physical condition, Tom White, left halfback, was the only man to miss practice and he was out nursing a wrenched ankle. In the shake-up, Johnny Phipps and Norman McCaskill were shifted to the first team and Johnny Daniels was moved up to the first from the third as a reward for some excellent pass receiving and all-around play against Vandy. Stuart Chandler was the only regular back to hold his position.

The second backfield which worked at blocking ends while the offensive tackle blocked out defensive guards included Woolen, quarterback; Croom and Thompson, halfback; and Lassiter, fullback. Croom took White's position at left halfback with Thompson at right.

The work of Jim Tatum and Bill Collins, substitute tackles was a pleasing surprise Saturday, and Tatum was alternating at both tackles today, obviously set for much service against the Vols.

Coach Bob Fetzler who scouted the Tennessee team against Mississippi Saturday reported the Vols had a wealth of reserve material and he ran the Carolina reserves through Tennessee plays in preparation for a scrimmage against the varsity. The practice was spent in blocking for the most part and the session ended with the varsity backs running against a line of freshman tackles in an effort to improve open field running and drive.

Coach Collins told the boys they were a hundred per cent better against Vandy than they were against Wake Forest; praised the line for its play and the blocking, showing that Carolina outgained Vanderbilt except for a pair of long runs for which the poor tackling of the defensive backs was responsible; and said that the big weaknesses against the Commodores were poor tackling by the backs, poor open field running, and poor pass defense, all credited to the backfield.

Had it not been for these shortcomings he said Carolina would have been playing on even terms with one of the south's best club's Saturday, and the worst thing to him was that the boys knew how to do these things, having done them last year, but still fell down.

It now appears that Congress was just around the corner when President Hoover predicted a return of prosperity. — Louville Courier-Journal.

AROUND the FIELD

By CLAIRBORN M. CARR.

"YOU WILL HAVE ONE thing for your column Monday," Dan McGugin, Vanderbilt coach, told sports writers Saturday night in the dining room of the Washington Duke hotel. "We were darn lucky to beat North Carolina thirty-two points and we had to have the breaks at that. Those three passes that resulted in touchdowns were completed with the help of Providence. That was certainly a great football game this afternoon, we had an edge over the Tar Heels but not thirty-two points."

PETE GRACEY, ALL-SOUTH-ERN center last year and potential candidate for that berth on the all-American team this year commented on the game Saturday night. He spoke very highly of three members of Carolina's line. In his opinion Harry Hodges is one of the best tackles in the south. He said, "Hodges may not be in there making so many brilliant tackles but he is one of the best blocking tackles I have ever played against." You remember Gracey played a guard position on the defense.

JUNE UNDERWOOD AND George Barclay also impressed the Vanderbilt star. Asked what he thought of Underwood as a center of two games experience he remarked the June played a whale of a game Saturday but that he had little contact with Underwood due to his shift in position on defense. On the offense however, Gracey played opposite the Tar Heel and he said, "Our line plays, two guards and two backs lead the play and all the center can possibly do is to pile the interference, Underwood did this very well and also was good on pass defense, probably the most difficult part of center play."

WHEN TOLD THAT GEORGE Barclay was the only member of the all-time Kiski team that had not made the all-American team Gracey said that Barclay was a hard hitting, clever guard and that he certainly had potentialities and should develop into a great player before his career at Carolina closed.

GRACEY WAS A KEEN observer of guard play during the game. He told the writer that during the game Carolina guards were pointing the way they were Griffith and Hutchison Pitch Great Ball for "All-Star" Team.

Coach Hearn's regular "All-Star" varsity baseball squad proceeded to shut out the "Professional" reserve squad in another fall practice game yesterday afternoon by the score of 3 to 0. With the veteran Griffith and the promising frosh southpaw, Hutchison, alternating in the box and with "Red" Mathewson receiving their offerings behind the bat in his first appearance this fall, the varsity men outshone their rookie rivals.

Strayhorn, who shared the catching assignment with Mathewson, opened the attack with a triple in the third inning which clinched the victory. After the varsity hitters had cross-

CHESS PLAYERS ARE REQUESTED TO MEET TONIGHT

All chess players of the campus have been requested to meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock in room 209, Graham Memorial. Novices, beginners, amateurs, and chess enthusiasts are welcomed to enroll as members of the Carolina Social Chess club.

At this meeting Paul J. Miller, Jr., national president of Chi Eta Sigma, honorary social chess fraternity, and of the Intercollegiate Chess Association of America, and Chess Editor of several southern periodicals, will speak for fifteen minutes on "Current Chess Literature in the World."

It is to be remembered that Duke university defeated the Carolina Chess team by the one-sided score of 16-2 in the 1932 Spring Tournament, the first chess match between these two universities. All chess players are urged to attend the lectures that will be offered by the Carolina Social Chess club during the present quarter. As quickly as the chessers can be whipped into match material, a challenge will be issued to the Duke club.

APPOINTMENTS TO SIT FOR PICTURES BEING MADE NOW

H. N. Parsley, editor of the Yackety Yack, announces that all pictures of the junior and senior classes must be taken within the next few weeks.

Those students who have not had their appointments will please make them in the next few days. Booths for this purpose will be run at chapel period in the Y. M. C. A. lobby and in Pritchard-Lloyd's. Appointments can also be made direct by phone with Wooten-Moulton.

The system used this year is entirely different from that used previously. By class vote all fees for this purpose are paid from the class dues rather than from individual students. A number of the appointments were made at the time of registration and those pictures have been taken.

It is hoped that by the use of this method all photography work will be completed by the end of October.

Thief Foiled In Raid On The "Y" Treasury

Receipts and Papers Only Loot Discovered by Unapprehended Intruder.

A victim of the current epidemic of Hooveritis (sans l'argent), who decided that his pecuniary coffers needed replenishing, was foiled by circumstances Saturday night in an attempted robbery on the campus Y. M. C. A., the object of his ill-conceived action.

As the local association has a policy of depositing all funds at the close of each business day, the would-be pilferer found nothing but a lot of papers and receipts in the cash drawer.

A handy entrance was found via the window in the information office from which the main office was entered. Messrs. Comer and McKee, chief investigators in the local mystery act, have as yet discovered no finger or foot prints, or any other incriminating evidence.

pulling out of the line. This observance was of fundamental importance to the Vanderbilt defense because it telegraphed the whole Tar Heel play. What Coach Collins' attack needs more than anything else is deception and Gracey was able to diagnose the play by some defect in the guards' stance. Going down under one of the punts the Commodore center told the Tar Heel player that he was pointing. This act of Gracey's was an example of the spirit of the whole Vanderbilt team which was one of true sportsmanship, they wanted to win but not by taking advantage of some carelessness on the opponents part.

FRANK SMITH DID NOT show any signs of an injury in Saturday's game but Friday night Dr. Abernathy lanced a cleft wound in his right leg which had become infected. The doctor reported that Smith had a nasty looking leg but Frank showed no ill effects against the Commodores.

TOMMY HENDERSON, THE smart Vanderbilt quarterback was a second string quarter until "Mighty" Close was ruled ineligible and he certainly filled in well Saturday. Due to his excellent showing all around Coach McGugin said Saturday night that Henderson would be shifted to a halfback when Close returns this week. Close took a make-up examination Sunday in math and was expected to be eligible this week.

COACH WALLACE WADE'S Blue Devils swamped V. M. I. and look like real contenders but they will meet an acid test this week in the Auburn Tigers. The Tigers have scored two one-sided victories this year by piling up one hundred and forty-three points to their opponents' goose egg. Wade has been hit by injuries to Sink and Cornelius, star center and halfback respectively. Sink was advised to give up football due to a slight leakage of his heart and Cornelius is out for four or five weeks due to an ankle injury. Neither of these men played against V. M. I. but both starred in the season's opener against Davidson. Sink had been losing weight regularly for the past week and the examination disclosed the leakage. This was Sink's last year of eligibility while Cornelius is a sophomore.

Following the varsity's final run in the seventh inning, Terzini replaced Parker in the catcher's role for the reserves and turned in a performance to warrant praise from the usually closemouthed Bunn Hearn. The coach is expecting great things from this yearling catcher and is also enthused about the throwing ability of Zaizer, a new addition to the outfield. This afternoon the Tar Heel nine will be afforded a rest from the tedious playing grind since Hearn plans only a light batting and fielding workout for today's program.

only a month and a half away, every student on the campus should know the issues at stake and the platforms of both parties or at least that of his own preference; and yet out of three students questioned only one could name more than two planks of either platform.

Students, being the cream of the nation's intellectual crop, should be tearing their hair over political issues. Instead their most important topic of discussion is their last date or the next one.

Every student who feels that his future well-being is of any importance should understand the current political issues and should be supporting those that are worthwhile. Those who get into politics know the great attraction it has for its participants. Phrased pedantically, there is no more thrilling adventure in present day life than to enter into the political jumble.

Students can lobby at conventions, talk to friends, write their congressmen, and influence their parents to vote in favor of worthy projects. CONSTANCE BENNETT STARS IN SHOW TODAY

"Two Against the World," starring Constance Bennett, playing at the Carolina theatre today, is taken from the novel by Marion Dix and Jerry Horwin. It has a scene in a court room trial in which a young girl perjures herself to save her brother from electrocution and her married sister from scandal. She confesses to a series of clandestine meetings with a man whom her brother has slain. Her own sister is guilty, but lets her shoulder the affair to evade a domestic tangle.

The supporting cast includes Neil Hamilton, Helen Vincent, Gavin Gordon, Allen Vincent, Walter Walker, Roscoe Karns, Alan Mowbray, and Hale Hamilton.

WALKS AND GROUNDS OF LAUNDRY TRANSFORMED

Through the efforts of Superintendent G. H. Paulsen and his staff of workers the grounds about the University laundry have been transformed from a barren waste-land to one of cultivated beauty. What was once a swamp is now a complete farm with corn, peas, potatoes and other vegetables growing throughout. The entrance, both for those that walk as well as those that have cars, has been re-surfaced.

The outside is now in harmony with the inside of the laundry proper, which is, in everybody's estimation, the cleanest, and brightest of all power laundries.

The audit, which was made last spring at the close of the school, will be published in the next issue of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.

Season Ticket Sales On Playmakers Slow

George Pearson, representative of the Playmakers' current ticket sales campaign, estimated yesterday afternoon that not more than two hundred season tickets had been sold throughout the past week. He is anxious that the student body support the activities offered by the Playmakers for mutual benefit to themselves and the society. Season tickets will be obtainable upon the campus until the quota of 900 sales has been reached. The first scheduled production, one of a group of modern romantic comedies now under consideration, is only about three weeks in the offing.

REPRESENTATIVES OF 'Y' GROUPS TO MEET IN RALEIGH

Many Prominent Speakers Will Be Present at Hi-Y Congress This Week-end.

The University of North Carolina "Y" cabinets will dispatch fifteen visiting delegates to the annual Hi-Y congress which meets in Raleigh this week-end.

The Freshman Friendship Council will send the greatest number of representatives. They are: Butler French, Jack Dunn, Jack Tolson, David McIlhenny, Thomas C. Cofer, Jack Hamer, John Clark, and Jessie Parker. Ed Lanier, and Jim Steere, advisors to the group, will accompany them. From the second year men's cabinet the following men will go: Claude Freeman, Locke Sloope, Herbert Sutter, J. D. Winslow, and Jack Pool. Bill McKee, president of the "Y," and Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the "Y," will attend also.

Noted Citizens to Speak
A most brilliant group of speakers has been arranged for by the Gene Turner Hi-Y club of Raleigh, the host organization. John Park, publisher of the Raleigh Times, Honorable Josiah William Bailey, senator from North Carolina, Reverend Henry Ruark, of Rocky Mount, Reverend J. R. Farris, president of the Raleigh Ministerial Association, and Honorable O. Max Gardner, governor of North Carolina, will be the principal speakers. The final address to the congress will be made by Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University.

DEVELOPMENT OF DRAMA GROUP IS TRACED BY KOCH

Playmakers Director Believes
North Carolina Richest State
In Natural Talent.

Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, lectured Sunday night on "Our Adventures in Playmaking," recalling the hardships undergone by the first members of the group which has now come into national prominence.

The speaker, by means of slides, traced the work of the Playmakers from the time when one of their sets supposed to represent a lob cabin turned out more like a chocolate layer cake until the time when a group of them were received by Calvin Coolidge at the White House.

Poor Equipment
When he came here in 1913, stated Professor Koch, the shabby equipment possessed by the University testified to the neglect of the fine arts on the part of North Carolinians. Up until that time practically no effort at drama had been made in this state.

Great difficulty was encountered by the actors in the few home talent plays that had been attempted before his coming, the "stage" being a platform built over the first rows of seats in Memorial hall, and the players being forced to climb in the windows from the top floor of the Y. M. C. A. to reach the back of the stage.

Freshman 'Y' Cabinet Plans Hi-Y Congress

The Freshman Friendship Council had its second regular meeting of the current scholastic year Tuesday night at the Y. M. C. A.

Plans were discussed as to sending delegates to the Hi-Y congress at Raleigh this week-end, and eight members responded to the call.

A report of the distribution of the free copies of the magazine Intercollegian was made at the meeting, along with a fine response made by the membership committee evidenced by the large number of new boys present at the gathering.

GROUP OF EAGLE SCOUTS ORGANIZE

Group Sponsored by Rotary Club
Will Meet Each Wednesday
In Memorial Hall.

An Eagle Scout organization, sponsored by the Chapel Hill Rotary club, has been formed at the University. It is composed of University students, and will have open meetings for new members, the time of which will be designated later. This group will have its regular meetings every Wednesday evening in 209 Graham Memorial at 7:30 o'clock.

The following students are charter members: R. L. Hinson, Murfreesboro, N. C.; Kirley Smith, Jr., Houston, Texas; Henry Allijson and Parks Austin, Charlotte, N. C.; Alvin Zink, Andover, Mass.; Donald R. Seawell, Craig McIntosh, and Nathan Walker, Chapel Hill, N. C.; Lee J. Greer, Wilmington, N. C.; Billy Greet, Asheville, N. C.; James Montgomery and Wendell Dunbar, High Point, N. C.; and R. P. Umstead, Stem, N. C.

Phi Delta Phi Will Meet At Assembly

Members of Phi Delta Phi, national legal organization, will assemble today at chapel period in the first year class room in Manning hall for the purpose of planning a campaign of activities for the coming year, Archie Allen, president of the local chapter, announced yesterday.

The organization expects to lay plans this morning for a series of suppers to take place one about every two weeks, at which some speaker will be invited to make an address on some subject pertaining to the legal profession. The election of officers for this year has not taken place yet, and it is to be postponed until grades are received from the first year men in the law school, which will be immediately after mid-term examinations.

Association of Colleges Meets at New Orleans

The association of colleges and secondary schools of the southern states will have its thirty-seventh annual meeting at the Hotel Roosevelt in New Orleans, November 28 to December 2. The president this year is Dr. Joseph Roemer of Peabody college.

Daily Tar Heel Reporters

All DAILY TAR HEEL reporters who have not checked up their week's work with the managing editor are required to report to him at the office today with clippings of the work they have done from last Wednesday up to yesterday.

SANDWICH BOYS WILL BE TAXED

Ordinance Requires Payment of Ten Dollars to Protect Merchants and Consumers.

The ten dollar per head tax on those selling edibles in the dormitory will be enforced as strictly as possible this year, stated W. E. Caldwell, town manager, yesterday.

The law providing for the tax, which is a local ordinance passed for the protection, of local merchants as well as for the consumers of the food sold, was passed two years ago.

Allowed under the state law is a tax up to one hundred dollars a year per person, so the present tax may be considered as fairly lenient.

At the time the license for the sale of edibles is issued to those who wish to augment their incomes in that way, the food is inspected, to be sure that the food meets the requirements of the local health department. The source of sandwiches and other foodstuffs is investigated.

Europe's Destiny Depends On That Of Germany, Says Spann

University Professor Believes Military Civil War Would Have Ruined Germany; Glad to See That Movement Toward Fighting Is Now on Decline.

During the three months' that he spent abroad this summer doing private research, Dr. Meno Spann of the University German department was deeply impressed with the turbulent political situation in Germany, where the struggle for supremacy between National Socialists and Communists precipitated a governmental crisis some months ago.

Beneath the apparent surface of factional cross-currents, Dr. Spann believes there is a broader trend which in time will influence the entire continent of western Europe. "The destiny of Europe depends largely on the destiny of Germany," he stated. "Feverish excitement throughout the country shows that there is history in the making, and one only has to consider that as far as Communism is concerned, it is a question of Germany's decision of her future course as to whether Europe will follow her example."

Nazis vs. Communists

After witnessing the friction between the Nazis and the Communists government, Spann thinks that "the Hitler party may be criticized, but it has at least become one of historic importance already in its counterbalancing the Russian type of communism, which would be unsuited to the needs of the German people."

"One must keep in mind that the parties are not political in

PLANS DISCUSSED TO RAISE SCOUT FUNDS

At a luncheon meeting yesterday afternoon in Graham Memorial plans were discussed concerning the campaign to raise the money pledged by the Chapel Hill district to the Cherokee council. About thirty prominent local men attended the meeting, which was presided over by Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt.

Buccaneer Meeting

There will be a meeting of the business staff of the Buccaneer Thursday night, October 5, at 7:00 o'clock in the office, 207 Graham Memorial.

NEW PLAYMAKER SHOW SELECTED

Try-outs for "Uncle Tom's Cabin," First Production of Year,
Are Set for October 10.

Uncle Tom's Cabin, by Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, will be the first presentation of the Carolina Playmakers, which is scheduled for November 4, 5 and 6. Because of its drama and its colorful scenic and costume possibilities this play will take precedence over Philip Barry's Holiday, which has been under consideration but which will be postponed until later on in the season.

The classic of '60's will be done in the period scenery and costumes and with the exaggerated acting of that time.

For the convenience of those students wishing to tryout for this production, copies of the play will be found in the reading room at the library. Tryouts are scheduled for Monday, October 10, at 4:00 and 7:00 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre.

the usual sense of the word, but the issues involved have become a religion. All this proves that something is going on of vastly more importance than mere political re-arrangement or an attempt to pull out of a business depression." However, Spann does admit that the economic effects of the World War are partially responsible for the present upheavals.

Fundamental Change

This "something of more importance" than political struggle, he explains, is the re-shaping of history and the re-modeling of civilization. "This may be just as important as the Renaissance and the Reformation, in the latter of which Germany was the spiritual and physical battlefield whereon the destiny of our civilization was decided. Behind all these parades, demonstrations, speeches, bloody struggles, and sometimes Quixotic heroism, great historic powers, yet shapeless, soon will take form and let us see what course the history of Germany, and with it the history of the West, is taking."

Spann believes that military civil war, far from helping the situation, would have ruined Germany. He was gratified, he said, to find that early in September the potential civil war, which had been brewing this summer, was already on the decline before he left for the United States.

CLASS OF '18 ALUMNUS DIES IN HIGH POINT

Randall Newton Mann, member of the class of 1918 of the University and well known pharmacist of High Point, died of a heart attack Monday. He was 38 years old. He attended the High Point city schools and Staunton Military Academy before attending the University. Funeral services were held yesterday.

Commerce Freshmen

Dean Carroll wishes to meet all the freshmen in the commerce school this morning during chapel period in 103 Bingham hall.

Graduate Club Will Sponsor Dance Here

The Shirley Graves Graduate club, the men's graduate organization, will give its first dance of the year, Saturday night from 8:30 to 12:00 o'clock in the Smith building.

Jack Wardlaw and his Variety Six will furnish the music for the dance. This dance will be a fine opportunity for all graduates to come together for better acquaintance.

Every year the graduate club gives a series of social functions which are enjoyed by all graduate students, and this one is already being looked forward to with a great deal of interest.

HOWARD WRITES IN HIGH JOURNAL

High School Magazine Has Article by N. W. Walker, Nora Beust, and A. T. Allen.

The October issue of The High School Journal, published by the school of education, has been edited and is now in the mails. This number is the first since last May, publishing being suspended during the summer vacation.

The only changes on the staff for this year are on the board of editors, from which E. R. Mosher and M. R. Trabue have resigned.

The latest number contains an editorial comment by N. W. Walker, editor; an article on the selection of teachers in North Carolina public schools by J. S. Fleming, superintendent of Warsaw schools, and George Howard, professor in the school of education here; an article by A. T. Allen, state superintendent of public instruction; a summary of the entrance requirements of liberal arts colleges in the southern states by A. Monroe Stowe; the educational columns by A. K. King, Preston C. Farrar, C. E. Preston, and Hugo Giduz; and several book reviews by Miss Nora Beust, teacher in the library school.

Literary Societies Explained In Chapel

Yesterday's chapel began a series of programs to be given by the various student activities which are open to freshmen. The program was devoted to the two Literary Societies, the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Assembly.

Dan Kelly, speaker of the Phi, gave a talk in which he told the history of the assembly, its purpose, and the type of work it is doing now.

Charles Grandison Rose, Jr., president of the Senate, explained the difference between the societies. He said that the Di and Phi were not always at each other's throats but worked together.

All those that wished to become members were told to be present at the meetings conducted last night. The Di meets on the second floor of New West and the Phi meets on the fourth floor of New East.

Editorial Board

The editorial board will meet with the editor in THE DAILY TAR HEEL office at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Two positions are open to competition, preferably to juniors and seniors. Aspirants are requested to see the editor prior to the board meetings.

COMMITTEE FOR DANCES GATHERS TO MAKE PLANS

Tentative Dates for Several Important Dances During Year
Are Set at Meeting.

The University dance committee met last night in the Graham Memorial to discuss plans for the coming year. Dr. W. S. Bernard, faculty advisor for this new dance regulating body, made a talk to the members in which he clearly defined the duties of the organization.

These duties will be much the same as those formerly exercised by the executive committee of the German club. This new committee will set dates for dances of all dance organizations on the campus and will have the general supervision and regulation of these. It will also try all cases of drunken persons being on the dance floor and misconduct.

All University dance organizations wishing to have dates set for their dances are to see Dr. Bernard.

At this meeting tentative dates for several important dances were set and the rules and regulations of the body were gone over. It was explained that each organization shall determine whether freshmen are to be admitted to their dances.

UNIVERSITY GIVES CREDIT FOR MANY COURSES BY MAIL

Extension Department Will Offer Over One Hundred Correspondence Courses.

The University, through its extension division, is to offer more than one hundred courses by correspondence this year for the benefit of citizens who, for various reasons, chiefly financial will be unable to establish residence at some institution of learning, Russell M. Grumman, director of extension, announced yesterday.

"For a number of years the University, through its extension division has been conducting correspondence instruction for various groups of citizens, and for the past two years this method of instruction has been of particular value to high school graduates who for financial reasons, have found it impossible to attend college," Grumman said. "Since the correspondence courses offered by the University carry college credit these students have been enabled to make a beginning in their higher studies leading to a degree."

"Likewise, these courses aid college students in good standing to continue their education when they find it necessary for a time to leave the institutions of higher learning."

Count Toward Graduation

The University allows nine correspondence courses to be counted toward graduation. This represents a year of college work.

Practically all of the courses required of college freshmen are offered by correspondence. Instructors, all of whom are members of the University faculty, strive to give individual instruction and attention to their home study students. Text-books are supplemented by the loan of reading material from the University extension library.

Fresh Timber for A New Era

In five weeks the American people will be confronted with the task of selecting the party which is to guide them thru the next four years. The term "party" is used advisedly, for this year's candidates stand out by virtue of their mediocrity and never has even the strongest of men been able to accomplish much other than the will of his party. Hoover is dominated by the big interests who placed him in office to work to their advantage and if re-elected he will be more than ever bound to accept the dictates of the silent but all powerful forces of capital that forms the backbone of the Republican party.

Roosevelt is tied down as well by the demands of his party. His nomination at Chicago was not the spontaneous selection of the party's best man, but was the result of careful and extensive managing clinched by a sorry bargain with such men as William McDoo and William Randolph Hearst. The vice-presidential selections are more inferior still, Garner and Curtis being personifications of nothingness and worthy of notice only by reason of the alarm felt over the possibility of the death of Hoover or Roosevelt in office.

It is unfortunate that our presidential timber should be of so low a calibre now of all times. The last presidential term has witnessed conditions that have shaken this country to its foundations and from which it is haltingly emerging. We are emerging from the worst and longest depression in our history, a period in which financial organizations hitherto considered solid as the nation itself have been forced to come to the federal government and beg to be kept alive. A period which has seen millions starving and the states forced to draw upon the national treasury to feed their citizens. Four years of graft and crime rampant and unpunished, in which the impracticable prohibition law has been violated to the benefit of our most undesirable elements who emboldened by the impunity with which they might act murdered the infant son of America's greatest living hero. Four years of turmoil that have seen the soldiers that fought for us a few years ago turn upon their nation in its darkest hour and demand its life blood, to be answered by murder in the streets of the capital of the nation for which they risked their lives. Four years of desperation that have seen the miner and the farmer driven to armed resistance to law while communism gained an insidious foothold amid the scene of hopeless frenzy.

We are not yet done with circumstances that form a crucial point in our national history. The blows we have suffered have been similar to those which in the past have presaged revolution and decline to other nations. If we recover fully we may be destined to new heights but the outlook would be far brighter had a leader arisen in our hour of danger and saved us from politics when statesmanship of the highest order is needed.—J.F.A.

Liberal Arts

With A Small "T"

One of the most outstanding traits of the University is its liberalism. However, there doesn't seem to be enough liberality in the present system of courses that a student is compelled to follow, particularly in the College of Liberal Arts.

Generally the most difficult problem of a college freshman is to decide upon the course he is going to pursue during his college career. The greater number don't actually know what to "take up" and for that reason enter the College of Liberal Arts and follow a general type of study, so that they can branch out into most any other school when they have fully decided upon this school.

However, when a student decides to really continue in the school of Arts with the idea of obtaining a degree in Liberal Arts, it seems that he should be allowed the greatest possible freedom in choosing his courses, substantiated by some faculty member, generally the head of his major department.

The general run of studies during the first year are background builders and during the second year the student begins to specialize more. In his third year he chooses a major and a minor and pursues these courses and other "follow up" courses as the head of his major department sees fit.

The fallacy seems to be in the fact that the student might have really two major interests or one major and two minors, and because of the necessity of taking regularly prescribed courses he is unable to choose some course that might be more beneficial than a required course, if only for the reason that he likes the work in the course.—E.J.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

America's Way Out

No more need the corner store political sages argue politics across the checker board. Tom Loy, former Carolina Playmaker, and his father have forwarded to the Bull's Head advance sets of their recently invented game "Politix, the Great National Game," which combines the best features of checkers and chess with the thrill of two-penny political conjecture.

The board used in the game is marked off in 374 uniform squares, each of which means something or other in moving the men. Of the latter there are two sets of forty-eight, each piece marked with the name of the state and the number of votes it musters in the electoral college. You just pick out either the red or black set and make moves around the board to positions such as the "Issue" (to be leaped or occupied) which will give you a majority of votes by jumping the opponent's states.

The booklet describing the game cleverly injects several paragraphs into its set of rules: "When the State of either contestant is captured, the corresponding playing piece of the Candidate effecting such capture is turned face down and becomes a Campaign Speaker . . . of material value (the Speakers) when used offensively for blocking or capturing an opponent's State in that they may be sacrificed without scoring loss."

We recommend that the two parties chose up sides and play "Politix" to spare us the misery of the Great November Hoax.

The Pen Is Mightier Than the Raddio

He of the Brown Derby, who hitched his wagon to a donkey and now finds himself editor of the New Outlook, contributes some valuable political pronouncements in his first issue of what promises to be a journal with a punch. From a sort of "The Editor's Easy Chair" in the front section of this new contribution to the cultural enlightenment of the race come these Alisms: "The New Outlook will check up once a month, every month in the year, on what is taking place politically and the reason for it, on what is being done that should not be done, and on what should be done that is not being done."

And further: "We must face facts squarely and endeavor to utilize past experiences to improve our national life." All of which elicits from this respectful contemporary: Where, oh where, have we heard that before? And: A barrel of ink and printers' sticks, can't teach an old dog any new tricks.

Autopsy

By Robert Berryman

Oh, Mr. Tatum!

University officials, according to unfounded rumors, have recently received letters from the Socialist campaign headquarters and the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism. Both have protested against the same thing: the fact that the University allows the students here to mold the plastic brains of the professors.

It is charged by the Socialists that professors of decent political faith are allowed to come in daily contact with professed Democrats and Republicans. These students, with their hardened political views, by playing on the plastic brains of the professors, have drawn many of them away from their party. The Socialists think the college should put an end to such goings-on.

The Atheistic Association has a like protest to make. It charges that many members of its association among the faculty of the University have become Christians after daily exposure to the insidious and glib talk of the many Christians admittedly to be found on the campus and in the class rooms. The Association is wondering if anything can be done about it.

Names Make News

Among the pallbearers at a funeral held in a small eastern North Carolina town a few days ago were: Blandina Daywalt, Rubie Beck, Tokie Ratledge, Zeimena Thompson, and Ophelia Barneycastle.

Can You Beat It?

Bronzed veterans of liquid gulping on the Hill might find something in the tale of Ike Mobley, Negro of Washington, N. C., to marvel and wonder at; Last Sunday he drank eight pints of corn whisky in a single day—and lived to regret it.

Starting early, he killed three pints before breakfast, taking one-half pint at each gulp. He drank the rest during the day. When found Monday morning he was believed dead but he regained partial consciousness that afternoon. He says that from now on he will keep at least one foot on the wagon.

Summer School Culture

During the Summer School session of the University many men and women here for the first time were deciding whether they would return to take advanced work in the regular school year. After hearing so much of the Southern Culture prevalent here, imagine their surprise at reading this regulation—printed in bold face type—on the "Summer School Sanitary Notice" issued by the laundry: "Students are required to change bed linen weekly."

Beastly Drunks

Many women of Hungary are making extra money by dressing up pigs in baby clothes and then giving them a swig of hard liquor out of a nursing bottle. They then cross the Austrian border with a "sleeping child" and avoid paying a tariff. Pork sells for much more in Austria.

Wonder Department

I wonder if that British showman who offered Mr. Gandhi a cash price to come to England and fast "unto death" in his sideshow really meant it? . . . I wonder: if that double page drawing by Dr. Seuss on page 44-45 of College Humor, purporting to show a classroom scene at the University, will be good advertising? . . . I wonder: how much longer the "nut" societies on the campus, the antics of which all but the feeble-minded tired long ago, will be able to find enough students as foolish as the present members for their idiocies to be propagated? . . .

LOCALE OF 'LIFE BEGINS' IS SET IN MATERNITY WARD

Loretta Young and Eric Linden Have Leading Roles in Picture at Carolina Theatre.

The entire action of "Life Begins," showing at the Carolina theatre today, takes place in the maternity ward of a hospital. The drama and comedy of the various situations are woven around the mothers in the ward and the hospital attendants.

The story opens with the entrance of a young woman, who is serving a long prison term for murder, into the hospital to give birth to her child. Attention is then drawn to the other inmates of the ward.

The parts of the leading young couple are played by Loretta Young and Eric Linden, with Aline MacMahon prominently cast as the head nurse. Preston Foster, Gilbert Roland, Vivienne Osborne, Clara Blandick, and several others are included in the supporting cast.

The management of the theatre has announced that no children under sixteen years of age will be allowed to attend this cinema.

DEVELOPEMENT OF DRAMA GROUP IS TRACED BY KOCH

Koch used the high school auditorium until 1927, when Manning hall was completed and the building which now houses the Playmakers.

He explained how the success of the Playmakers in using local subjects had fostered the success of native North Carolinians, among whom are: Paul Green, Pulitzer Prize winner in 1927; Lula Vollmer, author of Sun-Up; Hatcher Hughes, author of Hell Bent for Heaven; and Ann Bridges, author of Coquette.

Professor Koch quoted an author as saying: "North Carolina has made no lasting contribution to fine arts," which he explained as the aim of the school of dramatic arts here. He is of the opinion that Chapel Hill is abundant in material for the highest type of drama and fine arts, and that North Carolina as a whole is not paralleled by any other state in natural talent.

Greetings and Good Wishes!

YOU WILL

Double your success possibilities by enrolling for expert business training in Carolina Commercial College.

Seven out of ten young people who hopefully launch themselves on a college course this fall will not finish. Startling statement? Yes, but the figures are in accord with the report of the United States bureau of education. Of course, this high mortality is not to be attributed to lack of ability; but to lack of interest and effort, to unfavorable economic conditions, to unfortunate choice of courses, etc. And as "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild," so a Partial College Course seldom prepares one to earn a living.

School boards do not employ teachers who "almost" earn their certificate credits. One cannot practice law, medicine, dentistry, etc. after completing only one year's work.

Guard Against Failure

Your best safeguard is SPECIALIZED BUSINESS TRAINING during your spare time while in college. Moreover, our intensive courses in Gregg Shorthand and Touch Typewriting, Salesmanship, Advertising and Commercial Art will not only help you to get more out of your college course, but also give you the ability to pay your own way through college, if the unexpected happens in financial matters. Also, this Business Knowledge and Skill will enable you to "market" your college education to greater advantage after graduation.

Outstanding Advantages at Carolina Commercial College:

1. A faculty of college and university-trained experts;
2. Intensive courses especially arranged for university students;
3. Special rates to university students who enroll before October 10
4. Free Placement Service—which may alone double the possibility of completing your university course.

Business is now on the "up and up" grade, as you doubtless know, and we expect to receive many calls this fall, winter, and next spring for well-trained "help." And one of these may help you—if you are Ready. IT PAYS TO BE PREPARED!

Coach Collins Works Heels Hard For Tennessee Game

SCRIMMAGE WITH FRESHMEN MARKS WORK YESTERDAY

Chandler, Phipps, Thompson, and Lassiter in First Backfield; White Breaks Ankle.

Those Tar Heels were out working yesterday with renewed determination to take the Tennessee Vols into camp at Knoxville Saturday. In the last two years the Vols have eked out victories over the Tar Heels by the scores of 9-7 and 7-0 and Coach Collins, who always finds delight in surprising Major Neyland, the Vol coach, is set on doing just that in Knoxville.

The session yesterday was a hard one as the Heels were put through a tough scrimmage with the freshmen. Both the first and second varsity elevens worked against two frosh teams. Both teams looked impressive in their work, scoring on passes several times and also doing some nice running.

The pass combination of Phipps to Thompson, and Phipps to Walker clicked and the running attack showed signs of improvement also. On the second team Johnny Daniels continued his good work doing some nice running and snagging a few of Croom's well timed heaves. On this second team the Croom to Burnett and the Croom to Cozart combination completed several aeriels, the former duet looking especially impressive.

Coach Bob Fetzner worked for the second day on the reserves, teaching them Tennessee plays to run against the varsity either today or tomorrow. The whole squad was out yesterday with the exception of Tom White, star halfback, who was injured in the Vandy tussle. White hurt his leg in the last quarter and the examination showed that he had received a broken bone in his ankle. This injury will keep White out of the game for at least four weeks and leaves a big gap in Coach Collins' backfield corps. White played a fine game Saturday and seemed to have hit his stride only to be lost to the team.

The first team showed another shake-up in the backfield yesterday and Chandler, Phipps, Thompson, and Lassiter, ran behind a line of Walker and Brandt, ends; Hodges and Smith, tackles; Barclay and Newcombe, guards; and Underwood center. The second team had a backfield of Woollen, McCaskill, Daniels and Croom, with Burnett replacing Daniels. The second line showed Frankel and Cozart, ends; Collins and Tatum, tackles; Philpot and Kahn, guards; and McIver, center.

Ball Teams Play Third Game Today

Coach Bunn Hearn worked long and hard yesterday afternoon in an attempt to develop the hitting power that has been noticeably lacking in the recent series of practice games.

The boys worked with the stick for more than an hour with plenty of pep and displayed potential ability which promises better results. Throughout the fall season, Weathers, Strayhorn and Barham have shown exceptional hitting ability but the squad's power, as a whole, must be better balanced. With the varsity and freshman candidates groomed for another game today, the coach wound up the session with his infielders stretching tendons in a fast and earnest limbering-up workout.

Mr. Coolidge must chuckle when he considers the mess he did not choose to get into.—Boston Shoe and Leather Reporter.

Out For Month

Tom White, star halfback, who was injured in the Carolina-Vanderbilt game Saturday, will be lost to the Tar Heels for at least four weeks. Examination yesterday showed White had broken a bone in his right ankle.

Is the smaller school finally coming into its own as a football menace? Certainly, the results of the games played last Saturday indicate that this is so. Army had a hard time before a 13-0 decision was handed against Furman. Bates and Yale battled to a scoreless tie. South Carolina defeated Villanova, one of the East's creek outfits, and in our own sector, V. P. I. trimmed a powerful Georgia team by a one point margin.

The writer hardly thinks that these football giants are on the decline, but that the small schools are finally getting its share of star athletes, for with the possible exception of Georgia; Army, Yale, and Villanova have veteran teams. Whatever the cause is, it's going to do football a world of good.

In little Tommy Henderson, Vanderbilt has one of the finest all-around backs the south has seen in several years. The Commodore field general can kick, run, pass, and what is more important, is an excellent blocker. Henderson was the margin of Vandy's victory over Carolina. When he was removed, the Tar Heels started going places, completing their passes consistently, but as soon as Coach McGugin sent him back into the game, Carolina was stopped. The country will hear a great deal from this "half pint" before the season is over.

Now that the 1932 world series is a thing of the past, the fire-side league should have one of its most prosperous seasons, for at least four major league teams are going to clean houses before many moons have passed. The rosters of the Cleveland Indians, Philadelphia Athletics, New York Giants, and Brooklyn Dodgers will be scarcely recognizable when 1933 rolls around. Connie Mack of the Athletics started the ball rolling last week by selling Simmons, Haas, and Dykes to the White Sox. Grove and Earnshaw, (Continued on last page)

FRESHMEN WORK HARD ON STRONG FOOTBALL TEAM

Coaches Howard and Sapp Drill Charges Hard for Opening Game With Campbell.

Coaches Howard and Sapp are rapidly getting into shape a strong freshman eleven, although the first battle is nearly two weeks away. This freshman football team promises to be the strongest yearling outfit since Ray Farris and company.

Yesterday the first year men had a lengthy scrimmage with the varsity and showed extraordinary ability against a determined first team. The yearling first team composed of Brothers, left end; Evans, left tackle; Phillips, left guard; Kanner, center; Mirre, right guard; Hobgood, right tackle; Arthur, right end; Whitaker, quarterback; Snyder, left half; Montgomery, right half; and McCachern, fullback; held the first team to a standstill except for passing.

Besides the first team the freshmen had lots more material ready for action. This was shown by a scrimmage carried on during the afternoon between the third and fourth freshmen teams in which many yearlings showed promise of replacing some of the others in the first two lineups.

The complete frosh schedule follows:
Oct. 15. Campbell college here.
Oct. 21. Oak Ridge here.
Oct. 28. N. C. State here.
Nov. 11. Virginia here.

THETA KAPPA NU WINS FIRST TAG FOOTBALL GAME

Sigma Nu, Beta, and Swain Hall Turn in Other Wins Of Day.

Sigma Nu, 1931 champion, opened its defense of the Intramural tag football title yesterday with an easy 38-0 victory over Zeta Beta Tau. Two other contests were played in the fraternity league, while Swain hall nosed out Old East in the only dormitory loop contest of the day. Long runs and intercepted passes featured the second day's play in the ninth annual race for the campus championship.

Staging an uphill fight, after trailing at the half, 13-6, Beta Theta Pi house served notice that it will put in a strong bid for the fraternity championship when it scored twice in the closing minutes of the game to shade Theta Chi, 18-13. Henry Anderson led the Beta attack, passing accurately and turning in several long runs. Prominent in Anderson's support were Charlie Rose and Bob Barnett. Outstanding performances by Theta Chi men were turned in by Tom Temple, Bob Knell, and "J.C." Goodman.

Zeta Beta Tau proved no match for the superior pass work of Sigma Nu which, with Dave Lynch and Ken Byerly in the saddle, rode roughshod over the Zeta eleven. The Sigma Nu superiority was obvious from the fact that the Zetas gained only three first downs to eight for its opponent.

Theta Kappa Nu marked its first entry in the tag football leagues in three years with a clean-cut 13-0 victory over Phi Alpha. Cecil Longest to James Berry was a winning combination, with Berry crossing the line for both touchdowns and Longest accounting for the extra points. Sammy Samson stood out for the Phi Alpha outfit and was instrumental in holding the Theta Kappa Nu team even in first downs, four apiece.

CAROLINA MAKES GREAT STAND

—Courtesy The Alumni Review

The above picture shows Norman McCaskill, Carolina fullback, stopping Vanderbilt's "Dixie" Roberts at the line in the goal-line stand of the Tar Heels in the second quarter of Saturday's game. Stuart Chandler (83) and Bill Croom (72) are shown coming over to help McCaskill, who made all the tackles on the three plays necessary for Vandy to carry the ball the last two yards.

Dan McGugin May Resign As Vanderbilt Coach This Year

Commodore Coach, Rounding Out Twenty-Ninth Year at Nashville, Recognized as One of Leading Mentors in South; Has Turned Out Strong Teams.

Over the past week-end with the Vanderbilt team in Chapel Hill word was picked up from a conversation with a member of the squad that Coach Dan McGugin was expected to hand in his resignation at the end of the current campaign. The player was voicing the general opinion of those connected with the coach and in close relations with the Nashville school's campus.

McGugin is rounding out his twenty-ninth year at Vanderbilt where he has been one of the leading football coaches in the south and the country as well. He last coached a championship team in 1920 and at that time he stated he would not resign until his team won another championship. In the twelve ensuing years he has always turned out a strong team and this year he has probably the strongest since 1920.

The Commodores have been placed at the top of the heap by many in the know and the Vanderbilt players are confident, though not cocky, that they will fulfill these expectations. The look Carolina got at the club Saturday was enough to convince many that Vanderbilt was going places. But still there were two men on the team that did not play, namely, Captain Chug Fortune and "Mighty" Close, two of the first string backfield. These men will be back in the line-up this week as will Foster, first string end who played some against the Tar Heels but who had not recovered from a leg injury received against Mercer.

Vanderbilt has a tough row to hoe before she can be declared the best team in the south as her schedule calls for games with Western Kentucky, Tulane, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Tennessee, Maryland, and Alabama and to win these games the Commodores will need all the strength they can muster.

Coach McGugin is not the driving type of coach according to this Vanderbilt man but rather he appeals to the better side of a player to get the best results. His two assistants, Cody and Cohn, do all the heavy work and many times McGugin calls for a rest when his assistants are driving the men in a scrimmage. Every man on the squad knows and admires the old man and give their best in every game.

The spirit of the Vanderbilt squad is best seen in the remark of fullback Watkins in the team's huddle just before the kick-off Saturday. It was one of the few games Watkins had started and naturally he was quite nervous, especially playing with a team of veterans. He said, "You boys can count on me giving all I've got in there every minute I play. This may be just another game to you but it's one of those rare chances for me and I am going to do my best. Don't worry as to whether or not I will deliver."

One of the best indications that Coach McGugin is set on a championship season this year is that fourteen of his first squad are graduating next spring leaving only three, Beck and Askev in the backfield, and Suhrheinrich an end, in the line. If he doesn't take the lead in the conference this year it will be two more years before he will have another strong team. In the case that he resigns, either Cody or Cohn will take over the duties as head coach of the Commodores.

CANDIDATES FOR FRESHMAN RING TEAM WORK OUT

Coach Allen Finds Three Good Prospects in Group Reporting For Practice.

Coach Archie T. Allen, mentor of the Carolina freshman boxers, personally supervised the workouts of his yearling pugs yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can. Allen, who was a former title holder in the welter-weight clan, put his charges through a stiff workout in which all of the boys were paired off to fight.

Prior to their little tiff in the ring, the yearling ringmen were put through the paces, on the ropes, punching bags, and shadow boxing. Yesterday Coach Allen found three very likely candidates, Bahnes and Eutsler, in the 119 pound class, and "Red" Mahaffey, in 160 pound division looked good.

All of these were real finds; Bahnes and Eutsler, both should do well. Mahaffey, however, has not had any experience; but shows the making of a real fighter, Coach Allen said.

The boys are expected to work hard again today, and Allen expressed hope of finding more promising aspirants.

5:00 p. m.—(1) Delta Tau Delta vs. Kappa Alpha; (2) Aycock vs. New Dorms; (3) Best House vs. Everett.

Cheerleader Try-outs

All students wishing to try-out for positions as cheerleaders are asked to be at Memorial hall this afternoon at 4:15 o'clock.

hall shaded Old East in the roughest and least interesting game on the program. Lathan tallied for Swain in the first quarter, after which Old East took the upper hand and clearly outplayed its rivals. Although unable to cross the Swain goal, the Old East squad outclassed its rivals in first downs, four to none.

Religious Rows in Mexico

The Chamber of Deputies yesterday advised the president of Mexico to dictate an order to the Papal delegate to leave the country at once, but the president had already done so. The Mexicans asserted that they were capable of handling their own religious problems and that they did not appreciate the way in which the Papal delegate handled the situation.

Germany May Return to League

The British charge d'affaires verbally submitted to the foreign office yesterday an official invitation to a conference of the powers to be held in London to pay the way for Germany's return to the World disarmament conference at Geneva.

Japan Keeps Hold on Manchuria

The League report was yesterday termed as not worth notice by the cabinet. They decided that there was no reason to alter its policy, the keystone of which is the separation of Manchuria from China and the maintenance of its independence.

Money Loaned to States

Pennsylvania received $3,500,000 for its administrative needs, while North Carolina received $4,181,000 to help some 36,742 farmers, it was announced yesterday. This money was loaned by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Hoover Continues West

Hoover spoke yesterday to about 13,000 people assembled at Rock Island, on the banks of the Mississippi river on Federal aid. In Des Moines the President found about 6,000 farmers leading a parade held in his honor.

NEW COMMERCIAL COLLEGE TO OPEN ON CAMPUS HERE

Carolina Commercial College of Durham Plans to Open Branch Here.

J. Gordon Wootten, president of the Carolina Commercial college of Durham, has announced that a branch of the institution will be opened in Chapel Hill next month if enough students desire training in commercial subjects this year.

Wootten has had fifteen years' experience in teaching commercial subjects in public high schools, private commercial colleges, and universities.

Capable Instructors

Mrs. Wootten, former student of Gordon college, Wesleyan college, and Drake Secretarial School will be associated with the school in an executive capacity and as director of social activities.

Mrs. Austin Carpenter, of Durham, who received her college training at Duke university and who has had three years' experience as teacher of commercial subjects in high school and business college, will serve as principal of the secretarial department.

Other instructors already secured are: Joe G. Moss, graduate of State college, accounting, and business management; N. C. Bouzard, A. B., Wofford, commercial art, and advertising.

Conference at Durham

The twelfth annual meeting of the North Carolina College Conference will take place in Durham, November 10 and 11, at the Washington Duke hotel.

Dr. Charles E. Brewer, of Meredith college, is president of the conference this year.

Here and There

Southern California in the far west, Michigan in the Big Ten, Vanderbilt and Tulane in Dixie, and Pittsburgh and Harvard in the east should make the most imposing records in their sectors. . . . The record of twelve straight world's series games set by the Yankees Sunday will probably never be equalled. . . . Jim Bottomley and Donie Bush have the inside track on the managerial post in Cincinnati. If Bottomley lands the job, he will be the third first baseman in the National league who is also managing his club, the other two being Charley Grimm and Bill Terry. . . . An intramural swimming meet in the spring is in the making if plans of Herman Schnell, energetic intramural director, are successful.

Co-eds Entertain

The co-eds will entertain this afternoon at the second of their weekly teas, from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock in the reception rooms of Spencer hall. Misses Lee Ballentine and Anna Spiers will act as hostesses. All women students living in Chapel Hill are invited.

Blair Rankin Elected President Of Aycock

Aycock dormitory at a reception at Graham Memorial Monday night elected officers for the coming year. They are Blair Rankin and Bill Croom, president and vice-president respectively, and Sim Efland athletic manager.

Immediately after this election the members to the Union Forum were elected. "Red" Boyles for the first floor; Ralph Myers for the second floor, and "Shorty" Britt for the third, were chosen. The residents played the various games in the game room, but no tournaments were conducted in ping-pong or shuffle-board.

State Radio Pioneer Is Dead In Charlotte

Fred M. Laxton, father of Fred M. Laxton, Jr., and Erwin Laxton, students at the University, died Monday of a heart attack in Charlotte. Laxton was a well known engineer and radio pioneer and three times golf champion of North Carolina.

Laxton was known as the father of radio station WBT in Charlotte, which he founded in 1921 and operated for four years. At the time of his death he was the president of the Southern Radio corporation, which he also founded two years ago. Funeral services were conducted yesterday in Charlotte.

INFORMAL SOCIAL FOR FIRST YEAR LAW MEN TONIGHT

Group Will Attend Theatre After Get-Together in Graham Memorial
Lounge at 8:00.

Invitations, in the form of a petition for a writ of mandamus, have been received by the faculty members and the clerical staff of the University law school, requesting their presence at an informal reception for the first year law class in the main reception room of Graham Memorial this evening at 8:00 o'clock.

This reception, the initial event on the social calendar of the law school association is being sponsored by the entertainment committee for the purpose of allowing the new men in the law school to be received and welcomed by their instructors and officers.

After the guests have all been presented, the group with the professors acting as hosts, will sojourn to the Carolina theatre where Manager E. Carrington Smith will be the host of all at a picture being shown especially for their benefit.

The entertainment committee of the law school association for this year is composed of the following men: Archie Cannon, Archie Allen, Herman Merriell, and Carey Parker.

Theatre Passes Given Best Staff Reporters

Phillip Hammer, Raymond Barron, Nelson Lansdale, and Lawrence Thompson have been awarded passes to the Carolina theatre for faithful work on THE DAILY TAR HEEL during the past week. These passes are extended through the courtesy of E. Carrington Smith, manager of the theatre and are awarded weekly to reporters whose work shows merit.

Germ Of State Symphony Orchestra Begun Two Years Ago By Stringfield

Institute of Folk Music, Joining Music Department, Playmakers,
And Sociology Group, Was Important Step in Symphony's
Formation; First Concert Given Last May 14.

Two years of intense faith and effort on the part of representatives of progressive citizens of the state have resulted in the birth of the North Carolina Symphony. This musical organization, dedicated to the advancement of fine music and aspiring musicians in the state, is a splendid example of the University joining hands with the private citizenry to realize a cultural dream.

In the fall of 1930 William Horton, Baxter Durham, and Lamar Stringfield laid before Governor Gardner their idea of what a state symphony would be. While sympathetic with their enthusiasm, the governor, pressed by economic distress, promised no state support.

University Aid

The hope once born would not die. They turned elsewhere, and upon the suggestion of Josephus Daniels, Raleigh editor, Stringfield came to Chapel Hill to see Harry W. Chase, then president of the University.

President Chase expressed himself in favor of the plan and recommended that Stringfield look over the field of endeavor offered by the University. During his brief visit here at that time, Stringfield succeeded in

NO SPEAKERS FOR FIRST ECONOMICS SEMINAR MEETING

General Discussion Will Mark Opening
Gathering of Commerce
Group October 12.

The first meeting of the general economics seminar for graduate students in the school of economics and commerce will convene next Wednesday evening, October 12, in 113 Bingham hall. No outside speaker has been invited for this first meeting, as it will be conducted by the students themselves. The discussion will be led by McDonald K. Horne of Winona, Mississippi.

Horne is a candidate for a master's degree, and his thesis, "Consolidation in the Weekly Newspaper Industry," was accepted last summer. He will address the seminar, giving a summary of his thesis. His address will be followed by a general discussion among the members.

These economic seminars take place bi-weekly throughout the year, and usually some speaker is invited to each meeting to make an address on a topic of current interest.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT OFFICE HOURS ARE SET

The student government office in Graham Memorial will be open daily during chapel hour, and from 2:00 until 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon for the benefit of students having problems to discuss or cases to report to the council, according to an announcement by E. C. Daniel, vice-president of the student body.

President Haywood Weeks will be in the office daily during the morning period, and on Monday and Wednesday afternoons. Daniels will have the Tuesday and Thursday afternoon sessions, while on Fridays, Arlindo Cate, secretary of the council, will be available in the game room of Graham Memorial.

LIBRARY DISPLAY COMMEMORATES WRITER'S DEATH

Eunice MacKay Has Large Collection of Material Concerning Walter Scott.

The collection of material concerning Sir Walter Scott which is on display in the library in honor of the centenary of the novelist's death, was collected by Miss Eunice MacKay of Mt. Wilson, North Carolina, and was mounted for display by R. B. Downs, acting librarian.

Miss MacKay was a student at the summer school here last year, when she took English 141, a study of the romantic movement. Her instructor, Dr. A. P. Hudson, suggested the making of the collection.

A remark attributed to the late Edwin A. Alderman, former president of the University, is stated as applicable to the surroundings of Miss MacKay: "In the south people still believe in the Bible, vote the Democratic ticket, and read Sir Walter Scott."

Many Items Collected

The complete result of Miss MacKay's work, all of which is not on display owing to the lack of space in the display cases, includes several portraits of Scott, one a print from a painting by Landseer, done in 1824, and another by Leslie, which was painted.

PHI TO SPONSOR DISCUSSIONS BY POLITICAL CLUBS

Phi Assembly Defeats Resolution Recommending Abolition of Political Clubs.

The Philanthropic Assembly convened in its second meeting of the year Tuesday night in the assembly hall in New East building. Several candidates for membership were introduced, and it was decided by the assembly that the first initiation ceremony of the year would be scheduled for next Tuesday night. The treasurer reminded the new men that a resolution was passed last year stating that the initiation fee must be paid at the time of the initiation.

A resolution providing that the Phi Assembly sponsor a series of discussions in chapel programs on political problems of today was proposed by Representative Wilkinson and was passed by the assembly. These discussions are to be conducted by the various political clubs on the campus, a definite time being allotted to each organization.

The resolution demanding the abolition of these clubs on the grounds that they fostered an obsolete political animosity and that they had not established a place in an enlightened political atmosphere was defeated by a large majority. Representatives Hutchison and Hodges spoke in favor of the bill, and Representatives Wilkinson, Rankin, Pattishall, and Griffin took the negative side of the question.

City Editors Meet

All city editors and desk men of THE DAILY TAR HEEL staff will meet this afternoon in the office of the paper at 4:00 o'clock. As this is the first meeting of the group for the year, attendance will be required.

ORGANIZATION OF UNION FORUM IS NEAR COMPLETION

E. C. Daniel Will Take Charge of Organization of Representative
Student Forum.

E. C. Daniel, vice-president of the student body and this year the director of the Union Forum, has announced that regular meetings will be begun in the near future. An attempt will be made to revive spirit and to solidify the organization as it should be.

Students Well Represented

The organization is composed of one representative for about every thirty students with Daniel as the presiding officer. Students in the fraternities and dormitories as well as the students out in town are represented at the meetings by elected representatives of the students; they make suggestions as to the use of Graham Memorial and comment on campus-wide problems. These comments and suggestions are of a completely democratic and unbiased nature and present a cross-section of student opinions. Three members from the forum are elected to the board of directors of Graham Memorial by popular vote of the other ninety odd members of the groups.

This year the members are being elected at the series of smokers at Graham Memorial for each dormitory.

BONUS PAYMENT DISCUSSED IN DI SENATE DEBATES

Rose Advises Freshmen to Become
Literary Societies.

Freshmen were welcomed Tuesday to the hall of the Di Senate by President Charles G. Rose, who also extended to them a hearty invitation to become active members of the senate and advised them that they should at least join one of the literary societies. It was announced that the initiation for the fall quarter will not be given for at least a month; however, the names of new men will be accepted at any regular meeting of the senate.

The senate discussed the bill, Resolved: That the bonus should be paid immediately. Jule McMichael, F. E. Howard, and Bill Eddleman led the discussion, the sentiment of which was highly unfavorable to the immediate payment.

Our Soldiers Well Paid

In favor of the bill it was pointed out that the soldiers really deserved the money and further that many of them seriously needed the bonus and this was countered with the fact that our soldiers of the war are the best paid soldiers in the history of the world.

In opposition to the bill the following objections were brought up: The government is unable to pay the bonus and could only meet such a demand by a heavier method of taxation or printing of fiat money. Further it was urged that it was dangerous to have legislators measure their votes by the potency of veteran votes in the election. The bill will be further discussed and voted upon at the next meeting of the Senate in New West Tuesday at 7:00 o'clock.

PLANS MADE FOR DANCE SERIES IN UNION BUILDING

Executive Board of Graham Memorial
Makes Plans for Entertainment.

The executive board of Graham Memorial met yesterday afternoon to discuss plans for the year. It was decided that the Student Union would experiment with a series of informal mid-week dances in the lounge, and if they prove a success, the dances will be made a regular part of the program of the Union. The Intrafraternity council will sponsor the first of these, which is scheduled at an early date, and for which there is no charge.

Mary Frances Parker, representative for the Women's Association on the executive board, was named chairman of a committee to select curtains for the banquet hall. The committee also decided to buy a piano for this hall.

No changes were made in the rules and regulations governing the use of the building.

SENIORS WITH CONDITIONS IN COMPOSITION TO MEET

All seniors with composition conditions are requested to meet in 201 Murphy at the beginning of the chapel period Friday. It is very important that every senior with such a condition keep this appointment. Conditions in English are incurred by students who have not been able to express their thoughts well in writing in their various courses.

Directory at Press

The master directory published by the campus Y. M. C. A., went to press yesterday, and will be ready for distribution within the next fortnight.

An extra touch of color has been added to this year's publication by the addition of a bright red jacket.

Carolina Students Prefer Heavy Drama With Polished Performers

Mystery Pictures Are Not Popular Among College Theatre-Goers; Horror Pictures Still Draw Crowds; Animated Cartoons and High Comedy Bring Most Laughs From Audience.

The average Carolina man does not like mystery pictures, is fond of heavy drama, takes his comedy quite seriously, preferring subtle humor, and helps pack the house when Joan Crawford or Jean Harlow appears. According to E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre here, the student theatre-goer is critical and discriminating of his choice of pictures.

"College audiences," says Mr. Smith, "have been called the most critical in America." Students demand polished performance, whether in their drama or in their comedy, and they refuse plots that are old and out-worn. The curious dislike of mystery pictures, though not quickly explained, is probably due to oversimple plots in earlier efforts. Heavy drama, of the type by George Arliss, is the student's favorite movie amusement.

Drama Preferred

The humor taste of the school ranges into two extremes. Although high comedy is preferred, slapstick in the manner of the Marx brothers is invariably popular. Half-baked comedy is utterly disapproved.

As for the singing cartoons, Betty Boop, comely pen and ink character, enjoys an immense

OCTOBER ISSUE OF ALUMNI MAGAZINE COMES OFF PRESS

Founders' Day Plans Outlined;
Graham's Choice as Greater
U. N. C. Head Lauded.

The October issue of The Alumni Review, official publication of the General Alumni Association of North Carolina, was released yesterday. In this number, the plans for the Founders' Day exercises, to take place October 12, were announced.

Honorable Walter Murphy, '92, will deliver a memorial address on President George T. Winston, while Dr. Marcus C. S. Noble will speak on President Edwin A. Alderman. The unveiling and dedication of memorial tablets to nine distinguished alumni is also on the program.

In an article on the Greater University of North Carolina, The Alumni Review states that the plans for consolidation are moving forward with the unanimous recommendation by the executive committee of Dr. Frank Porter Graham for president.

Comments on Freshmen

The Review spoke of the decrease in the number of freshmen this year in comparison with the number enrolled last year, but said that the students entering the University this year were better prepared according to a survey made by Dean Thomas J. Wilson, registrar, and Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students. About two thousand applications for scholarships were given out and approximately two hundred students secured part-time jobs through the work of the self-help bureau.

Lists of the new faculty members, of alumni prominent in North Carolina political circles and of the members of the '32 class who returned to the University and the special football supplement were published.

Fickle Tastes

Popularity of actors and actresses changes rapidly among students, Mr. Smith also notes. Large-eyed Joan Crawford and the famous platinum blonde have come to supplant Billie Dove and Mary Pickford. Five years ago Billie Dove was the toast of the school, yet last year one of her pictures brought scarcely a hundred students. Mary Pickford, who has been called "America's Sweetheart," would hardly receive notice today.

The current trend of "horror" pictures, started with "Frankenstein," are still successfully appearing. The horror pictures bid well to rival the success of the pictures of the gangster era last year.

Pictures dealing with suggestive subjects are also popular, although there is absolutely nothing lascivious which passes the National Board of Review. Such pictures, states Mr. Smith, are attended mainly out of curiosity.

Crisis: First Call

Such challenging articles as "Wanted: A Dictator," "If I Were Dictator" and the more recent "Are We Ripe for a Revolution?" are subtle hints that talk of drastic and not altogether bloodless alteration of national government is not without some grounds. To assume that the Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave faces violent renovation in fundamental principles of governmental, economic and social institutions constitutes virtual heresy in this liberal land of patriotic tyranny. Yet certain sages are brazen enough to admit the possibility of a shake-up in a time when their judiciousness is acceptable to one and all.

Stuart Chase in an article in The Nation propounding the theme "If I Were Dictator" makes little bones of the situation, suggesting his remedy for national ailment should be called upon to guide the destinies of a nation despairing of present institutions. A certain vein of good natured jolity pervades the article, but Chase is undoubtedly sincere in his expression of the seriousness of the situation and the necessary remedies equally adaptable to the present situation or one that might occur should the nation find itself in the throes of civil conflict.

Jay Franklin tells us in "Are We Ripe for a Revolution?" (Liberty, Oct. 8) that "There never was a real revolution that started out to be one." And further: "...if there is any lesson in history it is that we should go to the operating room quickly if we wish to keep our political institutions from taking a trip to the morgue."

Are these the ravings of alarmists? Have not Chase and Franklin and the editors of Vanity Fair (who compiled "Wanted: a Dictator") established themselves as dependable prophets?

Are we ripe for revolution? Someone points out that if all the railroad workers in the country declared a strike forbidding the passage of freight cars carrying produce and fuel along the vast miles of railway trackage, the population would perish in a few short days through starvation and cold. Such things as strikes are minor issues in the everyday life of the average person, yet how profoundly one of such a nature would affect should it become a reality. The powder is spread says authority. The fuse is short and matches are plentiful.—D.C.S.

Who But Hoover? Or Roosevelt?

Who will be our next president? Not even Roger Babson, who predicted the economic collapse in 1929, can answer that question. All that he can say is that "the main thing needed is to have the man that Main Street wants in the White House. What is needed is confidence in Main Street—Wall Street is merely a trailer. The greatest importance is that Main Street be satisfied."

Well, what will satisfy Main Street? Does Mr. Babson suggest that Main Street has not been satisfied with Mr. Hoover? Or does he imply that Main Street does not know what it wants?

Before the fog of campaign battle-smoke settled on the country, it was apparent that the man in the street blamed President Hoover for our predicament. Under no circumstances would he put the Great Engineer back at the controls. The Hoover super-man myth of 1923 was thoroughly discredited. The Depression and all its progeny were named Hoover, in dishonor of their supposed progenitor.

Upon opening their campaign, the first move of the Republicans was to restore confidence in their candidate. Hoover was described as a genius opposing fate, a mighty man fighting against mightier odds. He had done his best, but his best wasn't good enough. The cards were stacked against him.

Still, the powerful program of relief which the President had sponsored was by no means a barren venture, declared the Republicans. And they pointed to rising commodity prices; the launching of construction projects to relieve unemployment; and the rehabilitation of corporate business through federal loans. Secretly, the administration is determined to keep commodity prices moving to higher levels until November 10, at least; the Farm Board, for example, has been forbidden to take advantage of the rise in prices to unload its cotton stocks, for fear that the price will be depressed. Railroads and other corporations are being coerced into accepting government aid. The Republicans are intent on making Main Streeters believe that we have turned the corner to prosperity.

While the build-up for Hoover is underway, Governor Roosevelt is carefully characterizing himself as the liberal, progressive, competent man that the people want. He is presented by his campaign managers as the candidate who remembers "the forgotten man." Briefly, as President, Franklin Roosevelt would be all that Herbert Hoover has never been. That is the impression the Democrats wish to convey.

It takes but one thing to satisfy Main Street: that is prosperity. If Hoover can convince the voters that Depression is gone and that he was responsible for its demise, they will forget their former dissatisfaction with him. On the other hand, if Roosevelt's promises are more convincing, he will take the stakes.

Really, it is doubtful if Main Street knows what it wants, beyond a Ford and five dollars.—E.C.D.

While It Lasts

The lot of the average transfer student is usually a hapless one. After a considerable period of time spent becoming instituted in the routine, methods, policies and sundry by-paths of everyday college life; after having become a partisan defender of his quasi alma mater in points of debate—in short, after having become a smooth-working unit in the university—the student breaks with habituated practices: he transfers to another school.

Disregarding the implications manifest in the matter of loyalties, there also arise other, and perhaps more important considerations. In the case of one transfer student the writer knows, there was the usual lengthy period of cogitation before the decision for transferring was reached, the interesting fact being that the young man was worried as to the progressivism and liberalism of the University of North Carolina. Being accustomed to the Honor system, to a truly liberal application of a liberal tradition, to a lack of dogmatism in high places and low, and lastly being accustomed to see his own humble opinions treated by his professor as though they were the products of a mature mind—habituated to all these things—this student, naturally enough, was deeply concerned as to this University's practice in such matters. Upon being vigorously re-assured in these connections, the student in question—with numerous misgivings—packed his belongings and was seen in Chapel Hill. We are more than happy to report that this young man has acquainted me with the fact that he thinks this college to be the epitome of liberalism and modern pedagogical method.

It seems from all this that Dr. Graham and the various departments have almost completely banished dull care from one young person's mind. At times, however, my friend says in slow, half dreamy tones: "I only hope it lasts."—V.J.L.

Culture on the Down Grade

The low value set on education in this country can no better be pointed out than by referring to the economic factor. Salaries paid to productive men should be an indication of their relative value and of their value to the American public. Dealing with figures, then, we discover that "Babe" Ruth gets a larger salary than the president of the United States, that Connie Mack is worth $30,000 a year to Philadelphia baseball fans, that the director of Paramount studios in New York gets $500 a week, with generous premiums for overtime work, and that Greta Garbo is valued at $6000 a week. Orchestras once got as much as $15,000; the players are now walking the streets among the unemployed. What, then are the salaries of professors and teachers, the men who are in charge of training the minds of the young men and women of today, the leaders of tomorrow? We find some teachers in leading schools receiving $102 a month, and with the education to be paid for.

Can it be that we do not place as high a value on education as on baseball and the great motion picture industry? It is difficult to say where we are heading, but it would appear that our intelligence rating is little above that of a high grade moron.

It cannot be denied that the very basis of a civilization is the education and training of its units. Yet here are the schools, colleges, and universities, all over the country cutting down the salaries of men who had slaved for years to pull them up to their present absurdly low level. If there is any moral to be drawn from the recent vast deflation and depression other than the fundamentally sound economic law which it illustrates, it should be: "Look to your education!"

Since the Protestant Reformation, there has ever been an exalting of the individual, his rights and his privileges. But we must train that individual to take advantage of his rights and privileges in an adult manner, not in the manner of children, suddenly freed from oppression and over-strict discipline. The only way in which the individual can be trained is through education from his earliest years. The recent economic upheaval is traceable in part to an unsatiable greed on the part of the untrained and irresponsible individual. "Each man for himself, and the devil take the hindmost." This sort of philosophy, or rather lack of philosophy, has led to greed, selfishness, and a lack of principles which is perhaps unprecedented in history.

There has been little honoring and "loving of thy neighbor as thyself." Each man with his precious individual liberty has been too busy buying stock and developing rackets to know or care whether his neighbor is sick or well, dead or alive. Not until each man realizes his responsibility to himself and to his fellow countrymen, and to his fellow "world men," will we be able to think and act like a civilized nation. Only through education can we learn the real meaning of "know thyself"; not till we reward professors with financial inducement according to their dignity and what should be their worth to us, can we become a nation of intelligent and educated men, in the true sense of the word. Our future, perhaps fortunately, cannot be predicted, but it is to be hoped that we learn as individuals, as a nation, and as a civilized world the meaning and value of education. Today upright men with degrees of Ph.D. from Harvard are without work. This is indeed a sad commentary on our great democracy, our land of the brave. We need more than a statue of liberty. We need the training and education which will make us use our liberty for something besides watching Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig hit home runs, for something more than watching the alluring Garbo and paying for a multitude of lesser rackets. Our nation has the material to be educated. Now all that is lacking is a proper sense of values to set us straight and true, to make us a nation worthy of standing beside any in Europe, not only in political and economic power, but also in intellectual esteem.—B.B.P.

Life and Letters

By Edith Harbourn

With a column-head like this and a face like mine it is natural to suppose that this column should be literary if nothing else since that would be its only virtue. With one of my customary lapses from grace I eschewed all things literary during the week just past. I crave the readers' indulgence for such trivialities as I have to offer. I take my cue from a fellow-columnist who, in writing of the latest escapade of that good friend of mine, the self-help secretary of the Y. M. C. A., remarks that "some people still take signs seriously."

In my very best Menckian manner:

Tarheelia

In that delightful little village of Chapel Hill, N. C., seat of the country's oldest state university and gathering place of the literary elite, the following inscription was prominently displayed

Nice Pold Bens
For Sale
See Boss Hill

(The beans were growing on poles so tall that it would have been impossible for a mere mortal to have picked them.)

In the one-horse town of Haw River, a mill village perched on the bank of the muddy river Haw, a lattice fence diagonally across the street from the bus station bears the following legend:

Please Do Not Hitch Here
Just this side of Winston-Salem, next door to an antique shop, is a woe-begone frame dwelling. The shingle above the door reads:

Notary Republic

A bold-faced sign on a prominently located lot on North Elm street in Greensboro informed the public that—

Used Car Values Have Been Greatly Reduced
From $50 to $150

Many and diverse are the signs scattered about the countryside in this fair, but somewhat depressed, republic of ours. There was once a man in my old home town who became a great painter but who died poverty-stricken after big business adopted the custom of pasting advertisements on billboards instead of having them painted. Then there is the sign in the window of a book shop:

By Dr. Mabel Ulrich: The More I See of Men (The better I like them?) Which reminds me for no good reason at all that Sir Thomas Browne once defined man as "that amphibious piece between a corporeal and spiritual essence."

ed for an American admirer of Scott. The writer himself selected Leslie, then a young painter, to make the portrait, copies of which are extremely rare. There is also a contemporary cartoon from an issue of Frazier's Magazine, published in 1830.

Other items of interest are facsimile specimens of Scott's handwriting, among them his petition to the Lord of Council and Sessions for the privilege of taking his examination for advocate, and a letter declining the poet-laureateship.

Biographies Among Works

Books in the collection include works dealing with the Scott country, and biographies of Scott, the most recent of which was written by Stephen Gwynn. There are also a few American first editions of the more obscure works of Scott; an edition of Paul's Letters published in 1816, and The Life of Napoleon, which was published in 1827.

Completing the collection are various articles of criticism, as written by Scott's contemporaries in the Edinburgh Review and Blackwood's Review.

Bishop Mouzon has been in charge of the Methodist church in North Carolina for the past six years.

Patronize Our Advertisers.

Pointing the way to the advertised brand

Many a "sale" made by advertising has gone to a competitor because the purchaser did not know where to buy the advertised brand. Telephone men evolved a plan to make it easy to find.

They created a "Where to Buy It" service in the classified telephone directory. There—beneath the advertised trade marks—Buick, Goodrich, RCA Victor, General Electric and many others now list authorized local dealers. Thus telephone men complete the chain between advertiser and consumer—increase the effectiveness of advertising—help manufacturers and dealers to increase sales—help consumers to get what they want!

Because they apply vision to subscribers' problems, Bell System men continually increase the value of telephone service.

Slippery Field Hinders Tar Heels In Hard Practice On Defense For Vol Attack

Rain Interfered Seriously Yesterday With Collins' Plans For Mapping Defense.

TENNESSEE STRONG IN AIR

Feathers, Vaughn, and Robinson, Three Excellent Passers, Are Nucleus For Aerial Game.

The Tar Heels put in a good afternoon's work yesterday and Coach Collins announced a tentative list of those going to Knoxville tonight. This list is not definite and will not be until after the session this afternoon. The Heels leave from Swain hall tonight at 6:30 o'clock in busses which will take them to Durham in time to catch a 7:12 train to Knoxville. No stop over will be made on this trip, the squad will work out in Knoxville tomorrow afternoon.

The first and second teams scrimmaged two reserve elevens yesterday mapping out a defense against the strong Tennessee attack as portrayed by the scrubs, and trying out their own offense a bit; little progress was made however, due to the wet field.

The rain interfered seriously with Coach Collins' plans as the slippery field kept the offense from blocking and running their best and the defense from charging and tackling in top form. The short sessions of offensive scrimmage was encouraging, however, as Bill Croom and Johnny Daniels forgot the mud and turned in some fine running, showing improved drive and shiftiness.

Woolen and McCaskill made up the backfield with Daniels and Croom and the other quartet to see service showed, Chandler, quarterback; Phipps and Thompson, halfbacks; and Laster, fullback.

The centers and backs had a session mapping out and practicing a defense intended to stop the polished aerial game the Vols have been showing with Feathers, Vaughn, and Robinson as the passers.

Six Irish All-American Stars Have Used Famous Locker Since Season of 1924.

If tradition plays any part at all in the all-American selection Norman Greeney, Notre Dame guard stands an excellent chance of landing a berth on the mythical team. Greeney, a Cleveland youth is playing his last year on the Irish squad and he has been assigned to keep his football duds in a gymnasium locker—No. 133—which has been the passing prosperity of all-Americans almost continuously since 1924.

Adam Walsh, who captained the famous Four Horsemen team of 1924, started the locker's career by being named center on that year's selection. Bud Boeringer who followed Walsh as the Irish center in 1925 was also an all-American and used number 133.

John "Clipper" Smith, guard had it in 1926 and 1927 and he won all-American honors the last year. Smith now coaches at State. Its 1928 tenant missed making the all-American team but Jack Cannon another guard upheld its tradition by parking his molekins there in 1929.

In 1930, Marty Brill, halfback, was the occupant of "old 133," but last year the guards repossessed it, and Nordy Hoffman, now an assistant coach at the Irish institution, won an all-American berth.

CHI PSI DEFEATS SIGMA PHI SIGMA IN EASY VICTORY

Aycock Triumphs Over New Dorms in Closest Game Of Season.

Although it rained during the early part of the afternoon and this evening, it cleared up long enough for the intramural tag football schedule to be carried out. The second contest ended just as a big downpour began.

No First Downs

In probably the closest battle fought so far this year, Aycock got a narrow 6 to 0 victory over New Dorms. Both teams put up a strong defense and aided by a slippery field kept both sides from registering a first down. The only score came in the first quarter as a result of a poor punt from behind New Dorms' goal line. The winners got the ball on the twenty-yard marker and on the first play sent Kaplan around right end for a touchdown. It was the only play that netted more than five yards for either team. Excepting Kaplan, Efland was the outstanding man on the Aycock club, knocking down pass after pass on defense and getting off some fine punts on offense. Rankin also starred for the winners; Umstead and Evans led the losers' attack. The contest was finished in the rain.

Chi Psi Gets Easy Win

Scoring nine first downs and three touchdowns to their opponents' none, Chi Psi triumphed over Sigma Phi Sigma 20 to 0.

Dudley opened the counting in the first half scoring on a long end run after the ball had been put in tallying position by three passes. The second marker came early in the second half on a pass from Yewens. The outstanding play of the battle resulted in the final score. Atwood kicked off for Chi Psi and then rushed down the field to intercept a lateral pass thrown by one of the Sigma Phi Sigma players. Atwood then sprinted down the field to the zero line. The Chi Psi star made an anticlimax by kicking for the extra point. Atwood also played a heads-up game on the defense while the kicking and passing of Yewens was outstanding for the winners on offense. What attack the losers had was led by Turpie and Loveland.

DRASTIC CHANGES MADE IN MAJOR LEAGUE LINEUPS

Johnson, Famous Veteran Right-Hander, Is Dropped From Senator Managership.

With the 1932 World Series scarcely half a week old, three important announcements were made by major league executives, two of the announcements coming from the American League and the other from the senior circuit.

Perhaps the most startling, and to most fans, shocking information was the statement issued by Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club that Walter Johnson, the American League's most famous right hander, would not be retained next year in a managerial capacity. The release of Johnson from the services of the Washington club ends twenty years of almost continuous labor for the Senators. This span was broken three years ago when the "Big Train" piloted Newark in the International League. No successor was named by Griffith but every indication points to the selection of the veteran Joe Judge for the post.

Philadelphia Changes

Quieting news comes from Philadelphia where Connie Mack stated that the sale of Simmons, Haas, and Dykes marked the end of the dismantling of his club. Mack said that he sold his three stars for financial reasons only.

The four straight triumphs of the Yankees over the Chicago Cubs in the World Series will also cause a general house-cleaning in the Bruin camp, and the first to feel the ax will be Burleigh Grimes, Stanley Hack, and Bob Smith.

INDIANA HARRIERS HAVE IMPRESSIVE FIVE YEAR RECORD

Hoosier Cross-Country Team Favored To Annex Fifth Straight Championship.

A survey by the Indiana Daily Student, student paper at the University of Indiana, shows that over a four year span, the best athletic record was made by the cross-country team, which boasts twenty consecutive wins, four Big Ten titles, and one National A. A. U. championship.

The Hoosier harriers' reign of supremacy began in 1928 when they journeyed to Madison, Wisconsin, for the Big Ten championships with a record of five dual victories behind them in addition to the intercollegiate title.

Indiana surprised everybody that year and dethroned the four-time champion Badgers from the University of Wisconsin, scoring seventy-one points.

REGULATIONS FOR NINTH CAKE RACE ARE MADE PUBLIC

One and Eight-Tenths Miles Will Be Distance for Intramural Cake Race This Month.

A circular was issued yesterday with detailed information concerning the ninth annual Intramural Cake Race.

It states that the full distance will be one and eight-tenths miles; that the number of entries from any dormitory or fraternity is unlimited; that the team prizes will be given to each group having four men to finish in the first fifty, the group with the largest number of entrants, and also to the team having the most men to finish in the first fifty; and that the first fifty contestants to finish the race will receive individual prizes and to the first ten to finish the Intramural department will award special medals.

Around a hundred freshmen are expected to enter the annual cake classic which is set for October 21, this year. Coach Dale Ranson, who has charge of the race, delved into his past records yesterday and gave the startling information that all but one of the past winners have been freshmen and that all but two have later won their letters in both track and cross-country.

MERCHANTS WILL GIVE AWARDS TO CONTEST WINNERS

Nineteen Prizes of Merchandise Will Be Presented to Leading Contestants.

That interest in Chapel Hill's prosperity contest is increasing is shown by the number of votes being received in the ballot box, located in the lobby of the Carolina theatre. Twenty merchants are uniting in giving to the winner a free trip to New York with all expenses paid. Nineteen other prizes are to be awarded, from a bottle of milk every day for a month to a pair of shoes half-soled.

Numerous Prizes Given

The other prizes are listed in order, followed by the merchants donating them: table lamp, by the University Consolidated Service Plants; pair of shoes, by Andrews-Henninger Co.; vest pocket kodak, by Foister Photo Co.; card case, by Alfred Williams Co.; basket groceries, by Food Mart; sweater, by Stetson "D"; roaster, by W. C. Lyon Hardware Co.; $5.00 meal ticket, by Gooch Bros. Cafe; basket of groceries, by Model Market; car washed and polished, by University Service Station; one quart sweet milk for one month, by Durham Road Dairy; shirt, by Lipman's; book pressing club tickets, by O'Kelly Dry Cleaners; one month show pass, by Carolina theatre; pair shoes half-soled, by Lacock's Shoe Shop; one hundred calling cards, by the University Printery; one year's subscription, by the Chapel Hill Weekly; one quart of sweet milk for one month, by Durham Dairy Products; and a smoking stand, by Berman's Department Store.

Those who have votes may cast them for themselves, or for friends, and do not necessarily have to nominate a new contestant.

Germ Of Orchestra Begun Two Years Ago By Stringfield

ing in President Graham's office, only two of the ten members were present with Colonel Pratt and Stringfield. However, the meeting convened, minutes were taken, and plans were laid for an open meeting of the people of the state.

Meanwhile, Stringfield and Colonel Pratt had drawn up a tentative plan which was presented at the meeting. The group which met at this time was not composed of musicians, but music lovers from all over the state. Out of this meeting came the final plan for the symphony.

Despite the difficulties of assembling the outstanding musicians of the state for a period long enough to permit sufficient rehearsals, a demonstration concert was performed in Chapel Hill last May 14. This concert was an experiment and on it hung the fate of the symphony's future. The performance was a success; the symphony's future was assured.

This triumph served only to increase the enthusiasm of the organizers, and an extensive program has been outlined for the coming year. Backed by a large sum of money and the prospect of more to come, the symphony will give concerts in the leading cities of the state. In those places which cannot afford the full symphony, little symphonic groups and chamber music ensembles will be available.

In two years the desires of a small group have become a cultural force of state-wide importance, one which recently merited critical attention from a leading weekly magazine.

Guess Identity Of Harold Lloyd's New Leading Lady And Win A Pass

Movie Goers Have Chance to Win Passes to "Movie Crazy" by Identifying Leads.

Who is the leading lady opposite Harold Lloyd in the above picture? THE DAILY TAR HEEL, in conjunction with the Carolina theatre, is conducting a contest beginning today for movie-goers with good memories. Each day in five consecutive issues there will appear in the pages of THE DAILY TAR HEEL a picture of a leading lady who won fame opposite the famous comedian. The first five persons presenting the correct solutions of the identity of the actress in the picture each day to the editor of the paper before 5:00 o'clock of the same day will each receive a pass to the Carolina theatre. The contest promises rare fun and is a real test for cinema addicts.

As a hint, the charming lady in the above picture is a new comer, and has the initials of

FOUR PERMITS TO VEND SANDWICHES SOLD YESTERDAY

Student Sellers Purchase Licenses as Police Enforce Regulations Requiring Them.

Four legal permits for the sale of sandwiches and confections were sold at the city office yesterday to E. J. Winthrow, self-help student at Carolina, by City Manager Caldwell.

Under the local ordinance, Winthrow and his three assistant salesmen have the legal privilege of selling their wares on the campus. It is reported that some would-be salesmen are attempting to dispense such confections without licenses, and the police of Chapel Hill, according to Caldwell, will make every effort to discover and arrest these unlicensed peddlers.

Students are requested to cooperate with authorities in apprehending these offenders, for the protection of local merchants and to protect students themselves from edibles of doubtful quality.

PICTURES IN RECEPTION ROOM IN UNION CHANGED

The pictures that have been hanging in the reception room of Graham Memorial for some time have been taken back to the Di Senate and several pictures from the Phi hall have been substituted.

The pictures there at present are those of: R. H. Lewis, '98, of Oxford; Patrick Henry Winston of Chapel Hill, here in 1899 and later the University of Texas and the United States Military Academy; Governor C. B. Aycock of Raleigh; Charles Stedman, who took his A.B. in '61 and his A.M. in '66; Fred Philips, and Charles Shepard, one of the University's most brilliant sons.

Buccaneer Business Staff

Due to an error in THE DAILY TAR HEEL of Wednesday, October 5, the staff wishes to state that the Buccaneer business staff meeting took place Wednesday instead of today, but that all men who missed the meeting may get in touch with the business manager today, between 1:30 and 2:00 o'clock.

Erratum

Due to an error in the article on the law school reception, it was stated in Wednesday's Tar Heel that there would be dancing until 12:00 o'clock, but the corrected statement includes only refreshments. The social will end at 11:00 o'clock in order that the group may attend a special movie at the Carolina theatre.

Who Is She?

C. C. She plays with Harold Lloyd in his newest comedy, "Movie Crazy." Under the picture each day will appear similar hints to the identities of the actresses. Don't forget to have your solutions at THE DAILY TAR HEEL offices on time.

Albright Requests That Meetings Be Arranged

Because Graham Memorial has been crowded by organizations that are conducting luncheons or meetings, Mayne Albright, manager of the building, asks that all individuals or organizations desiring a room at a specified time make the necessary arrangements with him about the time and place before making the formal announcement of the occasion.

'Moon Madness' Is Theme Of Picture

Lee Tracy plays the leading role in the mystery play, "Doctor X," Technicolor production showing at the Carolina theatre today. In this picture Tracy has the role of a newspaper reporter, the role he has portrayed often throughout his screen career. "Moon Madness" plays an important part in this cinema. This idea has been long accepted by psychiatrists and is shown to have a serious effect on the minds of persons afflicted with nervous disorders.

"Doctor X" is adapted from the stage play by Howard Comstock and Allen Miller. The supporting cast includes Lionel Atwill, Fay Wray, John Wray, Preston Foster, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Robert Warwick and many others. Michael Curtiz directed.

Lewis Officers Elected

The officers that were elected for Lewis dormitory last night at Graham Memorial are as follows: Dave McCachran, president; Milton Schmukler, vice-president; and Harold Bossoff, athletic manager.

E. C. Wellir, first floor; Morton Hetler, second floor; and Joseph Farrell, third floor, are members to the Union Forum from Lewis.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

OUTLAW OF THE JUNGLE

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the great animal painter, Paul Bransom... inspired by the leopard's fierce fighting power and relentless hunt for prey which makes him the terror of every beast of the African jungle.

They are not present in Luckies ... the mildest cigarette you ever smoked

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

FOUNDERS' DAY TO BE OPENED WITH STUDENT PARADE

Principal Feature of Day Will Be Unveiling of Tablets Honoring Prominent Alumni.

A parade of students, faculty, and alumni assembling at South building at 10:15 o'clock October 12, will start off Founders' Day exercises to commemorate the 139th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of Old East. The procession will proceed to Graham Memorial where the program will continue with an invocation by Dr. N. H. D. Wilson followed by the singing of the University hymn.

Immediately following, Walter Murphy will read a memorial address to President Winston and Dean M. C. S. Noble will read an address on President Alderman. Both of these presidents have died within the last two years.

Tablets to Be Unveiled

The feature of the day will be the announcement of the installation of the twelve memorial tablets placed in Memorial hall during the past year. The list, to be read by Governor O. Max Gardner, is composed of the following names, each of whom has a tablet: Governor Charles Manly '14, Kemp Plummer Battle '49, Henry Ravenscroft Bryan '56, John Washington Graham '57, Kerr Craige '63, George McNeill Rose '67, Richard Henry Lewis '70, George Tayloe Winston '70, Edwin Anderson Alderman '82, Edward Kidder Graham '98, Marvin Hendrix Stacy '02. The program will continue with "In Memoriam," a tribute written by Stahle Linn to those of the University's alumni who have died within the past year. A list of these men will then be read by Dean A. W. Hobbs. The program will conclude with the singing of "Integer Vitae" and "Hark the Sound" and finally the benediction.

Public Administration School Will Train Students For Office-Holding

Dr. Walter C. Jackson, Former Head of North Carolina College For Women, Appointed by Board of Trustees to Head New Department Installed in University.

The school of public administration, newest of the University schools, is founded on the conviction that governmental officials require a definite scholastic preparation for their responsibilities. As an instrument of the state university, it aims to serve the state by training future office-holders of North Carolina and the nation.

When the board of trustees decided last June to create this graduate school at the University, it appointed Dr. Walter Clinton Jackson, vice-president of North Carolina College for Women, as dean of the then theoretical school of public administration. Dr. Jackson immediately made a survey of the courses offered by the University and formulated a plan of study for his school.

Course of Study

But one new course has been organized for the school, that in public administration, which is offered by Dr. Jackson in the winter quarter. The balance of the courses are to be had elsewhere in the University. Departments which are now contributing subjects to the new school include psychology, com-

"Y" DELEGATES GO TO HI-Y CONGRESS

Governor Gardner, Senator Bailey, And President Graham to Speak At Meet in Raleigh.

Almost a score of delegates from the University of North Carolina will attend the Carolina's Hi-Y congress beginning today at Raleigh.

The delegation will be headed by Ed Lanier, self-help secretary, Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the "Y," and Bill McKee, president of the "Y."

The majority of the delegation comes from the Freshman Friendship Council with eight delegates and two advisors.

Many interesting speakers have been engaged for the two day session by Lex Klutzz, general secretary of the Raleigh "Y," and Herbert Upchurch of Raleigh president of the congress. Among them will be Senator Josiah William Bailey, Governor O. Max Gardner, and Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University.

In the two day session many problems concerning Y. M. C. A. work will be discussed.

OFFICERS OF Y CABINETS TO MEET DURING CHAPEL

Officers of the three "Y" cabinets will gather today during the freshman assembly period to discuss plans and mutual problems for the forthcoming week.

Men who are asked to be present from the freshman group are: Jessie Parker, Van Webb, Marc Lynch, and James Craig; from the sophomore cabinet: Claud Freeman, Ed Martin, Simmons Patterson, and Henry Emerson; from the senior cabinet: Bill McKee, Jim Steere, Ike Minor, and Roy McMillan.

Scouts to Meet

The Chapel Hill and Carrboro troops of the Boy Scouts of America will assemble at a Court of Honor in Gerrard hall Friday night, October 14, at 7:30.

GROVES HAS NEW BOOK FOR PRESS

Dr. Ernest R. Groves, Professor Of Sociology, Writes New Book for Collegians.

Ernest R. Groves, research professor in the institute for research in social science and professor of sociology in the University, has just completed the manuscript for his new book, Marriage: A College Text for Men and Women. Copy for this comprehensive new text has gone to press and will be published shortly by Henry Holt and Company as an addition to the American Social Science Series of which Dr. Howard W. Odum, also of the University, is the editor.

For College Students

The new volume is intended primarily for college men and women, and it attempts to answer the many pertinent questions that are so often asked by young people, those questions about marriage and family life. The book is in a large measure an outgrowth of conferences and researches in connection with the course on marriage and the family given especially for seniors here in the University, and is also an outgrowth of Professor Groves' researches in the institute for research in social science.

The opening chapter of the new publication deals with the social changes influencing marriage and the family, and gives some very interesting information in regard to the change of motives, amount of family life, family relationships, and social attitudes. The correlation of science and marriage is discussed in the following chapter

BAGBY ADDRESSES FRESHMEN UPON HABITS OF STUDY

Dr. English Bagby Says Students Must Decide Question of Outside Activities.

Dr. English Bagby of the psychology department, addressing freshman assembly yesterday on "The Methods of Study," declared that the majority of failures were due to lack of study and that the probable reason for not studying was the lack of interest in the work. The student, he said, is not in a position to judge what is doing him good and what is not and for this reason should do his best in what he is taking.

The student can always find a place of quiet to study at the library if his room-mate is a saxophone player, he said, and should never use this as an excuse for not studying.

Dr. Bagby stressed the distribution of time in studying. He said that only one-fourth of the time should be spent in reading the assignment and three-fourths of the time should be spent in recitation. The time just before class should be spent in studying. He said that five minutes studying at this time was worth ten at another time because the thing learned is fresh in the mind.

Math Hardest

The mathematics course, which most freshmen consider the hardest, should be studied excessively at first to get a good foundation. The foundation in math tends to make it easier

KOCH AND BOGGS TO ATTEND FAIR

University Professors Invited by Cherokee Indians to Attend Annual Tribe Fair.

Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Playmakers, and Ralph S. Boggs, professor of folklore in the department of romance languages, left yesterday afternoon to attend the Cherokee Indian Fair which is being conducted October 4, 5, 6, and 7 at the Cherokee Reservation on the edge of the Great Smoky mountains.

At this fair there will be displayed samples of their arts and handicrafts, and besides these and other exhibitions the Cherokees will play their own native Indian ball game from which the American sport of lacrosse evolved.

Koch Presented Mask

On his visit to this annual harvest festival of the Cherokees, Koch will extend a formal invitation to the Cherokees to bring to Chapel Hill their colorful Green Corn dance. He has visited this reservation before and on his last trip was presented with an ancient wooden mask carved from the trunk of a poplar tree and used for many years in their dramatic dance ceremonies. He has added the Cherokee mask to the dramatic museum in his office.

In 1927 when a group of Hopi Indians came to Chapel Hill on an educational mission to demonstrate their celebrated Snake Dance, Professor Koch was honored by being adopted by them into the Hopi tribe. Since that time Mr. Koch has visited the Hopi reservation in New Mexico several times on his way to California.

HIGH TRIBUTE TO EDWIN ALDERMAN MADE BY GRAHAM

President Graham, Speaking at Greensboro, Stresses Need Of Free University.

Speaking before an audience of over 2,000 faculty members, friends, and students at the Founders' Day exercises at the Woman's college of the Greater University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Dr. Frank P. Graham stressed the need of a free University.

"It is only in a free University that we can come to see the spiritual worth of every human being," stated Dr. Graham.

"What we do is more important than what we say; and what we are is more important than what we say," he continued.

High tribute was paid by Dr. Graham to the early teachings of Dr. Charles D. McIver and Dr. Edwin A. Alderman that every young man and woman is entitled to an education provided by the commonwealth.

After the address, Dr. and Mrs. Graham were guests at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. I. Foust at luncheon.

During the afternoon, short lectures and teas in the different dormitories rounded out the entertainment marking the fortieth anniversary of the institution, which was founded by Dr. Charles Duncan McIver.

History Club to Meet

The graduate history club will convene in Graham Memorial at 4:30 Sunday afternoon for its first meeting.

ALPHA PSI DELTA ELECTS OFFICERS

National Psychological Fraternity Elects Mrs. Ruth Preston As President.

At a meeting of the members of Alpha Psi Delta, national psychological fraternity, Wednesday night, officers for the coming year were elected. Mrs. Ruth H. Preston was elected president, with Miss Blanche C. Zorn as vice-president.

The fraternity named Miss Mabel Bacon as secretary-treasurer, while the executive council is composed of Dr. Harry Crane and Dr. Guy Johnson.

This is the first time in the history of the chapter that a woman has been elected president and the first time that the staff of officers has been composed completely of women. In addition to the election of officers, addresses were read before the fraternity by Dr. J. F. Dashiell and by Dr. A. M. Jordan, both of whom reported on the meeting of the American Psychological Association at Cornell university early this fall.

SELF HELP BUREAU SETS RATE FOR EVENING WORK

The Self-Help Bureau of the University Y. M. C. A. announces the following revised rate of pay for students who stay in Chapel Hill homes in the evening on self-help assignments:

Twenty-five cents (25c) for the first hour; ten cents (10c) additional for the second hour; fifty cents (50c) for an evening's stay longer than two hours, which amount shall cover the time up to 12:00 o'clock; twenty-five cents (25c) per hour for all time after 12:00 o'clock.

Interfraternity Council

There will be an important meeting of the members of the interfraternity council this evening at 7:15 o'clock in Graham Memorial, Irvin Boyle, president of the council, announced yesterday.

Teachers Urged To Abstain From Drinking, Smoking, Or Card-Playing

Article Appearing in October Issue of the "High School Journal" By George Howard and J. S. Fleming Says School Superintendents Desire Model Teachers.

Teachers going into certain districts of the state will be wise to abstain from drinking, smoking, dancing and card-playing if they wish to hold their positions. This information is the result of inquiry blanks sent to 195 superintendents of county and special charter school systems by George Howard, professor in the University education school and J. S. Fleming, superintendent of W. S. Fleming schools. Their findings have been compiled and published as an article, "Administrative Practices Applying to the Selection of Teachers in North Carolina Public Schools," appearing in the October issue of The High School Journal.

The facts secured pertained to educational requirements, experience requirements, employment of married as teachers, home talent, age of teachers, church membership, the advisability of employing teachers who dance, smoke or play cards, and the form of application.

Varied Regulations

The article reveals a wide divergence of opinion on these points. However, the majority of the answers showed that a liberal attitude was directed toward the teachers. Most of the systems will employ married women as new teachers. Local residents are preferred in a large number of county systems, but are not so favored in the special charter division.

Only a small percentage of schools have any maximum age requirement for new teachers. Church membership of instructors is not considered in many systems, while a slight number forbid dancing. Few maintain rules prohibiting smoking or card-playing.

Replies to the questionnaire furnish ample evidence of the varying limitations placed upon members of the public school faculties. The subject of marriage brought from one superintendent the statement, "Qualifications being equal, probably it would be expedient to select as new teachers those who are unmarried." In the teacher's contract of one of the leading cities of the state is written: "Your marriage will automatically cancel the provisions of this contract."

WILLIAMS PAINTS DARK PICTURE IN KIWANIS ADDRESS

Dr. Horace Williams Makes Strong Plea for Saner International Relations.

Pleading for international vision and good-will, Dr. Horace Williams, professor of philosophy of the University, yesterday addressed the Durham Kiwanis club at their morning luncheon.

"There is no place in modern life and civilization for war reparations and the sooner the United States comes to the conclusion that international debts must be forgotten the quicker the nation will recover from present distressing conditions," he said. He told of conditions existing in various countries of the world because of the World War and of staggering debts under which they are laboring. He offered the soft-pedaling of reparation efforts as the panacea for the condition.

The place the United States has held since the war was discussed by Dr. Williams in comparing the change of the nation's status before that great conflict. Whereas prior to the war this country was paying 34,000,000 pounds to England annually in the curtailment of her debts, Great Britain has since the war paid 200,000,000 pounds annually in interest to this country.

The picture presented of England was one of bankruptcy. Her people are taxed anywhere from twenty-five to ninety per cent on their property. The fact that such a great country should go off of the gold standard was offered by Dr. Williams as evidence of the seriousness of the situation.

The condition of America was stated as that of business channels clogged up with no hope of circulation until the trouble is removed. Every nation, he said,

A Cheering Need

With no home game scheduled for the football eleven until October 22, the cheerleading staff has plenty of time to render to the team a service which has been needed for the last five years—that of developing an organized cheering section. Not since the graduation of Kay Kyser, organizer of the famous Carolina Cheerios, have the Tar Heels had the vocal backing in the stands that they deserved, and in many cases absolutely needed.

A plan has been followed recently of seating all students into one section, not only to avoid the federal tax, but also in hopes of aiding cheering. But this plan has proven unsuccessful. The only remedy is to organize a special volunteer cheering section. The expense of equipping such a group with megaphones, bright colored hats, etc., would be relatively small. And if the Athletic Association would be unwilling to carry the expense, probably the class and professional school treasuries would be able to share the burden.

Carolina's feeble attempts at cheering during the last few years has been a considerable joke to the other institutions in the state. Not only have they taken it as a sign of a miserable lack of the traditional Carolina Spirit, but also as an evidence of aloofness on the part of Carolina students. It has given the impression to many that since the University has come to number some 2500 or more, its students have ceased to take part in "college yells."

In many cases this aloofness to "the collegiate" is to be desired. But if the University must have the college football team, it should go the full extent and have the college yells. For without the latter, the former is not at its best.

Our Great Enigma

With the rush and excitement of the preliminaries of a new school year over, and with a national election just ahead, the question of politics is receiving at least a passing notice from every patriotic minded student.

The political issue on the campus revolves around two main questions and their answers: Should I vote this year, and, if so, How should I vote?

It is safe to say that a large majority of the students who vote the Republican ticket this fall will do so, not so much because of any belief that its platform conforms more nearly to their ideals of what the country needs than that of either of its other opponents, but largely because that is the party which their fathers have always voted. The same thing might just as truthfully be said of those who will vote the Democratic ticket.

For the liberal-minded man or woman just entering upon his or her political career, however, and wishing to cast a vote that will never be regretted, a problem presents itself that is not to be lightly dealt with. There are many who can not summons forth the audacity to vote for Norman Thomas, and to such, the dilemma of whether to vote Democratic or Republican tickets is forthcoming.

It is a difficult proposition to distinguish between the fundamental principles contained in the two platforms, which politicians make to stand out in such bold relief. One of the parties is wet; the other is not dry. Both purport to have the interests of the people vitally at heart. One has formulated plans which it is positive will release the country from the fell clutches of economic depression; the other asserts that such plans are now in operation, and are fast restoring things to health and normalcy. Both parties employ the latest methods known to calumny, indecency and animadversion for undermining each other.

When it comes to a final showdown, it seems that the major differences between the two parties lie, not in their platforms, nor their applicability to the problems of modern government, but to the differences of personality, ability, and experiences of their respective heads.—W.A.S.

A Noble Experiment

The chapel situation in the University, especially regarding sophomores, bears a striking parallel to the prohibition question now being so urgently discussed in this country. The parallel lies in the fact that the "powers" do not seem to understand that, although they can pass a law disagreeable to the majority, they cannot hope to enforce it. In the case of prohibition we have actual nullification. As regards chapel, we have an intellectual nullification. The University officials can force sophomores to come to chapel, but as they might, they cannot make men listen, who do not want to hear.

The unfortunate part about the whole affair is that it is almost impossible to study during chapel—there is a little too much noise coming from the direction of the rostrum for complete concentration on a difficult matter. However, the period is not completely wasted inasmuch as the noise is not sufficiently loud to interfere with a superficial perusal of the TAR HEEL, or perhaps Liberty. (?Ed.) The only difficulty in the way of this latter pleasure is that the benches are a bit too hard for really enjoyable reading. Perhaps the committee on chapel attendance would be kind enough to supply cushions to those desiring them, and, possibly, as an added dispensation, ear-muffs.

There is, nevertheless, a small minority that seems to really need, and what is stranger still, enjoy chapel. After all, an opportunity to rest one's weary bones, and at the same time to be serenaded with "Hark the Sound" and "Holy, Holy, Holy" is not to be sneezed at. For the benefit of these people it is suggested that the University add to its curriculum a few courses in chapel sitting, for which credit might be given. If sufficient enthusiasm is shown, enough courses might even be added to permit one to major in this field. A question might arise as whether a "B. S." or an "A. B." should be received at the end of four years. Of course the question of a Ph. D. could be taken up later, but for the time being the two undergraduate degrees should suffice. These suggestions ought to fill the bill fairly well, but what is there to do on Monday when there is no TAR HEEL, and when Liberty has been already read? —M.K.K.

Friendship and The Fraternity

The close of this week marks the end of the fraternity rushing period. Many will be the joyful and weof faces when the bids are handed out from the fraternities.

One of the most difficult problems that confronts the men who are rushed is which fraternity to pledge.

Quite often it happens that the rushed one has a friend or relative in some particular fraternity who insists that he go "their way," while the man himself might want to go "another way." The task of deciding which fraternity to choose often causes ill feeling between the freshman, members of the jilted fraternity, and everybody in general.

The thing that the new men should remember above all is that they should follow their own likes and dislikes in choosing, because it will be their duty to remain during the coming four years with the men of the fraternity they choose.

Those who weren't "fortunate" enough to get bids or to be rushed by fraternities have other things to realize—many of the best friends and companions a student makes during his college career are men he has met in his classes, his dormitories, or other gathering places of the student body.

The greatest value perhaps next to the knowledge acquired during a four years' college term is the friends that one makes. Therefore when choosing or refusing fraternities one should do so with the idea of friendship in the background.—E.J.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

An All-American Gal

"She's got a half back at Pennsylvania an' a quarter back at No-ter Dame", croons the suspicious soprano of our favorite jazz orchestra in a weak plagiarism of "Betty Co-Ed" known as "All-American Girl". The song progresses by stages to indicate that the miss who captivates the hearts of the first two named gridiron incumbents eventually encompasses the athletic man power of the nation from Amherst to Southern California by way of Duke and Tennessee in her gigantic little heart. At any rate we are lead to construe that her somewhat patriotic no-men is derived at the expense of dozens of big, husky, strapping one-hundred-percenters.

Here are some of her "all-America" sweethearts (she has one in every college). At Princeton: Kalbaugh, Kadlic and Draudt. Nearby at Amherst, Moses, Feinberg, Debevoise and Kehoe. Her Pennsylvanian may be Sakolis, Yablonski, Mas-savage or Perina. At Ohio University our All-American girl and her All-American lovers could be Banko, Friede, Corradini, Sodasky or Sintic.

Indiana's finest offer Keckich, Nylick, Opaski, Saluski and Sawicki. Illinois has Kamm and Schulotek and Miami places Ker-ekes, Niemi, Fertig and Savot-sky prostrate before her charms. Coe's potential all Americans are Swarzentuber, Schwank Rass-mussen, Slavik and Saccaro. Luckily Virginia still has her Byrds and Harvard her Cabots, but then they play soccer.

In the Maniac

Headline writers, notoriously weak in the fundamental principles of arithmetic, a big factor in counting spaces for certain fonts of type, often labor for some minutes in a vain effort to find a combination that will fit the allotted space. First head-lined a TAR HEEL desk man recently "Define Program of Athletics For Co-Eds Is Planned", and finally in indelicate desperation: "Co-Eds to Get Chance at Having Athlete's Feet."

With Contemporaries

We Go Political

In has been often contended that the only political interest on the campus has been evinced by those students who come under the heading of Socialists. This fall, however, all students who are interested in either of the two major parties, as well as the Socialist party, will have an opportunity to display their enthusiasm. The occasion will be the Political Parley, which has just been announced for October 28 and 29. Through Doctor Hatten, of the Political Science department, a well known figure in politics, the committee from the Saturday Noon Forum, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. has secured outstanding speakers from the Republican, Democratic and Socialist parties. Mr. Horner, candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket, and Mr. Burt, also candidate for governor on the Socialist ticket, have consented to speak. The choice for the third speaker, a representative of the Republican party, will be announced shortly. The prominence of these men is in itself an assurance that the Parley will be attended not only by a large number of students, but also by a great many Evanstonians.

Further plans have been formulated by the committee, calling for round table discussions the following morning on the issues of the campaign, and this again presents a great opportunity for an understanding of the main points of contention. A luncheon on Saturday noon at which a summary will be given, will terminate the parley.

The committee is to be congratulated for taking the initiative for planning this parley. There is doubtless a great need everywhere in this country to interest students in thinking about current politics of the day. Too often we lose sight of the paramount importance of contemporary affairs in our search for long lost and well buried history of other days. Students in America must realize sooner or later that the success of the forthcoming elections depends upon their interest and intelligence as the future voting population of the United States. Every movement, such as the Political Parley to be held here, should be encouraged. It is only through contacts, discussions and meetings such as these that we can hope to better the political situation within the next few years.—Daily Northwestern.

San Diego Professor Tells Non-Daters To Take Up Arms

Harry C. Steinmetz of Psychology Department of California School Declares That Social Starvation Is Worse Than Head-Over-Heels-in-Love Affairs in College.

(By College News Service)

San Diego, Calif., Oct. 6.—Mixed emotions rocked the student body of San Diego State college this week as it tried to decide just how to take the challenge flung at non-daters by Professor Harry C. Steinmetz of the psychology department.

The challenge, which minced no words, appeared in the form of an editorial in The Aztec, student weekly, and called upon members of both sexes, who are inclined to be timid about seek-

Do You Inhale?

Do you have acidosis, halitosis, pediculosis, instructorosis, libraryosis, moonbeamosis, or do you inhale? The advertising copy writers are on the loose again, and the latest is "homitosis." This violent micro-organism is a home-wrecker of no mean accomplishments, having been caught in the act of disturbing even the most blissful of embryonic martial bliss if its ravaging attacks on the homestead.

Homitosis is supposed to be a new one for the familiarly known and odiferous bad tastes found in the female of the species. If she cannot furnish a home on what you're making, either consult Dr. E. Cantor, or resign yourself to a fate worse than death—homitosis. It seems that poor taste in home furnishings have made men live at their clubs, little children fly screaming into nurse's arms and old men weep silently and pitifully in their beards, and politicians stuff ballot boxes.

Such a scrouge loosed against a defenseless mankind has come face to face with the advertisements of the furniture purveyors. There should be a battle to the finish, and probably will be, with poor downtrodden hubbys turning out to be the goat, in addition to having homitosis. Isn't it bad enough to be afflicted with this little known, but universally hated disease without having to be skinned and cleaned just for a new living room suite to replace the one that caused the terrible malady?

Along the same line of thought we have suffered acute attacks of registerosis and neurosis to say nothing of laddersosis and timeosis in the past few days following registration. Anyway we must take our hat off to the boys who can use all the various "osii" to intimidate the American public (the great American public, to you) into buying new what-you-may-call-ems and paying good American money for the same. It is an art that seems to never grow old. Ever since the first scientific advertisement was thrust upon an unsuspecting world, the ad writers have endured an existence of horror, punctuated only by a constant demand for new horrible sounding diseases, whether they are authentic or not. Upon thinking it over we are sure we are suffering from editosis. Help! Help!—Daily Illini.

ing companionship, to "get into the running."

And Professor Steinmetz offered a definite plan—a kind of automatic dating bureau:

"For heaven's sake (said he) and your own, make yourself attractive to the opposite sex, do a little flirting and get a date."

"You know if this editorial fits you. If you haven't a date this week, forget your silly pride; fold this paper so the title of this editorial ("Does This Fit You?") shows, and walk around with it; flap it about carelessly in class today and tomorrow; interpret it where you see it as a welcome to become acquainted."

Earlier in the editorial, he declared:

"Worse than being head over heels in love in college is being indifferent or socially starved through lack of contact with the opposite sex. Insofar as biological and eugenic ends are concerned, the average fraternity and sorority, especially the ritualistic sort, as a substitute for natural adjustment, is a subversive and frustrating institution."

"It is the college society of co-educational function which promotes social discrimination and that 'meeting for mating' which is one of the most important contributions of the democratic educational system."

"Scholarship and school political and social or athletic success may be completely negated by indiscriminate, precipitous or unduly delayed sexual selection and companionship. Insofar as lasting adjustment in life is concerned, many of the other benefits of colleges may pitifully mock the sensitive individual. Our whole confounded system of values seems backwards sometimes; we elevate inconsequentialities to first importance, leaving the important things of life to chance and tradition."

"The point of this? Just something to think about seriously. I know of a sorority of intelligent but timid girls who are eating their hearts out for lack of that companionship which they cannot afford each other. There are

Twenty-Seven Gridders Leave For Conference Game With Tennessee

TAR HEELS WILL END PREPARATION WITH LIGHT DRILL

Carolina Out to Revenge Two Successive Defeats at Hands Of Volunteers.

A squad of twenty-seven huskies left here yesterday on a 600-mile trek westward to Knoxville where Carolina meets Tennessee tomorrow in one of the south's major clashes.

The bus containing the Tar Heel football players left from Swain hall last night after an enthusiastic send-off by the student body.

There will be no stop-overs en route to the Tennessee capital this year, the team being due to arrive in Knoxville early this afternoon. Late today, Coach Collins will send his charges through a light drill, the only one before the game tomorrow.

Yesterday the Tar Heels went through limbering up drills and a light dummy scrimmage.

Players on Trip

The players making the trip are: Erwin Walker, Julian Frankel, George Brandt, Syd Cozart, and Earl Beale, ends; Jim Tatum, Harry Hodges, Frank Smith, and Bill Collins, tackles; Cab Philpot, George Barclay, Edwin Kahn, and Herb Newcomb, guards; June Underwood and Gus McIver, centers; Watt Jones, Stuart Chandler, Charley Woollen, and Johnny Peacock, quarterbacks; Henry Burnett, Johnny Phipps, Bill Croom, Kay Thompson, and Johnny Daniel, halfbacks; and Hanes Lassiter, Norman McCaskill, and Charley Shaffer, fullbacks.

Tomorrow's game will be the second conference contest for both teams. Last week the Vols defeated the Mississippi Aggies while the Tar Heels were being defeated by Vanderbilt.

Since 1893, the Tar Heels and the Vols have played ten games, five being won by Tennessee, four by North Carolina, and one game was tied. However the Neylandmen have won twice within the past two years, the scores being 9-7 in 1930 and 7-0 last year.

Vols Win in 1930

In 1930 the Vols scored their margin of victory by blocking Jim Wagner's punt behind the Carolina goal. That game saw Buddy Hackman and Bobby Dodd at their peak, and it was their great passing exhibition that enabled Tennessee to nose out the Tar Heels.

Last year Coach Neyland's squad, led by Gene McEver, all-American back and the nation's high scorer in 1929, took advantage of a break and again nosed out Carolina. This time it was a punt dropped by a substitute quarterback deep in Tar Heel territory. "Wild Bull" McEver was completely tamed that afternoon, making but twenty-five yards in thirteen tries.

Sports Staff to Meet

There will be another important meeting of all those interested in doing sports work for THE DAILY TAR HEEL at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in room 210 Graham Memorial.

A complete comprehensive discussion of the many phases and problems of marriage and pre-marriage relationships is included in the following chapters. The volume is composed of thirty-one chapters and contains almost 1,000 pages. It will be used in the course on marriage under Professor Groves in the University.

Long's Shorts On Sports

By Morrie Long

Now that the cobblestones and sawed-off shot guns have been removed from the Sing Sing prison gridiron the inmates of the number one institution of its kind are claiming there is an over-emphasis of football at the long-term school. With every veteran back from last year except one who transferred to Atlanta, the Sing Sing aggregation licked the Clover A. C. last week, 19 to 6, the losing team getting off lightly their captain being the only one to break an arm. Red "Eternal" Hope, assistant coach who is taking a special thirteen-year course, in shoe-making, predicts a gory battle when the prison contingent clashes with the Jervis Police team.

In a ranking made by the Illustrated Football Magazine, North Carolina's last year's team was rated as sixty-eighth. Duke's team finished sixty-fifth, while North Carolina State occupied the 125th position. First place went to Southern California, with two southern teams, Tulane and Tennessee, in second and third respectively, with Northwestern fourth. Notre Dame was given seventh.

For the first time in a long while, Coaches Sapp and Howard, mentors of the freshmen squad, have a promising bunch of yearlings who might take first honors in the state this season. Brothers of Rocky Mount, Moore, Yeager, and Montgomery from Kiski, Hobgood of Durham, Kanner of Sanford, Florida, Snyder of Monroe, and McCachern from Charlotte, brother of Dave, Carolina's stellar basketball performer, all look like comers.

Several important games are slated for this Saturday and if as many upsets are recorded this week as there were last, the smart dopesters had better give up in despair. In the south Tennessee meets Carolina, Tulane and Georgia have their acid battle, while Alabama journeys northward to give George Washington fans something to "write home about. In the east the chief games are Yale-Chicago, and Princeton-Columbia. In the middle west, Northwestern's powerful team hits a tough one in Michigan, Purdue fights rugged Minnesota, and Notre Dame opens against the Haskell Indians. Pick your own winners.

With freshmen rushing about over, the fraternities and dormitories can start preparation for the big eating contest which comes off after the annual cake race each season. Harry Williamson from the Phi Gam house was first last year, while Best House gained the premiere position among the team entries.

High School Game

The Chapel Hill high school football team will play Cary there today.

It will be time enough in the opinion of Dr. Williams for America to discuss payments when they have a surplus of money and products. If this were done every concern in the United States would, he says, be making money within ten days after the action was taken.

May Be Shifted

There is a possibility that Stuart Chandler, Tar Heel field general, will play the fullback position on defense, shifting Lassiter to halfback. Chandler is well remembered for his smashing defensive play last year at fullback and if the change materializes, the Vol backs will have plenty of headaches tomorrow.

GRIMES, T.E.P. WIN FOOTBALL GAMES

Outclass Steele and S. P. E. 19-0 and 21-0 in Only Two Games Played Yesterday.

Grimes outclassed Steele 19-0 yesterday afternoon on Freshman Field in the intramural tag football league. In the fraternity game, the Tau Epsilon Pi eleven turned back the Sigma Phi Epsilon gridsters 21-0.

In the dormitory clash, Watson and Morrison were the shining lights for the victors. Fuller, also of the winners turned in some nice catches. Grimes made four first downs to the losers' one.

Although the S. P. E. boys were outclassed by the more experienced Tau Epsilon Pi gridsters, the losers were always making things troublesome.

Arnold Jacobs was the main cog in the winners' offense, running, passing and returning punts with adroitness. Eisenberg, red-headed full, was another cause for the T. E. P. win. The first downs were five for the victors while the losers could boast of only one.

This afternoon, at 4:00 o'clock, Phi Kappa Sigma will meet Sigma Chi; Delta Psi, the St. Anthony hall boys, will be pitted against the S. A. E. eleven. At 5:00 o'clock, Kappa Sigma will meet the Lambda Chi Alpha aggregation; the other fraternity game will be between the Zeta Psi's and the Chi Phi team. The only dormitory game will find Manly and Lewis playing.

WOMAN'S GROUP PLANS ATHLETICS FOR CO-EDS HERE

Will Try to Fulfill Entrance Requirement of American Association Of University Women.

Plans are being made for the women graduates of the University to become members of the American Association of University Women. One of the most important requirements that the woman's association fails to satisfy is a definite athletic program. Since the majority of co-eds are in the upper classes, it has been difficult in other years to carry out this phase of recreation because of the fact that the girls were here such a short time. However, this year there are more freshmen and sophomores than ever before, and it is expected that sufficient interest can be aroused to put across a constructive athletic program.

At a meeting Wednesday night of those girls especially interested in athletics, much interest

TRACK PRACTICE WILL GET UNDER WAY WEDNESDAY

With Four Letter Men Expected For Fall Workouts, Ranson Sees Good Prospects.

Varsity track practice begins next Wednesday on Emerson field at 4:30 o'clock.

Four letter men are expected back for early fall workouts to provide the nucleus for early training. They are F. D. Higby, F. R. LeGore, J. W. Smith, and C. G. Stafford. The seven other letter men in school are occupied at other forms of athletics at present. Stuart Chandler, Harry Hodges, and John Phipps are working hard with Chuck Collins' gridsters while Bob Hubbard, Clarence Jensen, L. G. Sullivan, and E. E. McRae are getting in form for Dale Ranson's harrier squad.

Six members of last year's squad will be lost for this year. Charlie Farmer, crack dash man, Theron Brown, discus man, Ken Marland, 440, Rip Slusser, Wallace Case, and Captain Lionel Weil will be lost for this year's squad. Four men, T. H. Watkins, M. M. Jones, O. L. Mullis, and A. K. Davis, all of whom are letter men, are not in school this quarter but are expected back for the regular spring track season.

Good Season Last Year

Last year's season was one of the most successful that the locals have been through in several years. Heirs to probably the greatest track tradition in the nation, Coach Fetzter's men won the special Millrose games in the winter in New York, the Southern Conference indoor track championship, and the state championship.

Sweeping through all opposition in dual meets like a house afire, the boys from Chapel Hill chalked up triumphs over the U. S. Naval Academy, the University of Virginia, Duke university, and Pennsylvania State college. In dual meets the Tar Heels tallied 292 1-6 points to 211 5-6 for all opponents.

In the southern meet, Carolina placed fourth with 23 points, trailing Auburn with 24, Duke with 27, and L. S. U. with 38.

Individual University records set last year were as follows: Charlie Farmer tied the 100-yard dash record with 9.8; Farmer also made the 220 in 21 flat; Ken Marland did the 440 in 49.4; F. D. Higby, broad jump, 22 feet, 9 3-4 inches; F. R. LeGore, javelin, 208 feet, 7 inches; O. L. Mullis, shot put, 46 feet, 8 1-4 inches; and Theron Brown, discus, 138 feet, 1.5 inches.

FRESHMEN BATTLE RESERVES TO A TIE

Frosh Attack Shows Lack of Co-ordination in Scrimmage With Varsity Reserves.

Coaches Sapp and Howard had their frosh charges up on Emerson field scrimmaging the varsity reserves before the eagle eye of Coach Collins yesterday after the varsity had called it a day.

The freshmen put up a staunch defense against the reserves though their offense was limited and what attack they had showed power but lacked co-ordination of any kind. The unofficial score at the end of the tussle was 6-6, the reserves scoring first and the frosh intercepting a pass late in the session and crossing the line.

Last night the coaches had the was shown, and plans will be presented to the woman's association at its next meeting.

Scoring Threat

Bill Croom, left halfback, will be one of Carolina's biggest scoring threats when the Tar Heels meet Tennessee tomorrow at Knoxville. Croom is an excellent passer and runner and should see plenty of service against the Vols.

squad run through a blackboard discussion of the plays already given and added several others to the repertoire. The first game is with Campbell college next week and Coach Sapp is anxious to start off with a decisive victory.

The first frosh eleven to scrimmage yesterday showed a backfield of Whitaker, quarterback; Snyder and Montgomery, halves; and McCachren, fullback. This quartet showed potentialities but never had a real opportunity to show any real offensive attack. Montgomery and McCachren looked good on backing up the line and knocking down passes. The Tar Baby line made up of several hefty youngsters broke up many of the reserves' line plays before they got started and should give a good account of themselves before the season is over.

REGULARS TRIM ROOKIES 3 TO 2 IN THIRD FALL TILT

Hodges and Strayhorn Star at Bat as Regulars Win Close One From Rookies.

Coach Bunn Hearn's regular varsity baseball squad barely managed to gain a 5-4 decision over the hard fighting reserves yesterday afternoon in the most closely contested diamond battle yet to take place since the fall practice season opened. Had it not been for the phenomenal hitting ability of "Red" Hodges, diminutive first baseman, and Strayhorn, veteran catcher, the final score would undoubtedly have been different.

The able rookies took an early lead over the more confident first stringers and at the start of the fourth inning were in front 3-2. In this inning, however, the bats of Hodges and Strayhorn did their damaging work and brought in three counters to clinch the victory.

Five pitchers saw action during the contest; Whitley, Mills, and Joyner hurled the varsity to victory against McKerthan and Glasgow who labored on the mound for the defeated rookies. Strayhorn again did the catching for the regulars while Terzini brilliantly filled that role for the losers. Glasgow, although the losing pitcher, proved to be the stellar hurler of the day when, in the seventh inning, the varsity sluggers loaded the bases with no outs only to be retired without a score. Coach Hearn was impressed with the fielding ability exhibited by Erwin, freshman shortstop, who was outstanding at that post in the varsity line-up.

INCREASE SHOWN IN REGISTRATIONS FOR LAW SCHOOL

New Courses to Be Offered Will Be Handled by M. T. Van Hecke and F. W. Hanft.

The first year law class, despite the increase in entrance requirements, numbers sixty-seven students as compared with fifty-two last year, according to an announcement made yesterday by Dean M. T. Van Hecke of the University law school. This group represents not only the largest, but also the best prepared, entering class in the history of the law school.

An estimate of the preparation of the members of this first year class can be formed from the following survey: Out of the total number sixty-seven students, thirty-two hold college degrees; six have had four years of college work; nineteen have had three-year college preparation, and five have had two years of college work; four members of the group are enrolled as special students. The five with two years of preparation are those who are entering under a clause in the trustees' regulation which provides that students who enrolled in the law school prior to last January should not be subject to the change in the entrance requirements. The total enrollment of the school aggregates 114 as compared with 113 a year ago. Out of this total number of law students sixty-five have college degrees.

New courses this year include administration of debtor's estates, by Professor F. W. Hanft, and legislation, by Dean M. T. Van Hecke. Professor Albert Coates is on leave of absence this fall in connection with the Institute of Government. J. H. Chadbourne has completed his study of lynching and the law and is now devoting his full time to the work of the law school as an assistant professor in charge of the courses in legal ethics, civil procedure, evidence, and federal procedure. He also occupies the position of faculty editor of the North Carolina Law Review, and is the first graduate of the school to be assigned to that post. Chadbourne was student editor-in-chief of the publication in 1930-31.

"NIGHT OF JUNE 13" STARS MARY BOLAND

"The Night of June 13," showing today at the Carolina theatre, has a cast of stars, including Clive Brook, Lila Lee, Charlie Ruggles, Gene Raymond, Frances Dee, Mary Boland, Adrienne Allen, Charley Grapewin, Billy Butts, Helen Ware, and Richard Carle.

Since Charlie Ruggles appeared in "Gentlemen of the Press," he has been continuously cast in the role of an inebriated gentleman. Mary Boland, star of the legitimate stage, makes her first screen appearance in today's performance. Adrienne Allen came to Hollywood by way of Broadway, coming there from London, where she was a stage favorite.

ESTER METZENTHIN WINS FELLOWSHIP AT BERLIN

Miss Ester Metzenthin, daughter of E. C. Metzenthin of the Germanic languages department, has received a fellowship for a year of study abroad, after having spent the summer with her parents in preparing a dissertation on a topic from Old Norse literature. She will leave Chapel Hill Sunday, October 9, and sail from New York on the steamer "Hamburg" on October 13. She intends to spend the next half-year at the University of Berlin, making use of the splendid libraries there.

One person hurt at Southern Pines as Storm Pursued its hectic course over eastern Carolina. Numerous tobacco barns, stables and other farm buildings including some homes were destroyed yesterday. Wayne, Wilson and Pitt suffered most from wind.

Calm in Strike Area

No further violence has taken place in the neighborhood of Roxboro, officials said, where fifty employees of mills there are entering their fourth day of strike.

New York Must Elect Mayor

The New York court of appeals held yesterday that a mayoralty election must be held in New York city this fall. The action of the court in upholding the decision of the appellate division may cause a second political upheaval, according to yesterday's reports from Tammany officials.

Mussolini Pays Five Lire Fine

Premier Mussolini smilingly paid a fine of five lire (about 26 cents) yesterday after he had turned in an almost perfect score at the national rifle tournament. He failed to open the breech lock of the rifle after he had finished shooting; and thereby incurred the fine.

Civil War in Chefoo Battle Areas

Reports came in yesterday from the areas around Chefoo that deplorable conditions have arisen as a result of warfare going on between the provincial chairman and the local war lord.

Britain Deferring Meet

It was announced at the foreign office in Paris last evening that Great Britain had indefinitely postponed its intention to call a four-power conference on Germany's demand for arms equality.

Committee to Petition President

After a stormy session at Uniontown, Pa., yesterday the bonus expeditionary forces finally drew up a resolution, that demanded immediate payment and sustained veterans' allowances, and selected a committee composed of eight men and two women to take it to the president.

OFFICERS OF EVERETT ARE ELECTED AT SMOKER

The residents of Everett dormitory elected Al Minton, president, Jimmy Cox, vice-president, and Jimmy Carruth, athletic manager as their officers for the current year at a smoker in Graham Memorial Wednesday night.

Immediately following this election Harper Barnes, Jack Lee, and Billy Liebowitz were elected to the Union Forum from the first, second and third floors respectively.

Composition Conditions

Since seniors cannot graduate without making up composition conditions, it is important that all who have them be present in 201 Murphey today at the chapel period, when an effort will be made to give those deficient an opportunity to make up the work.

Five Win Passes in Contest

The following men are asked to call at THE TAR HEEL office this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock to receive their guest tickets to the Carolina theatre for their correct solution of the identity of Harold Lloyd's leading lady published in yesterday morning's paper: E. E. McRae, C. R. Carr, J. Sheed, Robert Gavin, and Sam Hatch.

Who Is She?

Can you guess the identity of the charming lady whose picture appears above? Here is the second in the series of five pictures of Harold Lloyd's leading ladies that will appear in THE DAILY TAR HEEL during the next three issues.

Today instead of awarding passes to the first five persons presenting the correct name of the actress to the editor, the names of all students turning in the perfect solution before 2:00 o'clock this afternoon will be placed in a hat and from this lot five will be drawn. These five will be the ones to receive passes. Get your solutions in today before 2:00 o'clock!

The Carolina theatre will present Harold Lloyd in his sensational new "Movie Crazy" Wednesday, October 12.

Quizzes, he said, are very important to the teacher as well as the student. In studying these he said that the best way was to read the heads and not the "padding," as he called it.

The student has to judge for himself whether extra-curriculum work is worth more to him than his studies.

Dr. Bagby closed by saying that teachers and professors of this school have unlimited patience and are glad to help a student at any time.

"Carry your Aztec so this editorial shows."

State college students were alternately astounded and delighted, though "timid souls," for whose benefit the editorial was written, were inclined to be self-conscious. Others, however, accepted the idea jocularly and the results of the unique dating plan were being watched with interest.

MICHIGAN STUDENTS TO GET LOANS OF $50,000

More than 1,000 deserving and needy students returning to the University of Michigan this fall were given cash loans totalling approximately $50,000. This amount was taken from thirty-four revolving student loans. Demands this year for assistance are without precedent and many students have come from great distances with hardly a dollar.

The outlook for the coming year is exceedingly dark because the loan funds are already depleted from lack of payments that are due from graduated students who were unable to find work during the summer. Unless more funds are obtained at once, students that are unable to get loans will have to leave without continuing their education.

TWO GIRLS FOUND WHO WON'T TALK

Wonders never seem to cease. Northwestern university now claims two of the wonders of the world—two women who will not talk.

They are Jane Alice Hall and Mary Margaret Moore, freshman prodigies, who upon being approached for an interview by a reporter of the Daily Northwestern politely explained that they were forbidden to give any interviews without special permission from the university president. Neither will nor guile could betray them into saying a word.

It seems that men too have changed their nature for James Allen Norton, another prodigy in Northwestern, spoke up readily and told all that he knew.

He explained that being a prodigy was not always desirable. "We had to take rooms on the first floor," he stated, "because they were afraid we would make too much noise upstairs." The house-mother's office is on the first floor so it looks as though the boys will have to behave.

institution. Columbia, Ohio State, Michigan, Cincinnati, Syracuse, Chicago, California, and Texas have founded training-schools for administration of public office. The University is the only southern institution to possess such a school.

Many Positions Taught

Advancing further than the above schools, the University organization proposes to give instruction for municipal, county, and state officials. While like schools concentrate on city government, Dean Jackson has included in his curriculum courses which will qualify graduates for such positions as city manager, county manager, city and county attorney, juvenile court judge, public health and public welfare superintendent, and departmental head or technician in state, county and city offices, or commissions, educational administration, etc.

Since the bulletin for this school was issued five days before registration, the enrollment is comparatively slight. However, with the dissemination of information, interest has increased, and a larger number of students is anticipated next quarter.

At present the A.B. degree is the pre-requisite for admission, but an undergraduate school is one of the aims of the department. Three months of actual field work are required for a degree. This will be effected through the cooperation of public officials throughout the state, who have already shown a willingness to assist Dean Jackson.

Free Beer at California

Men students of the University of California recently had a free beer day. That beverage, of non-alcoholic content, and pretzels were served free of charge for a period of one hour. In years previous the supply on hand lasted only about ten minutes, so the students were advised to come early.

Open Forum Letter

The person who mailed into the editor an Open Forum letter recommending certain changes on the campus is asked to leave his name at the DAILY TAR HEEL office. The editor must know the writer's name before the letter is published.

Nine per cent of county and twenty-five per cent of the special charter schools have a rule or policy against the employment of Catholics.

"I promise to abstain from all dancing and from any other conduct unbecoming a lady or teacher" read one contract filed in a small town on the seacoast. On the other hand, a county superintendent announced that he would prefer to have his daughter taught by a teacher who danced.

Yackety Yack Appointments

The following students have appointments with Wooten-Moulton to make their photographs for the Yackety Yack:

W. D. Dudley, Jr., J. C. Goldston, E. N. Kjellesvig, A. B. Lineberger, S. Lorberbaum, W. A. Sigmor, and W. H. Sigmor.

All junior and senior pictures must be made soon, and those who have not made appointments are requested to do so at the booths in the lobby of the "Y," at Pritchard-Lloyd drug store, or by calling Wooten-Moulton direct.

Vacancies On Staff

There are still several places vacant on the editorial board of The Daily Tar Heel, and all those persons above the sophomore rank who would be interested in trying out are asked to see the editor as soon as possible.

Purdue Fraternities Make Drastic Cuts

(From Purdue Exponent)

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 6.—Keeping in step with the trend of the times Purdue university fraternities have in the past year or thereabouts made drastic reductions in operation costs, in one case the saving amounting to enough to warrant a decrease in the house bill of 27.3 per cent. These results were obtained through a canvass of the Greek organizations on the campus which the Pan-hellenic council conducted.

The approximate period covered was the past annum, during which time the thirty-eight fraternities questioned showed an average decrease in house charges of 10.5 per cent. Further scrutiny of the list showed that three houses effected reductions of better than 20 per cent, seventeen others have cut the bills anywhere from 10 to 16 per cent, thirteen more show reductions of from 2 to 10 per cent, while five houses show no decrease in charges.

Other items which the survey brought to light were: the maximum bill a year ago of $58 as compared with $53 today, the average house bill today of $44, and the low house bill both today and a year ago of $32.

"What for?" inquired the boss.
"Got to go to funeral."
"Whose funeral is it?"
"My uncle's."
"When did your uncle die?"
"Lawd, boss, he ain't daid yet!"
"Then how do you know his funeral is going to take place Friday?"
"Case dey's gwine hang him Thursday."

During the past week we have delivered three new Ford Cars to the following purchasers: a new V-8 Ford sedan to Mr. A. A. F. Seawell, a new V-8 Tudor Sedan to Mr. A. R. Hollett, and a new V-8 Ford Sedan to Mr. S. J. Sparrow.

NEW SPEED! NEW BEAUTY! NEW COMFORT! NEW SMOOTHNESS NEW ECONOMY!

AT UNUSUALLY LOW PRICES
You'll have a new thrill in motoring when you drive the New Ford Eight.

You've heard that it's a great car. You've seen it on the road. But you can never know—until you take the wheel yourself—the full story of its value.

It has brought an entirely new kind of comfort and performance into the low-priced field. Faster and smoother and roomier than you've hoped. Low good-looking and attractively finished and upholstered. So perfectly balanced and comfortable that it seems to glide along without effort. And so economical on oil and gasoline that it sets a wholly new standard for an eight-cylinder car.

See the New Ford Eight at our that we delivered and is still able to go over Grandfather mountain in high gear.

Don't Risk It
Don't risk cheap oil in your car, just because it's cheap. Hard driving soon shows up "bargain" oils.

They get thin, dirty, lifeless—lose their body—then watch out for your bearings. Don't experiment. Real economy lies in quality oil—changed regularly. Let us prove it to you.

The other day Dr. Chas. S. Mangum told me of a trip he had just made over the mountains of western North Carolina. He covered 755 miles in his 1928 model Ford Sedan at a total car and personal expense of $14.50.

Dr. Mangum estimated his car expense at $1.20 per hundred miles even though he used high test gasoline at a cost of 27c per gallon in the mountains. The car he used was the 2nd model A sedan.

FRATERNITY BIDS TO BE DELIVERED TO DEAN TODAY

Irvin Boyle, President of Interfraternity Council, to Receive All Bids at 10:00 Today.

Last night the Interfraternity Council met in Graham Memorial and decided that the bids for the freshmen would be delivered to Irvin Boyle, president of that organization, at the D. K. E. house at 10:00 o'clock this morning. This will enable the freshmen to receive their bids on Monday, as originally scheduled.

Tonight at 12:00 o'clock the rushing season comes to a close. This year a new rushing season of twelve days was inaugurated in order that less time would be taken from the studies of both the fraternity and the new men. In previous years the rushing season was a long drawn out affair lasting nineteen days.

After tonight at 12:00 o'clock there will be a period of silence until Monday at 2:00 o'clock, when the freshmen will receive their bids in Memorial hall. After receiving their bids the freshmen will immediately go to the fraternity whose bid they have accepted. The freshmen are to maintain a strict silence from the time that they receive the bid until they enter the house of their choice.

Any violations of the period of silence either by a freshman or fraternity man will entail the loss of the $100 bond by the lodge and a revoking of the pledging privilege. The freshman will not be permitted to pledge to any fraternity during the period of one year for his infraction of the rushing rules.

CALL FOR AID OF NEEDY PERSONS ISSUED BY PRATT

Central Welfare Committee, King's Daughters, and Red Cross to Participate.

Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, chairman of the Central Welfare Committee, pleading for aid in the relief of the unfortunate and needy in this section, has issued the following appeal:

"The need for relief in and around Chapel Hill will be greater this fall and winter than last year, and more money, clothing, and food will be required to meet this need than was contributed a year ago. Everyone in this community is urged to give careful consideration to this need and to arrange his or her finances so as to be able to share in meeting this obligation.

"The four public agencies which are cooperating in relief work are the Central Welfare Committee, the King's Daughters, the Red Cross, and the Anti-Tuberculosis Committee. Each of these organizations must obtain through subscriptions from the community the funds necessary to carry on its work.

"The King's Daughters will make their request for funds this coming week, the Red Cross during the week of November 11, and the Anti-Tuberculosis Committee during the first week of December; and it is earnestly requested that everyone plan now to give to

"Y" Cabinets Change Time For Meetings

At yesterday's weekly meeting of the executives of the various "Y" cabinets, the hour of meeting of all the "Y" cabinets was shifted from 7:15 to 7:00. The fifteen minute change was made on account of the large number of boys who arrive some fifteen or twenty minutes before the opening of the meeting and spend their time loafing in the "Y" lobby.

Other plans and policies for the several cabinets were also discussed at the meeting over which Bill McKee, president of the "Y," presided.

FIRST MEETING OF ELISHA MITCHELL SOCIETY TUESDAY

Professors Sherwood Githens and W. C. Coker Will Deliver Lectures.

The 338th meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society will take place at Phillips hall, Tuesday, October 11, beginning promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

The program will include lectures by Professors Sherwood Githens and W. C. Coker. Professor Coker will lecture on "The Opportunities for Botanical study at the Highlands Laboratory," and Professor Githens will make an address on the subject, "The Magnetic Field of a Solenoid Oscillating at Radio Frequencies."

This society, which is now in its forty-eighth year, holds monthly meetings for the discussion of scientific subjects. Its object is to encourage research and to record the results of such work especially those that pertain to the national history of North Carolina.

To this end, it publishes a quarterly Journal, which is the official organ of the society and the North Carolina Academy of Science. By exchanging the Journal with more than three hundred scientific journals and periodicals a great many valuable pamphlets have been collected. These have been placed in the University library.

Season Tickets For Playmakers On Sale

Season tickets for the Playmaker productions have been going very well. Two-thirds of the number to be sold are already disposed of, and it is hoped that by the opening night of the first presentation, Uncle Tom's Cabin, the remainder will be taken. All those desiring tickets may procure them either at the Book Exchange in the Y, or at Alfred Williams, or from student salesmen.

Tryouts for Uncle Tom's Cabin will be made Monday, October 10, at 4:00 and 7:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. There are twenty-one characters in the play, and everyone interested is invited to come and try to get a part.

Miss Marks to Address Teachers of Alamance

Dr. J. F. Dashiell Describes His Experiences At Tenth Olympiad

Pluck of Japanese Athletes, Sportsmanship of Both Competitors And Spectators, Beauty of Stadium, and Impressiveness of Ceremonies Cited by Psychology Professor.

True sportsmanship, superb athletic spectacle and international good-will were amply manifested in the 1932 Olympics according to Dr. James F. Dashiell of the University psychology department. He taught at the University of Southern California this summer and lived but two blocks from the scene of international competition.

"The Olympic Games were impressive—that is the long and short of it," said Dr. Dashiell. "First, the athletic performances themselves. Whether the phenomenal record-breaking was due to the ideal weather conditions or the peculiar condition of the track in California, they were thrilling as performances from the first day to the last."

Carr's Performance
One of the outstanding events that Dr. Dashiell recalls is Bill Carr's running in the middle-distance events. "While Carr was running in a relay," he said, "I heard some spectators grumble, 'That guy isn't trying at all!' But when they noted the progress he was making the tone changed to a soft whistle. Surely he was a perfect running machine, and an object of aesthetic regard comparable to any of the Greek athletes immortalized in stone."

Dr. Dashiell then remarked on the sportsmanship displayed throughout the games, not only in the behaviour of the athletes on the field but also of the spectators in the stands. "It was a matter of daily comment how generous the spectators were in their applause for athletes of all nations," said Dashiell. To illustrate this point he quoted the story of the Japanese pole-vaulter, Nishada, who had never jumped higher than thirteen feet, nine inches, before the Olympics, yet who stuck it out with the two Americans to heights far above his former mark. Finally the stick was up to fourteen feet. The Jap made two valiant efforts, but knocked the cross-bar off each time.

Draws Applause
"At last, on his third try, he managed to clear it." The crowd gave him the biggest ovation of the games. Even the judges of other events neglected their particular charges' efforts to watch the diminutive Asiatic, and the toss of the discus by a Frenchman actually went unrecorded while the judge gazed at the pole-vaulter.

A further interesting example of the sportsmanship of the crowd was the case of another Jap running in a long-distance event. He had been lapped by the entire field, and was hopelessly out of the running, but still he kept trying. Though he finished much later than any of the other contestants in his event, he used up his last ounce of strength to do so, and had to be helped off the field. And he was given a bigger "hand" than the winners. In Dr. Dashiell's own words: "He exemplified the truth of the words of the founder of the Olympic Games, who said that the honor is not to win, but to compete."

Piano Tuner Now Listed Among Self-Help Students At Carolina

Allen S. Smith, Graduate of Raleigh School for Blind, Is Helping To Defray Part of His University Expenses By Repairing Pianos.

Although the self-help students of the past have employed virtually every known trade and profession to pay their expenses through the University, this year furnishes the first piano tuner in the recollection of present self-help secretary, Edwin Lanier. However, Harry Comer, of the Y. M. C. A., remembers a student who years ago did maintain himself in college through this craft.

Unlike his predecessor, the present tuner has had only two per cent vision since birth. Allen S. Hamilton, of Sea Level, has set himself up as a piano tuner, regulator, and repair man. Entering the State Blind School at Raleigh in 1920 at the age of seven, he specialized in piano tuning. He received his diploma from that department in 1928 and has had continuous experience in that line since that date.

At first, Hamilton planned to enter Wake Forest college, where he hoped to gain his A. B. degree and later enter the law school. However, friends advised him to try for the state

Graduate Students To Have Dance Tonight

The graduate students will attend the first dance of the year given by their organization, the Shirley Graves Graduate club tonight at 8:30 in the Smith building.

Jack Wardlaw will furnish the music for the dance, which lasts until 12:00 o'clock. This function affords a real get-together for all graduate students so that they may come to know one another better.

Each year the club sponsors social gatherings and has planned many interesting features for this term.

BASEBALL COACH TELLS ROTARIANS OF EXPERIENCES

Yankee Pitcher of 1913 World Series Winners Describes Exhibition Tour.

Bunn Hearn, Carolina's baseball coach, gave a highly amusing account of the trip around the world taken by the New York Yankees after they won the world's series in 1913.

Hearn, who was playing with the Yankees at the time, related his experiences in an informal address before the Chapel Hill Rotary club at its regular meeting this week.

The Yankee victory this year reminded the Rotarians the Yankees used to be plenty good years ago, as, for instance, in 1913, and they were wondering how the New York team strutted its stuff then. Bunn Hearn told them.

Around the World

The trip around the world was little more than an exhibition jaunt, Coach Hearn explained, for, baseball being far more advanced in America than abroad, the foreign teams could not be expected to offer enough opposition to make the competition keen.

In Japan, for instance, the Yankees ran up about 30 runs and then stopped trying, in order to give the Japs a chance. They had a baseball diamond, Coach Hearn said, "about as big as a large goods box, and the centerfielder and second baseman had to play so close together that it was difficult to tell which was which."

The team was the object of much attention and admiration everywhere it went, although in most countries the natives confessed they knew little about baseball, Coach Hearn said.

Before leaving the States, the team made a thirty-day tour, playing the Chicago White Sox. There were sixty-seven in the party and the receipts were around $100,000. They were exhibition games, of course.

Fraternity To Honor Alumnus Wednesday

Lambda chapter of Phi Kappa Sigma, will conduct its regular Founders' Day banquet next Wednesday in the form of a memorial to Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, late president of the University of Virginia and former president of the University.

At this date, which co-incides with the University Founders' Day, addresses will be made upon Dr. Alderman's accomplishments. Invitations for the affair have been sent to all alumni of the fraternity.

BELOVED PASTOR MOURNED TODAY BY MANY FRIENDS

"Parson" Moss, Pastor of Presbyterian Church, Died Yesterday at Age of 65.

Dr. William Dygnum Moss, beloved pastor of the Presbyterian church in Chapel Hill for twenty-two years, died here early yesterday of a heart attack. He had been suffering from angina pectoris for several years and had been inactive in the ministry for the past year. He was sixty-five.

Dr. Moss will be mourned by thousands of University alumni along with students of the present generation and citizens throughout the state.

Funeral Services Tomorrow

Funeral services will be conducted here in the Presbyterian church tomorrow afternoon at 4:00 o'clock, and burial probably will be in the Chapel Hill cemetery although arrangements had not been completed last night.

It has been requested that no flowers be sent.

Surviving are two sisters, Miss Eliza Moss of Portage La Prairie, Manitoba, Canada, and Mrs. John W. Ross of Pictou, Nova Scotia.

Although a native of Canada, Dr. Moss took out naturalization papers soon after coming to this country many years ago. He was the son of William and Anne (Coultter) Moss. He was graduated from the Presbyterian college of Montreal in 1890. Before coming to Chapel Hill Dr. Moss held pastorates in Marshfield, Prince Edward Island, from 1893 to 1897, and in Nova Scotia (Continued on last page)

FRESHMEN HEAR HISTORY OF U. N. C. FROM DR. CONNOR

Head of History Department Gives Brief Sketch of University's Past in Assembly.

Dr. R. D. W. Connor, head of the department of history, was the speaker of yesterday's assembly period. He gave the history of the University and some interesting facts concerning it. He stated that what a student receives from the University is determined by how much he contributes to it, and in order to lead a successful life here he must live by the standards of the place.

The history of the University goes as far back as 1776. In this year when the committee met to set up a form of government, they discussed establishing a state university and again when the constitution was formed, the subject was discussed, but it was not until December 11, 1789 that the charter for the University was created.

October 12, 1793 the committee met and after eating their lunch under the Davie Poplar, selected this spot for the University of North Carolina. Not long after that the corner stone was laid at Old East building, which is the oldest university building in the United States. The University was completed and a faculty of three selected. The faculty and school was ready, but no students came. It was not until February 11 that a student came. This student was Hinton James, of Wilmington.

Death to Liberalism At Columbia

According to a recent issue of the Columbia Spectator Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler and his reactionary cohorts have renewed their attack on free expression of student opinion which they began last spring with the expulsion of Reed Harris as editor of the student paper. This time they have passed a rule which prohibits "meetings of any organization connected with Columbia university which are open to the public . . . unless a faculty member of professional rank will volunteer to act as chairman"—thus depriving the students of the full advantages of their last means of true and unhindered expression. The Harris expulsion put a damper on complete expression through the columns of the Spectator, and this new ruling will have a similar effect on student mass meetings.

The regulation might well be considered as a direct slam at the integrity of Columbia students. And it is certainly none too complimentary of modern education as symbolized by Columbia university.

There was a time when many of the universities and colleges of the country, as pupils, looked to Columbia for guidance in various educational matters. What Columbia did was at one time considered right and proper. And so far as education was concerned she was perfect. But a great many of these pupils are no longer looking to the New York institution as their teacher. They are beginning to realize that in many respects their one-time teacher would do well to drink deeper at the fount of Up-to-Date Education; that she should give more consideration to the student's own ideas; and that the less the student is restricted the more is he educated, the more is he developed from within.

To those few pupils who still look to Columbia as their teacher this recent action on the part of the Butler forces has dealt a death blow to further development of liberal expression of student opinion. But to those one-time pupils who are now liberal teachers themselves the action is merely a final proof of their former teacher's reactionary attitude.

If education does anything at all for the student, it should certainly teach him when, where, and what he can speak of his own accord. But Dr. Butler thinks differently. A member of the faculty must say when and where the student can speak. And if what he speaks is not in keeping with the beliefs of the faculty member, the student will be in grave danger of being expelled. So treat an educated student, prescribes Dr. Butler.

In the final analysis, if Columbia University desires in the future to be looked upon as a liberal institution of higher learning she must first prove herself worthy of such a title, or else she will soon find herself classed as "just another university where faculty supervision reigns supreme."

And the Mud Flies

"Well," says the Desirable Freshman, "I am considering your fraternity and the Alfa Alfa's."

"The Afa Alfa's," replies the Fraternity Rusher. "What I know about those boys is enough to indict me for slander. Just between us two, did you know that . . ."

And the mud-slinging begins. For the Fraternity Rusher boasts that he always gets his man, even though he has to cut another fraternity's throat to do it.

The rushing rules used on this campus serve their purpose very well. They give all the fraternities and every freshman a fairly even break. But they make no guarantee against that most abominable practice of throat-cutting and mud-slinging.

At the University of Virginia, any fraternity that mentions the name of another lodge in its rushing talk is liable to forfeit its bond, as for the infraction of any other rule. Both the fraternities and the freshmen are asked to report violations of this rule.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL proposes to the Interfraternity Council that it adopt such a regulation in its revision of the campus rushing rules for next season. Such a ruling would have evident advantages. There is no positive harm in it. It would certainly not be disobeyed any more than the rest of the pan-hellenic regulations.

—E.C.D.

Into the Blue

An editorial in a recent issue of THE DAILY TAR HEEL proclaimed the phenomenal ascent of the paper from the red side of the ledger to the realm of staunch economic surety. After losing nearly two thousand dollars in its second year of existence of a daily THE TAR HEEL came back last year to realize a profit slightly in excess of one thousand dollars.

On the heels of this information, it was learned that the first ten issues for 1932 have realized a revenue of $539.10, an increase of nearly $120.00 over the same period last year, considered as the peak of advertising periods for this publication.

Not only is this phenomenal increase an index to the glimmer of prosperity returning, but it indicates that THE TAR HEEL is becoming a greater medium for Chapel Hill merchants and those national advertisers who distribute their products through local mercantile establishments.

One old-time country advertising man used to base his sales talk on the argument: "Well, mister, when your automobile sputters and coughs on a steep grade you give her a little more gas, don't you? Well, that's just like advertising. When business is bad and a red mountain of figures is just ahead, push her over the hill with a little more advertising."

Apparently his lesson has spread.—D.C.S.

Monopoly Of the Road

Transportation facilities in the state have indeed progressed since the days of our immediate forebears. But it is highly problematical whether the improvements in facilities are doing very much good in so far as "seeing Carolina" is concerned.

Those fortunate who are so situated as to be able to own motor cars of their own, find things very convenient, except for the high gasoline tax. These individuals derive the maximum benefit from the state's most excellent roadways. Let us now, however, consider those persons who must needs ride on the bus to arrive at their various destinations.

The Carolina Coach Company has succeeded in obtaining a monopoly over the motor transportation field in this state, and is pushing it for all that it's worth. When one takes into consideration that the distance from Boston to New York is approximately 200 miles and the bus fare on the Greyhound Lines is four dollars for the round trip, it seems inconceivable that a trip from Chapel Hill to Greensboro, a distance of approximately sixty miles, should demand a fare of three and a half dollars for the round trip.

Operating expenses for busses in the north are in excess of those here because of higher license fees and higher salaries for employees. The only possible reason remaining for the higher rate prevalent in this state is that the company so controls the business that it is at liberty to charge what it pleases.—O.S.S.

With Contemporaries

A Way Of Life

In good times, when big business men went about seeking technicians and complaining that colleges and universities turned out too few of them, technical courses became the "rage" in the institutions of higher learning throughout the land. Professors of English, philosophy and the other arts who presumed to complain were laughed down. They had nothing more to do but act as voices crying in the wilderness.

Now, thinks Dr. Raymond Walters, former dean of Swarthmore college, this year beginning his first term as president of the University of Cincinnati, depression will start colleges again teaching students how to occupy their idle time, of which they will have plenty in the next few years.

"The first function of a university," he admits, "is to prepare students for the work of life. A second function of higher learning is training for the leisure of life."

"Perhaps the greatest problem facing our century is that of enforced leisure and unemployment."

"Our great economic system is on trial, just as every preceding system was on trial. Its problems cannot be solved in a Pollyanna recipe that all things will work out well if simply given time. I would suggest for this problem of enforced idleness a definite program of intelligent work."

"Reading should be regarded as a game, and writing can be done if one feels like it. Many persons are turning to writing, and one authentic sign of a nation's becoming intellectual is a luxuriant crop of amateur writers."

Dr. Raymond's outlook is indicative of the changing viewpoint of educators all over the nation who are realizing that it is the business of the university to point out to modern students a way of life, rather than a way to make a living.—Southwestern California Daily Trojan.

We Can't Drink It Off

Speaking at a dinner in a loop hotel last Saturday night, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential candidate, expostulated in no uncertain terms that the only way out of our present precarious position was to repeal the dry laws. Once that was accomplished the Governor felt that organized crime could be overcome, the depressions repressed, and the sun could shine once more.

Contrast this view with what Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate, had to say in a recent speech in Milwaukee. "America cannot drink her way out." Then he went on to state that while he favored the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, there were certain social and economic problems that demanded more serious and immediate attention. We heartily say amen to Mr. Thomas's words. Politicians everywhere are using the wet-dry issue as a smoke screen to hide more pressing problems. Rather than take issue with our present corrupt industrial system, they shout for repeal; instead of discussing means to obtain bread, they procrastinate and yell for beer.

Regardless of what we feel about the Volstead act or the effectiveness of prohibition, let's not be hoodwinked by a mass of ballyhoo. We ourselves feel that prohibition has miserably failed to accomplish what its enthusiasts claimed for it. However, the return of legalized beer and wines will NOT be the grand cure-all for our national condition. We are too closely linked up with international economics; too snarled up in our individualistic program, to ever make such a tremendous recovery by such simple means. Whatever stimulating effect alcohol may have on the individual, it will not be the final answer to our national difficulties.—Daily Northwestern.

We Scandalous Youngsters

An article in a leading newspaper recently bemoaned in no uncertain terms the fact that "we are softening our youth." It began by decrying modern dormitories, sorority houses, fraternity houses, and, in short, all the modern conveniences that the present college student has at his command. With something bordering on Victorian complacency the writer describes his educational surroundings, the proverbial "split-bottom chairs," and all those things the past generation usually boast of. He shows our elders as people who overcame almost unsurmountable obstacles, as people with rugged characters, characters that have enabled them to triumph in a burst of glory over the difficulties of life.

It has always aroused our editorial ire to an almost insane pitch to hear members of a past generation bewail the plight of modern youth. It might be well here to point out some of the products of our "rugged" predecessors. The World War can not be said to have been brought on by the "softness of modern youth," but we must remember that the then modern youth had to fight that war, had to bleed and die in it. And it is universally agreed that the present economic depression is the result of the "rugged" machinations of the captains of industry, men who certainly cannot be classed as adolescents, men who belong to the generation of the writer who is scandalized by modern youth. And who can deny that the present social order is an improvement on the one which prevailed immediately before the war? Modern youth is not hypocritical, nor is it prudish. It has dared to face the truth, and admit the truth. Yet it is soft. We youngsters are totally without "rugged" characters.

It is our suggestion that fanatical and sentimental people cease decrying youth, especially columnists who belong to a past generation, the generation whose members, by their "rugged characters," brought about disaster in the social order, in the economic order, and in civilization as a whole. That generation has had its day. The present situation is the result of Victorian character-building. We know that we are going to live in this world; we believe that we should make our environment what we want it to be; and, finally and incidentally, we are going to do as we see fit.—Auburn Plainsman.

You're Tired, Uninspired; You're Blase

You're blase, you world-weary sophisticate!

Boredom stalks your waking moments; a becoming pallor decorates your features and a modulated languor your motions.

Sated with earthly pleasures, no quest for new sensation interests you. Joy of the flesh is flat.

Wise to omniscience, no knowledge can be new to you. Your brain is replete.

Having sounded the depths and soared the heights of all humanly possible emotions and ideas, knowing "all is vanity!"—ennui overwhelms you.

Pay no attention if your diagnostician mumbles less about excess of knowledge than about lack of vital spirits, glandular deficiency, atrophied curiosity, retarded metabolism, or defective digestion!

Perhaps the stuff in your shirt, and the mental works under your chapeau make up just a generally second-rate mechanism, a horseless carriage destined to wheeze among twelve-cylinder speedsters and tri-motored air liners!—Minnesota Daily.

Shady Rushing

Try as they might, it is evident some fraternities and sororities are quite unable to overcome the tendency of establishing a lead on their rivals by dirty rushing. What has in other years been only too apparent, has at last struck bottom and now demands a showdown.

If the Greek chapters have to depend on such poor sportsmanship and dishonesty to secure a few pledges, who, themselves, are apparently unacquainted with ethical rushing, the houses are welcome to them. Certainly by pledging people of such caliber they can never hope to improve their obviously second-rate places.

Dirty rushing is a glaring admission of weakness on the part of the chapters engaging in it. By disregarding the rules made for the benefit of all concerned, they are merely setting themselves up as desperate cases. Their logic is poor; their psychology appalling. What freshman, when he arrives at the inevitable realization, would be content to affiliate himself with a group of cheap, crooked backslappers?

The average intelligence of those chapters seems to be alarmingly low if they fail to see that by participating in dirty rushing they are only cutting their own throats. When the novelty of it wears off, their pledges will see them as the hypercrites they are. The chapters will not have benefited, for all those possessing any character at all will break their pledges, as they should.

Everyone on the campus has a set of rules, so there is no excuse for the present situation. It is just dishonest, unethical, and cheap. The offenders are hardest hit. They lose their pledges, if any freshman is spineless to submit to dirty rushing; they lose what prestige they might have had; they endanger their social security. And it must be a pretty poor satisfaction to look over a pledge delegation and say, "There, by the grace of cheating and dishonesty, is a group representative of our fraternity."—Syracuse Daily Orange.

measurably aided by holding the games every year or two rather than every four. This would give more countries a chance to house the games and would keep the countries in closer informal communication.

The impressiveness of the opening and closing ceremonies cannot be appreciated by hearsay. The singing of the 2,000 athletes on the opening day as they marched around the great stadium following their respective flags, was equalled only by the silence as the Olympic flag was slowly lowered, the taps of the four trumpeters, and the sudden extinguishing of the victory torch which had been burning for sixteen days and nights.

The Carolina Tar Heels, twenty-six strong, reached Knoxville yesterday at 10:30 in the morning ready for the tussle with Tennessee this afternoon on Shields-Watkins field.

The Tar Heels went through a limbering up session on the field yesterday afternoon and rested for the game today, determined to find themselves against the Vols and deliver that scoring punch so sadly lacking in their two opening games. The Carolina coaches have worked their men hard for the past week ironing out flaws in the attack and seemed encouraged as to Carolina's chances of handing Tennessee the defeat Coach Collins has worked on so hard for the last three years.

Eleventh Meeting

The game today will be the eleventh meeting between the two institutions and the series stands one against the Tar Heels. A victory for the Blue and White today would even things up at five all with one tie game. Holding the Vols to a 7-0 victory last

S. A. E. WINS 19-0 FROM DELTA PSI IN EASY VICTORY

Lewis Defeats Manly by First Down; Lambda Chi Alpha Beats Kappa Sigma.

In the closest and best played of the intramural football games yesterday, Lewis took a narrow win from Manly 6 to 4 on first downs. The winners came from behind in the final quarter to get their victory.

Lewis started things in the first quarter making two first downs, one on a penalty and the second on a pass from Peacock to Aitken. The losers came back in the second quarter making four straight first downs as a result of short bullet passes thrown by "Red" Rankin. Manly had a four to two lead at the end of the half. Lewis pushed across one first down in the third period, trailing four to three as the final period opened. The tying marker came as a result of a pass from Peacock to Lowdermilk after Goldman had intercepted a Manly pass. Aitken scored the winning first down a few minutes later on another pass from Peacock. The work of Peacock, Aitken, and Lowdermilk was outstanding on the winners' team while Rankin, Taylor, and Page starred for the losers.

Now that all the set-up games are history, the major football teams are settling down to their real schedule. Football is King today. And for the entertainment of thousands of fans throughout the country are scheduled games that should be chock full of good football and thrills. Even at this early date, intersectional fans will have something to talk about for Chicago travels to New Haven to play Yale and Ohio Wesleyan meets Syracuse in Archbold stadium.

The games that should be the best drawing cards are: Columbia-Princeton at New York, Yale-Chicago at New Haven, Michigan-Northwestern at Ann Arbor, Tulane-Georgia at New Orleans, and Kentucky-Georgia Tech at Atlanta.

Tennessee-North Carolina

This is the game that will show whether the Tar Heels have possibilities for a great club or whether they're just another football team. The Vols will flash a well-balanced team with plenty of backfield strength and a strong passing attack. To balance this array, the Tar Heels will have a hitherto impregnable line and a fairly good backfield once it gets going. At any rate, a close game should result with a one-touchdown margin of victory separating the two squads. One vote for Tennessee and three cheers for Carolina.

Auburn-Duke

Against weak opposition, both teams looked like a million dollars, but the Plainsmen will have the advantage of playing on home territory. Auburn by the slimmest of margins and a prayer for the Blue Devils.

Tulane-Georgia

Nollie Felts may not play for the Green Wave but that shouldn't make any difference to Tulane. It'll be a case of veteran versus rookie, with the younger team again coming in second. Georgia should be completely submerged Sunday morning.

Tech-Kentucky

The Engineers showed a lot of power in beating Clemson last week, but the Colonels are a bit sterner opposition than the South Carolinians. However, Jap Hart and Co. should come out on top by about one touchdown.

Michigan-Northwestern

When two of the strongest teams in the Big Ten meet, the fur is bound to fly. There'll be plenty of fireworks at Ann Arbor this afternoon. But the writer believes that the high powered Michigan attack will prevail.

Columbia-Princeton

The Lions took on a new lease on life under Coach Lou Little and the Tigers seem to be doing the very same thing under Fritz Crisler. Columbia showed plenty in beating Middlebury and Lehigh while Princeton just looked average in defeating Amherst. We'll take Columbia.

Other Games

Florida over Sewanee State over Clemson.

RAISON EXPECTS HUGE ENTRY LIST FOR ANNUAL RACE

Lewis Dormitory Leads Team Entries With Twelve Men Qualified For Two-Mile Run.

Over a hundred students are working out daily to comply with the entrance requirements for the ninth annual intramural Cake Race.

The annual cross-country affair has all the earmarks of being one of the hardest fought in the history of the event. Fourteen teams have been entered, and all indications point to an even heavier slate.

Lewis dorm leads the entries with a dozen entrants; New Dorms and Grimes have nine each; Ruffin has eight; Mangum, seven; Manly and Aycock, a half dozen apiece; Everett, four; and the following have one or more entrants: Best House, Old West, Old East, Klutz building, Archer house, and Sigma Phi Sigma fraternity. Coach Ranson announced that there's still some time left for entrants, and everyone is eligible provided he takes the six required previous workouts.

Point Scoring

Herman Schnell of the intramural department, announced the scoring which will count toward the all-year competition winner would be as follows: In the cross-country meet the organizations represented by the first fifteen men to finish shall receive points as follows: first, 15 points; second, 14 points; third, 13 points; ... fifteenth, 1 point. Team winner in cross-country shall receive 25 points; second place, 20 points; third, 15 points; fourth, 10 points; fifth, 5 points. Teams having most entrants in the cross-country meet shall receive 25 points; second, 20 points; third, 15 points; fourth, 10 points; fifth, 5 points.

There will be an announcement concerning the team scoring at a later date.

TAR HEELS TAKE DOUBLES NET CUP

Wilmer Hines Also Wins Singles After Teaming With Morgan To Take Doubles Cup.

Wilmer Hines and Dave Morgan teamed together to win the leg on the Intercollegiate Tennis cup given each year by the Greenbrier Golf and Tennis club of White Sulphur Springs, Va. The Tar Heel combination vanquished Morrison and Bowen of the University of Virginia in the final round of team competition 6-2, 6-3, in a smashing victory.

Hines carried the Tar Heel colors still further by conquering Morrison in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2, to win the Intercollegiate singles crown. Hines was seeded number one and Morgan number two but the tournament officials put the Carolina players in the same bracket to eliminate the possibility of an all-Carolina final. Morgan was beaten by Hines in a semi-final match 6-3, 6-4.

By winning the doubles competition, Carolina gains permanent possession of the cup by virtue of having won three legs on the award. The cup is a beautiful sterling silver trophy about two feet high and will be put on display in Mr. Woollen's office.

RESERVES SLUG WAY TO WIN IN FALL BASEBALL

Fred Crouch Goes Whole Route, Holding Varsity Hitless for Five Innings.

In another practice game yesterday afternoon, Coach Bunn Hearn's reserves turned the tables on the first string nine and emerged from the fray on the long end of a decision 13-3 score. Fred Crouch, pitching the whole game for the winners, was an "iron man," holding the varsity sluggers without a hit after the fifth inning.

Efland, a junior, made his first appearance of the fall season in the catching role for the rookies. Terzini, brilliant freshman catcher, was moved into the first string lineup where he performed throughout the entire game. Hutchison and Spiers alternated in the box for the varsity but neither was at his best and they were unable to check the determined slugging orgy of the reserve batsmen.

Two Big Innings

In the fourth inning, with the second team leading by a 3-1 count, Spiers replaced Hutchison at the varsity pitching assignment and in the fifth the regulars succeeded in making things more interesting by tying the score when Zaiser contributed a triple with two on the sacks.

Thereafter, however, the younger tossers were far superior to the varsity nine, and while Crouch was starring in the box the reserve sluggers bunched their hits just right and enjoyed two sensational rallies in the seventh and the ninth, resulting in ten more runs and the victory.

Cox, Efland, and Fox led the attack for the winners with several long, hard, well-placed hits. Captain Bill Powell on third base for the varsity turned in a notable infielding performance with consistently good throws for putouts.

GRID-GRAPH WILL SHOW VOLS GAME

Entire Contest May Be Seen on Board in Memorial Hall At 3:00 O'clock.

A grid-graph report of the Carolina-Tennessee game will be shown in Memorial hall this afternoon at 3:30. The Athletic Association has charge of this showing and promises an efficient and accurate showing of the report today.

The price of admission will be twenty-five cents and a large audience is expected to cram the hall, due to the intense interest shown last year on the part of the students and also University alumni who came from Durham and nearby Carolina towns to get a vivid description of the games played away.

This is the seventh year the grid-graph has been used here and for the benefit of those who are here for the first year, the grid-graph is a large board on which are lights of various colors which flash and tell the story of the game as telegraphed here directly from the press box in Shields-Watkins field, Knoxville.

The names of the players of both teams are listed, and the name of the play, the player making the play is shown by a light flashing opposite each heading. In the center of the

TAR BABY TEAM HAS FIRST GAME NEXT SATURDAY

No First Team Yet Picked for Game With Campbell College.

Coach Odell Sapp, freshman coach of the Tar Baby eleven, when asked what his first team consisted of said, "The first team is still a myth; we have three teams which look like they are on an even basis. Nobody as yet has sewed up his berth on the first team."

Questioned concerning the type of material the yearling gridsters will be moulded from, the frosh mentor said, "It looks like we have more material than last year, but the boys are slow getting used to the shifts and the system. The defense looks good, but the offense is very slow. This should be remedied with scrimmages."

Continuing his diagnosis of the freshman gridders Coach Sapp stated, "The whole team lacks speed now because of the indecision as to when and what to do—however from now on the boys should know the plays well, since the blackboard talks we have had during the past week."

The whole freshman team went through rudimentary blocking and tackling drills yesterday. They will scrimmage at least twice a week from now on. The opening game will be next Saturday with the Campbell college eleven on Kenan stadium. Campbell college seems to have a good team this year; they made a very creditable showing against the Langley Field airman, recently.

The following is a list of the candidates which look most promising at the present time: ends, Arthur, Asheville School for Boys, Barwick, Jacksonville high, Brown, Greensboro high, Brothers, Rocky Mount high, Yeager, Kiski, Ellisberg, Mercersburg; tackles, Evins, Woodberry Forest, Hobgood, Durham high, Milloway, Winston-Salem high; guards, Moore, Kiski, Phillips, Greensboro high, Reid, Winston-Salem high, Shipman, High Point high, Joyce, St. Mel's; centers, Kanner, Sanford, Yoder, Newton; quarterbacks, Whitaker, Kentucky Military Institute, Pendleton, Georgia Military Academy, Cox, Riverside Military Academy, Connelly, Morganton high; halves, Montgomery, Kiski, Phelps, Christ school, Snyder, Monroe; fullbacks, McCachren, Oak Ridge, and Leonard, Glen Alpine.

WISCONSIN MAKES DRASTIC CUTS IN LIVING EXPENSES

Saving of $51,000 Effected as Board of Regents Think Reduction Expedient.

Like most mid-western universities, the University of Wisconsin at Madison has been obliged to effect drastic cuts in general living expenses of the institution.

The Daily Cardinal, student organ reports that although the enrollment has not decreased as much as that of other mid-western schools, the board of regents has deemed it expedient to reduce the prices of board and room in the dormitories $80 for every man and $40 for every woman. This will result in a saving of $51,000.

In the various colleges of the middle west there have been drops of from ten to twenty percent in the bills of the boarding houses and Greek letter fraternity houses. Texas Christian university has made reductions of $500 to $600, and $150 was cut from fees at Southern Methodist at Dallas.

The University of Denver, the University of Nebraska agricultural college, and Iowa State have also made drastic slashes in their living expenses, while the cost of an education at Kansas is far below that of other comparable institutions, according to a report issued by F. P. O'Brien. A western insurance publication lists costs at some colleges as follows: Wisconsin $1,400 to $1,500, Michigan $1,500 to $2,000, Yale $2,000 to $4,000.

Dorm Fees Reduced

Besides the great reductions in dormitory fees are also noticeable reductions in clothing. A United Press survey shows that coonskins have dropped $50 in price while the far-famed yellow slickers have come from five dollars down to two. Likewise there have been noticeable changes in the prices of movies, dances, and subscriptions to campus magazines.

The survey of the United Press also pointed out the new price of football tickets and other extra-curricular "essentials."—Daily Northwestern.

NEW BACKFIELD DEFENSE MIGHT STOP VOLUNTEERS

year when they completed their schedule undefeated was something Alabama, Vandy, and New York university couldn't do. Coach Neyland respects the Collinsmen and the nineteen first downs along with the fifteen completed passes Carolina had against powerful Vandy last week has caused him considerable worry.

The big question to be decided today is whether or not Carolina has found a capable back to replace the injured White and whether the Tar Heels have found that backfield punch necessary to convert first downs into touchdowns. If Carolina uncovers such a back today the Vols will have more on their hands than they can handle.

Coach Collins experimented with his backs during practices prior to their departure Thursday and there was a possibility that he would shift his quartet around on defense. His plan was to have Chandler back up the line and John Phipps stand back and return punts.

Chandler is a bulwark behind the line and Phipps should be able to shake loose for some nice punt returns as he is the more shifty of the two as runners. This change depends on the type of game the Vols use and in case the change is made Hanes Lassiter will occupy a halfback position of the defense.

The grid-graph is so vivid that spectators in Memorial hall last year made quite a demonstration on several occasions as when Johnny Branch dazzled the Vanderbilt team with his wonderful play at Nashville.

Tribute Paid

The old bell in the South building was tolled for five minutes yesterday morning in solemn tribute as the student body generally learned of Dr. Moss's passing.

Asked for a statement President Frank Graham said:

"Parson Moss was one of the most Christlike men we have ever known here. His philosophy of life was the Sermon on the Mount. His idealism and faith in youth were a moral tonic on this campus. There was a radiant courage about him always. He loved all his fellowmen. His life and teachings are a part of this place forever."

Beloved Man

"Parson" Moss, as he was affectionately called by old and young, was one of the most beloved men Chapel Hill has ever known. He was so close to the students and to the spiritual life of the University that he was almost regarded as a member of the faculty. It was his custom, not to wait for students to call on him, but to visit them in their dormitories and fraternity houses. The boys always felt free to confide in him and to discuss with him their most intimate problems.

For many years Dr. Moss held prayer meetings in fraternity houses each Sunday. He had been for many years chairman of the board of directors of the University Y. M. C. A. He possessed a remarkable power of adaptability to persons and situations and his influence touched residents and students of all denominations. His sermons were of the liberal type that stressed the values of truth, goodness, and beauty.

It was largely because of his interest in Dr. Moss's ministry that James Sprunt gave the funds for the construction of the present church.

In 1918 the University conferred on Dr. Moss the honorary degree of D.D.

Active pallbearers will be Dean J. M. Bell, Dean F. F. Bradshaw, Louis Graves, Dr. G. R. Harter, R. B. House, S. E. Leavitt and Clarence Pickard.

MARIAN NIXON FEATURED AT CAROLINA THEATRE

Marian Nixon, feminine lead of "Madison Square Garden," featured today at the Carolina theatre, entered the films when they were still in their silent stages. Recently she has been featured with Warner Baxter in "Amateur Daddy"; with Charles Farrell in "After Tomorrow"; with James Cagney in "Winner Take All"; and in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Opposite Miss Nixon is Jack Oakie, who was given his first big chance in pictures with Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In." Others included in the cast of today's cinema are Thomas Meighan, William Boyd, Zasu Pitts, Lew Cody, William Collier, Sr., Robert Elliott, and Warren Hymer.

NATHAN HOME SCENE OF SMALL CONFLAGRATION

Members of the local fire department were called out to a small blaze at the residence of Dr. S. A. Nathan, city health officer, at 410 Pittsboro street about 7:30 Thursday night.

The conflagration began when window curtains in Nathan's house caught fire from some unknown cause. Firemen had little trouble in extinguishing the blaze.

The fire occurred at a rather inopportune time, since Nathan's fire insurance ran out only the day before.

STEELE OFFICERS FOR YEAR CHOSEN

Carl Wall Elected President of Dormitory; Forum Representatives Also Selected at Smoker.

Thursday night Steele dormitory elected officers to serve for the current school year. These new men, representing the residence of Steele, are Carl Wall, serving in the capacity of president, U. S. B. Dole, officiating as vice-president, and Frank Munn, athletic manager.

The results of the election to the Union Forum showed that the north section would be represented by Carl Dupree, the central section by Bill Campbell, and the south section by George Fountain.

The schedule of meetings next week is Old East, Monday, Old West, Tuesday, New Dorms, Wednesday, and Carr, Thursday. These dormitory meetings will finish up the series of smokers that have been running for the past two weeks.

working together on offense S. A. E. won their opening contest of the season over Delta Psi 19 to 0. With Harris doing the passing and the entire S. A. E. team doing the receiving the winners clicked off gain after gain. Freeman went over the line for the first two scores on short passes from Harris. Connor scored the last marker on a run of ten yards through the entire Delta Psi team after catching a short pass thrown by Harris. On the defense for the winners the work of Connor and Joyner was outstanding in the backfield while Parsley did some nice playing in the line. Blount and Dillard led the play of Delta Psi.

Kappa Sigs Lose

In a slow and uninteresting contest Lambi Chi Alpha were victorious over Kappa Sigma by a score of 19 to 0. Neither team could get going in the first half which ended 0 to 0 with both clubs having one first down. In the third period however Lambi Chi Alpha's attack began clicking and with Griffin throwing accurate passes and McFarland and Willy doing most of the receiving the winners pushed across their markers. For the losers May and Young looked best both on the offense and defense.

Two Forfeits

Of the five scheduled contests, two were won and lost by forfeits, Zeta Psi and Phi Kappa Sigma winning over Chi Phi and Sigma Chi respectively.

Honorable William I. Ward, Republican candidate for Congress from the sixth district, will speak publicly in Carrboro, Tuesday, October 11. The program featuring Ward will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

EDUCATORS WILL WATCH CLASS OF CHILD PRODIGIES

By College News Service

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 7.—Out of more than 100 applications, President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern university this week had selected his "class" of prodigies, whose college careers are to be watched with interest by educators throughout the country.

Those singled out as prodigies are either fourteen or fifteen years of age and were chosen because of marked ability shown in preparatory schools. Although in certain instances they will receive special attention, their courses in general will be the same as those taken by regular entering students.

Following is a list of President Scott's potential geniuses: Mary Margaret Moore, fourteen, of Danville, Illinois,—daughter of an attorney; likes dancing, swimming and other sports; doesn't know exactly what she's going to do, other than to "have a good time."

Jane Alice Hall, fifteen, of Clovis, New Mexico—also a daughter of an attorney; plays tennis; wants to "take up journalism."

George E. Alcott, fifteen, of Weiner, Arkansas—son of a physician, plans to study medicine; plays basketball and baseball.

James Allan Norton, fifteen, of Flint, Michigan—will major in creative chemistry because his mother teaches chemistry.

William Duncan Stech, fifteen, of New York—plans to become an attorney; plays football and basketball; his mother is director of publications at Columbia university and his father is a research statistician.

entered in the competition, Davis and Elkins, Lynchburg college, Morris Harvey university, Marshall college of West Virginia, Western Maryland university, West Virginia university, Greenbrier Military college, and the runners up, University of Virginia. Virginia had won the only other leg on the cup, winning in 1929.

On his return from the tournament last night, Coach Kenfield announced that he was planning a tournament to start in the near future for members of the varsity squad not having won letters and freshman aspirants to see the improvement of his varsity scrubs and get a look at the freshman material. The work from now until Thanksgiving will point to the Thanksgiving morning meet against Virginia at Charlottesville.

ALUMNI IN STATE WILL CELEBRATE ON FOUNDERS' DAY

Alumni Clubs in and Outside of State Will Have Members of Faculty as Speakers.

University alumni clubs in North Carolina cities and in several points outside the state are making arrangements for October 12 meetings in celebration of the 139th anniversary of the founding of the University. It was announced yesterday, by J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary.

Raleigh alumni of the University will have Professor W. S. Bernard, of the Greek department, as principal speaker at a meeting, October 12. As a part of the Wake county celebration, a fifteen minute radio broadcast of University songs by Carolina students over station WPTF is being sponsored by University alumni. The program will be presented from 7:45 o'clock to 8:00 Wednesday evening, and will be under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer, of the University music faculty.

Other Speakers

Dr. Charles S. Mangum and Coach R. A. Fetzner will be the speakers at the Greensboro meeting. Dr. Collier Cobb has been invited to speak to the High Point alumni, while Dean M. T. Van Hecke, of the University law school will be the chief speaker at the Asheville meeting. Coach C. C. Collins will speak at the Burlington meeting, and Dr. A. W. Hobbs, dean of the college of liberal arts, will speak at Oxford. Charlotte alumni will hear Judge N. A. Townsend, a member of the Consolidation Commission, speak on the subject of University consolidation.

THIRTY DEBATES ARE PLANNED BY UNIVERSITY TEAM

Debate Council at Meeting
Adopts Policies Which It Will Follow This Year.

The debate council at a meeting Thursday night adopted the policies which the University will follow during the current year and discussed several matters in regard to topics for debate and schools with whom Carolina will engage in debates.

Officers of the council are Dan M. Lacy, president; Professor W. A. Olsen, secretary. Other members of the council are Bill Eddleman, F. A. Rankin, Jim Bailey, Professor E. J. Woodhouse, and Professor George McKie.

The policies adopted are largely those followed at Western Reserve and the University of Pittsburgh, two of the leading debating institutions in the country.

The tryouts for debates will be open to all qualified students of the University; however, if those trying out do not meet the standard of quality, men who are members of the debate group will be drafted.

Debating is not to be a sport but rather an honest discussion of students who have studied the questions selected and who debate their own opinions. It is not to be a game but an honest searching for the truth in a

Co-ed Rushing Season Will Open Tomorrow

The rushing season for women will be officially opened tomorrow. This marks the culmination of a two weeks' period of silence between the sorority and non-sorority girls.

During the coming week, the two sororities, Pi Beta Phi and Chi Omega, will alternate between afternoon and night entertainments. Plans for rushing activities include teas, bridge and theatre parties.

This period of rushing will be followed by another short lapse of silence from midnight, Saturday to Monday, October 17. At that time, rushees will receive their bids from Mrs. Stacy's office in South building.

WORK SCHEDULED ON YACKETY YACK

Juniors and Seniors Are Urged To Have Pictures Taken
Soon for Year Book.

Active work on the 1933 edition of the Yackety Yack will begin Monday, October 17. Tryouts for freshmen experienced and interested in the work are planned as soon as active work on the book begins. Those who type and especially any students accomplished in etching are asked to try out for the staff. Further announcements concerning tryouts will be made soon.

Juniors and seniors are cautioned by the editor of the year book that the deadline for photographs will be set shortly. Students have already paid their fees for the picture and are urged to take immediate advantage of this.

Booths for appointment will be continued at the Y. M. C. A. during assembly period this week. Another booth is being placed at Pritchard-Lloyd's in the afternoon and evening.

Entertainment Group Members Are Picked

B. B. Bray, Jr., and W. T. Davis, Jr., were named yesterday as the representatives from the school of education to serve on the student entertainment committee for this year.

Several years ago students in the school of education voted to be taxed one dollar for student entertainment. They were joined later by the commerce school and the college of liberal arts. The fee is paid at the time of registration, and the students in these three schools receive a book of tickets to the entertainments for that quarter.

A committee composed of representatives from these schools and headed by the dean of the college of liberal arts makes all arrangements for bringing the various entertainers here. Each committee selected serves for the winter and spring quarter of the current year and for the fall quarter of the following year.

Graham Postpones Trip

President and Mrs. Graham postponed a trip which they had planned to take to Charlotte today, tomorrow, and Tuesday in order to attend the funeral of Reverend W. D. Moss. President Graham was scheduled to speak to a general assembly of all civic clubs and associations in Charlotte and also to deliver an address to the Tri-State Typographical Union which is to be meeting there.

Renown Of University Of Virginia Lies Both In Past And In Present

Founded by Jefferson and Celebrated for Producing Famous Men.
Virginia School is Modern and Accredited Educational Institution Surrounded by Noble Traditions.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This article picturing the University of Virginia inaugurates a series of sketches on the leading universities and colleges of the south.)

By A. T. Dill

Thomas Jefferson had inscribed on his tombstone as his three major accomplishments, the authorship of the Declaration of Independence, the writing of the Virginia laws for religious tolerance, and the founding of the University of Virginia.

Offspring of our third president, the University of Virginia has remained for over a century synonymous with great names in American history. Its institutions and the very aspect of its campus call to mind the famous men who made them possible and those who continued to uphold the ideals of its founders.

Two other Presidents of the United States, James Madison and James Monroe, supported Jefferson in his desire to give his native state a center of higher learning. Jefferson was elected to the office of Rector of Central college, founded in 1817, one mile west of Charlottesville. From this college developed the present University of Virginia.

Opened in 1825

Although its origin must be reckoned from 1819 when the state legislature adopted a resolution providing for its establishment, the university was not opened to students until 1825. Since most of the faculty members were scholars from Oxford or Cambridge, the first courses of instruction offered were typically in the English educational tradition.

Virginia has the unique record of not having had a president until eighty years after its founding. During that time the institution was governed directly by the faculty and a chairman, chosen from that body, in whom executive powers were vested. This group was subject to a Board of Visitors, corresponding to trustees, the head of

Special Program Planned for Occasion
With Music, Refreshments, and A Special Speaker.

The University "Y" will commemorate the 111th anniversary of the birth of Sir George Williams, founder of the International Young Men's Christian Association, with a special program in chapel Friday morning and an open house in Graham Memorial that night.

Music, refreshments, and a special speaker for the occasion have been announced as being on the program by Bill McKee, president of the "Y." All students and townspeople are cordially invited to attend the celebration in Graham Memorial.

New Games in Union Building

The game room of Graham Memorial has been the recipient of two more games that have been donated by Randolph-McDonald, Inc., of Chapel Hill. The game room reports that these are proving very popular and are appreciated to the utmost by the students who use them.

which bore the title of Rector.

However, a quarter of century ago, it became apparent that a member of the faculty could not assume the double duties of instruction and administration. It was at this time that the Board of Visitors selected Edwin Anderson Alderman as first president of the school, then almost a century old. Alderman had formerly been president of the University of North Carolina, the traditional rival of Virginia for the last forty years.

Jefferson's Work Outstanding

During the eighty years before Alderman's appointment, Jefferson was the outstanding Rector of the university, acting in this capacity until his death in 1826. As head of the organization, he proposed the eight schools into which the university was divided, personally designed and supervised the construction of the buildings, and devoted his whole time and energy to the improvement of the college. And with few changes the system inaugurated by Jefferson has continued to the present day.

Honor System

One of the most notable of these modifications is in itself a monument to his liberalism. In 1842, Judge Henry St. George Tucker, a member of the law faculty, introduced the resolution that students taking examinations for distinction and other honors should not be required to be under the surveillance of the customary committee of three professors while doing so. This was the beginning of the honor system of the University of Virginia, and it has been continuously in operation since that time.

It is maintained by, and its success is due to, the observance of a reciprocal responsibility among students. Each is honored not only to refrain from cheating himself, but to report others who do so. In one in-

TRYOUTS PLANNED FOR PLAYMAKERS

Tests for Parts Will Be Conducted
Tomorrow Afternoon at 4:00
And 7:30 at Night.

The first presentation of the Carolina Playmakers will be a revival of that famous propaganda novel Uncle Tom's Cabin by Harriet Beecher Stowe, given in the Playmakers theatre on the nights of November 3, 4, and 5.

Tryouts for this play are scheduled tomorrow at 4:00 and 7:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. All who are interested are urged to come. There are twenty-one parts to be taken.

Several numbers will be needed between the acts and anyone who has talent for specialty numbers of any kind, who can sing, dance, play or put on a skit, is urged to come to the tryouts tomorrow.

Mrs. Stacy Entertains

Mrs. Stacy entertained the twenty-seven women members of the freshman class yesterday afternoon at tea from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock at her home on Rosemary street in order that they might become better acquainted.

Three Cases Tried In Recorder's Court

The first case on the docket of the recorder's court yesterday, at which Mayor Zeb Council acted in the capacity of judge in the absence of Judge Hinshaw, was against Jesse King, charged with secret assault and battery, and against John T. Johnson, charged with assault with deadly weapon. Johnson had been unable to prepare defense, so the case was set for trial October 15.

Bill Horton, colored, was charged with being drunk in public, plead guilty, and was fined $5.00 and costs.

James Hargraves, colored, was charged with possession of intoxicating whiskey for sale, and was found not guilty.

'Y' CABINETS WILL MEET TOMORROW

Sub-Chairmen for Various Committees of Cabinets Will Be Selected at Meeting.

The three cabinets of the Y. M. C. A. will convene for their third gathering of the year tomorrow at 7:00 o'clock, the new hour agreed upon Friday morning by the general executive council.

No announcement was made as to the tentative substance of the various programs has been made as yet, but interesting slates have been promised by each of the student presidents of the groups.

Program Events

One of the most important events will be the selection of sub-chairmen for the various committees. One sub-chairman for each committee will come from each of the lower cabinets. The men interested in working on the committees are asked to confer with the chairmen, who are from the senior cabinet.

Jackson To Address Assembly Tomorrow

Next week's assembly programs will be started tomorrow with Dr. W. C. Jackson, head of the school of public administration, speaking. Tuesday W. C. Medford will speak on "Check Regulations." Wednesday, the University will observe Founders' Day. Mayne Albright will tell of the uses of Graham Memorial Thursday. The week will come to a close with the Y. M. C. A. putting on a University program Friday morning. Reverend Albea Godbold will have charge of the devotional each day.

First "Y" Deputation Trip Is Scheduled This Week

The University Y. M. C. A. will send out its first deputation group of the year to Aberdeen this week.

The nucleus of the group will be formed from the sophomore cabinet. Other cities on the year's schedule are Fayetteville, Raleigh, and Rocky Mount.

History Club Meeting

The graduate history club will convene this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial for its first meeting. Tea will be served during the afternoon.

Episcopal Forum Will Meet

The Episcopal church forum will meet tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the parish house. Tom Wright, student pastor, will again lead the group.

FIRST YEAR MEN TO BE OFFERED BIDS TOMORROW

Fee Will Be Paid Before Rushees May Receive Fraternity Invitations on Pledge Day.

Notices will be delivered tonight and between 2:00 and 4:00 tomorrow afternoon to freshmen receiving bids to fraternities, it was announced by Irving Boyle, president of the Pan-Hellenic council, yesterday. He requesting that all men expecting bids remain in their rooms at these hours.

For the first time a one dollar fee will be charged to all freshmen receiving bids in order to defray the expenses caused by rushing. This fee will be collected tomorrow afternoon when the freshmen go to Memorial hall to receive their bids.

Freshman Instructions

Boyle announced that all freshmen were to go straight to the houses of the fraternities from which they accepted a bid immediately after leaving Memorial hall. No man is permitted to speak to anyone on the way to the house at which he will stay until 6:00 o'clock.

Any freshman who does not accept a bid tomorrow afternoon and who later desires to enter a fraternity which he is invited to join will go and receive his bid from Dean Bradshaw's office under the same conditions and the one dollar fee.

Freshmen Warned Again

All freshmen are warned once more to strictly observe the period of silence lasting from 12:00 last night through 6:00 o'clock tomorrow evening. A heavy penalty will be imposed on either the fraternity or freshman who does not abide by this ruling.

BELOVED PASTOR WILL BE BURIED THIS AFTERNOON

Funeral Services for Dr. W. D.
Moss Will Be Conducted in Presbyterian Church.

Final details in the arrangements for the funeral of Dr. William Dygnum Moss, much beloved pastor of the Presbyterian church of Chapel Hill, who died here Friday of a heart attack, were completed late yesterday. The funeral services will take place this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the Presbyterian church, of which he has been pastor for twenty-five years, and interment will be made at the Chapel Hill cemetery.

The services will be conducted jointly by the following ministers: Reverend R. Murphy Williams of the Church of the Covenant at Greensboro; Reverend D. H. Scanlon, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Durham; Reverend A. S. Lawrence, rector of the Chapel of the Cross in Chapel Hill; and Reverend Ronald Tamblin, state-of-supply of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian church.

Hymns Will Be Sung

A number of songs will be sung at the church by the church choir and the congregation. Among these will be included the hymn, "Oh Love That Will Not Let Me Go," which has long been the favorite hymn of "Parson" Moss.

The Day Of Youth

"Editors are always eager for new viewpoints and the outlook held by the rising generation."

So Ellery Sedgwick, editor of the Atlantic Monthly expressed himself regarding the future of youth in the field of literature. But this statement does not stop here. It might just as well have been made concerning the rising generation's future in any field of endeavour.

It is as though the entire thinking public had expressed its feelings towards the possibilities of youth. For since the youth of today will be the elders of tomorrow, it is only natural that the present elders are pleased when members of the younger generation show signs of promise. Certainly these elders "are always eager for new viewpoints and the outlook held by the rising generation"; they are interested to see who shall take their places. And like all human beings they are happy to give up their responsibilities as soon as the "viewpoints and the outlook" of the youths show that they are able to "carry on."

Oftimes it has been said that this is the day of youth. People with this idea point out numerous young men who are taking positions formerly held by old men. They use that as conclusive proof that today is the day of youth. But they forget that the old men who are retiring were themselves youths when they went into the jobs. And the ones whose places they took were also youths when they were first employed. Why then should anyone call this a day of youth any more than any other time?

In the correct sense every day is the day of youth. Some youth, however, have their day before others do, since it is the youths themselves who determine when their day shall come. They are the ones who are responsible for their own development. And they of their own accord determine society's demand for them.

The youths of today can not live hoping that their day will soon come. Instead they must through their own thought and achievement prove that their day has come and that they are fully prepared to take charge.

Eleventh Hour Haze

Tomorrow is pledge day. After two weeks of mutual "looking-over," freshmen and fraternities will become formally associated. Presumably, by this time the freshman will understand his situation well enough to make a sensible choice, and the fraternity will know which new men will be assets to them.

That this will be true in some cases cannot be denied, but that it will be true in all cases can be denied. It seems that the average freshman is so limited in experience that he comes to college in more or less of a "fog," to dispel which usually takes considerably longer than two weeks. And with a freshman dividing his time between several fraternities it is thoroughly possible that in two weeks none of them will really get to know him.

It would be an interesting experiment to ask each freshman on pledge day to present the reasons for his choice. In this way it would be possible to see whether freshmen are given a long enough period to "size up" the situation.

This is not necessary, however, to realize that if a freshman's hands are left free for a quarter or even a year, that if he were not confronted immediately with the task of choosing a fraternity, then he could make a natural choice without being under any pressure whatever, fraternities would from the first assume their proper place in his mind, and he would most probably get more out of his first year at the University.

Rushing—the very name connotes a wrong attitude. In an ideal university there would be no rushing. Only a period of adjustment.

A Plea for Reel College Life

The University of North Carolina tho the oldest state university in the country is woefully lacking in certain attributes that go to make a genuine college. On other campuses each year sees a manifestation of college spirit, tradition, and quaint custom designed to render intolerable the life of the freshman, and hence to guarantee a real collegiate atmosphere.

The Carolina campus has no hazing. Our frosh are not required to wear freshman caps, red ties, or white socks. Nothing distinguishes them from the lordly sophomores, juniors, and seniors. There are no freshman-sophomore mob fights, no duckings in Sparrow's pool or the Old Well, in fact nothing to give expression to the feeling of dislike and animosity that should exist between the first and second year men. At football games and dances we have no laws that enables us to humiliate our freshmen as they should be humiliated before the crowd, in short we are content to sit back and allow the freshmen to go thru their first year unhandicapped and unmolested to the disgrace of the name of Carolina.

That we should be so different from other schools and so lacking in the virility of other campuses is intolerable. Imagine the feelings of the Carolina man who goes to the movies and sees real college life portrayed there. He must inevitably come to realize that he has made a great error, that Carolina is not a real college, and he will regret his choice of schools.

If we are to establish a legitimate claim to the name of university there must be a great reform in our methods. We must have quaint customs, freshman rules, hazing, and traditions if the latter have to be made up in the future. So far the Sheiks, Minotaur, and the Thirteen Club have been the only bodies to give evidence of the right approach to the collegiate atmosphere. Why not select a committee of members of the three sophomore societies to formulate the necessary traditions and raise Carolina from the sloth she has fallen into back up to the high collegiate standards of our contemporaries.—J.F.A.

When the Smoke Clears

The economic disaster in the throes of which the world has been struggling since the memorable October 29 has left marks on the campus of the University which are sadly to be regarded. But none of these marks is as disfiguring and repulsive to the glorious name of this institution as the amount of cut-throat rushing which has been carried on during the past twelve days by men who are someday to lead the state into flourishing opulence.

The number of eligible freshmen this year was much smaller than the amount in previous years. For this reason it was imperative that each fraternity make the best possible impression on a number of boys to insure their getting enough men to fill the quota. Had they been content to merely make impressions all would have been yet serene on the much celebrated western front, but the weaker lodges found it necessary to indulge in the age old pastime of mudslinging, much in vogue by inferior individuals and groups throughout the universe.

When a fraternity boasting the grand total of two men on the staff of any University publication has the temerity to promise a freshman that he will be made editor of the TAR HEEL in three years if he joins that lodge, and then disparages the accomplishments and men in other lodges, it is soon enough for the other fraternities on the Hill to take a hand either through the Interfraternity Council or by means of individual efforts.—O.S.S.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

Van Loon's Geography as published by Simon and Schuster, is one of the outstanding fall books. To begin with, the jacket unfolds to become a map of the world, with which you can live up a bare space on your wall. The idea-drawings found on every other page will do much to decorate the vacant corridors in your brain. This book is an incentive to learn "Geography" all over again according to Van Loon.

"Iceland, an interesting political laboratory in the Arctic Ocean . . . Austria, the country that nobody appreciated until it no longer existed . . . India is full of Indians . . . Belgium, a country created by scraps of paper and rich in everything but internal harmony . . ."

"We are no longer able to plunder and filch as and rob as heartily as our fathers did because . . . well, if you really want to know . . . because our conscience won't let us or if we ourselves."

saga of Wang Lung and his family, unlike most sequels, equals in strength of style and beauty its companion piece, The Good Earth. With the death of Wang Lung, a wealthy landowner, born a poor farmer, the reader's interest is directed to the sons, brought up in the lap of luxury. The youngest son, Wang the Tiger, assumes the chief role in the book as a commander of men and warrior, who becomes a revolutionary general and war lord. The two books together portray the rise and fall of a great family of China, rising to power through cultivation of the soil, and falling into decadence through desertion of the land. With prosperity on every hand, Wang was a kind and generous lord, but with the coming of famine and hardship he found it necessary to resort to harsh measures. Miss Buck finally draws with her vigorous simplicity the old age of the Tiger, a man enfeebled by the years, embittered by his son's disloyalty, yet ever noble in his pathetic, eager way.

OUR TIMES

The Greeks Have A Word in It

In digressing: Two weeks of joyous genuflection ended in a haze of glory last night as the campus fraternities shooed the last first year men out of their houses more or less at twelve sharp and resolved en masse to atone for their sins. It was unanimously realized and resolved that the old adages "All's fair in Love, War, and Fraternity Rushing" and the "Lord watches over little babies, drunks, and rushing chairmen" were true to the very letter. After all, rush-

Ossining, N. Y.—Sing Sing's 1932 football prospects are darker than the inside of your derby hat. The speedy backfield and sturdy line of the mighty Ossining eleven has been wrecked by paroles, pardons, and discharges.

Unless the courts send him some new talent, "Alabama" Pitts, colored captain of the team, threatens to waive the three-year eligibility rule and play lifers.

His agents have scouted the reformatories for schoolboy athletes, Pitts said, and a likely young quarterback, doing time for robbing fruit stands, will report for practice as soon as he can get himself arrested for sticking up a coffee pot.

Meanwhile "Alabama" threatens to complain to the Carnegie Foundation about a pernicious practice, which, has cropped up in penal athletic circles.

He objects, he says, to the transferring of convicts from one prison to another. For instance, two of his tackles, a guard and a halfback, will play in Auburn or Dannemora uniforms this season. Of course, they were sent there because they were too rugged for Sing Sing, but "Alabama" is annoyed, nevertheless.

"How can my boys get to play San Quentin on New Year's day in the Tournament of the Sub-Rosas," he asks, "when those crooks keep stealing my players from me? It ain't honest, I tell you."

"Alabama" has worked out a new hidden ball play. It is signalled by the cry, "cheese it—the cops." He will try it when his boys meet the Fort Jervis police team. — Queen's Univ. Journal.

ing season, like a wedding anniversary, comes but once a year, and with the realization of its culmination, a wave of "whew's" sweeps the campus.

Hardly ever in the history of the Oldest State University has such a flood of potential man power hit the campus. We will have with us, safely anchored behind pledge buttons, four freshman class presidents, after Monday afternoon. There will be three editors of the TAR HEEL (one in his freshman year) and the Buccaneer will operate smoothly with three business managers and four art editors. Seven freshmen will play on the Davis Cup team next year, for those of our mystic orders who wield a tennis racket and a tennis racket, have enough push to place their freshmen (if they come around, you know) in the list of those favored netmen.

It is fully understood that there were three managing editors of the TAR HEEL last year, each one in a different house. Of football captains, there will be any number of potential individuals after pledge day, unquestionably a revelation to our gridiron mentors who are aware that team elections lapse into fraternity frame-ups. The usual number of freshmen promised class executive positions will be again disappointed, for though these pointless posts have been offered to at least fifty potential Taylor Bledsoes, in rare instances do more than fifteen men find themselves incumbents when the fall election is run off.

Feathers Leads Tennessee Volunteers To 20-7 Win Over Tar Heel Eleven

Shifty Halfback Scores Twice, Once on a Dash Off-Tackle For Fifty-Four Yards.

TAR HEELS SCORE ON PASS

Phipps Passed to Brandt for Lone Carolina Score Late in Final Period.

The Tennessee Vols opened up a strong offense yesterday at Knoxville against the Carolina Tar Heels and at the end of the battle the Tar Heels had been swamped 20-7. The Vols exhibited an offense too powerful and a defense too deadly for the Tar Heels and monopolized the play entirely.

Led by the fleet-footed Feathers who scored two touchdowns the Vols were too much for the Collins men. Feathers was the star of the game, kicking, running, and passing in the manner of the old Gene McEver. Several times his punts went out inside the ten yard line and in the early part of the first period he broke off tackle and ran fifty-four yards for a score.

Feathers ran shiftily, utilizing a beautiful change of pace as he dodged and squirmed through the whole Carolina team. His second touchdown came on a pass from Robinson, the boy who was at Carolina a week before going to Tennessee.

Vols Lead in First Downs
The unofficial record of first downs showed the Tar Heels were not far behind the Vols. Carolina chalked up six first downs to eight registered by Tennessee. But for the third time in as many weekends, Coach Collins' men seemed unable to score when in a good position. Yesterday the Carolina line seemed to lapse into a state of carelessness and the Vol backs smashed through the big blue wall as none of the hefty Vandy backs were able to do.

Instead of the Carolina tackles playing heads-up football, it was the play of June Underwood and his substitute, Gus McIver that stopped the Tennessee thrusts. The Tar Heel flanks and tackles showed flashes of their earlier play but for the most part fell below their usual work. Several times the Vol backs ran back punts for fifteen and twenty yards, and the gains around the ends were large. Brandt and Cozart turned in some nice play at right end, the former taking a pass from Phipps for the Heel score.

Henry Burnett, sophomore halfback, playing his first varsity game, was a pleasing surprise to Coach Collins, the Phipps to Burnett passing combination netting some nice gains. Charley Woollen showed a vast improvement over last week and seems to have hit his stride. His choice of plays was better yesterday and he returned punts with new drive.

Tennessee Scores Early

The Vols scored in the first quarter after an exchange of punts left Chandler kicking from his own nineteen yard line. Franklin, Tennessee tackle was in and blocked the kick, knocked the ball behind the goal line and caught Chandler as he recovered for a safety. Carolina took its free kick from the twenty yard line and on the second play, Feathers squirmed through tackle and raced fifty-four yards for a touchdown and the score was eight to nothing, the kick being wide. Underwood intercepted a pass and Cozart recovered Dorsay's fumble to stop two Vol threats and end the scoring for the first quarter.

The Vols scored again early in the second period, after an exchange of punts gave them the ball on Carolina's thirty-two yard line. Feathers skirted end for fifteen yards and then took a pass from Robinson and raced to a score. The kick was again wide. Little Johnny Daniels did some nice playing in this quarter, making some nice gains and catching a pass from Chandler for a first down.

The final Tennessee score came in the third period when Franklin recovered Phipps' fumble on Carolina's thirty-one yard line. Feathers passed to Rayburn for a twenty-eight yard gain, after officials ruled interference on the part of Daniels. There was another pass and Chandler intercepted and Tennessee got a first down on the two yard line. On his third try, Wynn bucked over for the score and again the kick was wide.

Carolina Scores

As the fourth quarter opened Carolina was backed to her twenty-eight yard line through a twenty-three yard gain in two tries by Robinson, who passed over the goal line on the fourth down. Phipps passed to Burnett for a couple of neat twenty yard gains, but the Vols held and Woollen's punt was downed on Tennessee's thirteen yard line. The Vols kicked out and Woollen made a brilliant return to their twenty-nine yard line. Phipps again passed to Burnett for a first down on the thirteen yard line, Burnett and Chandler gained a first down on the three yard strip. The Vols held but on the fourth down Phipps passed to Brandt over the goal for a touchdown. Lassiter placekicked the point. The rest of the game was a kicking duel between Woollen and Brackett.

Stars On Defense

June Underwood, husky Carolina center, whose play against the Vols stamps him as one of the best centers in the south.

LOCAL HIGHS WIN FROM CARY TEAM

Chapel Hill Defeats Cary 13-0 in Hard Fought Football Contest at Cary.

Chapel Hill high school was victorious over Cary high school 13 to 0 in a hard fought contest Friday afternoon at Cary.

The winners counted first in the second quarter after they had stopped a Cary threat in the opening period which took the losers to the twenty yard line. The score came on a steady drive from midfield in which Rigsbee featured. Barnes ran the ball over from the eight yard line. The final marker came in the third quarter after Rigsbee and Barnes had intercepted passes, giving Chapel Hill the ball on Cary's forty-yard marker. From here the winners made four straight first downs, taking the ball to the three-yard line. Partin, hard driving fullback scored on a plunge over center.

Cary made their biggest threat in the final period, making four first downs in a row and putting the ball ten yards from the goal line. The Chapel Hill line braced and stopped Cary one foot short of a touchdown, the ball going over on downs. Cannada then kicked out of danger to Chapel Hill's forty-yard marker. The game ended with the winners in possession of the ball. Chapel Hill had twelve first downs to Cary's eleven.

Bill Carr Is Modest About Olympic Win

By College News Service
Philadelphia, Oct. 8.—William Carr, who last summer humbled "Big Ben" Eastman and became the Olympic 400-meter champion, this week was again registered at the University of Pennsylvania. Interviewed on his return to the university, he gave full credit for his victory to Pennsylvania's head coach, Lawson Robertson. "I consider my victory, not a personal triumph, but a tribute to the coaching genius of Lawson Robertson and Ted Meredith, his assistant," said Carr.

AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES FORCED TO RETRENCH

American colleges and universities are carrying on during the present economic conditions by reducing salaries and suspending building programs and activities that are not absolutely essential.

Very little change is expected in the general level of the fees and tuition per student. A few schools will reduce these rates, but some few will, on the contrary, increase them. Some of the universities will eliminate or curtail their extension and correspondence work, while in other schools appropriations for scientific research will be reduced or dispensed with entirely.

CLOSE CONTESTS MARK BEGINNING OF INTRAMURALS

Sigma Nu Rolls Up Large Score As Tag Football Gets Under Way in Two Loops.

The intramural tag football tourney finished its first week of play with most of the teams entered seeing action: Lewis with two wins to their credit took a slight lead in the dormitory loop although five other clubs have not met with defeat yet. No team took an individual lead in the fraternity race as twelve had one win and no defeats.

Many of the games were unusually close for early season play, first downs and one touchdown deciding over half of the battles. Some of the teams showed good form while most of the clubs have room for improvement which will come as more contests are played. Although a few of the games were forfeits, more interest seems to be aroused this year than in the past seasons as shown by the large squads lots of the teams have, some having more than enough for two full teams.

Favorites

In the frat loop Sigma Nu is the favorite to take the title as a result of their thirty-eight points which they rolled up against Zeta Beta Tau. Beta Theta Pi also showed plenty of class in coming back in the last half to win after trailing during the first two periods. Lewis and Grimes are the favorites of the dorm league, Lewis as a result of its two close wins by downs and Grimes because of its easy triumph over Steele 20 to 0.

Sigma Nu with their lop-sided victory took the lead in scoring. The leaders had thirty-eight points and were followed by T. E. P. with twenty-one points and Grimes and Chi Psi who were tied with twenty points each.

The feature game of the week was that played between Lewis and Manly. Manly took a 4 to 2 lead on first downs in the first half, however, Lewis jumped into the lead in the final quarter taking the contest 6 to 4 on first downs. The contest won by A. T. O. and Beta Theta Pi over Phi Sigma Kappa and Theta Chi respectively were also close and won in the final half.

In the standings for the week in the fraternity league no team had played more than one game. Phi Kappa Sigma, S. A. E., Betas, Sigma Nu, A. T. O., Pi Kappa Phi, Theta Kappa Nu, Chi Psi, Kappa Alpha, T. E. P., Lambda Chi Alpha, and Zeta Psi with one win each. In the dormitory loop, following Lewis who had two victories and no defeats were Grimes, Best House, Swain Hall, Old West, and Aycock with one win and no defeats.

Grimes Leads in Number Of Cake Race Entrants

Grimes dormitory took the lead from Lewis today as to the number of men entered in the forthcoming cake race. Grimes has thirteen, and is closely followed by Aycock, Lewis, and Ruffin with a dozen each. Other organizations stood as follows: New Dorms, eleven; Manly, eight; Mangum, seven; Chi Psi, seven; Everett, six; and S. A. E., four. A prize is offered to the organization with the most entrants.

Track Managerships

All freshmen interested in trying out for managerships in track and cross-country will report Tuesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock to J. G. Zaglin in Emerson stadium. Track and cross-country managerships are run in together.

Backfield Star

Johnny Daniels, Tar Heel halfback who turned in some nice running in yesterday's Carolina-Tennessee tussle.

DUKE FRESHMEN WIN FROM STATE

Hard-Fighting State Yearlings Go Down Before Duke Frosh By 12-0 Score Friday.

Duke's freshman eleven downed a hard-fighting State yearling team 12 to 0 Friday afternoon at Duke stadium.

Duke's score came as a result of a blocked kick and a seventy-one yard drive. The first came early in the opening quarter with Quinn, Duke tackle, blocking and falling on the ball behind State's goal line. The second was in the third and fourth periods, Alexander scoring on a eleven yard run around left end. Duke's outstanding backs were Russell and Alexander while Raines and Womble were best in State's backfield. In the line Quinn and Dempsey of Duke and Roessler and Sabol of State starred.

University Of Mexico Wants Booth As Coach

In its effort to establish American football among its activities, the University of Mexico is dickering for the services of Albie Booth, erstwhile "mighty atom" of the football, basketball, and baseball teams at Yale.

During its previous two years of football, Mexico has been coached by another former Yale star, Reginald Root, but now finds itself coachless through lack of funds.

In seeking Booth's engagement, the university has besought the aid of Harry F. Sinclair, prominent oil man, whose generosity provided for Root's expenses last year.

Booth is at present acting as an assistant coach to the Eli eleven at New Haven. This is in line with Yale's policy of asking every captain back as a mentor in his first year out of college.

LOUIS SULLIVAN SETS PACE FOR CROSS-COUNTRY

Henry Sullivan and Captain Bob Hubbard Are Second and Third in Time Tryout.

Louis Sullivan was the outstanding performer at the first unofficial time tryout for varsity cross-country men. Sullivan was clocked up with the fine time of 27:40 for the regulation five mile Southern Conference run.

Sullivan was closely followed by his twin brother, Henry, who had a time of 28:29. Other men who were timed are as follows: Captain Bob Hubbard, 28:30; T. L. Cordle, 29:30; Ed Wal-drop, 30:00; and Walter Groover, 30:45. These are the only men whose time has been checked over the full distance.

The official trials will be held next week end, and Coach Dale Ranson is expecting some exceptional performances. Some other members of the squad who are expected to set the pace are Tom Henson, Harry Williamson, Benny Rodin, Fabius Haywood, H. W. Gwyn, Joe Pratt, W. I. Williams, Strat Donnell, Jim Farr, and Jim Quenn.

Jensen Out

Clarence Jensen, last year's winner of the Southern Conference meet with a time of 27:10.2, has been confined to the infirmary until recently with a face poisoning. He is as yet unable to start workouts. The only other casualty is T. H. Curlee who is out with a sore foot.

Coach Ranson said that he expected one of the best performances of next week's official trials to be turned in by Edwin McRae, who ran second to Jensen in last year's southern meet with a time of 27:27. The harrier mentor said that McRae stood a good chance of displacing Jensen as No. 1 man for this season.

South American Teams Fight For Davis Cup

Five nations are entered in the South American zone of the 1933 play for the Davis Cup, symbol of international tennis supremacy. The draw, made recently by the French Tennis Federation, gives Uruguay a bye, with first round matches bringing together Chile and Brazil, and Argentina and Peru.

Play in the South American zone is begun at this time because of the difference of seasons below the equator. The winner of the play in this zone meets the winner on the North American zone next summer, the winner to play in the final round in Europe for the privilege of challenging France's hold on the trophy.

Ireland may get her independence from England but, mark our prediction, she'll never have as much fun fighting with anybody else.—Judge.

Guess Again

Above is the fourth of a series of pictures of Harold Lloyd's leading ladies appearing in a contest sponsored by THE DAILY TAR HEEL and the Carolina theatre. All persons who think they know the name of this young lady are asked to turn in their answer to the TAR HEEL office by 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The names of the entrants will be placed in a hat and the first five drawn out will receive guest tickets to the Carolina theatre. These tickets are being given through the courtesy of E. Carrington Smith, manager of the local theatre.

Harold Lloyd in his recent success, "Movie Crazy" will appear in the Carolina theatre here Wednesday, October 12.

The name of the leading lady appearing in yesterday's paper was Jobyna Ralston. Those five persons receiving guest tickets are Charles Karman, Raymond Barron, DeWitt Carroll, John Burroughs, and Fred Shulman. These may be obtained from the editor at the TAR HEEL office tomorrow afternoon.

Many unkind things have been said and many are the hints of sorely severed rushing rules. The dripping blood from cut throats would fill the stadium and float the bloated promises of ten thousand rushing committees for eighty years. Ninety-nine per cent of all freshmen pledged not know what they're in for and won't find out, happily enough, until their senior year. But wasn't it beautiful while it lasted?

FRATERNITIES ON CAMPUS SET UP PURCHASING BODY

Purpose of Association Is to Enable Fraternity to Buy Supplies Cheaply.

The Fraternity Buyers Association, direct outgrowth of an idea presented by Haywood Weeks as representative of the interfraternity council several years ago, was incorporated this past summer with thirteen fraternities as members at the present time. These are: Phi Delta Theta, Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Nu, Delta Psi, Pi Kappa Phi, Theta Chi, Zeta Psi, Chi Psi, Phi Gamma Delta, Kappa Sigma, S. A. E., D. K. E., and Lambda Chi Alpha.

The organization of the corporation consists of the business managers or treasurers of the various fraternities. C. D. Miller is the business manager for the organization and it is under his charge that all purchasing and dealings are carried on.

Plans Suggested

At a recent meeting, the purpose of which was to organize for the year, several plans for co-operative buying were suggested. Committees were appointed for the furtherance of these plans and a report will be made at the next meeting, Tuesday night at Graham Memorial. This corporation is not limited to any particular fraternities and the house managers of any societies that might be interested are asked to see Henry Anderson, chairman of the board, Dudley Miller, or be present at the meeting.

The purpose of this body is to save money and to further co-operative buying among the fraternities on the campus in an effort to secure wholesale rates on household supplies and foodstuffs. Several other fraternities are expected to join to strengthen bargaining powers.

Certain definite arrangements have already been made to secure household supplies for the coming winter and spring.

logical way.

Thirty Debates This Year

The University debaters will engage in around thirty debates during the year. There will be several trips which will be awarded on the basis of work, interest, and ability. Carolina is planning to meet State college during this quarter and the subject will probably be one of political interest.

One of the early debates will be with the University of Dublin which is traveling in America under the auspices of the American Student federation. The subject for this debate will be either Capitalism or Nationalism as a bar to world peace.

Debate Group Meeting

The debate group will meet for the first time at 9:00 o'clock tomorrow evening in room 214 Graham Memorial. All students who are interested in debating are cordially invited to attend.

The qualification for a debating monogram was raised at the last meeting of the debate council of '32 and it is now required that a man shall participate in three debates in one year or four debates in two years in order to be awarded the gold monogram. The following men were awarded monograms for debating last year and are returning this year: Bill Eddleman, F. A. Rankin, A. A. Lawrence, B. C. Proctor, Ed Lanier, and Don Seawell; and debating certificates to the following: Dan Lacy, McBride Fleming-Jones, and John Wilkinson.

Renown Of University Of Virginia Lies Both In Past And Present

stance some years ago, a student was expelled for cheating on evidence given by his best friend. There is no honor system among American colleges which is upheld with greater effectiveness by the students themselves; no member of the faculty interferes in any way with its operation.

Campus Picturesque

Picturesque is the adjective ascribed to the campus of the University of Virginia. Overlooking the entire scene is Monticello, the home of Jefferson, the object of countless journeys to admire both the man and his work.

The campus itself is laid out in the form of a rectangle, at one end of which is the Rotunda, the library. This rectangle, called The Lawn, is covered with green grass and flanked by dormitories. These are but two of the dozen or more buildings designed by Jefferson.

With cloisters somewhat more cheerfully than those usually associated with a monastery, the dormitories are interrupted by small structures intended as residences for members of the faculty. Bounding the campus are serpentine walls. It is said that the walls were originally built to guide intoxicated students to their rooms at night.

Poe's Room Kept

Behind East and West Lawn are East and West Range. And it was in number thirteen West Range that Edgar Allan Poe, Virginia's most famous alumnus, lived during the time he spent at the university. His room is now in the hands of the The Raven Society and, with the exception of a "pallid bust of Pallas," looks almost the same now as it did when he occupied it.

The walls were once decorated with charcoal sketches drawn by the young student, and in front of the small fire-place Poe is thought to have written his first literary attempts and to have entertained his classmates with his strange tales. Over the door is a metal plate bearing the inscription, Domus Parva Magni Poetae.

Although Poe attended the university only during the term of 1826, Virginians are justly proud of other sons who remained there longer. The law school there is credited with having started Woodrow Wilson on his career. Among other distinguished alumni is numbered the third son and namesake of the noble Virginian, Robert E. Lee.

University Well Known

Notwithstanding its famous traditions and alumni, the University of Virginia does not dwell in the past. As perhaps the best known university of the south throughout the nation, it has at present a total enrollment of 2,516 students and boasts the recent completion of a football

'BLESSED EVENT' OPENS CAROLINA BILL FOR WEEK

Harold Lloyd in "Movie Crazy" And Will Rogers in "Down to Earth" Other Pictures.

The lives, loves, and libels of wise-cracking columnists are revealed in "Blessed Event," Warner Bros. picture featuring at the Carolina theatre tomorrow. The cast which supports Lee Tracy, as star, includes Mary Brian, Dick Powell, Ned Sparks, Allen Jenkins, and others.

Last spring Paul Green took a leave of absence from the University of North Carolina to go to Hollywood and write the adaptation of "The Cabin in the Cotton," the Richard Barthelmess film coming here Tuesday. Author of more than forty plays on the south and a Pulitzer prize winner for his type of work, Green was wired immediately by Warner Brothers when they heard of his availability. The feminine players opposite Barthelmess are Bette Davis and Dorothy Jordan.

Will Rogers Thursday

Thursday's feature is "Down to Earth," starring Will Rogers with Dorothy Jordan, Matty Kemp, and Irene Rich. Roger's utter disregard for dress, his customary avoidance of premieres, his drawing speech and Oklahoma mannerisms are not a pose, as many people suspect, but are very real and form a part of a personality that is violently opposed to sham and affectation of any kind. One of his chief delights is to join a group of youngsters on some vacant lot and teach them to spin a rope.

William Powell and Kay Francis co-star in "One Way Passage," Friday's feature.

Randolph Scott, featured in Zane Grey's "Heritage of the Desert," showing Saturday, received his education at Georgia Tech and the University of Virginia. At the former he starred in football. Sally Blane, sister of Polly Ann Young and Loretta Young, has the role opposite Scott. Others included in the cast are J. Farrell MacDonald, David Landau, Gordon Wescott, Guinn Williams, and Vincent Barnett.

stadium seating 22,000. Virginia, besides receiving state support, is backed by an endowment of $10,000,000. Within the last decade a member of the Du Pont family presented the university indirectly with a gift of $8,000,000.

Its outstanding facilities include a Y. M. C. A. which has the largest proportional membership of any other state university; a woman's self-government association; and a library of 200,000 volumes, not including unbound material.

A renowned publication of the university is The Virginia Quarterly, one of the leading literary magazines in the country. Student publications number College Topics, a tri-weekly newspaper; Virginia Law Review, a monthly law journal; and the annual, Corks and Curls, an unusual feature of which is the fact that it is published by a chartered corporation formed by fraternities and literary societies.

An unflinching testimony to the progress of the University of Virginia is its membership in the American Association of Universities, a selected group of the twenty-nine leading universities in North America. Virginia has the distinction of being the only southern charter member of the organization.

BELOVED PASTOR WILL BE BURIED THIS AFTERNOON

The University bell will toll while the procession is passing through the campus. Then at the grave, the Presbyterian church mixed quartet will sing the selection "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind," by John Greenleaf Whittier.

The following list of honorary pallbearers is composed of fellow ministers and officers of the church who are not included in the group of active pallbearers: Dr. C. E. Branson, Reverend H. S. Bradshaw, Reverend James Cannon, III, H. F. Comer, Reverend C. R. Dierlamm, Dr. F. H. Edmister, President F. P. Graham, Reverend Albee Godbold, Dr. I. C. Griffin, Reverend B. J. Howard, Dr. George Howe, Dr. E. L. Mackie, Dr. A. C. McIntosh, Professor George McKie, Reverend Eugene Olive, Lacy Ransom, W. F. Thompson, F. P. Venable, Dr. A. S. Wheeler, and Dr. H. H. Williams.

In the group of honorary pallbearers will be included a student delegation representing the student body, the student congregation, and the University Y. M. C. A. of which Dr. Moss had been chairman for twenty years. The following students compose this delegation: Mayne Albright, Edwin Hamer, William McKee, Fred Patterson, Charles Rose, and Haywood Weeks.

The active pallbearers will be: Dean J. M. Bell, Dean F. F. Bradshaw, Louis Graves, Dr. G. A. Harrer, R. B. House, J. E. Kennette, Dr. S. E. Leavitt, Dr. William MacNider, and Clarence Pickard. It has been requested that no one send flowers to the funeral.

Dime Enough for Some

A date for as little as a dime may be had through the new date bureau of the Arkansas Polytechnic college. A sliding scale governs the prices. A boy submits four names, asking for a date. If he gets his first choice, he pays a quarter; second choice, 20 cents; third choice, 15 cents; and fourth, a dime. Girls also use this bureau.

Winston-Salem alumni will hold their meeting October 13, and will have Robert B. House, executive secretary of the University, and J. Maryon Saunders, as speakers. Durham alumni will stage their meeting, October 11. Lee county alumni will hold their meeting in Sanford, and alumni of Robeson county will meet at Lumberton with Judge Walter L. Small, '11, as speaker.

Meetings outside the state have already been scheduled for Boston, New Orleans, and Atlanta.

Alumni gatherings on, or about, October 12 are planned also in other North Carolina cities. Arrangements are being made for these meetings by the local University alumni clubs in cooperation with the central alumni office in Chapel Hill.

New Library Books

During last year the library of the University added 16,175 new volumes to its collection in spite of drastically curtailed appropriations. This represented the largest increase of any year in the library's history and was accounted for mainly by gifts of important collections and by exchange of duplicate copies with other libraries. These new additions bring the total number of volumes to about 250,000.

GRAHAM'S SPEECH HEARD BY HI-Y IN ANNUAL SESSION

President Tells Youth That They Have Privilege in Chance
To Rebuild World.

"You young men have the greatest opportunity ever offered a generation to rebuild the world," declared Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University, at the closing session last Saturday of the second annual Carolinas' Hi-Y Congress at Raleigh. "This generation lives in the midst of a great transition, unlike any which the world has experienced in many years. Every generation brings a transition, but only seldom does one of this magnitude appear."

Urges Brotherhood

Dr. Graham made a strong appeal to the some three score young delegates to make their organization one of international brotherhood, both in fact as well as ideals. Never has there been a time when the need for this force has been more needed, he said. The speaker gave a vivid illustration of his point by showing the world as highly organized mechanically, resulting in the formation of a sensitive superstructure, controlled sometimes by relatively small "but-ton." He spoke of the 1929 crash in Wall Street and of the incident in 1914 when a Slavic youth pulled a trigger which did much to bring on the World War. "I don't mean to say that the Wall Street crash caused the depression, or that the shooting of the pistol brought on the World War, but I do mean to say that these incidents released pent up forces, bringing later their terrible results. Thus, you may see, how sensitive is this super-structure at times."

"We need spiritual forces to run through this giant mechanical structure and strengthen it. You young men are living in the

DI TO CONTINUE DISCUSSION OF BONUS PAYMENT

Phi Will Discuss Birth Control
And Football Rules; Di Discusses Tatum Petition.

The Di Senate will continue discussion tonight at its regular meeting on the bonus and take action on the bill. Resolved: That the Di senate go on record as favoring the immediate payment of the bonus.

The second bill will be, That the Tatum petition is unjustifiable as an attempt to limit liberal education in institutions of higher learning. The final bill for discussion will be, That the fraternities and social orders' initiation ceremonies should be prohibited on the streets of Chapel Hill.

The Phi assembly will discuss these bills at their meeting this evening:

Resolved: That the new rules in football concerning the kick-off, use of hands, substitution, and dead ball have impaired rather than helped the game and that they should be revised to read as they were last year.

Resolved: That the distribution of written matter and the giving of advice concerning birth control by licensed physicians should be legalized by Congress.

Wilmington Students Plan Home Town Club

An addition to the University's list of active organizations will be made when a club composed of students from Wilmington and vicinity will meet tonight in 210 Graham Memorial at 7:00 o'clock. It is estimated that twenty-five or thirty students will turn out for the inaugural gathering.

The meeting tonight will consist of the election of officers, the appointment of a constitution committee by the newly elected president, and the preparation of plans and aims for the coming year. Joseph Newton, sophomore, and Alfred Miller, freshman, are the two Wilmington students responsible for the formation of the campus' newest club.

SALON ENSEMBLE PLAYS SUNDAY IN FOREST THEATRE

Student Musical Group's First Performance to Include One Of Stringfield's Works.

The Carolina Playmakers, in co-operation with the Institute of Folk Music, will present the Carolina salon ensemble, Thor Johnson conducting, in the Forest theatre, Sunday at 4:00 o'clock. Since the program is being given for the benefit of the central welfare committee, there will be a small admission charge.

The ensemble, entirely a student organization, will give its first performance this season, and the program will last about thirty minutes.

After Midnight, composed by Lamar Stringfield, of the music department, will have its initial performance at the concert. The selection is based on Pretty Polly, an old folk ballad. Mrs. J. E. Jones, a ballad singer of long experience, will sing Pretty Polly.

Don Juan Overture by Mozart, and Andante Cantabile from Tchaikowsky's fifth symphony will also be played.

During the intermission, Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt will give a brief talk on "Music for Everybody."

ALUMNI MEETINGS PLANNED TONIGHT

Durham Alumni To Hear House and Albright, and Lee County Alumni
Will Hear Jackson.

The Lee county alumni association will convene tonight at the Wilrik hotel in Sanford for their University Day celebration, with a program for the evening including a talk by Dean W. C. Jackson of the school of public administration, and a talk by Mayne Albright, director of Graham Memorial.

Tonight at the Hope Valley country club the annual meeting of the Durham alumni club is planned. The speaker of the evening from the University will be R. B. House, executive secretary. Accompanying House will be Mrs. House and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Saunders. The program will also include various light entertainment features.

Classes Cancelled

The regular 11:00 and 12:00 o'clock classes will be cancelled tomorrow, University Day, while classes during the 9:30 period will be released at 10:00 o'clock.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS WILL MEET THURSDAY

The first meeting of the A. I. E. E. will be conducted Thursday night at 8:30 o'clock in room 206 of Phillips hall. Professor E. W. Winkler, of the faculty will make a report of the national A. I. E. E. convention that was conducted in Cleveland, Ohio, during the past summer, to which he was a delegate from the University. Other members of the faculty and students will have part on the program. Refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Medical Students Forced To Rob Graves For Specimens In Nineties

Many Gruesome Stories Told of Pranks Played on Unsuspecting
Freshmen by Students in University Medical School;
Certain Antics Nearly Closed School.

To awaken in the morning to find lying in bed with you a cold, dead body, clammy and dripping with preservative fluid, would be as frightening an experience now as it was to an unfortunate Carolina freshman of the nineties. Freshmen of this day need have no worry of such practical joking. But alumni still chuckle over the story of how this particular freshman went rushing into the dawn, unclad and shrieking, a victim of prankish "med" students.

Medical students at Carolina in the last century won an unsavory reputation for the gruesome antics of a few of their number. About thirty years ago, says Dr. Isaac Manning, dean of the present medical school, the alleged activities of the prankish medical men were reported by the TAR HEEL in a story which unwittingly nearly closed the medical school. A senator based a successful campaign platform against orgies which students were reputed to perform over bodies procured for experimentation. The ultimate result was state legislation to prohibit study of unclaimed bodies from the state hospital. The law has never been repealed, and is still source of as much annoyance to medical students now as it was then.

Stripped Graves

Necessity of human specimens gave rise to one gruesome story of robbing of graves. Energetic and interested students demanded first hand anatomy study to accompany the lectures by Dr. Richard Whitehead. Dr. Whitehead, who later taught at the University of Virginia, had expressed need of a specimen. When the doctor entered class the following day he noticed an object hidden beneath a canvass on the operating table.

Shrugging his small round shoulders, he spat his tobacco into the corner cuspidor, then cautiously circled the slab. With one curious eye on the table, he began his lecture sans specimen. Curiosity impelled him to throw

WILLIAM I. WARD TO SPEAK IN CARRBORO

William I. Ward, Republican candidate for Congressman from this district, will speak at the Carrboro school auditorium tonight at 7:30 o'clock. The program featuring Ward is presented under the auspices of the local young Republican club.

Haywood Weeks, president of the student body of the University, will preside, and John Wilkinson will introduce the speaker. All members of the club are urged to attend, and the public is cordially invited.

back the cover. Surprised and delighted students beheld the magnificent physique of a black man, but they shrank with horror from the face, scraped free of all flesh to conceal identification.

Shocked and amazed, Whitehead reproached his class. "I don't know who the poor devil is, nor how he came here, but we had no specimen last night. Grave robbing is a crime. Whoever is responsible, return him." Perplexed students were dismissed. That night the body disappeared and no more has been heard of it.

Gruesome Comedy

Grim comedy resulted from the following incident. "A gentleman living in Chapel Hill buried his wife a few days ago," announced a professor in physiology one snowy February morning. "The body has been removed from the grave and the man swears he's going to kill every medical student who had anything to do with it. He claims to have tracked a wagon through the snow from the grave to the med building. He's wild with anger and he has a gun. I leave it to you," he said, departing, "to produce the body."

Lawson President of Class

The students hurried with blank and fearful faces to a meeting called by Robert B. Lawson, then president of the class, and now a physician and head of gymnasium instruction here. Every man swore he knew nothing about it. A crazed man out to murder them was to be reckoned with. A flat denial of the whole charge was the only answer, which the students timidly presented to the outraged husband. No students were killed.

Weeks passed with no clues. Then the mystery was suddenly solved. "I hope father never discovers that we removed mother from the old graveyard to our new lot in Durham," the man's daughter was heard to remark.

DEAN M. T. VAN HECKE WILL ADDRESS ALUMNI

Dean M. T. Van Hecke, of the University law school will leave today to journey to Asheville, where he will address the University alumni club of that city at an informal dinner Wednesday evening, October 12. This meeting will be one of a series of such affairs to take place in this state and in others as celebrations of Founders' Day at the University. A great number of the alumni meetings within the state will be addressed by members of the University faculty.

More Than Two Hundred Men Pledge Fraternities

WOMAN'S ASSOCIATION WILL MEET TONIGHT

The Woman's Association will have its first meeting at 7:30 o'clock tonight in Graham Memorial. The president of the association, Mary Frances Parker, will open the meeting, the feature of which will be an address by Miss Claudia Hunter, vocational director from Henderson, who will talk about the choice of a vocation. Miss Hunter, who is brought here by the Woman's Association, will remain in Chapel Hill for a week after the meeting, and will be glad to assist any girl who wants advice or guidance in her plans for the future.

STATE SYMPHONY TO BE CONDUCTED BY PAUL GRANGER

Committee Decides to Send Invitation to Artist to Act as Guest Leader.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the North Carolina Symphony Society Saturday in Raleigh, it was decided to extend an invitation to Paul Granger to come to North Carolina as a guest conductor at the winter concerts of the state symphony to be conducted in January.

Granger, who is one of America's foremost music artists and composers, had previously announced that he would come if the committee invited him. He has stated that he is very enthusiastic over the work of the North Carolina symphony, and recently said that in his opinion the state was taking a great step forward towards a wider public appreciation of classical and folk music.

Tentative Programs

Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, chairman of the committee, announced that plans were being made to include at least one of Granger's own compositions on the series of programs to be played by the symphony. No arrangements were definitely

GROVES LECTURING THROUGH MISSOURI

Sociology Professor Will Speak Before
Mid-West Teachers' Organization During October.

Dr. Ernest R. Groves of the sociology department of the University is to make two speeches in Missouri within the next few days. October 10 he will speak for the state conference of the P. T. A. on the title, "The Strategy of Parenthood." He will speak in the Teachers college at Kansas City October 12 on the topic "The Home, the school, and the Child."

Dr. Groves' new revision of Introduction to Sociology which came off the press this month stresses the changes of emphasis that have appeared recently and new contributions that are advantageous to include in an introductory course. Recent results of research in the fields of psychology and economics are included.

BETAS LEAD IN NUMBER

Further Pledging Will Be Carried on Today at 1:30
In Gerrard Hall.

After a rushing season of two weeks, campus Greeks were looking over their crop of neophytes last night which yesterday as pledge day brought to swell their lodges. According to unofficial tabulation 206 freshmen and new men to the campus became pledges, which marks the decrease of ninety as compared with last year's figures.

The shorter rushing season, not allowing decision to be reached, within the regular limit, may have had some effect upon the number of pledges but expense is also seen as a factor.

The proportion of freshmen in school and those going to fraternities is slightly lower when compared with last year.

Further Pledging Today

Irving Boyle, president of the Interfraternity Council, will be in Gerrard hall today at 1:30 o'clock to deliver invitations to those first-year men who did not receive theirs yesterday. All freshman pledging at this time must be handled through the Interfraternity Council or the office of the dean of students for the matter to become official.

Beta Theta Pi, with twenty-one, led the fraternities with the largest number pledged while Phi Gamma Delta, Sigma Nu, and Alpha Tau Omega followed close behind.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL compiled the following list last night, though an exact and full tabulation could not be made at the time:

Delta Kappa Epsilon: William James Berry, Jr., Durham; Jack

ELISHA MITCHELL SOCIETY TO HAVE MEETING TONIGHT

University Professors Will Deliver Addresses at Initial Meeting of Year.

The Elisha Mitchell scientific society will conduct its 338th meeting in Phillips hall tonight, beginning promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

The program will include lectures by Professors Sherwood Githens, and W. C. Coker. Professor Coker will lecture on "The Opportunities for Botanical Study at the Highlands Laboratory," and Professor Githens will address the meeting on the subject, "The Magnetic Field of a Solenoid Oscillating at Radio Frequencies." Incoming officers of the year will be inaugurated at the meeting.

Object of Society

The society, which is now in its forty-eighth year, conducts monthly meetings on the second Tuesday of each month for the discussion of scientific subjects. Its object is to encourage research and to record the results of such work, especially that which concerns the national history of North Carolina.

To this end, it publishes a quarterly Journal, which is the official organ of the society and the North Carolina Academy of Science.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publications Union Board of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where it is printed daily except Mondays, and the Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Spring Holidays. Entered as second class matter at the post office of Chapel Hill, N. C., under act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price, $4.00 for the college year.

Offices on the second floor of the Graham Memorial Building.

Visions Of Youth

Now that rushing season is over and the freshman has signified what fraternity he will join, the beautiful haze surrounding fraternity life will rise and leave there the group as it really is. No longer will the prospective rushee be flattered to the skies by the rushing chiefs; no longer will everyone rise when he enters the room; no longer will there be a group waiting at the door to welcome him when he enters. He is now nothing more than a freshman—yea, even worse, he is nothing but a pledge. Gone is the day when the upperclassmen will wait on him, or will offer him a seat, a hand at bridge, or a cigarette; these menial tasks have become his own responsibilities. The new man will soon find that his ideas of fraternities that he got during these first two weeks will be shattered beyond recall. He will wake up from his two weeks' dream to find that fraternities are not as great as he thought. He may find that the group that he has linked himself with was not, after all, the one that he would have joined—had he known the facts.

But he was so fascinated with the kindly way in which he was received, the flattery that was showered upon him, the promises of campus offices and campus honors, the picture of what the fraternity would do for him, that he was for the moment swept off his feet. This moment may last for several months—possibly longer. But sooner or later the fact will soon come out, if it is true, that he has made the wrong choice. But then it is too late. He has been only pledged, it is true. But if he breaks his pledge, matters would be even worse. The other fraternities will be hesitant to pledge him, and the fraternity whose pledge he might break would score his company thereafter.

Nine chances out of ten it would be possible for the pledge to adopt himself to his surroundings, learn to know and like his brothers, and make himself believe that he really did join the right group. But in doing this he must sacrifice his own individuality. He must make himself conform to the habits and characteristics of his frat brethren.

This change may develop his own possibilities more than if he had not associated himself with the group. But how much more he could have made of himself, and enjoyed his college and fraternity life, if he had been privileged to give his fraternity selection more serious thought over a longer period of time—rather than rush into his decision in something short of fourteen days. Had he been given until after the Christmas holidays, he could have come to know the various groups individually, learn of their reputations, their advantages, their faults. He could have had more time to weigh the fraternities one against another, and as a result he could have in the end come to a more perfect and more satisfying decision.

This plan of waiting until after Christmas for the freshmen to pledge will be highly objectionable to those fraternities that must depend largely upon their pledge classes for their financial existence. But from the standpoint of the pledges themselves this delayed rushing season would be much more in order. No fraternity men would be able to stay on their P's and Q's for this length of time and consequently the new men would be able to see them as they really are.

Parson Moss

Twenty years ago a man came to Chapel Hill as minister of the Presbyterian church there. He was a foreigner, a Canadian, and when he came to North Carolina he had no special knowledge of the people and the young men he came to serve. Yet he became in a very real, if entirely unofficial, way the chaplain of the University. If his service had been official as chaplain of the University, a position superimposed upon the student body from above, the blessing of his years in Chapel Hill would have been less. In a university of men, who, being young, pride themselves upon a stern manhood free of childish sentimentality, he made his place by the truly manly qualities of gentleness and sweetness and love.

He came to Chapel Hill preaching no intricate doctrine. His dogmas, if he had any, were dogmas of aspiration and never of fear. There was nothing terrifying about his religion but there was a great deal that was beautiful. He himself loved to state it in a few words:

Live the Christ-like life.

Beyond that injunction Dr. W. D. Moss did not go. He did not add to it any intricacies of theology. In the spirit of that injunction only, he asked each man to live his life as he saw it, not as his preacher saw it. To live, aspiring more and more to the pattern of the perfect life as Christ lived it upon earth, was to Dr. Moss and to those University students whose life he touched the fulfillment of religion. Its spirit was affirmative life in the realms of truth, goodness and beauty and never a negative life lived in mere avoidance of evil.

He preached his trinity of the good life, the true life, the beautiful life. He might have preached it well and never have touched the heart of youth wary of preacher talk. But he did not only preach it. He lived it. He looked, in his spirit which was always young, with a continuous joyousness upon life as Christ had lived it upon the earth. Though he was one of the most humble of men the passionate aspiration to live as Jesus had lived upon the earth

On Friday at Chapel Hill he died. The University of North Carolina will miss him as it has missed few men in all its history.

He went into death but death was no part of him except as death is a part of the full life. This thin, sandy-haired man with the mobile mouth had joined in much young talk of death for he spoke the language of college boys as readily as Jesus spoke the language of fishermen. But like his Master, there was a flame behind his easy, genial talk. He preferred to talk of life. Life, he knew, the abundant life of the Christ-like man, is more important than death. And it is his life, lived always so close to his ideal, and not his death that is important now.—News and Observer.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

No Bones About The Bonus

Within a few short days Mr. Roosevelt will make his pronouncement on the bonus question. Then Mr. Coolidge will write about what Mr. Roosevelt wrote about the bonus question, and Mr. Cox or Mr. Farley or Mr. Garner will write about what Mr. Coolidge wrote about what Mr. Roosevelt wrote about the bonus. Each individual involved will set the stage carefully and wait until he can nullify the press coup of the other. The whole thing will be a pretty show with sound effects, reaching a mental level approximating "Merton of the Movies" or the latest Chevalier opus. Meanwhile the audience sits back and pays a heavy box office price (with federal tax).

Before Mr. Roosevelt takes a rash step he might remember that the veterans relief item in the 1933 budget is already nearly one-fourth of the cost of government for one year of operation. He might reflect that the United States spends nearly twice as much a year for its veterans' relief as Great Britain has spent on its much accursed (on this side) Dole.

Bigger and Better

Absolutely the last thing in bridges will put twelve thousand men in sunny California to work within a short time, through the courtesy of the R. F. C. Sixty-two million dollars will pour out of federal funds into 170,000 tons of structural steel and wire, 20,000 tons of reinforcing steel, 200,000 gallons of paint, 40,000,000 feet (board measure) of lumber, 1,000,000 cubic yards of sand and gravel and 1,000,000 barrels of cement. But the lion's share of the sixty-two millions will go for labor, it is hoped. In hiring these six thousand men (the other six thousand will be employed in manufacturing the materials), perhaps the state of California will be careful that its labor contracts do not give starvation wages such as did a city contractor in Cincinnati several months ago in employing men for public school construction. Skilled labor was paid a top of twenty cents an hour.

It is doubtful whether California's needy can qualify in that category as ably as thousands in the more crowded central and eastern sectors. Perhaps the corporation might better have mothered smaller and more diversified projects in regions where conditions are more strained.

Adaptation Of Carolina Show Is By Paul Green

Paul Green, professor of philosophy at the University, visited Hollywood last spring to do the adaptation of "The Cabin in the Cotton," the Richard Barthelme film playing at the Carolina theatre today.

This story of the modern south could have been placed in no better hands, for Paul Green, author of more than forty plays on the south is a Pulitzer prize winner for just this type of work.

A notable cast surrounds the star of the picture. Bette Davis and Dorothy Jordan play opposite Barthelme, and in the supporting cast are Henry B. Walthall, Tully Marshall, Dorothy Paterson, Berton Churchill, Edmund Breese, John Marston, Clarence Muse, Walter Percival, Russell Simpson, Florine McKinney and many others. Michael Curtiz directed.

HOW TO AVOID BONERS

THE UNITED STATES IS LOCATED IN THE TEMPERANCE ZONE

POOR BILL BONER—he just can't think straight. He thinks a person is safe from contagious disease if he is intoxicated!

But no college man ever pulls boners with a good pipe between his teeth. There's something about a pipe and tobacco that soothes a man, helps him think straight. That is, of course, if he uses the right tobacco. A recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite tobacco at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

If you're not already an Edgeworth smoker, there's new smoking satisfaction waiting for you. Edgeworth's blend of fine old burleys is distinctive, different. You'll know—after the first puff.

You can buy Edgeworth tobacco anywhere in two forms—Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed and Edgeworth Plug Slice. All sizes—15¢ pocket package to pound humidifier tin. Or, if you would like to try before you buy, write for a free sample packet. Address: Larus & Bro. Company, 120 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va.

EDGEWORTH SMOKING TOBACCO

YOUNGSTERS TO GET CHANCE ON CAROLINA TEAM

Johnny Phipps Shows Up Best Of Regulars in Scrimmage; Makes 40-Yard Run.

The young bloods got their tries at Carolina yesterday, with two varsity teams and a number of substitutes tackling the frosh in a scrimmage marked by hard and shifty running of Don Jackson, new sophomore half-back.

Jackson led three marches down the field and scored as many times. Charlie Shaffer, sophomore fullback, also looked better. Much was expected of both as the season opened, but they are overdue delivering, partly because of a back injury on Jackson's part.

Johnny Phipps, whose passing featured in the Tennessee game, ran best for the veterans, getting loose for forty shifty yards once, and little Frank Kenan, a junior newcomer, was also showing up in the shorter time his outfit ran.

Some of these youngsters have big chances this week. The Tar Heel backs tackled and ran the open field poorly losing to Tennessee 20-7. Coach Collins' philosophy is lose well if you must but why lose at all, and there is plenty of room for backs who can deliver.

Today's was one of the hardest and roughest Monday workouts Carolina has had. A few regulars were spared, but only ones who starred against Tennessee, including Chandler, Kahn, Barclay, and Underwood.

Hodges and Collins, varsity tackles, Burnett, halfback and pass receiver star at Tennessee, and Ogburn, center, withdrew with bruised ankles or legs, but there were no serious injuries, and the Tar Heels will continue to work at a dizzy clip for their tough game at Georgia Saturday.

SPECIAL AWARDS TO CAKE RACERS

Team Entries Will Count in Making Total Score for Athletic Record of Intramurals.

In order to attract more attention to the Intramural Cake Race Friday, October 21, the Intramural directors, Bo Shepherd and Herman Schnell decided that every team representing some organization or dormitory will receive twenty-five points.

The Cake Race has already drawn considerable attention, in that more than eight teams were already listed last night.

The course of the race will start at Emerson field and continue by the tin can until Pittsboro road where the runners will turn to the right and continue until they reach the Carolina Inn. At this point, the course turns to the left down Cameron avenue for one block; here the boys will turn to the left and go straight down Pittsboro street for two blocks. The runners will turn to the left on McCauley street where they will continue their run until they reach Pittsboro road; here they cross and continue down the Raleigh highway to Emerson field. The race is one and eight-tenths miles in length.

In the Cake Race, the organizations represented by the first 15 men to finish shall receive points as follows: 1st, 15 points; 2nd, 14; 3rd, 13; . . . 15th, 1 point.

Besides this, the team which has the most representatives will get an extra bonus of twenty-five points to count on their intramural athletic standings for the year.

AROUND the FIELD

By CLAIRBORN M. CARR

"Carolina scored on a beautifully executed pass with two men handling the ball and Phipps finally tossing a well-timed pass into the waiting arms of Brandt over the goal line." Such was the description of the Tar Heels' touchdown pass against Tennessee as related by an Atlanta sports writer. The score the Tar Heels tallied against the Vols actually came as a result of the direct help of the Almighty. Carolina was in the shadow of the enemy's goal. A play was called; the ends ran one play and the backs went through the motions of another. Phipps got the ball and prepared for the lateral pass; the ends went out as the play they had in mind specified. Johnny saw there was a mix-up and started to run with the ball. The hole

PI KAPPA PHI IS LOSER TO SIGMA NU BY 52-0 SCORE

Question Marks Win from Ruffin and Phi Delta Theta Loses to S. A. E.

Flashing an unbeatable passing combination on offense and putting up a brick wall on defense, Sigma Nu ran roughshod over Pi Kappa Phi, the former winning 52 to 0. Griffith, varsity baseball hurler, was the main cog in the winners' offense. The strong-armed star tossed seven passes for touchdowns and four more for extra points. The big pitcher also got off some long punts that pushed the losers back under their own goal. Long and Lane each caught two passes and ran them over the goal line while Lane made a third score on an intercepted pass after his own team's kickoff. On defense Grace was the star in the line while Byerly knocked down many passes in the backfield. Hudson and Poole starred for the losers.

S. A. E. Wins

Scoring early in the first period, S. A. E. downed Phi Delta Theta 6 to 0 in one of the hardest fought battles played so far. The lone marker came on the third play of the contest. Harris tossed a long pass to Connor who sprinted the remaining fifteen yards to the zero line. From then on it was a nip and tuck battle with neither team holding a big advantage. Both clubs made several threats to count but each time the ball was either intercepted or thrown over the goal. The kicking and passing of Joyner and the passing of Harris was best for S. A. E. on offense, while Patterson and Parsley were the outstanding stars on the winners' defense. The all-around play of Moffitt was the bright light for the Phi Deltas. The diminutive star seemed to be all over the field on offense, running, kicking, passing, and receiving passes, while on the defense he was the main factor in stopping S. A. E.'s attack. Hershey and Tucker were also good for the losers.

Ruffin Loses

The Question Marks opened their season by downing Ruffin 13 to 0. It was the second defeat in as many starts for Ruffin. Both of the winners' scores came as a result of passes from E. Beam. The outstanding play of the game came when Leonard took a pass from Beam and sprinted sixty-five yards for a touchdown. Leonard was also the star on defense along with Beam. The kicking and passing of Bell and the all-around play of Weathers were the features of the losers' attack.

Tar Heel Boxing Team Will Have Eight Lettermen Back For Year

Ivey and Glover Most Promising of Bantamweights; Lumpkin Will Probably Get 145-Pound Post; Wadsworth and Gidinsansky Will Scrap for 160-Pound Class on Squad.

Although a casual glance at the Carolina boxing schedule would not be a just cause for any optimism, Coach Crayton Rowe will have eight lettermen and four sophomores, with freshman boxing experience, to build his Tar Heel fighting machine around.

There will be six meets, three here, and three on the road; and then the Carolina boxers will make the trek to Charlottesville, where they will enter the Southern Conference boxing tourney. On the schedule card will be found the names of such formidable opponents as the University of Virginia, Southern Conference title holders for two straight years; Pennsylvania State, V. M. I., Virginia Poly, and the Duke ringsters.

Two Promising Bantams

The bantams should be the least of the Tar Heel mentor's worries. He will have a promising sophomore in Ivey, who fought on the frosh squad last year, and Glover, who should be one of the finest bantams in the south after such a fine showing his sophomore year. Glover fought a very fine match against Dave Stoop, eastern intercollegiate title holder, last year. Although Stoop won a close decision, it was later learned that the Penn State man had been out on his feet. Another good fighter in the 119 pound division is Jimmy Williams, who may be shifted to the 135 pound class.

In the featherweight will be Marty Levinson, who will don his fighting togs for the last time, since he is a senior. Norment Quarles, sophomore, should cause lots of trouble for Marty, though.

In the 135 pound class, Fritz Raymer, a monogram wearer from last year, and McDonald will be the most promising candidates. The 145 pound division will have Lumpkin, a letter man and a junior, the most outstanding aspirant. However, the real scrap for positions on the squad should take place between Jim Wadsworth and Sam

TAR BABIES HAVE ROUGH WORKOUT

Freshmen Scrimmage With Varsity in Preparation for Game With Campbell College.

In preparation for their game with the Campbell college eleven at 1:00 o'clock Saturday in Kenan stadium, the Tar Babies went through a stiff workout with the varsity yesterday.

The Frosh-Campbell college tilt is being played early in order to allow the students and visitors to be able to see the grid graph report of the Carolina-Georgia game in Memorial hall. The grid graph is to start immediately after the game.

The scrimmage yesterday was a hard and long affair. Two varsity teams and several reserves were pitted against the freshman teams and improvement was evident, though the Tar Babies are still a long way from being the strong aggregation they have possibilities of being. Each scrimmage with the varsity shows the lack of co-ordination which is only natural in learning a new system of football.

The positions are still open on the team and exactly who will start Saturday is a mystery. The line is giving Coaches Sapp and Howard most worry as there are many who have not had a chance to show their worth until lately and have upset earlier predictions.

Hitting two phenomenal ball-carriers on successive week-ends qualifies the Tar Heel players as capable judges as to the merits of Feathers and Roberts, two of the South's leading backs. The feeling of the team seems to be that Feathers had more interference with him on his jaunts. That as an all-round player Feathers had a slight advantage over the Vandy star. Roberts, the Tar Heels feel, is a stronger and harder runner and that the two are just about equal as to shiftiness.

Kay Thompson, Carolina half-back, when asked to compare the couple said, "Feathers is a good ball player but not as hard or strong a runner as Dixie Roberts. He had better interference than Roberts and the two were about equal as to shiftiness." Cabel Philpot, Tar Heel guard, said, "It's hard to compare these two backs as Feathers ran behind three and four man interference when he got out in the open and Roberts had to pick and drive his way against us." George Barclay, another guard, feels that Feathers is the better of the two.

The picture above is the last of the series of five photographs of Harold Lloyd's leading ladies in the contest sponsored by THE DAILY TAR HEEL in connection with the Carolina theatre. Those who believe they know the identity of the above film star are invited to bring their solution to the editor of THE DAILY TAR HEEL before 2:00 o'clock today. The correct solutions will be placed in a hat and from the lot five names will be drawn. The five lucky ones whose names are chosen will receive guest tickets to the Carolina theatre. This courtesy has been extended by E. Carrington Smith, manager of the theatre.

Harold Lloyd in his latest success, "Movie Crazy," will appear at the Carolina theatre tomorrow, October 12.

The winners of the guest tickets in Sunday's contest were O. H. Garrison, T. L. Crowell, Abe Benjamin, Arthur Block, and O. T. Park, Jr. The name of the actress was Bebe Daniels.

Jackson Lectures On Hobbies In Assembly

W. C. Jackson, recently retired vice-president of the North Carolina College for Women and present head of the school of public administration, was the main speaker at yesterday's assembly program.

He chose as his subject "Hobbies," saying that the body, mind, and soul must have rest and a variety of interest. He stated that a hobby was the best form of diversion from one's work and that everyone should have one.

FAMED SCIENTIST WILL GIVE TALK ON ARCHAEOLOGY

Arge Voethuis Will Lecture on Work in Ruins of Ancient Civilization.

Arge Voethuis, well known Swedish archaeologist, will lecture in Memorial hall on November 1. This lecture is added to the list of the attractions previously announced by the Student Entertainment committee. Dr. Voethuis has recently been excavating the ruins of an ancient civilization in Asia.

The Student Entertainment committee, which is composed of the following students and faculty members: B. B. Bray, Jr., W. T. Davis, E. C. Daniel, H. L. Knox, and Jack Thompson; faculty: F. H. Koch, J. P. Harland, H. S. Dyer, D. D. Carole, and Dean A. W. Hobbs, chairman, has engaged a great variety of interesting attractions for the year. The first of these will be a concert by Albert J. Spaulding, world famous violinist, which will take place on October 18.

Other entertainments scheduled will be as follows: December 7, V. L. Grandville in Dramatic Interludes; January 11, Shan Kar Hindu Dancers; March 2, Boston Light Opera Company in Robin Hood; and April 12, Cornelia Otis Skinner in Wives of Henry, the Eighth. Season tickets for these entertainments are on sale at Dean Hobbs' office. The price for this year has been reduced from $3.50 to $3.00.

Eleven Men Are To Be Signally Honored By The University Today

Five Former Heads of Institution To Be Immortalized in Memorial Program This Morning; Six Others Will Also Be Recognized.

Five of the eleven men whose names will be immortalized on the walls of Memorial hall this morning have guided the destinies of the University. Four were presidents, and one, Marvin Hendrix Stacy, was chairman of the faculty with powers tantamount to that of the chief executive. The remaining names include life-long benefactors and friends of the University.

This year's roll of honor was selected by the Trustees' committee on memorials which invited the families of the men to erect memorial tablets. This is the first year that formal ceremonies have marked the addition of cenotaphs to Memorial hall.

K. P. Battle Leading Name
One of the most illustrious of the names is that of Kemp Plummer Battle, president of the University 1876-1891. Following a brief career in state government, Battle played the major part in reopening the institution after the enforced closing in 1868. After a progressive administration, he retired to assume the chair of alumni professor of history which he maintained until his death thirteen years ago.

If for nothing else, President Battle will be remembered as the author of the official history of the University. Easily the most valuable book concerning the school, it is fit testimony to the love and devotion its author bore the University.

President Battle's successor, George Tayloe Winston, joins him today on the scrolls. He had the unusual record of having

DATE OF ANNUAL DANCES CHANGED BY GERMAN CLUB

Holiday Dances Will Take Place Week-end of Duke-Carolina Football Game.

The annual Thanksgiving dances sponsored by the German club will take place Friday and Saturday, November 18 and 19. This is a change in the original custom of holding the fall dances the week-end of the Thanksgiving holidays.

The affairs promise added enjoyment this year, as they will occur on the week-end of the annual Duke-Carolina gridiron battle. Hundreds of alumni are expected to return to the campus for the game and the dances, which will be given Friday afternoon and night, Saturday morning, and Saturday night.

The departure from the original schedule is due to the fact that the historic Virginia-Carolina game will be played in Charlottesville Thanksgiving. The new arrangement allows the students to attend the dances and both important football games.

Master Directory

The typewritten proof of the master directory published annually by the Y. M. C. A. is on the main desk in the "Y" building for the use of all students. The "Y" officials request that men whose names or addresses appear in the directory erroneously will please make corrections neatly in pen or pencil.

Theatre Passes Will Be Awarded To Persons Bringing in Subscriptions.

Yesterday a widespread competition was begun to increase the circulation of THE DAILY TAR HEEL, prompted by the circulation and business departments of the paper and aided by Manager E. C. Smith of the Carolina theatre.

For every new subscription turned in to the business department, Manager Smith will give two passes to the show, good until Saturday of this week, in which time the feature pictures are starring Will Rogers, William Powell, Kay Francis, and others.

Passes to Be Awarded

The new subscriptions may be for three months at $1.50 or for $4.00 the remainder of the year. In either case, passes valued at sixty cents will be the premium offered as a reward to the canvassers.

The contest is open to all students, and any number of subscriptions may be turned in. To facilitate the work of receiving the subscriptions and directing the campaign, all subscriptions must be handed in at the business office in Graham Memorial. Subscriptions must be from Chapel Hill or from Carrboro.

Coker And Githens Speak At Society

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society had its first meeting of the year last night at Phillips hall. The program included lectures by Professor W. C. Coker and Sherwood Githens. Professor Githens used for his subject, "The Magnetic Field of a Spheroid Oscillating at Radio Frequencies," and Professor Coker spoke on "The Opportunities for Botanical Study at the Highlands Laboratory."

'OPEN HOUSE' TO BE MAIN PART IN 'Y' CELEBRATION

Refreshments Will Be Served in Lounge Room of Graham Memorial

One of the main features of the program on "Y" Day this Friday will be the open house in the lounge of the Graham Memorial Friday evening from 8:30 to 10:00 o'clock.

All students in the University are invited to attend the function, which will be the first reception the "Y" has sponsored for students for many years. The affair will be strictly informal.

Music will be included in the evening program and refreshments will be served by the wives of the members of the Y. M. C. A. Board of Directors, assisted by co-eds in the University.

This open house is part of the program commemorating the 111th anniversary of the birth of Sir George Williams, the founder of the Y. M. C. A. movement. Associations all over the world have set aside some day of this week for a celebration program.

Dr. Howard Rondthaler, president of Salem college and a former president of the Carolina "Y," has been secured as the speaker at the chapel service this same Friday morning.

TEN MEN OBTAIN BIDS ON SECOND DAY OF PLEDGING

Total of 216 Students Secured By Fraternities Through Official Channels.

The total of new students pledging to campus fraternities this year was increased to 216 yesterday as ten more men received their bids through the official channels in the dean of student's office.

Two hundred and six men were pledged on Monday, the regular pledge day. Other pledging was reported yesterday, but this is not recognized as official as the matter must pass through the dean of student's office.

Those pledged yesterday were:

Beta Theta Pi: Nello Teer, Durham.

Sigma Chi: John H. E. Woltz, Gastonia.

Kappa Sigma: Jones Macon, Aberdeen; Roy Rosser, Hamlet.

Phi Sigma Kappa; Thermon C. Ennis, Coates.

Theta Chi: King Barber, Leaksville; William McCallum, Spray; Francis Neal, Leaksville.

Tau Epsilon Phi: David Plosser, Charlotte.

E. W. Knight Will Speak

Professor Edgar W. Knight of the University school of education will address the Women's club of Greensboro this afternoon at 3:30 on the subject of "Iraq."

Edwin Alderman Headed Three Leading Southern Universities

Late President of University of Virginia Will Be Honored in Founders' Day Exercises Here Today as One of Country's Leading Educators and Scholastic Statesman.

President of the three leading colleges of the south, Edwin Alderman, former head of the University, is being honored in Founders' Day exercises as one of America's leading educators. North Carolina, Tulane, and Virginia universities bear the imprint of his progressive educational principles.

One of the most famous orators of his day, he was once considered as a statesman worthy of the national presidency. As a soldier he served national relief committees in two wars. As a business man he tripled the appropriations to Virginia university and increased the enrollment five-fold.

Died in 1931

He died April 29, 1931, en route to the University of Illinois where he was to act as spokesman at the inauguration of Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, another former president of the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Alderman was born at Wilmington, N. C., May 15, 1861. After he graduated from the University with a Ph.D. degree in 1882, he became assistant superintendent of education for North Carolina, serving in this capacity for ten years. In 1892 he became professor of education in the University and in 1896 was elected its president, succeeding George T. Winston.

After four years in the presidency Dr. Alderman resigned to become president of Tulane University. In 1904 he accepted an invitation to become first president of the University of Virginia, where he served for 27 years until his death.

PARKER REVIEWS HI-Y CONGRESS TO COUNCIL MEETING

Senior Cabinet Is Conducting Drive Among Faculty Members For Funds.

The Freshmen Friendship Council convened in its third regular meeting of the year Monday night at the Y. M. C. A. as President Jessie Parker reviewed the proceedings of the Carolinas' Hi-Y congress last week-end for the benefit of those members who were unable to attend.

H. F. Comer, general secretary, rounded out the program by explaining to the group the plans of the association to celebrate the 111th anniversary of the birth of Sir George Williams, founder of the international "Y."

Business items were the programs in both the Sophomore and Junior-Senior Cabinet. The Senior Cabinet this week is conducting a drive for funds from faculty members.

Civil Engineers Meet

The local chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the William Cain Society, will conduct its first meeting of the year tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in 206 Phillips hall. Professor H. M. Jenks, new member of the faculty, will be the speaker. His subject for tomorrow night will be, "What the A. S. E. E. does for the Graduate." At the conclusion of the program refreshments will be served.

Students, Faculty and Alumni to Parade to Memorial Hall for Exercises at 10:30.

GARDNER WILL UNVEIL ELEVEN NEW TABLETS

Special Meetings Throughout the State to Celebrate Founders' Day at Same Time.

The 139th commemoration of Founders' Day will begin at 10:15 this morning when students, faculty, and alumni will assemble in front of South building to parade to Memorial hall where the exercises will be conducted.

Dr. N. H. D. Wilson will open the addresses for the day with an invocation, and the leading of the University hymn. Following this, the Hon. Walter Murphy, '92, will deliver a memorial address in honor of George Tayloe Winston, president of the University from 1891 to 1896.

The administration and memory of President Edwin Anderson Alderman will be commemorated in an address by Dean M. C. S. Noble of the education department.

Gardner to Unveil Tablets

Governor O. Max Gardner will conduct the main point of interest in the day's exercises when he announces the installation of eleven memorial tablets placed in the hall during the past year. The following men are those whose tablets will be unveiled: Governor Charles Manly, '14; Kemp Plummer Battle, '49; Henry Ravenscroft Bryan, '56; John Washington Graham, '57; Kerr Craige, '63; George McNeill Rose, '67; Richard Henry Lewis, '70; George Tayloe Winston, '70; Edwin Anderson Alderman, '82; Edward Kidder Graham, '98; and Marvin Henry Stacy, '02.

$12,000 IN BAD CHECKS PASSED HERE LAST YEAR

W. C. Medford, Chairman of Bad Check Committee, Explains Organization's Activities.

W. C. Medford, chairman of the "Bad Check" committee and now in the law school, was the main speaker of yesterday's assembly. Medford told of the working of the bad check committee and the reasons for students giving bad checks. He said that only one per cent of the bad checks were given intentionally and that the majority were due to carelessness of the students. There were 1,600 checks returned last year covering an amount of $12,000. Of these nineteen per cent were due to the failure of the student to keep accurate accounts, eleven per cent were given with intentional deposit, twenty per cent were due to a misunderstanding with the home folks, two per cent were found to be due to the ignorance of the bank laws, ten per cent were caused by bank failures, and only five per cent were the banks at fault.

Last year two students were suspended from the University, six were placed under suspended sentence, and 65 were placed on probation for passing bad checks.

Each day the bank sends the

New Shoulders

For the Wheel

Through its years of loyal service to the campus, the Y. M. C. A. has derived a major portion of its spiritual and financial support through the efforts of the student body. Pledges given at registration each year by matriculating students bring to the institution a fair sized revenue each year with which to carry on its various town and campus benefices.

This week, under the guidance of President William McKee and Ike Minor, a committee of junior-senior cabinet members will canvass the faculty at chapel hour and in the early afternoon to solicit the regular pledge given by interested faculty contributors each year. Happily, faculty and University officials are able to give liberally each year and the Y realizes quite a revenue in the financial support of this portion of campus society.

The Young Man's Christian Association is well past its hundredth year of existence in towns and on college campuses serving youth of all ages. Here, the Y maintains an excellent Self Help bureau, which provides an amazing number of the student body with part time positions enabling them to meet college expenses. It provides and trains the personnel for deputation trips and helps direct the work of the Chapel Hill Hi-Y. Other items in the list of Y services are: Organization of the Freshman Retreat, arrangement of conferences and speakers for student meetings and rallies; securing of speakers for educational talks; maintenance of the Y periodical room; service at freshman registration and organization of groups to meet freshmen at the trains in Durham; trunk service; sponsoring of the Institute of Human Relations once each four years; devotional exercises and regular meetings of cabinets; and such regular occurrences as the reception planned Friday night in Graham Memorial.

No one organization on the campus can boast such a part in the formation of student life. The Y is aware of its place on the campus and each year thus strives to enlarge its scope of influence, requesting only that faculty and students share a part in its financial support.

No Mother to Guide Her

The tremendous amount of propaganda pouring into the homes, the fervent demonstrations of radical patrons, and the alleged landslide of the nation's intelligentsia into the ranks of socialism, have raised the suspicion in many a rational mind that America is about to abandon the system that has transformed her from a wilderness into an industrial and commercial giant—Capitalism.

If recent political and social developments may be taken as proper criteria, such suspicions are not wholly without foundation.

The tendency has been for socialism to advance in waves, ebbing during periods of prosperity, and flowing when economic depression grips the country. Nor can the real force of the Socialist party always be measured in terms of votes cast for its candidate. It has acted as a sort of leaven, affecting the whole country indirectly; for, apparently without realizing it, the nominal enemies of Socialism have incorporated into their own parties many of the principles for which it once stood, and have placed them on the statute books of the land.

Socialism has seemingly come to regard the process of working through other parties as too slow a job, and is now assuming an aggressive attitude that promises to furnish the student of politics and economics plenty of excitement in the future.

That three years of depression have given considerable impetus to the tide of Socialism can hardly be disputed, but whether it will have gained the momentum necessary to make any serious inroads into the realms of capitalism, awaits settlement at the polls.

It seems to be conceded that a large per cent of the intellectual forces of the nation—college professors and students—are flocking to its banners. One element, however, is sadly lacking in the Socialist organization: they have no practical men in their ranks; the sinews of war are very weak, and without money, Socialism can be accomplished little short of Revolution.—W.A.S.

Temperance: The Issue

Moral issues can not be satisfactorily solved by partisan politics. Prohibition is a moral issue.

The question of whether or not a man may indulge his taste for liquor can not be settled by present methods. For, there are the irreconcilable wets, on the one hand, and the irreconcilable dries, on the other. Their opposing opinions can never be conciliated. Between these two groups are the personal-drys, but-political-wets and the personal-wets and political-drys who hold the balance of voting power. It is the middle group which determines whether the United States votes wet or dry.

In any event, the bone-drys and the dripping-wets can never be simultaneously satisfied. A victory for one is undeniably a defeat for the other faction.

It is quite logical to suppose that the wets have no objection to whiskey, beer and wine in themselves. Rather, they are opposed to the evil practices and corrupt institutions which are born of excesses in liquor. Furthermore, few honest dries would approve of the degradation and waste which result from intemperance.

It may be supposed, then, that what the two irreconcilable factions really desire is temperance in the use of liquor and in the sale of it. If this assumption is correct, the most satisfactory plan for the settlement of the prohibition issue would be this:

Let prohibition be dismissed as a partisan issue. And let the repealists and the retentionists combine with the submissionists to effect a plan of reason and sanity for the promotion of temperance.

If it were not for the human motives of prejudice and fanaticism, such a plan might be successfully culminated.—E.C.D.

To Do or Not to Do

Is the present class in the University more or less studious than the previous one? This question has manifested itself numerous times during the past few weeks. This question is raised for the simple reason that the new men fail to show as much energy toward outside activities as they formerly have shown.

Many clubs and other extra curricular associations have shown a decrease in their attendance which can be illustrative of only two things: First the students are not interested enough in outside activities so as to participate in them, and second that they are so busy studying that they don't have sufficient time to participate.

Of the two statements it seems more likely that it is the former, because there are very few students here that are too busy to have time to indulge in outside activities. The college student should realize that his college life should not be made up entirely of studying, but that he should spend some of his spare time mixing with other people, participating in campus activities, etc.

As many possibly know, every fraternity is very anxious to have its incoming pledges to participate in outside activities. These students, through pressure of the fraternity or merely for the pleasure of participating, take part. But what about those students who are not compelled to do so by fraternities?

Perhaps the student will awaken and realize that all of his college life is not a bowl of studies, but that there are other and advisable activities he can participate in, and when that time comes the University as well as the student will be the benefactor.—E.J.

Glimpses of The New Era

Most voting citizens perhaps are not aware of the existence of a new party in this country called the Liberal party. It originated in Pennsylvania at the last gubernatorial contest in that state. It supported in that election Mr. Hemphill, Democrat who with the aid of 366,572 Liberal party votes, gave Mr. Pinchot one of the closest races races which that powerful local figure has ever had in the state. Originating from a small nucleus in Pittsburgh, the new party is gradually recruiting members from the educated and intelligent people of the country. Its leader is Samuel Harden Church of Pittsburgh, who was displeased with the dishonesty, graft, and corruption of the nation's large political organizations. There have been many who have grumbled of political dishonesty and inefficiency, but Church, as a man of action, decided to start a new party to replace those which no longer deserved a position of prominence in the public eye.

The new Liberal party does what the large parties have often claimed they would do—namely, to come out and say frankly what they think and to act upon those thoughts and ideas at once. Thoughts and many words without action to support them are of no value. The Liberal party stands for low tariff (for revenue only), cancellation of war debts, a consistent foreign policy, repeal of both the seventeenth and eighteenth amendments, and restriction of government financial participation to legitimate enterprises, a revision of the Supreme Court policy of capitalist favoritism and one-vote majorities. In short, then, we have in the platform of this party an enlightened program which is not impracticable. The motto of the party is "religion in our hearts and not in our laws."

The Liberal party is especially interested in those citizens and voters who are disgusted with the pussy-footing and log-rolling activities of the nation's "great" parties, but people who still believe nevertheless in the efficacy of democracy when its citizens are educated to it. The Liberal party does not stand for socialism, communism, or free love; it represents a benevolent optimism about human nature, perhaps an unpardonable optimism, that would believe that democracy in responsible hands would be the ideal government. Our political illness is not organic; it is functional.—B.B.P.

America the Beautiful

A few weeks ago a New Jersey youth under sentence of nine years for robbery in a Florida prison camp died under such peculiar circumstances that an investigation was held concerning the nature of his death. As the inquest proceeded it became increasingly apparent that certain punishments inflicted upon the prisoner by the guards may have been the cause of his demise. A trial therefore was ordered and a tale of gruesome tortures wholly foreign to any civilized method of criminal treatment was thereby uncovered.

According to several witnesses, the youth, Arthur Maillefert, was placed in a sweatbox in the Sunbeam (!) Prison camp for disciplinary purposes and was chained so tightly that death ensued by means of strangulation. One of the convict-witnesses stated that a guard was heard to say that he would rather kill Maillefert than eat. Another guard was charged as having exclaimed that he intended to keep the youth in the sweatbox until Christmas—"if he ain't dead."

The sweatbox as described is constructed of two barrels and some chains. The barrel, with both ends knocked out, is placed over the shoulders of the convict and a chain locked around his neck and looped over a raft. The feet are incased in heavy wooden stocks. In the case of Maillefert, the neck chain was evidently drawn so closely that movement was almost entirely restricted. Weakened from hunger, so the prosecution charges, the youth slumped and was strangled to death.

This tale of brutality corresponds in downright beastliness to the killing of a young prisoner in New York by third-degree methods. In the face of these instances of inhuman degradation and the devastating indictment of our whole criminal procedure, we are forced to wonder what is being done in the way of rectifying these abuses of power. As long as such things take place can Americans sing "America the Beautiful" without feeling a twinging of conscience?—V.J.L.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

In Sunday's TAR HEEL in the editorial "A Plea for Reel College Life," Mr. J. F. A. has taken a very narrow and illogical viewpoint. He says we are woefully lacking in certain attributes that go to make up a genuine college, but he says these attributes are various things to make the life of the freshman intolerable. He seems to forget that he was once a freshman and that after all freshmen are human and that some of them know a few things. Probably he didn't.

True, Carolina has no hazing. This fact is not a detriment as the writer seemed to think. It is a mark of distinction. We have progressed beyond that point. We once had hazing and have graduated from it.

Of course we don't have freshman-sophomore mob fights. We are not that close to barbarianism. We have passed our high school days and are supposedly university men now.

Why should so much enmity exist between first and second year men? Why humiliate freshmen at dances and football games? Why is it a disgrace for us not to haze freshmen? This is all silly nonsense and perfectly without basis.

In the movies is where the artificial and not the real college life is portrayed. A boy or girl who gets ideas about college from movies or college magazines has a big disappointment to look forward to.

Very few students here would change schools if they had it all to go over again. In fact, Carolina has a certain something that gets you, and you fall unconsciously into the clutches of an unseen power that holds you.

College is not just a big house-party, but after all they do have classes which we are supposed to attend.

Carolina has not fallen into a sloth but is just a little ahead of her contemporaries in this hazing business.

Student Writing A Theme: Sits down at table with pencil, paper, and eraser. Hurriedly writes a few lines. Stops. Scratches head. Looks out window. Notices that it is cloudy and may rain. Finishes first paragraph. Quits to light a cigarette. Reads what has already been written. Decides that it doesn't sound "flowery" enough. Erases all but first three lines. Chews end of pencil. Thinks of good ending and writes it at bottom of page. Goes down to dormitory store for more cigarettes. Comes back and finds roommate and next door neighbor in bull session. Feels forced to give his opinion on subject under discussion. By time session is over, finds it too late to do anything more. Decides to finish theme early next morning.

Some Professorial Peculiarities: That appearance most psychology professors have of trying to find their way out of a mental labyrinth... Dr. Cobb's joviality... The pronouncing of "to" as if it might be "tow," by a certain gentleman in the math department... That dry, yellow look, as of musty old manuscripts, of some English literature professors... Dean Walker's kindly old schoolmaster air... The absolute abstraction of philosophy instructors... Facetiousness of most history professors... Dr. Lear's candid admission of mistakes in economic transactions... Dr. Odum's good-natured kidding... That slightly sarcastic quirk at the corners of Professor Coffin's smile... The inability of science professors to see that science is not absolutely omnipotent... Professor C. E. McIntosh's affability and garrulity.

Long, serious faces... Proof-reader weeping silently in a corner... Staff artists studying the Sunday comic papers... Daubing paint here and there on dirty canvas... The editor bursts into raucous laughter... Someone has at last sent in a funny joke... Assistant editor calmly shuts one eye, takes careful aim and hits the cuspidor at full twenty paces... Grins and shifts Climax to other cheek... Editor now laughing in hysterical abandon... A freshman brings in a dirty joke and is promptly thrown, joke and all, out the nearest window... Work resumed... Editor breaks down completely... Proof-reader dries his tears and escorts editor to infirmary... All is quiet again as the staff of the campus comic goes about the serious work of getting out the initial fall number.

The freshmen have been rushed. Fraternity men have witnessed ten thousand new varieties of the proverbial "boner." Pockets are empty. Hopes run high. The bids are in. The installment collector is waiting. Soon will be heard the nightly "spang" of hardwood paddles on quivering flesh.

Snow-white clouds sail on azure waves through an ocean of sunlight... The world is bathed in a mellow, golden haze... The old smile is on the face... Inanimate objects float dreamily on coral wings... Stern professors and managing-editors begin to look human... Autumn is here, tra-la... Thousands of chubby cupids slide down a sunbeam... Half tangible odor of orange blossoms... Rose petals seem to be falling all around in a fantastic deluge... Fog... Dizziness... Feet scarcely touch the ground... Day dreams... Everything is glorious, fanciful, unreal and slightly cock-eyed... The week-end comes to memory as a sort of fairy dream... Whoops! In love, again.

FRESHMAN PUGS GET FIRST REAL CHANCE TO FIGHT

Coach Allen Issues Call for New Men as Hard Work Begins.

Coach Archie T. Allen, mentor of the Tar Baby pug, sent his boxers through hard workouts yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can. This was the first regular fighting in the ring this week.

The freshman boxing squad has been dropping off steadily, and Coach Allen would like to have some of the boys who have dropped out to return, and he extends another call for all boys who have not yet reported.

Questioned why he was anxious to have more men out, Coach Allen replied, "The material is very scarce, and then too, our heavy workouts have not yet begun. I want to have everybody in fine shape before the hard work begins."

In the tiffs in the ring, Ogburn, a 145 pounder, pulled an iron man act by fighting twice. In his first match, Ogburn shaded McKee; but Houston, a sophomore, had the better of the second fight. Eustler and Blalock, two bantams, had a very interesting bout in which Eustler looked the better of the two men. In the heavyweight class, Caruth, member of the varsity squad, hitched up with Henson, young yearling. Although Caruth had the fight, Henson came back fighting hard in the last few minutes of the match.

GRIMES, SIGMA CHI AND DEKES WIN

Carr Loses to Grimes in Season's Closest Game, 5 to 4 In First Downs.

Cutting a last half rally just short of a tie, Grimes took a narrow victory from Carr 5 to 4 on first downs in the closest of the intramural football games played yesterday. The winners took the lead in the first half 4 to 1 on short passes thrown by Watson. In the second half Carr's attack began clicking and they made two first downs in succession. The winners then made one which proved to be the winning down, on Watson's long run. In the last quarter Carr scored one more first down but were still short of a tie. Besides Watson, Morrison was the star for Grimes while Erb and Downing were best for the losers.

The Dekes opened their season by taking a fast game from Phi Kappa Sigma 13 to 2. It was the first loss for Phi Kappa Sigma. Lineberger scored first for the winners as a result of a pass and a fifty yard dash down the sidelines. The Deke's last marker came when Patterson caught a long pass a few yards from the goal line. The loser's only score which was a safety was made when Gold of D. K. E. was downed behind his own goal line after intercepting a pass. For the winners the work of Patterson both on offense and defense was the outstanding feature while Lineberger also starred. Queen and Reid led the loser's attack.

Kappa Sigs Lose

Flashing the best running attack seen in intramural play this year, Sigma Chi was victorious over Kappa Sigma 12 to 0. The first marker came early in the first quarter after the winners had advanced the ball forty yards on runs and a pass from Hines to Henry. Hines made the marker on a run from the five yard line. Henry counted the last score on a long pass late in the third period. The running of Hines and Litten was the outstanding feature of Sigma Chi's attack while Hines also ran some nice interference. Some of the down in the mouth people around this campus who have been moaning about Carolina's poor football showing to date might do well to transform their solid phalanx of griping sentiment to a little more encouragement and backing of the team. After all there aren't many more tougher teams in the conference than Vanderbilt or Tennessee, and now that the season is out of its infancy Carolina is bound to go places.

By virtue of their victories last week, Tulane, Auburn, V. P. I. and Kentucky look the cream of the southern grid teams. Texas, with its surprising 65 to 0 score over Frank Carideo's Missourians loom as the most powerful in the southwest, while Michigan's win over Northwestern and Notre Dame's victory over Haskell Indians establishes those two as contenders in the mid-west.

Important encounters are slated for this week-end, the two highlights in the south being the Tulane-Vanderbilt clash at New Orleans, and the Alabama-Tennessee set at Birmingham. Georgia meets Carolina at Athens, and judging from the two dogged performances presented by these elevens last week this battle is anyone's game.

Though our football record hasn't been so impressive in the last few years, we can't kick a bit on performances of our other athletic teams—last season a national tennis championship was garnered by Tar Heel netmen, a trio of southern titles in golf, cross country, and indoor track went to Carolina, while the basketball team was a runner-up in the southern tournament—not bad.

State's big beef trust, Ray Rex, seems to be all the "porterhouse" the alumni of that school claim—his 95 yard jaunt last week reminded one of Johnny Peacock's 85 yard touchdown return in the Wake Forest game a year ago.

The Connecticut Connector, Marty Levinson, is giving the punching bags a lot of punishment even though it is a trifle early for the boxing season. He is still stinging from the Goldstein defeat which cost him the southern crown in the flyweight division last year and wishes to atone for it. More power to him!

With Captain Bob Hubbard and the Sullivan twins turning in some good time, the cross country title may again remain in the Tar Heels' hands after November when the southern meet comes off.

White's Leg in Cast

Tom White, the injured half-back, had a hard time convincing Dr. Foy Roberson that his ankle was broken. Dr. Roberson insisted that White's left ankle was not broken, so determined was he to have Tom ready for the Tennessee game. Dr. Roberson insisted that White's right ankle had the same peculiar bone crack. Picture after picture was taken before the doctor admitted Tom would have to wear a cast and be inactive for a while. Tom is to take the cast off Saturday and hopes to be able to play in the last two or three games. This is the prophecy of Dr. Roberson and each day he adds another game; White will be playing against Georgia Tech by this Friday.

Two May brothers were best for the losers.

Chi Phi won over Lambda Chi Alpha in the only forfeit of the afternoon.

NON-LETTERMEN TO PARTICIPATE IN TENNIS MATCH

Tournament Ratings Will Be Used to Determine Members of Frosh Team.

With every available court in use, fall tennis activity is in full swing, with plenty of action in view for those who expect to participate in the regular intercollegiate net program next spring.

In preparation for the Thanksgiving morning match against the University of Virginia, Coach Kenfield is planning a tournament to check up on his ratings of the new players and to help him select two men for the team which plays in this fall meet.

With four letter-men in school, Carolina should present a strong line-up against the Cavaliers, and there is plenty of competition in sight before the men are selected who will make up the remainder of the local outfit. At present like Minor, 1932 reserve, Harvey Harris, Walter Levitan, and Rickey Willis are first in line for consideration when places are distributed.

The lettermen who will compete in the match are Wilmer Hines, David Morgan, John Dillard, and Lenoir Wright.

Starting on Friday of this week, a tournament will be staged in which all tennis players may participate except those having won a varsity insignia. This tournament is expected to be revealing as regards the make-up of the 1933 frosh outfit, and will help Coach Kenfield line up any improvement in the hold-overs from last year.

Questioned about the 1933 varsity schedule, Coach Kenfield revealed that matches have already been booked with Yale, Harvard, Brown, Army, and Navy, and said that the authorities are now at work on the complete schedule for next spring.

Tennis Managers Called

All freshmen interested in trying out for tennis managers will meet at Emerson stadium today at 3:00 to begin work.

Six Outstanding Track Stars Lost To Tar Heels This Year

Coach Fetzer Loses Stars Through Graduation But Has Fifteen Lettermen to Face Hard Schedule; Meets With Virginia, Navy, Duke, and Penn State.

Varsity track practice commences today on Emerson field at 4:30 o'clock.

Although numerically the losses inflicted on the team last season is not great, the tracksters who sang their swan song last year were among the best that this institution has had in quite a few years. Members of last year's team who will not be back are as follows: Captain Lionel Weil, Rip Slusser, Wallace Case, Ken Marland, Theron Brown, and Charlie Farmer.

Fifteen monogram men in all are expected to perform for Coach Fetzer this spring, but only four will be out tomorrow. F. D. Higby, F. R. LeGore, J. W. Smith, and C. G. Stafford are the men around whom the nucleus will be built during fall training. Stuart Chandler, John Phipps, and Harry Hodges are keeping in form with Coach Chuck Collins' gridsters, while Clarence Jensen, L. G. Sullivan, Bob Hubbard, and E. E. McRae are working for Dale Ranson's harriers. T. H. Watkins, M. M. Jones, A. K. Davis, and O. L. Mullis are not in school at present, but there is a possibility that they will be for the spring season.

Excellent Season in '32

Carolina's boys chalked up dual meet victories last year against the United States Naval Academy, the University of Virginia, Duke university, and Pennsylvania State college. The Heels tallied a total of 292 1-6 points to 211 5-6 for all opponents.

U. N. C. placed fourth in the Southern Conference Outdoor meet with 23 points, trailing Auburn with 24, Duke with 27, and L. S. U. with 38. They won the Millrose games, Southern Conference Indoor meet, and the state championship.

Individual University records set last year were by Charlie Farmer, Ken Marland, F. D. Higby, F. R. LeGore, O. L. Mullis, and Theron Brown.

Prospective squad members and their positions are as follows:

High jump: C. G. Stafford, Red Hamlet, Bob Reid, Odell Childers, Charlie Hubbard, Luke Catina, John Phipps, and Holiday.

Broad jump: Floyd Higby, John Phipps, Odell Childers, and Charlie Hubbard.

Shot put: Harry Hodges. Discus: Henry McBrayer, M. Schmuckler, Slim Efland, and Spencer.

Javelin: Ralston LeGore, Stuart Chandler, Frank Armfield, and W. J. Worthheim.

Two mile: Bob Hubbard, Louis Sullivan, Henry Sullivan, Joe Pratt, Fabius Haywood, Clarence Jensen, and Benny Rodin.

High hurdles: C. G. Stafford, Frank Abernethy, Tom Hawthorne, and George Moore.

Low hurdles: same as high hurdles with B. L. Trubnick, Litten, and Martinson.

Pole vault: Bill Blount, Wick Smith, Don Jackson, A. C. McDonald, and A. Valk.

Sprints: J. F. Alexander, Floyd Higby, Odell Childers, John Gunter, Charlie Hubbard, George Marsden, John Geiger, John McGlinn, W. H. Sadler, M. H. Walman, and Hockman.

880: J. Marsden, Charles Turpie, Tom Henson, Harry Williamson, Don Kimrey, F. Lentz, J. S. Queen, and G. M. Goldman.

Mile: C. A. Jensen, Edwin McRae, Harry Williamson, T. L. Cordle, Strat Donnell, Jim Farr, Walter Groover, T. H. Cordle, and H. W. Gwynn.

The outstanding duel meets will be with the University of Virginia, Navy, Duke, Penn. State, and also the Southern Conference indoor and outdoor meets, the state championship meet along with the Millrose games provided a bid is extended the Tar Heels.

Jensen Returns To Track Work Today

Clarence Jensen, star harrier for the University, has returned to regular practice for the local cross-country outfit. Jensen, who won the Southern Conference cross-country meet last year with a time of 27:10.2 for the regulation five mile course, has been confined in the infirmary with face poisoning.

'MOVIE CRAZY' AT CAROLINA TODAY

The film comedian, Harold Lloyd, is featured today at the Carolina theatre in "Movie Crazy," with Constance Cummings who has the feminine lead.

It is interesting to know that Lloyd is the owner of the most difficult golf course in the world. There is a bounty of $100 for anyone who shoots a par on it. George Von Elm, while playing nine holes with Leo Diegal, lost five balls. Diegal, twice Canadian open champion, who had lost only one ball in his entire golfing career—lost four on the Lloyd course. They broke even in their match—but they did not break the par of 32. Each turned in a 34.

ALUMNI MEET IN CELEBRATION OF UNIVERSITY DAY

Officials Address Various Gatherings of Former Students Throughout State.

During the past few days meetings in celebration of the 139th anniversary of the founding of the University have been conducted throughout the state. These will continue through today.

Professor W. S. Bernard of the Greek department was the principal speaker at a meeting of the Wake county alumni of the University yesterday. As a part of this celebration the University quartet gave a fifteen minute broadcast over station WPTF in Raleigh last night under the direction of Harold S. Dyer of the University music faculty.

Other Meetings

Dean M. T. Van Hecke of the University law school was the chief speaker at an informal dinner of the University alumni club of Asheville yesterday evening. R. B. House spoke Tuesday night to the Durham alumni at Hope Valley country club, while the Lee county alumni association convened at the Wilk hotel in Sanford for their University Day celebration, hearing talks by Dean W. C. Jackson of the school of public administration and by Mayne Albright, director of Graham Memorial. Alumni of Robeson county met in Lumberton with Judge Walter L. Small, II, as speaker.

Many other meetings have been or will be conducted at various times today, including those alumni of High Point, Greensboro, Charlotte, Oxford, and Burlington.

JOURNAL CARRIES ARTICLES BY TWO UNIVERSITY MEN

Gregory Paine and Raymond Adams Write in Fall Issue of "Studies in Philology."

In the fall issue of Studies in Philology, a quarterly which ranks high among scholarly journals in the field of language and literature, and which is edited by George R. Coffman, head of the English department here, are articles by Dr. Raymond Adams and Dr. Gregory Paine, both professors of American literature at the University.

Dr. Adams' article on "Thoreau's Literary Apprenticeship" deals with the influences which turned the young Harvard graduate to literature as a profession, and draws on Thoreau's journals for information about such influences. In 1841, under the influence of Emerson, and the school of transcendental philosophy, he gave up teaching and devoted himself to the developing of a literary style. His diaries indicate at this time a great dissatisfaction with himself.

Dr. Adams states, "One senses in such remarks (comments in the diaries) that Thoreau feels his apprenticeship to be over and demands of himself some evidence that he has not chosen ill in selecting writing for his business." The end of such doubts came when he went to live in the Emerson household, where the influences of a pre-

Dean Jackson Will Speak At Meetings

Dean W. C. Jackson of the newly created school of public administration has accepted invitations to be the luncheon speaker at five district meetings of county superintendents of public welfare, which will be conducted during the next two weeks.

These meetings will be under the direction of the state commissioner of public welfare, Mrs. W. T. Bost, and will be attended by the members of the county boards of public welfare and all other interested persons. Among the cities in which they will take place are Washington, Lexington, and Marion.

Dean Jackson will also be the speaker at the district meeting of the library division of the North Carolina Education association.

Phone Service Badly Crippled

Way to Stop Telephone-Ringing Discovered at Last, Though Is Hard to Use.

Crippled telephone service in the Chapel Hill system resulted the night before last from 9:15 until 10:00 o'clock when both a bulb in a battery charger and a fuse blew out. Although the lines were in good order, the accident almost entirely eliminated ringing devices for about fifteen minutes, and seriously crippled the rest of the line.

Frantic activity on the part of those in the exchange at the time resulted in replacing the blown rectifying bulb with one from the Consolidated University electric plant, but after the charger failed to indicate any output of current, it was discovered that one of the fuses in the line was blown.

The current used by telephone systems is direct, and comes from batteries. This makes it necessary to rectify, or change over, alternating current from the power lines into direct current, which is fed into the batteries by a charger. It was one of two rectifying bulbs, which effect this change, which burned out.

Former-Boxer Now Manages Cafeteria

Many students and townspeople remember C. V. Cummings as a former boxing star here in the University during his undergraduate days. After managing a cafeteria in Winston-Salem successfully, he decided to move back to the Hill and open in the location next to the post office.

Present indications are that his newest venture will be even more successful than that in the squared circle. At present, he is campaigning for a slogan for his cafeteria. Evidently he wants one different from the one used in the ring—"knock 'em out."

Young Democrats to Meet

TATUM PETITION DISCUSSED BY DI

In Lengthy Session Senate Votes Against Immediate Payment Of Soldiers' Bonus.

In a prolonged session Tuesday night, the Di Senate voted against the immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus and condemned the Tatum petition. President Charles G. Rose appointed members for the fall term of the finance committee, ways and means committee and constitution committee. Three new members were also admitted to the Senate.

The committees and members are as follows: finance, Senators Minor, chairman, Steele and Gibbs; ways and means, Senators Lyon, ex-officio chairman, McMichael and Eddleman; constitution, Senators McKee, chairman, Medford and McMichael. A committee was also appointed to lend the law school the portrait of Charles Manning and to secure all portraits now loaned out.

The first bill to be discussed and voted upon concerned the soldiers' bonus. This question was debated rather hotly but the Senate went on record as not favoring the immediate payment.

Much discussion arose as to

GRAIL SETS TIN CAN FOR DANCES

Order of the Grail Will Give Two Dances in Tin Can After Big Football Games.

At an important meeting of the Order of the Grail Tuesday night, dates for the next two Grail dances were set. The next dance is to be given after the Georgia Tech game, Saturday, October 22. The other date set was for Friday night, November 4, after the Carolina-Florida game. The first dance will be held from nine until twelve and the one following the Florida game will last from ten until one o'clock.

An important feature of this announcement is the fact that both these dances will be held in the Tin Can. Due to the large crowds anticipated and fact that the gymnasium is proving more and more inadequate for Grail dances, the order has obtained permission from the athletic department to hold dances in the Tin Can.

No definite orchestra has been signed as yet for the dances but an announcement will be made soon, as to who will play for the dances. These two dances should draw a good crowd and with the added feature of having a larger dancing space, should be the best ever given by the Grail.

University Has Had Three Buildings To Accommodate Student Meetings

Old Memorial Hall Condemned and Razed After Nearly Fifty Years of Service; State Appropriations Made Possible Replacement of Building by Stone Structure.

The present Memorial hall in which Founders' Day was observed yesterday, is the third to house the student body of this University. Up to 1885, all commencements and general meetings were held in Gerrard hall. At the commencement of 1883, Kemp P. Battle, University president, remarked that many would-be spectators were turned away from the exercises because of the limited capacity of the hall.

Money was appropriated for the enlargement of Gerrard hall, and work was about to begin, when another source of revenue was discovered. A movement was in progress to erect a cenotaph to a former president of the University, Dr. Swain. The committee on the enlargement of Gerrard hall and the committee on the erection of the cenotaph met and decided to pool their resources to erect a new hall in the memory of Dr. Swain.

Memorial Tablets Erected
The erection of this structure occupied two years and was marked by a constant expansion of the original bid from $20,000 to $45,000. The building itself was unique in that the roof was supported by two huge wooden arches, one of which was 127 feet long. To get enough money to complete the building, the families of prominent deceased alumni and the University were canvassed for the erection of memorial tablets in the new hall. Ten thousand dollars was collected in this manner for the erection of 102 tablets, but it was found that more money was needed. A personal loan was negotiated with the governor of the state.

The names of the 260 students of the University that were killed in the Civil War were also inscribed on marble tablets in the Memorial hall, which was dedicated on June 3, 1885. This Memorial hall, which was used until 1930, when it was condemned because the wooden arches in the roof had decayed. Soon after it was razed.

State Contributes
As it was imperative that the University have a hall of adequate size, the 1927 General Assembly appropriated $25,000 for the erection of a new building, and Governor O. Max Gardner and his council of state appropriated $150,000 from the state emergency fund.

The present Memorial hall was completed in 1931 and dedicated on October 12 of that year. All the memorial tablets were preserved from the old hall and placed in the new one. The dedication was made the chief ceremony of Founders' Day.

Following an impressive academic procession, addresses of presentation, acceptance and reminiscence were delivered by Governor O. Max Gardner, John Sprunt Hill, Josephus Daniels, and Dean A. W. Hobbs.

Memorial hall was used even before its dedication for student gatherings and entertainment programs.

Campus Invaded By New Menace

Young Eighteen-Inch Alligator Wanders From Home Of Professor Jordan.

Cave alligatorem!

Or, if you don't understand our Latin, be prepared for the flashing of pearly teeth and the lashing of a tiny tail.

At any rate, look out for an alligator which is loose on the Carolina campus or in the near vicinity of Chapel Hill. It represents but eighteen inches of fight, but, since he must be hard put for food, it is not unlikely that the limbs of a freshman or co-ed would be prove a delectable morsel to the roving reptile.

However, at least one person is bent on discovering the alligator. He is Professor A. M. Jordan of the school of education who is much concerned over the escape of the alligator. One of the Florida variety, he was brought to this state as a pet for one of Professor Jordan's children. Since he made a successful dash for liberty last week, several members of the faculty have engaged in big-game hunting, searching nearby streams for the fugitive. The net result has been no alligator.

The erstwhile pet, bought from a farm in Florida, is unused to the wild life of his brothers in the marshy lowlands of the far south. Being fairly young and small, he has a chance to mature into a true Carolinian. If the Chapel Hill climate does not kill him and if he eludes capture, the reptile might assume formidable proportions in a few decades. Proving he has not migrated, he might then prove to be a real menace.

George T. Winston and Edwin A. Alderman Commemorated By University Men.

WALTER MURPHY SPEAKS

Former Secretary Reveals Incidents Surrounding Presidency of Dr. Winston.

With special addresses commemorating two University presidents who have died within the past two years, the University observed its 139th birthday by the annual Founders' Day exercises in Memorial hall yesterday.

George Tayloe Winston, fifth president of the University, and Edwin Anderson Alderman, who succeeded him, were the men commemorated yesterday. In addition to this each was honored by the dedication of a cenotaph in Memorial building as were nine other prominent sons of the University.

Honorable Walter Murphy of Salisbury, who was secretary to Dr. Winston during his administration, revealed to the public for the first time some of personal incidents surrounding the presidency and gave him high praise.

The inside stories of several attacks upon the University in 1892 and 1893 were related by Murphy. These attacks, he said, which would have been completely disastrous to the University, were thwarted by the abilities of President Winston.

Dean M. C. S. Noble, of the school of education and classmate of Dr. Alderman, delivered an address of commemoration on the sixth president of the University. Praising him as the greatest educator of the day,

GRAHAM RECEIVES CONGRATULATIONS ON FOUNDERS' DAY

Messages From Alumni and Officials at Other Institutions Received by President.

While a relatively small group was observing Founders' Day in Chapel Hill, the vast number of alumni of the University manifested its interest in the exercises by telegraphing its sentiments to President Graham. He received a large number of messages yesterday, congratulating him on the excellent condition and outlook of the University and praising the memories of former Presidents Alderman and Winston.

Mrs. Edwin A. Alderman, widow of the late president, sent a message of greeting to President Graham as A. B. Dinwiddie, president of Tulane University, who commented on Alderman, one-time head of that school, as "representing the spiritual qualities of scholarship in contrast with the material and measurable element of modern intellectual achievement."

Three Quarters And No Credit!

According to figures in THE DAILY TAR HEEL, some 1,600 students registered last year in the University's most practical course: Personal Business Problems, a course in the school of experience taught by Professor Slim Medford, LL. B.

It is the purpose of this course, which is endowed by the Chapel Hill Credit Association, to teach students a sense of financial responsibility, to instruct them in the problems of personal budgeting, and to familiarize them with the state banking laws.

Each student in Professor Medford's course was given an individual problem. There were no regular class meetings. Only the private conference method of instruction was used. From the records of the Bank of Chapel Hill, Professor Medford chose his problems and then notified the student whose interests and knowledge best fitted him to settle each particular case.

In conference with the instructor, the student was asked to explain his case and then to offer some solution to the problem. Only two grades were given in the course. If the student's explanation and solution were found satisfactory he was given a "P," or pass. An "F," or failure, more than likely meant dismissal from the University.

Although registration in the course is compulsory at the will of the instructor and although the students are reluctant to enroll, they will find that Professor Medford's lessons are among the most valuable they will learn at the University.—E.C.D.

"Two Heads Are Better Than One"

O'Brien, Catholic, is selected by Tammany as next mayor of New York.

Lehman, Jew, is the Democratic party's choice for governorship of New York state.

Roosevelt, Protestant, is the Democratic party's candidate for presidency.

Al Smith warmly shakes hand of "F. R." Roosevelt and promises to try to win Rhode Island, Massachusetts, and New York over to the Democratic party.

Enough headlines here to make up a new era in the history of the United States, and it seems that if Al Smith has anything to say, there will be a new era. What with the Catholics, Jews, and Protestants working together, there ought to be a new religious understanding.

But that is off the point. If Smith succeeds in winning over the New England states, the Democratic party will be in such power that it may never be fought down.

In the past several years surprising things have occurred in the United States, in which woman won the right to vote, in which the Solid South was shipped, and in which Maine broke the solid standing of the Republican party in the North. All of which proves that the will of the American people may amount to something after all and not keep following the footsteps of the forefathers, a tradition that took a long time to break.

But now the American public has found itself, it will have to watch itself to keep from putting one party in such power that the people will have no say in the government. And to repeat:

There is nothing like two or three strong parties to keep the government on the level.—H.C.P.

Pernicious Pedagogues

The habit of some of the faculty, and the wives of the faculty, of borrowing books from the Library and not returning them for a long period of time is a pernicious one, and should be discontinued. Whether one of the faculty is using a book for legitimate research purposes or merely for amusement, he is allowed to keep it for the space of a year. And, unless a student needs the book in question as part of his regular work he is unable to obtain it until the forgetful instructor decides to bring it in. In this instance the notorious absent-mindedness of professors is far from laughable.

This evil should be corrected. Faculty members and their immediate families ought to have no more special privileges in the library than students and, to this end, it is recommended that in the future they be permitted no more than the allotted two weeks with the option of renewal, with the usual fines for tardiness.—M.K.K.

"Now Is The Time"

It has become platitudinous to say that the American university student is not interested in politics; that the best of university graduates in America seek their careers in business, in art, in the professions. Among the contributing factors in making this true is general sense of security and prosperity which this country has seen. The country has been well off; it has not mattered a great deal to the average man what government and the politicians did.

Now that the depression has come along to disturb somewhat our security we have come to realize the increasing measure in which our government affects its citizens and the need for trained, public-spirited men in office. A large number of our public officials have been unable to meet the situation in a sensible way. They have not had the training necessary—such training as university students can obtain. Especially in city, county, and state governments has the need been apparent for men who have some sort of an idea of what should be done in this democracy of ours.

With this need apparent in many localities will university students respond? If the past carries with it any indication of the future they will not. They will regard politics as stigmatized, as a world apart for professional politicians to manage, as a poorly paid occupation. They will prefer not to dirty their hands and not to waste any time in making a success along other lines.

This is the usual attitude. But before students pass up a political career let them consider that this is a good time to go into politics when other jobs are scarce; that it is not as hard as it seems to break into the party organization; that if they do their job well they will be as respected as any other men; and that in succeeding in their job they will help not only themselves but the people as well.—W.F.B.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Sourdoughs Of 1932

Until I got rid of my corn I'd wished that I'd never been born.

I groaned and I cried

Then—Blue-Jay I tried

And now all my agony's gone.

How's your grammar? Can you write as good as that last line whot Mrs. Emery Swizzlestik contributed in the stupendous Blue-Jay corn plaster limerick contest? One hundred dollars is the first prize for them which can write a last line and then they's ten other prizes of five dollars to them that writes second best ones. Give a try.

About two hundred thousand gold dollars are lying around somewhere for limerick writers, pun penners, "guess how many" people, and twenty word essayists. Majestic Radio will give one hundred thousand dollars to those who write the best lie for something or other about their product; Curtis Publishers have an extra ten thousand lying around that might as well be got rid of as contest money; and if you write a hundred words about the new Royal signet typewriter and have the luck to get your manuscript drawn out of a bin, you may get a slice of the five thousand dollar prize.

Opportunity knocks at your door. Here is enough money to retire comfortably for a year and lose the rest of it on the stock market. Thousands of the unemployed at last get a break. Whet your pen, young man, the trade of letters is not dead.

It's the Climate

As a result of the sets for Paul Green's admirable Cabin in the Cotton, two bitter factions on the campus have arisen. One, the School That Believes That the Cotton in the Scenes Was Too Tall, and the other, the School That Believes That the Cotton in the Scenes Was Just Tall Enough, seem equally demonstrative. Riots are feared, and it is promised that if the dispute assumes the proportions of the late-pot likker controversy, someone will get plenty sore.

No cotton farmers, we don't know much professionally about either side. But the cotton wasn't too tall. It's just California cotton. You know how big oranges get out there.

Telegrams were also received from graduates in Chicago, New York, California, Louisiana,

Pennsylvania, and Norfolk which expressed satisfaction with the present state of the University and complete confidence in its future.

Alumni Urge Liberalism

Seventeen county alumni associations telegraphed University Day greetings. Among the counties were Davidson, Guilford, Mecklenburg, and Johnston, whose graduates hope "that this University's end may be a free and untrammelled life."

Adopting the same liberal view, the alumni of Alamance said, "Alamance hails Alma Mater, diving for her peace, perpetuity, pioneering and power." In a like manner the Forsythe group wired, "May liberality of thought ever prevail her borders."

President Graham, delighted with the nation-wide response to Founders' Day as significant of the spirit of Chapel Hill, said that more messages had been received yesterday than on any previous Founders' Days.

dominantly literary surrounding were instrumental in assuring Thoreau that he had made a wise decision.

Dr. Paine's Contribution

"Trends in American Literary Scholarship With Reviews of Some Recent Books" is the subject of the article by Dr. Paine, in which he states that "at the present time some literary reputations seem to be waning; others are going steadily forward; while still others are rising into new prominence." Interest in Longfellow, Whittier, Lowell and Holmes is apparently declining; Bryant, Irving, and Hawthorne seem to be holding their own; whereas Emerson, Thoreau, Cooper, Melville, Whitman and Emily Dickinson are rising in the literary firmament.

Turning to the history of American literature, Professor Paine discusses several new works in that field, among them Macy's "American Writers in American Literature," Canby's "Classic Americans: A Study of Eminent American Writers from Irving to Whitman's, and Ludwig Lewisohn on "Expression in America." The author's conclusion is that the trend of our literary scholarship is toward a deepening and broadening interest, sound scholarship and illuminating criticism, permeated throughout by a healthy vitality.

Former Presidents Are Honored At Founders' Day Exercises Here

Dean Noble recited his ideas as to the conduct of the University. He also added a number of personal incidents surrounding Alderman's life as a student and as a member of the faculty of the University.

Stahle-Linn, chairman of the committee on memorials of the board of trustees, gave a tribute to University alumni who have died within the past year. In the absence of Governor O. Max Gardner, Linn read the citations of eleven tablets which were placed in the entrance of Memorial hall.

These tablets were dedicated to: Dr. Winston, Dr. Alderman, Governor Charles Manly, '14; Kemp Plummer Battle, '49; Henry Ravenscroft Bryan, '56; John Washington Graham, '57; Kerr Craige, '63; George McNeill, '67; Richard Henry Lewis, '70; Edward Kidder Graham, '98; and Marvin Henry Stacy, '02.

Following this Dean A. W. Hobbs of the liberal arts school called the roll of University dead in honor of those who have died within the past year.

President Frank P. Graham, who presided over the exercises, read several of the many telegrams from alumni, alumni clubs, institutions, and friends of the two men commemorated.

Dr. Julius I. Foust, president of North Carolina college for women, attended the exercises as a representative of the Greensboro institution.

Dr. N. H. D. Wilson gave the invocation and benediction while Professor Harold S. Dyer had charge of the music.

TATUM PETITION DISCUSSED BY DI

whether or not the Di should cooperate with the Phi in sponsoring a series of speeches from the Democratic, Republican, Socialist and Communist parties. Each speaker will be a student member of that party, and his purpose will be to enlighten the student body as to his parties platform and standards. The Di voted to co-operate with the Phi in this move.

The Tatum petition was taken up last. Senators McKee, McMichael, Gibbs and Eddleman spoke on this bill and were loud in their condemnation. The Senate, as a whole, was quick in denouncing the petition, saying it was not at all fair. The Di also expressed its confidence in the policies of President Graham and a desire that the liberalism for which the University is broadly known be continued.

Carolina Ready For Important Game With Georgia At Athens

Coach Collins Ends Intensive Work in Preparation for Bulldogs.

CHANGES MAY BE MADE

Kahn, Tatum, and Womble May Be Seen in Starting Team Saturday.

The University of North Carolina football team went through their last intensive work-out yesterday in preparation for the Georgia game at Athens Saturday. Today's practice will be limited to a final rehearsal of new plays and light limbering up drill.

Yesterday the Tar Heels went through their plays and also defended against the Bulldog formations with a great deal of success. Croom, Thompson, Daniels, Phipps, and MacDonald reeled off large gains, and if yesterday's practice was any criterion of Saturday's play, it bodes ill for Georgia.

Change in Line-up

Three important changes will be made in the starting line-up Saturday. The shifting of Stuart Chandler to fullback will be permanent with the promotion of Charley Woollen to first string quarterback. Woollen's great improvement in the Tennessee game last week earned the promotion. Another new face will be seen at left guard in the person of Edwin Kahn, who has deposited Herb Newcombe as starting player. Kahn played a nice game at Knoxville in addition to showing good form in the previous contests. Tatum will probably start in the injured Hodges' place at tackle.

Georgia has yet to be beaten by Carolina since 1929. That year the Bulldogs marred an otherwise perfect Carolina season by defeating the Tar Heels, 19-12. In 1930 Georgia won, 26-0, and last year the score was 32-7. This year, Carolina will again be the underdog, but the slimmest of margins and a Tar Heel victory will not surprise the experts.

Against Tulane last week, Coach Harry Mehre's men showed surprising scoring punch in the persons of Brown and David. While the Tar Heels are a notably weak offensive outfit, the Blue wall is one of the finest in the conference.

About twenty-six Tar Heel players are slated to make the trip to Athens this evening, but Coach Collins is reserving his final selection until after the drill. The squad will leave from Durham and arrive at Atlanta early tomorrow morning. A short drill at Athens tomorrow afternoon will conclude Carolina's training for the game.

New Outboard Champion

The new class A outboard racing champion, crowned recently at the national regatta at Bay City, Mich., is Miss Ruth Derow, sixteen-year-old Flint, Mich., girl, who captured the crown in her first attempt in national competition.

Driving her boat at the best speed of 36.144 m.p.h., the ninety-pound girl outdrove Roger Firestone, Akron, Ohio, and Art Jacobs, Chicago.

The recent market slump has served notice again that the only person sure of a clean-up in Wall Street is the scrubwoman.—Palm Beach Post.

Team Send-Off

Chief Cheerleader Ernest Hunt announced last night that there will be a send-off for the team going to Athens tonight at 6:30 in front of Swain hall and asked for a large turnout of students.

Star Tackle Out

Harry Hodges, veteran tackle who will be forced out of the Georgia game due to an ankle injury received in a scrimmage the early part of the week.

CAKE RACE DATE SET WEEK LATER

Annual Event to Be Run October 29 Instead of Next Week; Courses Changed.

Because the fraternities want to get their pledges interested in the annual Intramural Cake Race, the directors have consented to postponing the event until Friday, October 28. This run will take place during the halves of the Carolina-N. C. State freshman game.

By this new arrangement the course of the race will be slightly altered. The start will take place in front of the Patterson-Morehead Tower while the finish will be in front of the Field House in Kenan stadium.

Assistant director of intramural sports, Herman Schnell, announced last night that more than 125 men have already registered and the number is expected to double.

One of the main reasons that the run was postponed was to get the boys in better shape for the race. All men who are in fair trim for the race should be in top form by the time of the event while all men who have not listed for the race can do so and still get in their workouts. All managers of fraternity and dormitory teams are urged to give the names of their entries to the varsity manager of cross country so that they may check on the individuals' qualifications. This is the ninth annual Cake Race, and this year's run should not be shaded by any of the former events.

MILK TESTED BY DR. S. A. NATHAN

The regular monthly tests which are made upon the milk supply of Chapel Hill were conducted yesterday by Dr. S. A. Nathan, city health officer.

Samples of all milk sold in Chapel Hill are tested chemically and bacteriologically by Dr. Nathan at some time during each month. When the tests are made, two samples are selected at random from each milk truck. One of these samples is immediately tested for its temperature, which for grade A milk must not exceed fifty degrees Fahrenheit at time of delivery.

The other sample is taken to a laboratory and a bacteriological specimen is taken. This is incubated for forty-eight hours at a temperature of 37½ degrees Centigrade. The sample is also tested for butter fat content and specific gravity, besides for chemical purity.

According to Dr. Nathan, all the milk used in Chapel Hill, which is supplied by seven different dairies, measures up to grade A requirements.

TAR BABIES PUT THROUGH LENGTHY DRILL YESTERDAY

Coaches Howard and Sapp Push Charges Hard in Effort to Polish Up Attack.

Coaches Howard and Sapp yesterday put the yearling eleven through their hardest practice so far this year in getting them in the best possible shape for Saturday's opening contest with Campbell college. Howard took the first two strings over to Kenan stadium where they were put through a two hour scrimmage with the varsity team. After the battle with Collins' eleven, Coach Howard decided the entire team was ragged on tackling so he brought them back to Emerson field where they were put through a tackling drill.

Lineup Uncertain

While the first two teams were at work, Sapp drilled the remaining men in tackling, blocking, and passing on Emerson field. The starting lineup for the Campbell game has not been picked yet and it would not be surprising to see some changes made in the present first string before Saturday's game.

The men taking part in the scrimmage with the varsity were Bryant, Joyce, Evans, Brothers, Arthur, Hobgood, Kanner, Yoder, Milaway, Moore, Harold, Barwick, Phillips, and Mills in the forward wall and Valentine, Cox, Orr, Montgomery, Whitaker, Snyder, McCachern, and Penelton in the backfield.

The first bad injury of the season came to Snyder during scrimmage. The star halfback twisted his ankle and it is not certain that he will be able to get in the opening contest. However, Snyder will be all set to go Friday, October 21, at which time the frosh meet Oak Ridge.

COACH HEARN SEES GOOD PROSPECTS FROM WORKOUTS

Thinks Carolina Will Finish High in Conference Standings; Fears Wake Forest.

Coach Bunn Hearn, in an interview yesterday afternoon, discussed the prospects for next season's Tar Heel nine. After watching the candidates carefully throughout the fall practice season now in progress, the coach is optimistic, despite the fact that graduation last June exacted an unusually severe toll. He declared that the team as a whole has improved daily in the fall workouts and believes that after a few flaws are ironed out, they will make a strong bid in the conference race next season.

Lack of adequate pitching material supplies the most serious problem, with Griffin as the only varsity hurler available. The cap and gown exercises claimed Pattisall, regular catcher, but the coach has Blimp Parker and Strayhorn, likely candidates for that berth.

A great number of varsity men have been unable to appear in the fall sessions due to their activity on the gridiron. Among these are Brandt, Peacock, McCaskill and Croom, all of whom have seen varsity service, with several other eligible reserves. Coach Hearn believes that Wake Forest, now state champs, will again provide formidable opposition in the big five race and stated that Duke and State are "only fair."

Jack Riley Chosen Critic

The editor announces the selection of Jack Riley as staff dramatic critic for the coming year.

TO START AGAINST BULLDOGS

George Barclay, left, and Frank Smith, right, who have been starring at guard and tackle respectively for the Tar Heels all season, are in top shape for the battle with the Georgia Bulldogs in Athens Saturday.

Place Of "Shipwreck" Kelly Is Taken By Ralph Kercheval

Kentucky Sensation Can Run, Pass, Kick, and Direct Team Along With the Rest; Success of Wildcats in Conference in Large Part Due to Work of Heavy Line.

The days when "Shipwreck" Kelly ran, punted, and passed Kentucky to victory are gone, but the Wildcats have a new luminary who bids fair to make fans forget the brilliant Kelly. The newcomer is Ralph Kercheval and he can do anything Kelly ever did and do some of them a great deal better.

Kercheval is a big fellow who can run, pass, and direct a team well, but he has one line of activity in which he outclasses every rival. He's the finest punter in the Southern Conference and one of the best in the country. He has outkicked every team he's met, and any time the Wildcats are pushed up against their goal line, they feel pretty safe when Kercheval's in there, for on more than one occasion this year he has punted over eighty yards. He comes through in the pinches, which means a lot, and he can place his punts, kick for the sidelines or the bad spots, with uncanny ability.

One-Man Team

Kercheval comes pretty close to being a one-man team, but Kentucky has a great deal more. In the backfield with Kercheval is a sophomore named Bach who has been playing fine ball this year, and a senior, Ellis Johnson. Johnson was ballyhooed as an all-American prospect when he went to Kentucky and carried brilliant preparatory record along with him, but he has been handicapped by injuries for two years and has never been able to show his real ability. This year however, Johnson is right; he has found himself free from injuries and opposing lines have found the problem of stopping him a difficult one. He weighs around 180, has speed, drive, and all other qualifications for a good backfield man, and he's been showing the boys who called him a disappointment everything they could want to see this fall.

The Wildcats have played and won three games against Southern Conference opposition and as usual, rank as serious threats to the title. They can hardly be rated as equals of Alabama, Tennessee, and Tulane, but they're good and they'll have to be watched. V. M. I., Sewanee, and Georgia Tech have been defeated on consecutive Saturdays. The scores have not been overwhelming but the Wildcats played heads-up football.

Have Heavy Line

One reason for Kentucky's success this season can be found in a 196-pound line that has all the drive and power that could be wished for. It has no weak places and there are no tight men anywhere in the aggregation to bring the average down. The line is balanced in weight, experience, and ability, and getting through or around it this season has not been particularly easy for opposing teams.

SIGMA PHI SIGMA DEFEATS PHI GAM IN CLOSE BATTLE

Victors Score on Placekick to Win 7-6; Best House Handed First Setback of Season.

In only one of yesterday's series of intramural tag football contests did either team succeed in crossing its opponent's goal line. Three of the games resulted in scoreless ties, and were decided by first down supremacy.

Phi Gams Lose

Sigma Phi Sigma, putting on an unbeatable rally after trailing 6-0, provided the biggest upset of the season so far by downing Phi Gamma Delta, 7-6, as the result of a successful place kick for the point after touchdown. The Phi Gams, who took part in the play-offs last year, were top-heavy favorites to win, but lacked the scoring punch to make their 4-2 lead in first downs count in their favor.

Chi Psi Wins

Chi Psi conquered Kappa Alpha in the best game of the afternoon, gaining four first downs to K. A.'s two. Chi Psi men twice broke through and blocked punts, but in neither event were they able to put across a scoring attack as a result of these breaks. Don LaBorne and Bill Bonyon stood out in the Chi Psi attack, while Jake Binder and James Morrison excelled for the losers. Chi Psi gained all its points in the first half, while Kappa Alpha gained a single first down in each half.

Everett Beats Steele

In a rough-and-tumble setto, Everett vanquished Steele, 5-3, in first downs, to gain its initial victory in the dormitory league. Leowitz and Barnes stood out for Everett, while Peacock was Steele's best performer. The game was poorly played, with neither team presenting any dangerous threat to its opponent's goal line.

Best House Suffers Defeat

Best House, campus champion in 1931, suffered its first setback of the current season, losing a nip and tuck struggle to New Dorms, 4-3 in first downs. The Best House attack failed to click with any degree of consistency, and the New Dorm outfit played heads up football to hand the champions their first defeat in two years.

The intramural football games scheduled for today are as follows:

4:00 p. m.—Aycock vs. Swain Hall; Delta Psi vs. Zeta Psi.
5:00 p. m.—Zeta Beta Tau vs. Beta Theta Pi; Theta Kappa Nu vs. Pi Kappa Alpha; Old East vs. Old West.

WILMINGTON CLUB IN FIRST MEETING

Fifteen students from Wilmington and vicinity met Tuesday night in Graham Memorial at the inaugural gathering of the newest campus organization, the Wilmington club. It had been planned originally to elect officers at the first meeting, but the club decided to defer the election until next week, as fully ten more members are expected to be in attendance at that time.

A committee was selected by the group to get in touch with all Wilmington boys who have not as yet joined and to submit to the club a list of candidates nominated by them for the offices of president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer. On the committee were Mack Pickard, Joseph Newton, Alfred Miller, Jesse Parker, and Sam Hawkins. Joseph Newton acted as chairman of the meeting.

Winston Makes Speech At Janitors' Meeting

Judge Francis D. Winston, of Windsor, spoke to a special meeting of the Janitors' Association of the University, Tuesday night. Judge Winston was the second student to enroll at the University after the reconstruction days.

Much more progress has been made in the last 100 years by the colored race in elevating their standard of living than in the 4,000 years before that time, according to the speaker. They should feel proud of that accomplishment and should strive for a yet higher standard of living by practicing strict economy, especially in a time like today.

Prosperity Contest Nears End

Tomorrow is the last day of Chapel Hill's prosperity contest. Those who have votes to turn for contestants are urged to do so. Prizes are to be awarded Friday night at the Carolina theatre. Twenty merchants are giving awards which range from a pair of shoes half-soled to a free trip to New York with all expenses paid. The ballot box is located in the lobby of the Carolina theatre.

ROGERS STARS IN NEW PICTURE AT CAROLINA TODAY

Will Rogers, comedian, columnist, cowboy, rancher, and politician, will make his appearance in Chapel Hill today to amuse the audiences in the Carolina theatre in his latest and, perhaps, funniest picture, "Down to Earth." Supporting Rogers are Irene Rich, Dorothy Jordan, and Matty Kemp.

Rogers is considered screenland's busiest and most democratic celebrity. He likes to talk and will exchange views with fellow players but shuns publicity and professional interviewers.

Old West Elects Officers

Tuesday night Old West dormitory elected its officers and members to the Forum. Norman McKaskill, Albert New, and Fred Crouch were elected president, vice-president, and athletic manager in the order named. The north section will be represented in the Forum by Gene Armstrong, the central section by Jack Guyton, and the south section by Joe Sugarman.

ENTERTAINMENT SERIES WILL BE BEGUN TUESDAY

Celebrated American Violinist Will Appear in Concert in Memorial Hall.

Ablert Spalding, celebrated violinist, will appear at Memorial hall, Tuesday, October 18, in the first of the series of entertainments presented by the student entertainment committee. Spalding will give an original concert with Andre Benoist assisting at the piano. The program will begin at 8:00 o'clock.

The famous musician is brought to Chapel Hill by the committee through the auspices of the Wolfsohn Musical Bureau of New York, Inc.

Tickets on Sale

Tickets for this concert may be purchased in 203 South building for one dollar. Entertainment booklets have been already distributed to students of the schools of commerce, education, and liberal arts. All other students and townspeople can purchase these booklets for three dollars from Dean A. W. Hobbs' office in South building. These passbooks entitle admission to the entire series of programs sponsored during the year by the entertainment committee.

Spalding is the American violinist whose career is said to present a notable refutation of the idea that American artists cannot cope with foreign rivals. He has appeared in every famous music house in the world and has met with overwhelming success.

Studied in Europe

Spalding was born in Chicago forty-four years ago. He moved to New York when only three

Awards To Be Given At Court Of Honor

At the Court of Honor meeting of the Chapel Hill and Carboro Boy Scout troops, Dr. Frank Graham will present eagle badges to three scouts, in Gerard hall at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Reverend Eugene Olive, of the Chapel Hill Baptist church, will present the first class badges; F. M. Durham, of Carboro, the second class badges; Colonel J. H. Pratt, of Chapel Hill, the tenderfoot badges; and W. E. Caldwell, of the history department, the merit badges. Badges will be presented to life and star scouts by dean M. T. Van Hecke, of the law school.

UNION FORUM TO MEET WEDNESDAY FOR ORGANIZATION

Fraternities Are Asked to Elect Representatives to Organization
By Wednesday.

The Union Forum will convene for the purpose of electing three members to serve on the board of directors of Graham Memorial, making recommendations to the board and the manager, and to make plans for the organization, Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock in 214, Graham Memorial. The secretary will be elected and dates will be set for the meetings, with E. C. Daniel, Jr., acting as ex-officio chairman.

Fraternities are requested to elect their representatives at their regular meetings by Wednesday night. Representatives from the various dormitories have already been elected.

Students living in town will elect Forum officers at a smoker at Graham Memorial Monday night at 9:30 o'clock. Co-ed officers will be elected through the Woman's Association, Tuesday afternoon, at 4:30 o'clock.

WILL SPEAK TODAY

Pictured above is Dr. Howard Rondthaler, president of Salem college, in Winston-Salem, who will deliver the principal address of the Y. M. C. A. anniversary celebration here this morning. Dr. Rondthaler was, at one time, president of the University Y. M. C. A. during his undergraduate days.

ORGAN PROGRAM PLANNED TONIGHT

Concert Will Feature Walter Patterson at Organ and Bill Allsbrook Singing.

Today at 7:30 o'clock in the Memorial hall Walter B. Patterson will give an all-request program. There have been several hundred numbers requested and the program will consist of those most frequently named. A variety of selections will be played, but the general trend will be towards popular pieces.

As an addition to the program, Bill Allsbrook who has been with a dance band on the campus for three years has consented to sing several popular numbers. He is well known to students here, many having heard him this summer at Virginia Beach. With Walter Patterson's music, and Allsbrook's singing, an excellent crowd is expected.

The next program will be devoted to the more classic requests.

Y. M. C. A. Meetings Cancelled

The weekly meeting of the officers of the three cabinets in the campus Y. M. C. A. has been cancelled. The meeting is usually conducted Friday mornings during the assembly period, but due to the special program to be sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. in assembly today, it is necessary that it be cancelled.

"Daily Tar Heel" Editorial Mentioned In Article Concerning Tatum Petition.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL is quoted in the current issue of The Literary Digest, famed national weekly. In an article in which the circumstances of the Tatum petition are discussed, this paper is mentioned and quoted as saying, of Langston Hughes, "His poetry as well as his speaking is the expression of a clear and sincere spirit."

In its analysis of the petition, the Digest says that the publications of the University of North Carolina are "widely heralded as the center of liberalism among colleges and universities."

Students of English

All students majoring in English in the college of liberal arts are asked to meet in 201 Murphey today during the chapel hour to discuss matters connected with the comprehensive examination and the major. The meeting will not last longer than half an hour.

Union County Club

An organization meeting of the Union county club will take place at 7:30 o'clock this evening in 215 Graham Memorial for the purpose of electing officers.

Deputation Team Is Sent To Aberdeen

A large audience of students in the Aberdeen high school attended yesterday the program of the first deputation team to be sent out this year by the University Y. M. C. A.

The University group presented a program dealing with the ideals, principles, advantages, and activities of Hi-Y clubs. An entire school period was taken up by the group.

All of the members of the group are sophomores at the University. They are: Jack Poole, Julien D. Winslow, Herbert Suiter, and Locke Sloop.

NEW SYSTEM FOR ACTIVITIES DAY IS BEING WORKED ON

Series of Assembly Hours Will Be Devoted to Presenting Campus Activities to Students.

Activities Day this year will not be conducted as a special chapel program set aside for the purpose of presenting various activities to students, but a series of assembly hours will be devoted to that purpose, Haywood Weeks, president of the student body, announced yesterday.

This special occasion was inaugurated last year for the purpose of allowin the major organizations on the campus to present the leaders in those activities to the campus as a whole.

This year one or two assembly periods of the week will be devoted to different activities. The Di Senate and Phi assembly have already presented discussions of their work at assembly.

The change in the plan was made because it was thought that one assembly hour was too short to have each of the activities properly presented.

RONDTHALER TO MAKE PRINCIPAL Y. M. C. A. ADDRESS

Reception Sponsored by "Y" Will Be Staged Tonight in Graham Memorial.

Two features will be offered today by the campus Y. M. C. A. in their annual celebration of the 111th anniversary of the birth of Sir George Williams, founder of the international Young Men's Christian Association.

The main event on the day's program will be an address by Dr. Howard Rondthaler at the student assembly period. Dr. Rondthaler is president of Salem college in Winston-Salem, and he was a former president of the University Y. M. C. A. during his undergraduate days here.

Graham Memorial Reception

From 8:30 to 10:00 tonight an open house is scheduled for Graham Memorial. All students in the University are invited to attend the function, which will be the first reception the "Y" has sponsored for students in many years. The affair will be strictly informal. Music will be included in the evening program and refreshments will be served by the wives of the members of the association board of directors, assisted by co-eds in the University.

At the punch bowls will be: Mrs. Harry F. Comer, Mrs. Frank P. Graham, Mrs. E. C. Branson, Mrs. H. W. Odum, Mrs. R. B. House, Mrs. F. F. Bradshaw, Mrs. English Bagby, Mrs. J. Maryon Saunders, and Mrs. Harold D. Meyer.

Girls who are to serve are: Misses Elizabeth Phillips, Betty Barnett, Mary Byrd Perrow,

Founding Of Y.M.C.A. Was Due To Bitterness Against Moral Laxity

George Williams, Worker in an English Drapery Establishment, Was Original Founder of Association, Which Now Has 5,000 Branches and Over Half Million Members.

Religious resentment at the moral laxity in the conditions surrounding him led George Williams to the founding of the Y. M. C. A. over eighty years ago. The movement which began as an effort to give workmen religious stimulation has since developed into an international good-will, philanthropic, and spiritual organization.

In 1844, Williams, troubled by the low spiritual state of his co-workers in an English drapery establishment, inaugurated weekly prayer meetings in his bedroom for their benefit. Ridicule, opposition, and contempt confronted Williams and his eleven colleagues from employer and employee alike; from the former because he would resent an effort that might reform his tyrannical position over his workers, and from the latter because they were under the spell of gambling houses and casinos of ill-repute.

Name Chosen

However, resolute in their purpose, the twelve young men organized and adopted the title, the Young Men's Christian Association. Membership was limited to Christian men and the dues were fixed at two shillings per annum.

Confident that in their hands lay the solution to the grave problem of the day, the group continued to meet at fourteen different houses until the membership totaled seventy. At this time an executive officer was selected and cultural and missionary work were introduced into the program of the society. Having engaged permanent quarters, the association made available to its members a well selected library, classes for mental culture and rooms for suitable companionship.

Later Founded in America

In 1851 the Y. M. C. A. took root in North America, first in Montreal, Canada. Boston is generally credited with having the first Y. M. C. A. in the United States, that chapter having been established in December, 1851. While the London Association had developed a religious, educational, and social program, it was the New York group that initiated physical training as a feature of the work.

George Williams was knighted by Queen Victoria in 1894, at the Golden Jubilee of the Y. M. C. A. Well might the Association celebrate with 5,000 branches in nearly every country in the world and over half a million members. Over 2,000 delegates from all points of the world congregated for one of the largest and greatest religious conferences which London or the world had ever seen.

HOOVER COMMENDS "Y" FOUNDER

The following telegram was received last night by the local branch of the Y. M. C. A., from President Hoover: "The Young Men's Christian Association has been a tower of moral strength in every community since the earliest childhood recollection of most of the men and women now living, and thus, it is almost startling to be reminded that the founder of this great organization, if he were living today would be only eleven years older than a centenarian. The celebration of Founder's Day on October 14 will be the occasion for much historic and personal reminiscence of that great man, George Williams, and of the stupendous spiritual education and material blessings wrought by the association, born of his vision, and firmly rooted in his indefatigable labors and his optimistic spirit. To the youth of our land, indeed of all the world, it will be a day reminding them of the possibilities of service to millions of others that lie in unselfish application of spiritual insight, developed industry, and warm good-will towards all one's fellowmen."

HERBERT HOOVER.

Early "Y" Here Served Mainly As Social Center For Students

Local Association Was Third Such College Association in America, Being Founded in April, 1860; Object of Association Was Improvement of Spiritual Conditions of Students.

The following excerpts from an article appearing in the Carolina Magazine for April, 1914, written by Philip Woolcott, now a banker in Richmond, tell about the early years of the Carolina Y. M. C. A.:

"Before 1860 there had been no organized group of young men at the University who were pursuing the work and spirit of Christ. There had been, however, some thirteen years after the first Y. M. C. A. beginnings in London in 1844, a movement in a few of the American cities and colleges to organize the earnest young Christians into an active, co-operative brotherhood. During the collegiate year 1857-58, Y. M. C. A.'s were founded independently at Michigan and Virginia, the latter having for one of its most ardent advocates and hardest worker Dr. Thomas Hume, who later was to take such an active interest in the Carolina Y. M. C. A. The Carolina Association followed in a very few years, for in April of the year 1860, the religiously inclined churchmen of the University established the local organization, the third college association in the United States.

Constitution of Association
"The constitution of the association was based on that of Virginia. The object was the 'improvement of the spiritual condition of the students and the extension of religious advantages to destitute points in the neighborhood of the University."

"This following card was published and sent abroad throughout the state: 'We have the pleasure to announce that the students of the University of North Carolina have established a Young Men's Christian Association.'

"If parents and others who send young men to the University will give them letters of introduction to us, it will afford us great pleasure to introduce them to the pious students of the University, and also to the pastors of the church to which they or their friends may belong.

"The association hopes in this way to accomplish much good; for sad experience has taught us that many pious and moral young men are led astray by falling into the company of the dissipated and vicious when they enter college."

Organization of Association

The following is an account of the foundation, taken from the North Carolina University Magazine, May 1860:

"This body has been organized and gives promise of great benefit to the students and to all others who may choose to connect themselves with it. It is instituted for the extension of christian sympathy and religious

On the Playing Fields of Eden

So common have been the optimistic mutterings during the worst of the recent depression that cynicism has become widespread in the average man. Yet today we can with reason say that times are improving. Indeed, the reason why such optimistic generalizations are few is that we are at heart a superstitious people and fear even to mention happy days without our fingers crossed and some wood nearby to tap on. Indications, it must be admitted, however, point to a gradual rise to a normalcy which it is to be hoped will be lasting. The lack of a sudden, meteoric rise is a good sign, inasmuch as it would seem to indicate the absence in the future of an equally sudden fall. A recent headline states that there is "Improvement Noted in Mills of Britain" and the local cotton and tobacco crops are doing well. Atlanta textile workers are receiving a 10 per cent wage increase and so on.

Yet it is obvious that the great world problems of unemployment and division of wealth are still far from solved. Only the bitterness of iron can be aroused in a newspaper reader who discovers that "Republican victory is sure to revive business" or that with a Democratic administration will come the millennium. Obviously the fact that stocks have risen sharply does not mean a job for every man and a piece of cake for every mouth. The futility of politics when it comes into contact with economic law, which in turn exemplifies the experience of the ages, is most strongly represented in the ludicrous and irrational remarks and speeches of the political leaders. The Republicans are sure that Calvin Coolidge's endorsement of Hoover's administration will carry great weight. Why? Because Mr. Coolidge happened to be occupying the White House at the time when this country was going through a period of wild prosperity, which should be as much feared in the future as any retrenchment, however great. At least the latter has the advantage of making people think, and not always of their own gain, but perhaps a little while of the other fellow's. By mentioning the names of Jefferson, Cleveland, and Wilson, the Democrats hope to conjure up in the minds of the voters a rosy picture of the past and future, a sort of Garden of Eden, wherein will reside angelic citizens, with archangel Democratic representatives and senators to guide them.

Cannot we lay aside this nonsense and put politics on a reasonable basis? If politics must be a game of man, let him play the game with rational argument, since he is said to be the rational animal. Let arguments on an emotional plane be ruled "offside" and the whistle blown. Let politics be a frank and open game, one which the youth of the nation will not be ashamed of playing, and which will feature honest rational argument and not oratorical eulogies and play on prejudice.—B.B.P.

Time Brings

Rushing rules are a wholesome check on the methods used by fraternities in attempting to bid new men; and it is a credit to the University that it has been so vigilant to enforce these restrictions. But the duration of the present rushing season was apparently fixed for no other reason than that of saving the valuable time of fraternity man and prospective pledge.

The above purpose our system fulfills admirably. But a short rushing season does not justify itself. Rushing should be restricted by rules, but not confined with the short space of twelve days; for it is of more importance to both parties concerned than freshmen realize or fraternity men care to admit. For the former, the choice of a fraternity means the organization by which he will be identified; for the latter, the choice of a freshman means a number of years of living with him. An error in either case is irrevocable.

There are advantages, of course, that go hand in hand with the disadvantages of a short rushing season. For one thing, small fraternities, outdoing themselves to put up a bold front, profit from the present system, pledge men who otherwise would not have affiliated themselves with those organizations. And the same statement, by inverting subject and predicate, would be applicable to the group of larger fraternities on the campus.

But waiving both advantages and disadvantages and granting that a short rushing season affords less inconvenience to both parties concerned, let us raise the question: Is it possible to know, within twelve short days, a speaking acquaintance? To know him well enough to appraise justly his abilities and shortcomings? If human nature has not reverted to childish simplicity—and that is not inapplicable to freshmen in spite of however simple some would make them out, the answer is emphatically in the negative.

On what recommendation, then, must the fraternity man consider an individual whom he can be in contact with at most six hours per day for twelve days? Perhaps one or two of the "brothers" have known him, is their like or dislike of him to be accepted as final judgment? Perhaps the chapter has received a letter recommending him—one highly complimentary, no doubt—is this sort of appraisal to be accepted at its face value? Not that it is in all cases, but nevertheless these conditions surrounding our rushing only add to its already supercilious atmosphere.

The term "rushing" itself is new; and it exemplifies completely the hasty, haphazard, and hectic method which we tolerate. Let us not do away with rushing restrictions, but rather let us have a month, two months, or a quarter in which to observe a freshman as he is, outside of the stilted and artificial rushing-season aspect of our fraternities. Perhaps then these hypocrisies will not longer have cause for existence.—A.T.D.

In The Main

By MAYNE ALBRIGHT

To my many fellow columnists: I hereby claim the local opinion on all the rights and privileges of nominating. And having staked this claim, I hasten to nominate Ed Hamer for Exalted Ruler of the Bad Puns Club. Sitting near him at the Grid-graph Saturday was painful. If Carolina would put in a new guard Ed could be counted on for something like: "He sure Kahn play." I could quote him at length but most of his stuff is unprintable.

Personally I hate all puns and punsters. Especially a certain columnist who labeled a paragraph "In the Maniac." Sure, it was that darn Shoemaker. I think he's a heel. He can't last. He has no soul. The piker!

A surprisingly large number of people have been horrified by the fact that a picture of Lincoln, the gift of Noah Goodridge, adorns the walls of the manager's office in Graham Memorial. Won't someone contribute a picture of Lee before we have a U. D. C. investigation?

I tried to relieve the situation by hanging up a picture of Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt on the opposite wall, and incidentally found a new number for John Wilkinson's Republican Club. I asked Uncle Bill McDade, our seventy-eight-year-old janitor, if he recognized the gentleman. Looking closely he asked "Is he an o-lumon-eye?" I told him that he was not and added "Why, that's the next president of the United States!" But Uncle Bill, still not convinced, said doubtfully: "Now dat ain't old man Hoover."

The other half of the janitorial staff is Democratic.

The clubs of Young Democrats and Young Republicans here even in their organization meetings proved themselves true to type. The Republicans met and quietly accepted the officers picked out for them in advance by their leaders, and the Democrats following the precedent of their elders, spent hours straightening out several intraparty frame-ups and entanglements.

Professor Meyer was in Chicago at a conclave of Delta Tau Delta, of which he is local and district chaperone, at the same time I was there attending the Democratic Convention. He very generously and none too seriously suggests that when Roosevelt is elected he should, as a reward for the yelling I did for him in Chicago, appoint me at least third assistant Secretary of the Navy. But, alas, I am susceptible to the late President Winston's trouble—mal de mer—and must blushing refuse. What a loss to the country!

Nobody handed in a correct list of all the quotations in my See-If-You-Know-This-Professor Contest of last week. Several named as many as seven, but none more than that. Maybe I took the wrong courses in getting my A.B. In case you are interested the correct list follows.

1. Dr. Caldwell. Most people guessed Dr. Harlan. Are his jokes old too?

2. President Graham. Few forget his "old Halls and great oaks."

3. Professor Frazer who seems to have stopped "speaking in terms of international relations" since he spent last year with them in Geneva.

4. Professor Meyer who recognized himself even if nobody else did.

4. Professor Koch who admits he's a monomaniac every Awards Night.

6. Mr. Woodhouse, who once ran against the "Sage of Northampton" in a Massachusetts election.

7. Dean Bradshaw who divides every situation into at least three parts and thinks of at least three ways to work each part.

8. Dr. Henderson, as the reference to Shaw would indicate.

9. Mr. Freddie B. McCall whose fine phrase about "meticulous particularity" was well known to law students.

10. The tenth and last was but a small sample of the way Dean Pierson begins his daily lectures in political science.

Oh well, maybe you knew Harold Lloyd's leading lady and got a pass to the show anyway.

Zadusila Frowns

Zadusila, the prophet, yawned, stretched and yawned again. He was a contented god. Knowing neither time nor its ravaging strokes, Zadusila had solved the problems of this little world since that dim day when matter coagulated and was tenanted by a horde of puny beings. Races live and perish, empires come and go, but still Zadusila sits at his oracle, explaining and solving those things that mystify and trouble.

Came a day, A. D. 1932, when a suave young man sat at the feet of Zadusila and spoke of a distant land wherein was a university called, by those who knew it best, Pennsylvania. He told of the passing of class politics and athletic subsidies and sundry other changes that had taken place there. He tarried long on a matter of publications, rehearsing before the great mind of Zadusila the efforts that were being made to curtail, and perhaps abolish completely, profits derived from the business-like conduct of such publications. The prophet listened attentively.

The young man paused, then rising asked Zadusila a question. "Oh Zadusila, thou wisest of all wise immortals, why should not a man who works day after day on a publication be deserving of as much recompense as he who toils at the books of learning and, by his work well done, is granted a scholarship."

A frown spread over the face of Zadusila. He was a discontented and perturbed god.—Pennsylvanian.

POWELL AND FRANCIS FEATURED AT CAROLINA

Today's feature at the Carolina theatre, "One Way Passage," co-starring William Powell and Kay Francis, has a brilliant cast of supporting players, including: Warren Hymer, Aline MacMahon, Frank McHugh, Herbert Mundin, Frederick Burton, Douglas Gerrard and others.

Another in the cast is Wilson Mizner, who has written almost every imaginable role during his several years in Hollywood with Joseph Jackson he is author of the screen play for "One Way Passage," and wrote the adaptation for "The Crowd Roars."

His music masters were extremely famous, and included Chiti, the Florentian expert, Buitrago, of New York, and Lefort, of Paris. He graduated from the Bologna Conservatory at fourteen, with the highest honor accorded since the student days of the immortal Mozart.

Spalding has received some very distinguished honors. He is the only American violinist ever to appear in the famous Scala Opera House in Milan. He was presented with Cross of Crown of Italy for military heroism during the World War, in which he served as an American aviator. He was decorated with the Cross of the Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his high artistic standing both in America and France.

COACH KENFIELD POSTS DRAW FOR TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Harvey Harris and Ike Minor Appear to Have Inside Track In Annual Tournament.

Coach Kenfield announced last night that the tennis tournament for all freshman and varsity non-lettermen would get under way today and that all first round matches had to be run off over the week-end. Any match not completed by Monday will be thrown out and, one or both of the players eliminated from the tournament by default.

The coach announced the draws for the first round matches and has formed two brackets. In the upper bracket Harvey Harris and Ike Minor are the leading players. Minor has shown a vast improvement over last year's play and should come near winning the tournament. In the lower bracket Ricky Willis and Bernard Friedman are the leading men. Friedman is a freshman and from his past record should give a good account of himself.

In the upper bracket the matches are: Harris vs. L. Jones; M. Lynch vs. W. S. Rosenthal; Kasen vs. Sobol; Porter vs. Hymes; Lott vs. Stokes; Cope vs. Cartland; Kalb vs. Primrose; Lovill vs. Williams; Minor vs. D. Jones; Taylor vs. Smith; Hoyt vs. Brown; Peed vs. Burroughs; Johnston vs. Hicks; Anderson vs. Hollen; Linker vs. Grier; Levitan vs. Frazier; Joyner vs. Jackson; Cohen vs. Traynor; Harper and Levett drew byes.

In the lower bracket: Willis vs. Stoll; Reynolds vs. Harrison; Kingdon vs. Odum; Perry vs. Bankney; Friedman vs. Craig; Kalb vs. Walls; Reid vs. Ditch; Kaveny vs. Bennett; McGlinn vs. Morris; Atwood vs. Kelly; Webb vs. Fisher; and Margulis drew a bye.

DELTA PSI LOSES TO ZETA PSI, 8-1

Beta, Theta Kappa Nu, Aycock, And Old East Are Other Winners in Games.

Putting up an air-tight defense, Zeta Psi downed Delta Psi 8 to 1 on first downs in the closest of the intramural games played yesterday. Delta Psi counted their first down early in the first quarter. With Barber doing the running and passing, the winners scored first downs throughout the contest.

Pikas Lose

Led by Longest and Berry, Theta Kappa Nu took a fast game from the Pikas 19 to 0. Berry scored the opening marker on an intercepted pass and a long run. The other two touchdowns came as a result of a pass from Longest to Berry and another pass from Berry to Longest. The passing of Woerner and the work of McGinnon both on offense and defense were the features of the Pikas' attack.

Betas Win

Using a nice running attack mixed in with some well executed passes, the Betas were victorious over Zeta Beta Tau 20 to 0. Rose, Reed and Anderson counted for the winners. Brown and Meyer did the best work for the losers.

Aycock Victors

Swain Hall was unable to stop fast driving Aycock line and as a result the latter team were winners by a score of 18 to 0. Aycock rushed the Swain Hall line so fast they were unable to get off good passes and on occasion the winners tallied as a result of a blocked kick for the goal by Frazier. FACES REAL TEST AGAINST GEORGIA

Tar Heels, Thirty-One Strong, Leave For Big Game At Athens

Kenan, McDonald, Shaffer, and Gardner New Sophomores To Make Trip.

HODGES DEFINITELY OUT
Coach Collins to Start Tatum at Tackle Against Georgia Eleven.

Thirty-one husky football enthusiasts left Chapel Hill last night for Athens where they will put in final preparation for the tussle with the Georgia Bulldogs tomorrow. The Tar Heels will work out today on Sanford field, Athens, and rest until tomorrow determined to set the Georgians back and break into the win column for this season.

Several new sophomores were among those making the trip and Coach Collins seemed pleased with the spirit of the entire squad as they cavorted around Kenan stadium yesterday in the short, snappy workout he prescribed. Frank Kenan and Allan McDonald, two sophomore halfbacks who have been looking especially good this week in scrimmages were taken as were Charlie Shaffer and Ralph Gardner two other second year men playing fullback and center respectively.

Kahn Improves Steadily

Eddie Kahn is slated to start the battle in the place of the veteran Newcombe due to his excellent showing last week. Kahn is the converted fullback and has been showing steady improvement all season. Teamed with George Barclay, they make Coach Collins a good pair of pony guards.

Due to an ankle injury, Harry Hodges will be unable to face the Bulldogs and in his place Collins expects to start Jim Tatum. The starting backfield for the Tar Heels will probably show Woollen at quarter, Phipps and Daniel at halves and Chandler, fullback.

Those making the trip were: Barclay, Beale, Brandt, Burnett, Chandler, Collins, Cozart, Croom, Daniel, Frankel, Gardner, Hodges, Jones, Kahn, Kenan, Lassiter, McCaskill, McIver, McDonald, Newcombe, Oliverio, Peacock, Philpot, Phipps, Shaffer, Smith, Tatum, Thompson, Underwood, Walker, Woollen.

Old West Downed

With Fox and Barham throwing passes half the length of the field, Old East took a hard fought battle, from Old West 13 to 0. Both of the touchdowns came as a result of long passes. On defense the work of Henson was best for the winners. Crouch and Womble were the stars both on defense and offense for the losers.

CROSS-COUNTRY TRYOUTS SCHEDULED SATURDAY

Cross-country time tryouts are to be staged Saturday morning at 11:00 o'clock. These are the official tryouts, and a large number of harriers are expected to turn out.

At last week's unofficial clockings, Louis Sullivan turned in the best time for the regulation Southern Conference five-mile course, with his twin brother, Henry, coming in second.

Coach Dale Ranson said that he expected some of the best performances in some time at these tryouts.

There is much hopeful talk about the up-swing, and in this vicinity work has been found for many idle hands. Notably, those of the receiver.—The New Yorker.

TAR HEELS HAVE TWO GAME LEAD OVER BULLDOGS

Carolina Has Won Seven Games To Georgia's Five, But Has Lost Last Three Tilts.

Carolina's Tar Heels will have the double objective of breaking Georgia's streak of victories at their expense and of defending their seven to five lead in the series to date when the two teams come together at Athens.

Since 1895, when the series was inaugurated, the old rivals have met twelve times. That first year saw two encounters staged, with Carolina, coached by Doggie Trenchard and captained by Edwin Clarke Gregory, taking both games by scores of 6-0 and 10-6.

In the first years of the rivalry, the Tar Heels had the best of things, having won seven of the nine games played when the series was temporarily discontinued. Until that time Carolina had scored 211 points to 55 for the Bulldogs.

Several Tar Heel elevens have won by overwhelming scores. Frank Rogers' outfit conquered Georgia, 44-0, in 1898; the 1900 team, under Francis Osborne, outclassed the Bulldogs 55-0, while Dave Tayloe's 359-point team downed the Athens eleven, 41-6, in 1914.

Bulldogs Upset Tar Heels in 1929

When the rivalry was renewed in 1929, after a lapse of several years, Georgia football had taken on a new lease of life and the Bulldog eleven, fresh from an upset victory over Yale, dashed the Tar Heels' hopes for a conference title by winning the game, 19-12. Captain Boland and "Ripper" Roberts led the attack which handed Ray Farris' eleven its lone setback of the year.

Georgia has had the sign on Carolina for the past two years in real style, having taken both these games by big margins. Captain Strud Nash's eleven went down to defeat, 26-0, in a contract with the Charlotte Bantams, professional eleven, and will play against Greenville, S. C., today.

GEORGIA HAS FAST BACKS

Sam Brown and Bill David Are Speed Merchants in Bulldog Attack.

The Georgia Bulldogs are worried over the reputed aerial attack of the Tar Heels and are doing their best to prepare for the game. The Georgians respect the passing of both Croom and Phipps and therefore Coach Mehre has spent the past week perfecting a defense.

To offset this threat, the Georgia team will be able to present as fine an array of open field runners as has ever worn Georgia's colors on the gridiron. The remarkable comeback that the new members of Georgia's backfield staged against Tulane has created a great amount of interest for football fans in Georgia.

influence through the community. We earnestly recommend the Christian Association to all our fellow students, knowing that it will increase the purity and usefulness of all who are willing to lend their aid to the advancement of so noble a cause. Its meetings are monthly and while no duty is imposed upon a member without his consent, no perceptible loss of time can result to the student.

"The hopes of the founders were short lived indeed. The life of the Association was destined in a few months to be cut short by the war. There was of course very little organization of any kind when the war began, and the Y. M. C. A. being the last founded and the least organized institution here, was naturally the first to fall.

"After an absence of 16 years from University life, the Y. M. C. A. was re-organized September 17, 1876—the second year of the re-opening. The rooms of the Association were in the South building, first floor rear, where the two large rooms are today. (Later meetings were held in chapel when Dr. Winston became president—1891.) On Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights the students congregated in the big room. There was no Pickwick to go to, no fraternity houses to go to, no automobiles to drive over to Durham; in fact there was nothing at all for the students to do to amuse themselves right after supper. As a result the Y. M. C. A. room was the center of social life; here the fellows came together and sat around the big, open, cheerful fire in the home-like apartment; here they had their informal discussions, both religious and otherwise. In those days the fellows sang a lot. Some, it is said, went to the meetings more for the singing than for anything else. The club-like nature of the Y. M. C. A. made the students have a very kindly feeling towards it. About a half or three-fourths of an hour after supper the meetings began, and on account of the above mentioned facts they were well attended. Great speakers such as John R. Mott, Robert E. Spear, and the future Governor Glenn, were often secured to appear before the association, and very deep interest was felt in these nightly meetings.

Changes Made

"About 1890, though, reforms began to be put forward by some of the most progressive members. Instead of electing the president at the end of the year, they began to elect him in January to serve for that spring and the following fall. In 1890 the first Y. M. C. A. Handbook was gotten out by the Y. M. C. A. President, A. H. Patterson. Under the same regime our present cabinet saw its first beginnings. Men were selected for committee chairmen according to their ability to fill certain positions and were held responsible for the work of their assistants. It is interesting to know that there were committees of three men from each denomination in college whose duty it was to put ing Brown had twisted and dodged his way across the goal twice in less than four minutes. Brown's speed and open field work was easily the outstanding feature of the game. Bill David, Georgia's fullback was equally outstanding. David, holder of the Southern Conference championship in the high jump and point winner in the conference pole vault for the past two years, is playing his first year of football. He supplied the spark to the Georgia offense against V. P. I. in the opening game, and his great work against Tulane proved that his brilliance was not a flash.

DR. RONDTHALER GIVES LIFE STORY OF FOUNDER OF Y

Salem College President Is Principal Speaker at Y. M. C. A. Anniversary Program.

Dr. Howard Rondthaler, president of Salem college, delivered the principal address of the Y. M. C. A. anniversary program yesterday morning in Memorial hall. The speaker traced the history of the Y. M. C. A. from the time of its origin in 1844 up to the present.

George Williams, the founder of this world wide organization for boys and young men, was born on an obscure farm in west England in the year 1821. At the age of eighteen he went to London as a draper's apprentice. The apprentices had to keep very long hours in their work and had no time or facilities for recreation or amusement. He conceived the idea of organizing a club for the apprentices with the purpose of giving them Christian diversion. The club grew rapidly and the members, after disregarding many proposed names, decided on the one that we know today—The Young Men's Christian Association. Within six years the Y. M. C. A. had four branches—the first in Montreal, Canada, the second in Boston, the third in Philadelphia, Penn., and the fourth in Charleston, S. C.

For the accomplishment of providing a club primarily for the working class of boy and young man he was knighted by Queen Victoria. Upon his death he was buried in Westminster Abbey, among England's most famous soldiers and statesmen.

Dr. Rondthaler stated that Sir George Williams was the only man in England to be born a private citizen, live as a private citizen, and after death be buried among the famous.

Judge Lenient On Bumping Fines Charging Twelve Cost Of Court

Anti-Hitch-Hiking Law, in Effect Five Years, Does Not Prevent Soliciting Rides But Forbids Standing in Streets For Such a Purpose.

Not a single fine has been imposed for violation of the anti-bumping ordinance passed five years ago. In reviewing the operation of the regulation, C. P. Hinshaw, judge of the local recorder's court, estimated that the number of arrests did not exceed twelve. Seven of these were made early this year on offenders, ignorant of the ordinance. The usual court procedure has been a warning and the payment of costs of court.

The city ordinance making it unlawful for a person to solicit automobile rides within certain areas of the streets of Chapel Hill was effected by the board of aldermen in 1927. The enactment of this bill, intended to cure students of the strange malady, R. B. House, University secretary terms "Thumbtiness," came as a result of the excessive annoyance caused motorists by students seeking free rides.

Precarious Conditions
The situation was considered dangerous for both driver and pedestrian, for the hitch-hikers insisted on mobbing the streets and congesting traffic at corners. There is no record, however, of the death of a student or even the contraction of an injury while seeking a ride in

BOY SCOUT SEMINAR TO BRING EXECUTIVES HERE

The first Boy Scout executive seminar of the year will be held in Chapel Hill December 1-2, according to an announcement made today by Dr. H. D. Meyer of the department of sociology. This meeting will bring to Chapel Hill all the Boy Scout executives of North Carolina.

According to the preliminary announcements, the theme of the seminar will be "Indian Life in North Carolina." The Boy Scout fraternity, Alpha Phi Omega, will participate in the seminar and the initiation banquet which will be a part of the program.

GRAHAM ACCEPTS ECONOMIC BOARD VICE-PRESIDENCY

President Will Call Discussion Meeting of State Leaders in November at Charlotte.

President Frank P. Graham has accepted an appointment to serve as temporary vice-president for the North Carolina division of the Southeastern economic council, according to an announcement made Thursday by Hugh MacRae of Wilmington, president of the council. President Graham accepted the appointment at the request of the council.

Sometime during the first two weeks in November, a statewide meeting will be called in Charlotte by President Graham in the interests of the work of the council, Mr. MacRae said.

Leaders in all lines of life in the state, covering business, industry, agriculture, and social fields will join President Graham for the meeting.

GRAHAM MEETS WITH ALDERMEN

Aldermen Consider Establishment of Bowling Alleys and Pool Rooms Here.

At the monthly board of aldermen's meeting this week, President Frank P. Graham and committees appointed to investigate the matter discussed the proposition of permitting pool rooms and bowling alleys to be established in Chapel Hill.

According to City Manager John L. Caldwell, there is an old ordinance prohibiting the operation of pool rooms, bowling alleys, and all gambling devices within five miles of the University, without permission of the president of the University.

It was contended, on the other hand, that since pool tables are now in use in Graham Memorial and bowling alleys are under construction, city officials should be allowed to grant permits for the operation of these devices in the town. When the meeting adjourned, the matter had not been definitely decided upon.

STATE TEACHERS TO ASSEMBLE FOR ANNUAL MEETING

Three University Faculty Members to Deliver Addresses At Greensboro.

The tenth annual North Carolina teachers convention meeting in Greensboro October 21-22 will have three speakers from the University of North Carolina. Dean D. D. Carroll will address the commerce students, Dr. J. C. Lyons the French teachers, and Dr. W. C. Jackson, will discuss the newly begun school of public administration.

There will be three general sessions, two Friday and one Saturday, and twenty departmental sessions. About 1,500 teachers and superintendents are expected to attend these sessions which are scheduled to convene in the auditorium of the Greensboro senior high school.

During the Friday sessions Clyde A. Erwin, president of the State educational association; Mrs. John K. Norton, National Educational Association; Dr. Frank H. Hickman, Duke; and Mrs. Blanch Prebble will speak to the assembled body. Saturday, Dr. B. H. Van Ott, Virginia state supervisor of industrial education; and Dr. Edwin H. Reeder, Columbia university, will make the principal addresses. All departmental work will be under the supervision of capable speakers and teachers.

CITY HEALTH OFFICER MAKES MONTHLY REPORT

Five births and no deaths were included in the vital statistics report for the month of September, made by Dr. S. A. Nathan, city health officer, at the meeting of the board of aldermen this week.

Of the five births reported in Chapel Hill for September, according to Dr. Nathan, two were white children and three were colored.

Diseases reported in the county during September included two cases of scarlet fever and one case of diphtheria at Hillsboro, and one case of pellagra in the rural district adjoining Chapel Hill.

SOPHOMORES SET DATE FOR DANCE

Executive Committee of Class Decides Hop Will Take Place November 5.

November 5 was the tentative date set by the executive committee of the Class of 1935 for the annual Sophomore Hop in the Tin Can. This decision was reached at the annual meeting in the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday night.

William Sadler was appointed chairman of the decoration committee by President George C. Franklin. Harold Bennett was chosen chairman of the committee on invitations. The committee decided to hold the nomination and election of the dance leaders soon.

The affair is limited to members of the sophomore class.

Members of the executive committee who attended the meeting included: Julien D. Winslow, chairman; Goodwin May, Foster Thorpe, Chapin Litten, Clifton R. Faucette, H. K. Bennett, William Sadler, Robert Blount, James Lothien, and Abbott L. Dibblee.

UNIVERSITY PRESS PRINTS TWO NEW BOOKS THIS WEEK

"Liberalism in the South" and "The Era of Muckrakers" Deal With Social Conditions.

The University of North Carolina Press has announced the publication of two important new books. Liberalism in the South, is the title of the book which is scheduled to appear Monday. The Era of the Muckrakers by C. C. Regier was issued Thursday.

Liberalism in the South, by a young southern author, Virginius Vabney, is a "survey of the liberal movement in the fields of politics, education, race relations, religion, industry, literature, journalism, and women's rights from the time of Jefferson to the present in the Southern States." Liberalism is defined as a doctrine which has as its center principles of dignity and the worth of the individual. The author honestly and fearlessly applies this doctrine to the problems of the South.

The author, Virginius Vabney, is a young Virginian of unusual ability. He is a lineal descendant of the first president of the original Phi Beta Kappa chapter at Washington Jefferson college. He himself, a Phi Beta Kappa member, graduated from the University of Virginia in 1920, having completed the

CHRISCO CHOSEN TO STUDY WATER SUPPLY OF STATE

Conservation Department of Water Resources and Engineering Gives Scholarship.

More specific knowledge of the supply of water in North Carolina for industrial uses is to be sought through studies to be made by a fellowship student here, according to an announcement made by Col. J. W. Harrelson, director of the department of conservation and development.

A fellowship in chemical engineering, Director Harrelson said, has been awarded to H. F. Chrisco, a graduate in chemical engineering and a resident of Badin. The selection has been approved by President Frank Graham, and the fellowship is being extended through the conservation department's division of water resources and engineering here.

Archibald Henderson's Biography Of Shaw Will Be Released Today

Head of Mathematics Department Has Distinguished Himself in Field of Literature by Works on Shaw; Present Book to Be Most Complete Biography of Shaw Published.

Dr. Archibald Henderson's definite biography of the great comic dramatist, George Bernard Shaw: Playboy and Prophet, will appear before the public today.

This date will mark an important event in the literary history of Chapel Hill, for it is at that time that one of the University's loyal and brilliant faculty members will establish beyond question his eminence in the field of great contemporary literary production.

This new work is more comprehensive and complete than any biography of Shakespeare, and the celebrated subject has been treated with the same seriousness and comprehensiveness that would have been accorded to Shakespeare, were he living at this time.

As is the case with Boswell and Dr. Johnson, it is doubtful whether Dr. Henderson's first biography made Bernard Shaw or whether the biography of Bernard Shaw made Dr. Henderson. In this connection, Shaw recently commented, "Professor Henderson's first biography in 1911 did me a significant service... I became an individual where I had not even

MEN TRYING FOR RHODES AWARDS TO APPLY TODAY

Candidates Must File Applications With Dean Hobbs Or C. P. Spruill.

Applications of candidates for Rhodes scholarships must be filed with either Dean A. W. Hobbs, chairman of the local committee, or C. P. Spruill, member of the state committee by today. State selections are scheduled for December 10, and district committee meetings will take place a few days later.

A candidate for the scholarship, which allows two years of study at Oxford, must be an unmarried male citizen of the United States between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five. He may apply either in his native state or in the state in which he has had two years of higher education. There are eight districts in the United States, each comprising six states. Two candidates from each state are selected to appear before a district committee, which will choose from the twelve men the four that seem best suited and most representative.

A scholar may remain a third year in Oxford upon presentation of a plan of study for that period satisfactory to his school and to the Rhodes trustees. He may then postpone his third year in order to have a period of work in the United States, or, in a special case, may spend his third year in graduate work in some university in Great Britain or in Europe.

The stipend of a Rhodes scholarship is fixed at 400 lbs. a year. A student is not restricted in his choice of subjects.

Qualities that are considered in the candidates include: literary and scholastic attainments, moral characteristics, leadership, and physical vigor.

Ecce Homo

With the time drawing near for the selection of the man who will head the proposed Greater University, many North Carolinians interested in the success of this merger will begin to take sides as to their choices.

The founding of such an institution is a task of no mean proportion itself, and the successful maintenance of its depends on the man upon whom devolve the honor and responsibility of seeing it through its initial trials. The proposed University would mark another milestone in the history of the state; it would be fitting climax, in the eyes of this generation, to North Carolina's pioneering tradition in education; and it would be the highest expression of a synthesis of educational opportunities for North Carolinians. Whether it will endure as symbolical of this ideal depends on the man whose hands will guide its destiny.

He must be more than capable, for executive ability is no great rarity, and it is understood that the state will consider a number who will measure up to this standard. He must be liberal in his attitude toward education, which is no process that may be advantageously confined within the limits of religious dogma or race prejudice. And above all he must be consciously mindful of the tradition of North Carolina's advances toward democratic, equalized, educational opportunity.

Such a man is Frank Graham, president of this University. He took upon himself this office at a time when people considered him far from the traditional type of college president. Instead of reserved he is affable, and with no loss of dignity; instead of secluded he is accessible to all, and even troubles himself to receive students of the University at his home. In a word, he represents completely the spirit of a university.

The proposed plan will create a far greater University than this one at Chapel Hill, and its direction will entail far greater responsibilities. The qualities of the man who will shoulder them must be weighed carefully, for on his selection will depend whether the Greater University in its inception succeeds or fails. President Graham may well be used as a criterion for this consideration and an example of the type of man that such an office requires. The executive committee of North Carolina's Greater University will be confronted with a problem to find his equal.—A.T.D.

Even-Up

With the decision of the legislature to combine the three state supported schools of higher education, the University of North Carolina, North Carolina College for Women, and North Carolina State College, a storm of protest arose from adherents of the women's college and the Raleigh institution. Today after several months of observation and research into the benefits to be derived by all three of the schools from their cooperation and consolidation, there are only a few die-hards who are still bewailing the "elimination of State College."

The branch of the Greater University probably most pleased by the consolidation is the women's college. Hardly a disgruntled comment has been heard either from the students or authorities of that school. The authorities and students both readily perceive the added prestige accorded them as a part of the University of North Carolina, "the light of liberalism in the south." Added facilities for research and the better equipment here will now be made available to them more so than ever before because of the closer relationship between the two schools.

It is true that there are not many evident advantages which the Raleigh branch may gain. State College is essentially a technical school, and as such it can derive but little aid from the central branch here. However, the non-technical students will be enabled to attend school here, and thus their places will be able to be filled by more students interested in acquiring a knowledge of engineering, agriculture, or any of the many other branches of this type of work taught there. State will therefore be able to become a more highly specialized technical school, and as such will be capable of rendering a greater service to the state.

The central branch of the University will maintain all of its departments, but will cooperate more closely with the other branches than was possible when the three institutions were distinct entities.

To an impartial observer the consolidation cannot seem to be other than hugely advantageous to all three schools. State becomes a highly efficient specialized technological institution; N. C. C. W. gains the use of the extensive facilities available to the University; Carolina benefits from the contributions of the other two branches. In words contradictory to the current song it seems that "nobody loses, everybody wins."—O.S.S.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

For the Defense

Among the finest and most worthy boys in Carolina are the seven students who are paying their way through the University by vending drinks, candy, fruits and other refreshments to the fraternity houses. A few days ago, a number of the fraternity men were incensed when they heard that the town of Chapel Hill had forced these men to pay a license tax of ten dollars. However, no organized protest was made since this action had some legal basis, though it was of doubtful moral justice.

Now, there is a well-founded rumor that certain merchants in the town are circulating a petition asking that these boys be strictly prohibited from selling at all. If such a petition is in circulation, its authors deserve the condemnation of the whole University. For the sake of a few more dollars, they are willing to deprive deserving boys of their only opportunity to get a university education.

The firms sponsoring this petition are blindly ignoring the fact that they owe their existence to the patronage of University students who are in sympathy with these boys and who appreciate their services. It is impossible to see what grounds, moral or legal, the merchants have for depriving these boys of their livelihood, now that they have complied with the license ruling.

Certainly, the fraternities, as taxpayers, should have a word on this subject. Undoubtedly they appreciate the service of these boys who bring refreshments to their rooms during study periods. Rain or shine, the "sandwich boys" make their calls, saving fraternity men the inconvenience of leaving their work to go downtown for "eats."

It is an inspiration to see these boys, who work five or six hours a night and yet who find time to do creditable class work, who are always courteous and genial, and who are making a serious business of getting an education.

Certainly, it would be an injustice to deprive these boys, who serve some five hundred taxpayers in Chapel Hill, of their only means of staying in college. No fair-minded merchant would sign a petition to that effect. Assuredly, the fraternity men will defend these boys who give them such friendly service.

To the Ladies!

In many neighboring cities it has been rumored that co-eds at Carolina don't rate. This rumor should not be ignored or even allowed to go unchallenged. There is a deep reason for such a bit of news becoming widespread. It happens that colleges are necessarily made up of cosmopolitan groups, and Carolina is no exception. There are students from many cities, states, and countries in school here. They represent all classes of society from common laborers to aristocratic financiers. Some of them go through daily grinds at various jobs to help defray their expenses. Others have as much as they can use of this world's wealth. Such a situation presents a group of students who do not have the time nor the money to date the co-eds. Of course, too, the co-eds prefer to date the men with money. No one can blame them for that. Fate, it seems, has decreed that such inequalities exist; therefore we must accept our various places in society. These men who do not have the time nor money to date quite naturally resort to the well-known method of rationalization to satisfy themselves. When refused dates, they say, "Oh, well, co-eds don't rate anyway." They leave school with this same idea which originated in their own minds. It grows stronger and becomes almost real—to them. They tell friends about it. But some valiant girls brave the perils of such a place and come to Carolina.

Wise choice, girls. This is a great place. Bring on the co-eds. The more, the more.

Yellow Sheet

Puzzling me very much is the average opinion I hear expressed of The Carolina Magazine. Even among students supposedly possessed of critical literary sense I find a few who will give it a boost. And this is a great pity, I think. I believe it should be praised to the utmost.

When I first came to the University I asked a friend of mine to tell me about the publications. He omitted all mention of the Magazine. I asked him why. He made a face and said that there was only one circumstance in which he was glad to have a copy of the campus literary publication.

This year I persuaded my roommate to read a short sketch I had done. When through he asked what I was going to do with it. "I thought I'd try to get it in the Magazine," I explained. He grimaced as though I had suggested the murder of one of my professors and exclaimed melodramatically: "Oh, anything but that!"

What makes the students so slow to recognize and acknowledge—aye, even acclaim!—their own literary publication? There is a mystery here somewhere.

One of my friends, whom I had previously given credit for possessing boundless sagacity, ruined my opinion of him by his expressions on the subject. "Dammit," he said to me, "the Magazine isn't artistic, it's arty. You can't write about your normal feelings and get that printed; you've got to have Japanese princes or Greek gods in your stuff or they won't even read it. They like this stuff that you dig up out of the twelfth century—and if you can give your article a latin name you can demand the front page. It's not so much by the way you write as it is by the selection of a subject that by recognized authority is within the province of 'capital A' Art that you make the Magazine!"

Personally, I believe my friend is entirely prejudiced and entirely unfair in his attitude. But his opinion is shared by so many other students that I think it wise for someone to explain, with patience, to him and the others, exactly wherein they err.

Chapel Chaff

Stop any freshman on the campus and ask him if he thinks the things presented to him in one week of enforced chapel that really add to his sum total of knowledge or entertainment could be condensed into one meeting. I would like to take the small end of any bet at fairly largish odds that he would answer yes.

If, as I think, most University chapel-goers are of the opinion that the majority of their chapel hours are occupied by piffle which, by its time space, detracts from their total available hours of study, it would seem that this point should have at least slight weight with those higher powers who inflict chapel upon men during their first two years here.

Men, fresh in college, are humorously believed to know very little of what is good for them. This may be quite true, but even among such immature persons it must be admitted that there is at least a small amount of intelligence. The very fact that such a large number of students must be strictly dealt with in order to force them to chapel should give to the superior powers a hint that perhaps chapel is a senseless motion that should not be unless it, by evident value, proves itself worthy of existing. If it does this, compulsion will not be necessary to supply it with audiences.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Professor Lynn Clark, short story writing instructor at the University of Southern California, injects a ray of hope into the young scribes' horizon. "Pulp magazines such as Thrilling Adventure, Argosy, and Western Stories are of real value to anyone desiring to write short stories," opines Mr. Clark, "because after you have assiduously read them for a few weeks you become convinced that it is impossible for you to do any worse; and such a conviction is the first step up the ladder."

The professor has got something there, all right. He might go farther and list the worthwhile periodicals, which we believe might be counted on the fingers of anybody's right hand. That lets out about five hundred general blitherboshy rags and four or five thousand worthless novels. Clark also points out, that despite the general intellectual level of these pulp publications "a great many of their editors allow no swear words to appear in them. Plain ordinary 'damn' must be printed 'd-n.'"

We feel the same way about the matter. For instance, you never see "damn" or "hell" in our columns. When we cuss out somebody, more than likely we'll call him a "l-w d-w-n, ord-ary, h-rse's n-ck" etc. Delicacy, we feel along with our contemporaries True Story and Wild West, is the first law of manuscripts.

Recommended to the tax-paying-griper, Margaret Cullen Banning's "The Lady on the Dollar" in the October 15 Saturday Evening Post.

Dozens of letters poured into this column yesterday in condemnation of "In the Main," which printed some nasty words about the conductor of this column in Friday's paper. We'd first like to know if "In the Main" is familiar with the criminal libel laws of this state; also (contributed) in what main? Then a city editor suggested that we threaten to disclose to the campus that the columnist's nickname is "Ducky-Wucky," but we decided to play fair and forget about the matter. We columnists has got to stick together.

TAR HEEL SQUAD MEETS BULLDOGS IN ATHENS TODAY

Neither Team Has Won a Conference Game Thus Far This Season.

PROBABLE LINEUP

| Carolina | Georgia |
|-----------|----------------|
| Walker | Le. Turbyville |
| Tatum | lt. Davis |
| Kahn | lg. Brown |
| Underwood | c. McWhorter |
| Barclay | rg. Moore |
| Smith | rt. Opper |
| Cozart | re. Crenshaw |
| Woolen | qb. Sullivan |
| Daniels | lh. Mott |
| Phipps | rh. Key |
| Chandler | fb. Gilmore |

North Carolina's football team was all set this morning for the annual game with Georgia today at Sanford Field. A crowd of 20,000 persons was expected for this contest.

Neither team has won a Conference game this season, Carolina having lost to Vanderbilt and Tennessee while the Bulldogs were losing to V. P. I. and Tulane, last year's Dixie champions.

Rookies Get Places

Three rookies will make their appearance in the starting lineup for the Tar Heels. Eddie Kahn, guard, has replaced Herb Newcombe as starting player, while Charlie Woolen was promoted to first string quarterback when Stuart Chandler was shifted to the fullback post. Jim Tatum, reserve tackle, will make his debut as a starting player in the place of Harry Hodges, who is nursing an ankle injured in scrimmage early this week.

Today's game will be reproduced over the grid-graph in Memorial hall starting at 3:00 o'clock.

DEACONS BATTLE WOLFPACK TO TIE

Both Teams Unable to Score in Close Game Played Yesterday in Raleigh.

The N. C. State-Wake Forest battle in Raleigh yesterday was a rather disappointing affair for the supporters of either team. The Deacons and Wolfpack fought each other to a standstill and the second scoreless tie in the current Big Five race resulted.

The Wake Forest team, fresh from its surprising defeat of South Carolina was probably outplayed yesterday in the respect that most of the playing was done in their territory. However, the Deacons put up a great defense and in the final quarter missed scoring by inches when a State back ran Stevens down from behind after he had dashed off tackle for thirty yards.

Ray Rex Stars

The offensive play of Ray Rex, State giant fullback, was the feature of the game. Several times the big State back would drag two and three tacklers for extra yardage before falling. The tiny Zeno Wall, Wake Forest quarterback, was another outstanding light of the game. His kicking and field generaling kept the Deacons in the running.

The stubborn defense of the Wake Forest team repelled the drives of the Smithmen and many times the heavy, speedy, State backs were thrown for big losses.

Football, football everywhere, and not a game in sight with the exception of the Duke-Maryland game at Durham this afternoon. Of course State and Wake Forest provided plenty of thrills yesterday, but it's a lean football day, nevertheless, as far as the Old North State is concerned.

However, there are enough games throughout the east and south to keep the interest of the fans at a fever pitch. Classics like Pitt-Army, Tulane-Vandy, Tennessee-Alabama, North Carolina-Georgia, and Dartmouth-Pennsylvania will display plenty of football talent. It is from games like these that men come out as all-Americans.

Georgia-North Carolina

The Bulldogs, Carolina's pet jinx, are due for a most unpleasant surprise today. The Tar Heels have tired of their reputation as a scrappy outfit. They're tired of giving other teams good fights. Today, they are fighting mad, and what is more, they have approached their peak. The Tar Heels are right today and when they're right, Georgia isn't going to stop them. Carolina by two touchdowns.

Tulane-Vanderbilt

This game will ruin the title hopes of one of the teams, as two of the strongest teams along the southern front go to the post. Vandy, with men like Henderson, Roberts, Fortune, Gracey, Foster, and Leyendecker, clash against Tulane's Zimmerman, Lodrigues, Scaife, and Payne. We'll take the champions by about three touchdowns.

Tennessee-Alabama

The Crimson Tide will be out to avenge last year's 25-0 defeat against the south's greatest defensive club. "Hurricane" Cain against a great Vol line plus Feathers. With a prayer, one vote for Tennessee.

Duke-Maryland

The Old Line was a pre-season favorite in the south, but to date has lost games to Virginia and V. P. I. The writer can't see how Mason, Laney, Brownlee and Co. can be stopped by Maryland—not with all the Duke alumni looking on. Local pride overcomes us. One vote for the Blue Devils.

Pitt-Army

GRID-GRAPH TO REPORT CAROLINA-GEORGIA TILT

A telegraphic account of the Carolina-Georgia game will be given on the grid-graph in Memorial hall this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. This report will be conducted by the athletic association which promises an accurate account on the game. A large group is expected to be present due to the intense interest in the fray which has been aroused on the campus and the surrounding cities and towns.

In order to defray the expenses of operating the apparatus, a charge of twenty-five cents will be charged for admittance to the graphic description of the game.

GEORGIA'S BROKEN FIELD ARTIST

Pictured above is the stocky halfback who averaged almost twelve yards every time he carried the ball against Carolina last year. This season, Homer Key will team with Buster Mott, Sullivan, and Gilmore as his running mates in an attempt to make it four straight in as many years over the Tar Heels.

TRACK AND FIELD TEAMS USE MANY CAKE RACE STARS

Winners of Annual Run Have Performed Brilliantly on Cinder Squad.

Nuclei of the University track and cross-country teams for the past decade have been built around winners of the annual intramural cake race, the ninth page in the history of the event being scheduled to be written Friday, October 28.

A long list of brilliant names in track annals forms the roll of the winners of this feature in former days. Last year, 1931, Harry Williamson finished first; closely followed by Ed Waldrop; Hal Meade, out of school now, finished ahead of the rest of the field in 1930, with Edwin Mc-

HALF OF MATCHES IN FIRST ROUND OF TENNIS PLAY OVER

Coach Kenfield Says All First Round Matches Must Be Completed No Later Than Monday.

Half of the matches slated for the first round of the tournament for non-lettermen were played off yesterday.

Coach John Kenfield announced that all matches must be played before Monday, or the participants would have to forfeit.

The summary:

Lynch beat Rosenthal, 6-0, 6-1; Sobol beat Kasen, 6-0, 6-0; Porter beat Hymes, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5; Lot beat Stokes, 7-5, 6-1; Primrose beat M. Kalb, 6-3, 6-2; Minor beat D. Jones, 6-0, 6-1; Hoyt beat Brown, 6-1, 6-0; Burroughs beat Peed, 6-1, 6-1; Anderson beat Holley, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4; Willis beat Stoll, 6-1, 6-0; McGinn beat Morris, 6-2, 6-2; and Fisher beat Webb, 6-3, 6-4.

Matches yet to be played are as follows: Kelly and Atwood; Kaveny and Bennett; Reid and Ditch; Friedman and Craighill; Perry and Bauer; Kingdon and Odum; Reynolds and Harrison; Cohen and Traynor; Joyner and Jackson; Linker and Grier; Stein and Harper; Taylor and Smith; Cope and Cartland; and Harris and Jones.

TAR BABIES MEET CAMPBELL TEAM TO OPEN SEASON

The Carolina freshman football team will open their 1932 season this afternoon at 1:00 o'clock, meeting Campbell college on Kenan field. Coaches Howard and Sapp have been working the first year men hard for the past three weeks and have gotten them in the best possible playing shape. Snyder, with a bad ankle, is the only man on the injury list, and there is a possibility that he will be in shape to play a part of the contest. The yearling eleven has been scrimmaging the varsity all week and have shown up fairly well against the superior Collins' squad. Little is known of the Campbell team except early season reports which rate them as a strong club.

The starting Tar Baby line will probably average about 180 pounds, while the second string will also be about 180 pounds. Neither of the first two backfields will average over 160 pounds and three of the most likely starters weigh only 150 pounds.

The probable starting line-up is as follows: Brothers, left end; Evins, left tackle; Joyce, left guard; Kanner, center; Shipman, right guard; Hobgood, right tackle; Arthur, right end; Cox, quarterback; Phelps or Snyder, left halfback; Montgomery, right halfback; and McCachren, fullback. However the coaches may change their mind before the opening whistle and change the line-up. Coach Sapp made the statement that as many of the players as possible would get a chance to play and still give the frosh an even chance to get a victory.

Foisier Recovering

J. L. Foister, chief of the Chapel Hill fire department, is recovering from the injury he received at the annual state firemen's convention in Hamlet. The chief was confined to his home with a broken leg.

FRESHMAN PUGS EXPECT TO HAVE OVER SIX MEETS

Tar Baby Coach Unable to Get Line on Candidates Until Tourney Is Over.

Coach Archie T. Allen, mentor of the Carolina freshmen boxers, named yesterday the schools with which the Tar Baby pugs will have meets, although he was unable to give the dates.

The yearlings will have at least six meets. Among the colleges are the names of: University of Virginia, Virginia Military Institute, Virginia Poly, Duke, N. C. State, and Oak Ridge Military Institute.

Coach Allen said that he would not be able to get any definite line on his proteges until after the intramural boxing tourney. It has been the custom in the past to almost form the team from the finalists. The tourney this year will be run off following the Thanksgiving holidays.

Yesterday's menu consisted in punching drills, setting up exercises, some shadow boxing, and fighting in the ring.

PHI SIGMA KAPPA DOWNS THETA CHI IN GOOD CONTEST

T. E. P. Whips Phi Alpha; Question Marks and Sigma Phi Epsilon Also Win.

The intramural football program yesterday brought out several good plays and provided plenty of excitement for the handful of spectators who gathered to witness the contests.

In the first and best game of the afternoon, Phi Sigma Kappa smothered Theta Chi, 21-0. Led by Paul Kaveny, who accounted for two touchdowns, kicked two dropkicks for points after touchdowns, and passed and kicked with outstanding excellence, the Phi Sigma Kappa eleven was never in any danger of being headed. Brax George played a stellar game in the line for the winners, while Haywood Weeks and J. C. Goodman showed to best advantage for the Theta Chi team, which trailed in first downs, seven to four, at the final whistle.

T. E. P. Beats Phi Alpha

Showing marked superiority in every department of the game, Tau Epsilon Phi outclassed Phi Alpha, 19-0, in a fast and well-played contest. Eisner, Lessen, and Jacobs stood out for the winners, who held the Phi Alpha eleven to no first downs while gaining four for themselves. Bernie Friedman, freshman tennis star, showed his versatility by outplaying his teammates on

THREE SPRINTERS WILL BE MISSED BY TRACK SQUAD

Higby, Lone Monogram Speedster Remaining, to Be Aided By Gunter and Childers.

Three out of the four men who won their letters from the varsity track team in the sprints last year will not be back for this season, it was revealed yesterday by Dale Ranson, track coach.

Charlie Farmer, one of the most brilliant sprinters in the history of the school, will not be back to perform for Coach Fetzner's crew this year. Farmer holds the school records in both the century and 220. Last year he tied his record for the 100 with a time of 9.8, and set a record in the 220 of 21 flat. Farmer tallied 54 points to take top place in individual scoring.

Two More Gone

Ken Marland and Rip Slusser, both brilliant sprinters, but overshadowed by Farmer have sung their swan song. Marland chalked up 33 points to place as third highest in the individual list of scorers, while Slusser, also a grid star, scored 20 points for tenth position.

Floyd Higby, lone monogram man left over from last year in the sprint division was second in the total number of points scored with 35.

Two sophomores were outstanding on last year's freshman team. They are John Gunter and Odell Childers.

A call was issued for all boys in the upper classes who have ability in the sprints to report at Emerson field as soon as possible to get in condition for tryouts in the fall practice session.

HARRIER TIME TRIALS

The first official time tryouts of the year in cross-country are slated to be run off today in Emerson field at 11:00.

Every member of the harrier squad who is in condition will have his mettle tested today in the regulation five mile grind. Coach Dale Ranson announced that he expected some excellent showings from practically all the members of his outfit.

Manly Loses

The Question Marks nosed out Manly in the only dormitory league game on the day's program. Trailing near the end of the contest, Manly put on a spurt and took a momentary lead, but the Question Marks, with the Bean brothers leading the attack, regained their slim margin of one first down and were never headed thereafter. Cannon played well for the Manly team in its ineffectual struggle to hold the lead it gained in the closing minutes of play. The final score was six first downs to five.

Sigma Phi Epsilon won a close decision from Delta Tau Delta, 7-6, with Brown and Frazier playing best for the victors and Roullier and Ted Wright bearing the brunt of the Delta Tau Delta play. The game was a routine struggle between two evenly matched teams, with the losers having a four to two margin in the matter of first downs.

TRACK AND FIELD TEAMS USE MANY CAKE RACE STARS

Rae as a close second; other winners are as follows: Tom Watkins, 1929; no race, 1928; June Fisher, 1927; Minor Berkeley, 1926; Galen Elliott, 1925; Harry Thatch, 1924; and Luther Byrd, 1923.

Team winners have always come from either dormitories or other lodging houses. In 1931 the Best House club installed themselves as team winners with an outfit composed of Wal-drop, Eskola, Brisk, and Patrick. The Tar Heel club harriers were the team victors in 1930. These boys also boasted of the individual winner from their ranks, Hal Meade.

Many brilliant records have later been chalked up by cake race winners. Perhaps the most outstanding of them all is Galen Elliott, who triumphed in the intramural event in 1925. Elliott twice was the Southern Conference cross-country individual champion. He negotiated the five mile course in 26:26 for the southern record on the five mile Chapel Hill track.

Elliott was an all-American miler in 1926, and was the champion of the Southern Conference for three consecutive years in the mile event and at present holds the record with a time of 4:21.2. Elliott was a member of the team with June Fisher, Hoyt Pritchard, and Minor Berkeley which was victorious in the annual Penn relays over a four mile course.

Minor Berkeley, winner in 1926, now holds the University record in the 880 with a time of 1:56.5, a record which was established in 1928 at Princeton university after doing the mile in 4:21. He beat Paul Rekers of Penn State in the mile here at Chapel Hill in the Carolina-Penn State dual meet of 1928. Rekers was one of the outstanding tracksters of all time.

June Fisher, winner in 1927, was also a member of the championship team which clinched the Penn Relays. He was third to the Southern Conference cross-country champion in the fall of 1927, the same autumn that he won the cake race. The following spring found him a member of the Penn Relay championship club.

The Era of Muckrakers is "a careful study of the literature of exposure which began in the eighties, reached its highest development in the first decade of the twentieth century," and is now at the general level reached just before the World War period. C. C. Regier, the author, contends that political and social conditions are as bad today as they were thirty years ago. He thinks that there is a great field for literature of this sort today.

PLAYMAKERS' SEASON TICKET SALE INCREASES

Increased interest in the work done by the Carolina Playmakers has resulted in increased ticket sales this year. One salesman who has the Durham territory for the second year has already sold four times as many season tickets to the Playmakers' presentations as he did in 1931. The national prominence that the Playmakers are attaining is a strong contributing factor to their popularity.

SORORITY RUSHING WILL END MONDAY AFTERNOON

Rushing by the two sororities, Pi Beta Phi and Chi Omega, will close tonight at 11:00 o'clock. A period of silence will be observed between sorority and non-sorority members until the bids are delivered on Monday. The rushees have been entertained daily for the past week, at teas, buffet suppers, bridge and theatre parties.

Comprehensive Dates

The dates for the comprehensive examinations to be taken by the seniors in the college of liberal arts and the school of commerce are: for the fall quarter, December 3; for the winter quarter, February 18; for the spring quarter, May 6. These examinations are given only once each quarter but may be taken at any one of the three dates.

PRESIDENT F. P. GRAHAM CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

Yesterday, October 14, was the birthday of Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina. It is a curious coincidence that the University was founded and three of its presidents were born in days of mid-October. On October 12, 1793, the cornerstone of Old East was laid. George T. Winston was born on October 12, 1852, in Windsor. Edward K. Graham was born in Charlotte, October 11, 1876, and Frank P. Graham was born in Fayetteville, October 14, 1886.

NUMBER 21

EDITORIAL STAFF OF YACKETY YACK TO MEET MONDAY

Appointments Announced Yesterday; New Men Asked to Meeting Tomorrow.

Editorial work on the coming issue of the Yackety Yack will be inaugurated Monday at 2:00 o'clock when the old members of the staff will have their first meeting. Any new men desirous of trying out for positions on the staff should come to the office at 3:00 o'clock the same afternoon.

The work of the annual is conducted chiefly by upperclassmen, but there are several openings for freshmen who would be interested in doing routine work. The foremost members of the staff each year have their pictures in the Yackety Yack section of the book. In addition to this, those men worthy of the award receive at the end of the year a handsome gold key, which is thought by many to be the most beautiful award given by any organization on the campus.

The staff appointments made public yesterday by editor Nutt Parsley follow:

Administrative Advisory Board—J. Maryon Saunders, Marion Alexander, William Couch, and Mayne Albright.

Student Advisory Board—Nutt Parsley, John Preston, Robert W. Barnett, Otto S. Stenreich.

Managing Editor—Alex Andrews.

Division Heads—seniors, Bill Pratt; other classes, Bob Drane; activities, Bob Woerner; athletics, Jack Bessen, Morrie Long, Claiborn Carr, Tom Broughton; fraternities, Howard Manning; dance, Joe Webb; kaleidoscope, E. A. Minor.

Organization Manager—Eben Alexander.

Art Staff—W. Vass Shepherd, Mary Dirnberger, Closs Peace.

NELSON KENNEDY WILL INAUGURATE VESPERS SUNDAY

Music Department Plans to Present Guest Organists in Concerts Here.

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy of the music department will resume his vesper concerts for this year next Sunday afternoon, October 23, at 4:00 o'clock with a program of organ music in Hill music auditorium.

These recitals, given once a month throughout the scholastic year, are considered among the highlights of the local musical events of the season. In the past they have drawn large audiences from Chapel Hill and nearby towns.

The music department of the University, which has charge of these concerts, is considering a plan of inviting a number of guest organists during the year to play in exchange for concerts given by Professor Kennedy.

The public is invited to these concerts and no charge is made for admission.

Phi Mu Alpha Meeting

The local chapter of Phi Mu Alpha, national music fraternity, will gather in the choral room of Hill hall this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

STUDENTS ROOMING IN TOWN TO HAVE SMOKER

All students living in town will elect officers to the Union Forum at Graham Memorial tomorrow night at 9:30 o'clock. This is to be one of the series of smokers which have been convening in Graham Memorial for the past several weeks. As usual, facilities of the game room will be open to all present and refreshments will be served.

The co-eds will elect their officers through the woman's association Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

MRS. PATTERSON WINNER OF FIRST PRIZE IN CONTEST

Second Place in Contest Won By Mrs. George Bason; Others Announced.

Over $50,000 was spent in Chapel Hill from September 19 to October 14 as shown by the returns in the Chapel Hill greater prosperity contest. Mrs. Fred Patterson won the free trip to New York, the first prize, with 881,900 votes. The number of votes cast totaled 4,957,000.

Mrs. George Bason, who polled 800,500 votes, won the second prize, a table lamp, given by the University Consolidated Service Plants, and Miss Elizabeth Patterson, who followed with 710,100 votes received the third prize, a pair of shoes, donated by Andrews-Henninger company.

Those winning other prizes were: Charles P. Erickson, 648,400 votes, a vest pocket Kodak, given by Foister Photo company; Paul Robertson, 551,600 votes, a card case, given by Alfred Williams company; Mrs. Bruce Strowd, 255,000 votes, a basket of groceries, given by the Food Mart; Madeline Thompson, 168,100 votes, a sweater, given by Stetson D.; Mrs. W. B. Neal, 158,800 votes, a roaster, given by W. C. Lyon Hardware company; Marvin E. Woodward, 90,300 votes, a five dollar meal ticket, given by Gooch Bros. Cafe; Mrs. A. C. Howell, 78,500 votes, a basket of groceries, given by Model Market; Bonnie Merritt, 65,200 votes, car washed and polished, given by University Service Station; Mrs. T. S. Graves, 58,500, one quart milk for a month, given by Durham Road Dairy.

Mrs. Lawrence Flinn, 57,200, a shirt, given by Lipman's; Jean E. Rose, 46,200, a book pressing club tickets, given by O'Kelly Dry Cleaners; Mrs. J. D. Blake, 38,900 votes, one month show pass, given by Carolina theatre; W. M. Adams, 37,000 votes, pair shoes half-soled, given by Lacock's shoe shop; Mrs. T. S. McCorkle, 34,700 votes, 100 calling cards, given by the University printery; Anne Bagby, 29,500 votes, one year's subscription to the Chapel Hill Weekly; Mrs. T. E. Hinson, 22,900 votes, one quart milk for a month, given by Durham Dairy Products, and Odis Pendergraft, 17,400 votes, smoking stand, given by Berman's department store.

Change in Cast

One change has been made in the tentative cast of Uncle Tom's Cabin, first Playmaker production of the year. Bob Proctor will take the part of the "waiter" instead of Bernard B. Perry.

FIVE ATTORNEYS TO CONTEST SUIT FOR UNIVERSITY

Florida East Coast Railway Attempting to Secure Part of Bingham Bequest.

The University of North Carolina has made answer to the suit brought by the receivers of the Florida East Coast Railway, in the courts of New York, to obtain the use of the Kenan fund from which the University receives annually $75,000 as part of professor's salaries. The University's attorneys are Battle, Levy, Van Tine, and Fowler, associated with Dennis G. Brummitt, attorney general of North Carolina.

Scott M. Loftin, receiver of the railway, claims that Mrs. Mary Lily (Flagler) Bingham included in her will a provision for the support of the railway out of the residue of the estate. However, the bequest to the University was made specifically in a part of the will preceding the directions as to the use of the residue.

The substance of the University's contention is that the bequest to it by Mrs. Bingham is payable without any restriction or impairment, and that the trustees have no right to devote any of this bequest to the purposes of the railway.

The trustees are William R. Kenan, Jr., and Lawrence C. Haines. With them, as defendants, are Louise Clisby Wise Francis, the University, the Florida East Coast Hotel Company, Jessie Kenan Wise, and Sarah Graham Kenan.

Vanderbilt Founded In 1872 By Southern Methodist Church

Nashville Institution Is One of Few Major Schools in South That Is Not a State University; Was Named Central College Until Endowment by Cornelius Vanderbilt.

The Vanderbilt tradition is one of gentility and liberalism. It is unique among southern universities in that it has preserved the aristocratic air of the old south and blended with it the progressiveness that has marked southern education in the last three decades.

Being a privately endowed school, Vanderbilt has enjoyed the advantage of selecting its student body. It is one of the few major schools in the south that is not a state university. Thus, it has been able to set up qualifications other than a mere high school certificate. In this way the school has come to represent wealth and culture in this section of the country.

Founded in 1872

Like Duke University, Vanderbilt was conceived along lines different from those it operates on today. It was founded in 1872 as Central University, closely affiliated with the Methodist church. One year later, however, Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt of New York donated $500,000 to the school, which then changed its name to that it now bears. This gift was subsequently increased to $1,000,000 and was the second in a long line of contributions from the Vanderbilt family.

At the time of its founding, the university was located on the outskirts of Nashville, Tennessee. However, the city has so expanded that it is now situated two or three miles inside of Nashville. The campus is seventy-six acres in extent and noted throughout the south for its beauty. Although a com-

GRAIL WILL GIVE DANCE IN TIN CAN HOMECOMING DAY

Jelly Leftwich Signed to Play for Dance After Carolina-Georgia Tech Game Saturday.

With the Homecoming Day classic between Carolina and Georgia Tech leading the list of social events for the coming week-end, the Order of the Grail announces that Jelly Leftwich has been signed to play for the dance to be held in the Tin Can Saturday night from 9:00 to 12:00.

This will be the first of two Grail dances to be staged in the Tin Can, and with Jelly Leftwich playing the dance should be one of the best of the fall quarter. Several fraternities are sponsoring alumni entertainments, and a large number of out-of-town girls are expected to be here for the game and the dance.

The price of admission to the Grail dances has been raised ten cents a ticket in order to pay the federal amusement tax. This new price of $1.10 goes into effect next Saturday.

STUDENT NOTES DUE DURING COMING WEEK

Those students who were allowed the privilege of signing notes for the amount of fees for which they could not pay cash at the time of registration are notified that payment of these notes is to be made to the Treasurer, Business Office, South Building. Time may be saved by sending check through the mail.

LIBRARY SCHOOL OFFERS THREE TYPES OF COURSES

Three series of courses are offered in the University's new school of library science, training students for work in the following three fields: elementary and high school libraries, city and county public libraries, college and university libraries. The location of the school is the University library and is comprised of laboratory and classrooms.

The new school was established with the aid of a grant from the Carnegie corporation.

CHILD WELFARE TOPIC OF SPEECH BY E. R. GROVES

University Professor Addresses Missouri Teachers on Duties of Society to Children.

"The principles of fair dealing with the child are exactly the same as those adults are expected to follow in their ordinary social relationships," Dr. Ernest R. Groves, research professor of sociology in the institute for research in social science of the University, told delegates to the Missouri state meeting of the Parent-Teacher association in an address at Hannibal, Mo., yesterday.

"Nothing in the nineteenth century has proven more important than its beginning of the science of the child," he said. "Already we have passed away from the idea that good parenthood is skill merely in dealing with various isolated problems that arise as the child develops and are beginning to see that wholesome child training must be a strategy that carries on the therapeutic program which is now commonplace in dealing with the physical needs of the child."

"It helps the parent maintain a rational procedure in dealing with the child," Dr. Groves asserted, "if he keeps in mind that the child, like himself, is a person. He is not growing toward a personality, he is not suddenly going to become in some future period a person. He is already one."

"No happening in the life of any individual has so great significance as an influence upon the personality as does the experience, many times repeated, that comes to the child upon finding his egoistic desires blocked by environmental circumstances," Dr. Groves affirmed. "It is the function of the parent to lead the child adroitly through the recoil that surely comes to him when he finds himself in a situation that resists the satisfaction of his desires."

"Y" Cabinets To Have Interesting Meetings

The three Y. M. C. A. cabinets will convene tomorrow night in the "Y" at their new time of 7:00 o'clock.

All three cabinets have interesting program on the tap, and all members are expected to attend.

Ed Lanier, adviser to the freshman friendship council announced that that group would have one of the best programs of the year, tentative arrangements having been made with a colored quartet. Lanier announced also that a speaker on a subject of vital interest to all students has been secured.

SALON ENSEMBLE TO GIVE CONCERT THIS AFTERNOON

Work of Orchestra, Directed by Thor Johnson, Highly Praised By Lamar Stringfield.

For the first time in the history of music in America, an art composition will be presented on the same program with the folk ballad from which it originated. This afternoon, at 4:00 o'clock, the Carolina Salon Ensemble, Thor Johnson directing, will present a concert in the Forest theatre under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers and the Carolina Institute of Folk Music.

Mrs. J. E. Jones of Cary will sing the old folk ballad, Pretty Polly, upon which After Midnight, an original composition of Lamar Stringfield, is based. The offering of Stringfield's composition by the Salon Ensemble will be the initial presentation of the piece.

"The work being done by Thor Johnson and the Carolina Salon Ensemble," Stringfield stated, "represents one of the finest and most important activities in the musical field in the country. The work of this student group is being used as a model by which other universities of the country can develop the best of American music and present it to students and the public by first-class ensemble groups. Special mention of this fact was made by the president of the National Federation of Music Clubs this week at the National Board meeting in New Orleans."

The orchestra, which played twenty-three concerts in various parts of the state last year, is composed of twenty selected musicians from the student body.

There will be a ten-cent admission charge. In case of adverse weather conditions the concert will be presented in the Playmakers theatre.

DAILY TAR HEEL CONTINUES DRIVE FOR SUBSCRIBERS

Passes to Carolina Theatre Will Be Awarded for New Subscriptions in Campaign.

Students will have the opportunity to win theatre passes again this week.

This is the result of the success of THE DAILY TAR HEEL campaign for subscriptions which was conducted last week. The business department of the paper made arrangements yesterday with E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina, through whose courtesy the passes are awarded, to continue the drive.

It is felt that not everybody in Chapel Hill who wishes to subscribe to the paper has been reached and the contest is continued to allow everybody to be reached.

For every new subscription to THE DAILY TAR HEEL procured in Chapel Hill, two passes are awarded which entitle the winner to attend two of the feature attractions at the Carolina theatre this week.

The cost of the subscription is $1.50 for three months or $4.00 for a year. In either case, passes valued at sixty cents will be the premium offered as a reward to the canvassers.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publications Union Board of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where it is printed daily except Mondays, and the Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Spring Holidays. Entered as second class matter at the post office of Chapel Hill, N. C. under act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price, $4.00 for the college year.

Offices on the second floor of the Graham Memorial Building.

Mighty Little Cogs

The cogs of the prosperity machine, well oiled by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the "big boys", now rotate slowly for the forgotten man. Key banks for dispensing millions on applications for loans on home mortgages are to be set up this week-end in twelve centers.

Cambridge, Mass., Newark, N. J., Pittsburg, Winston-Salem, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Evansville, Ill., Des Moines, Little Rock, Ark., Topeka, Kan., Portland, Ore., and Los Angeles become the focal points of national interest as a capitalization of more than $134,000,000 pours into the new banks in each city. The capitalization will tap a reservoir of more than one billion five hundred millions of dollars of frozen home mortgages and bring relief to the harassed home owner.

At last economical relief is getting somewhere. Huge loans to railway companies, construction projects and billion dollar corporations are flowing into the more indirect channels as far as the little man is concerned. Eventually, these groups will find their business stable, thanks to government aid, but not for a time can it reach a position where the wage earner may return to his erstwhile scale of 1929 luxury, which permitted him to meet the mortgages, keep pace with the payments on the new car, and put a piece away for the little dream cottage out in the suburbs. Bridled with debts and mortgages and not certain from whence he would derive the funds to meet his obligations, he may now see his way clear to exact from his government, the due of the man we can't forget.—D.C.S.

Lo the Poor Farmer

Franklin D. Roosevelt in a recent political address said, "This nation cannot endure half 'boom,' half 'broke.'" In this speech he outlined his plans for the "relief" of the farmer of staple crops such as cotton, wheat, corn and tobacco. His proposed policy is sound enough in regard to the first three mentioned crops, but in aiding the tobacco grower no ordinary scheme such as a protective tariff will do any good, inasmuch as tobacco is bought and sold in a closed rather than in a competitive market. The laws of supply and demand operate but poorly in the tobacco market. The ten or twelve large buyers, working together to keep the price as low as possible, are in a position to control the market when bidding for a product offered by so many thousands of sellers. The tobacco farmer at the present time gets so little return on his crop that it is with difficulty that he can purchase supplies for the following season's growth. In many instances even this is impossible and many farmers and their dependents are starving to death for want of the bare necessities of life. Certainly, so large a group as this (they number well over a million, i.e., farmers and families), with its buying power reduced to a negligible quantity, is a definite obstacle in the way of return to universal prosperity—and no provision at all is being made for them. Roosevelt, in spite of all his high promises and fine generalities for the assistance of the farmer, has made no specific suggestions for the relief of the tobacco grower. Indeed, no nation can endure with a large part of its population on the verge, if not actually in, a state of inanition. The poverty of this large a group, with its consequent lack of purchasing power, is felt, and will continue to be felt, by every industry and individual in this country.

The situation is a difficult one. There is enough tobacco owned by the large companies to fill our present consumption needs for the next six years. Inasmuch as tobacco must be aged and cured for only three years before it is marketable in the form of cigarettes, the large companies, if they wished, could refuse to purchase any more of the weed for at least three years without inconveniencing themselves in the slightest. With this unuttered threat over the head of the farmer the manufacturers are in a position to dictate prices. The situation calls for more than the ordinary remedies of "cooperative buying" or a protective tariff. Special federal legislation designed to force the manufacturers to pay decent prices is the only thing that would help the farmers' condition. The manufacturers can well afford to pay these higher prices what with tremendously lowered costs of production and sales and retail prices holding up to the 1928 standards.

The situation is not irremediable. All that it needs it a little clear-thinking and quick action from a few of our country's leaders. Let's see what you can do about it, Roosevelt.—M.K.K.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

THE MARCH OF DEMOCRACY, by James Truslow Adams, author of The Epic of America.

Volume I of this very comprehensive study has just arrived from Scribner's. The second and last will be published some time in February. In this history even more stress is given to changing economic, social, and ideological backgrounds.

And so it behoves the student of literature and drama, as well as the historian, to look diligently through Mr. Adams' book. For instance on page 392 he will find the facsimile of a playbill for Uncle Tom's Cabin, a remarkable performance which included a—a spirit of celestial light in the abode of bliss eternal."

"Grand Allegorical Tableaux of EVA IN HEAVEN"

We smile now, in a few weeks we shall have the opportunity to laugh out loud, but in its day this piece of writing was taken mighty seriously. Concerning which we quote Mr. Adams:

"In 1852 there appeared, first in magazine form and then in a book one of the most famous appeals made in the entire history of literature, Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin. It aroused such a storm of emotion and anger as has no other book in the annals of America, and probably in the world. Three hundred thousand copies were sold the first year and the work was translated into twenty foreign languages. The book had slight literary merit, and was crude both in psychology and style.

"Continuing to sell in large quantities and dramatized for the stage with phenomenal runs, its influence was cumulative year after year. Its characters became as living in the ordinary Northern household as any in real life, and the events of the next decade must be considered with the book as a background. Uncle Tom and Little Eva worked steadily in the minds of ordinary people against the merchants and statesmen who were doing their best to keep slavery out of the national sight."

The March of Democracy is bound in a new processed cloth texture which is unaffected by moisture. Consequently it can be washed, thus a thing of beauty such as its delicate cream covering, lined in red, and lettered in gold can well be a joy forever.

A letter from a national travel club with an imposing letterhead runs something like this: Dear Fellow Traveler:

Join our travel club (membership fees are only $4) and see the world. We offer you reduced rates in selected hotels and shops both in this country and abroad.

Join our travel club and automatically acquire a $2,000 accident insurance policy, increasing in ten years to $4,000. (All this for a yearly membership fee of $4.)

Join our travel club and receive absolutely free one year's subscription to the official literary organ of this organization. (At 35c a copy you would pay more than $4 for this magazine alone.)

Join our travel club and participate in all club dinners at which eminent explorers and travelers are speakers. (Is the expense of these grandiose affairs included in the $4 membership fee?)

It was gloomy William Hazlitt (1778-1830) who wrote that "one of the pleasantest things in the world is going a journey; but I like to go by myself." And it was Lawrence Sterne (1713-1768), that sentimental journeyer through France and Italy, who gave three reasons for traveling: infirmity of body, imbecility of the mind, or inevitable necessity. He reduced the whole circle of travelers to the following list of adjectives: idle, inquisitive, lying, proud, vain, and splenetic; then follow: the travelers of necessity, the delinquent and felonious traveler, the unfortunate and innocent traveler, the simple traveler, and last of all (if you please) the sentimental traveler (meaning thereby myself).

It matters not whether you are a patron of Cook's Tours or whether, like Rockwell Kent, you prefer to steer your course alone N by E, you are inadequately prepared to traverse this terrestrial globe unless you have learned from Paul Morand's Le Voyage (silhouettes by Ugo Mochi) when shirt sleeves are permissible and when they aren't. He might be termed the philosophic traveler: "No voyage is so beautiful as those you dream about, without the money to execute them . . . A voyage is an uncomfortable thing. Love is a superhuman thing. To try to combine the two means to invite trouble . . . He who goes will be torn to pieces, but he who stays will fall to pieces . . . I hope that, after my death, they make a suitcase out of my skin . . . Passions are journeys of the heart . . . To travel is the most pleasant, the most impractical and the most expensive way of educating oneself. That is why the English have made a specialty of it . . . Hazard is never bad company . . . Only short journeys are expensive . . . To praise one's corner of the world: viewpoint of cadavers . . . Today it no longer belittles someone to say of him: He has been a rolling stone . . . To read, to write, is duty; to travel is power . . . If you return, has the world grown smaller or have you grown bigger? . . . To have seen many countries means to mature young, one of the secrets of happiness."

"Depression" Coaching

There was a time when football games were won with men and strategy in battles of brawn on the gridiron itself. Then, coincidental with the popularization of the sport as the smart topic for discussion at debutante tea parties, the entire conception of how games are won, and where, suffered a change. Sports writers, tired of pounding out daily reports on the condition of the star halfback's ingrown nail, found a new element to drel about, ballyhooed it into a popularity far outweighing its worth, and cleverly dubbed it "psychology." "Underdog" immediately took on a new significance in the repertoire of the sporting scribe as a term describing the winner of any contest.

The euphony of a comparatively new scientific term with an "ology" on the end of it held a certain fascination for the hoi polloi, thereby increasing the popularity of metropolitan sports pages. The public, the newspapers, and the sports writers were having their fun, and the merry result held no real harm.

No damage was done, that is, until a number of major coaches began to take it all to heart and, through some unhappy mental process, conceived the idea that half of every battle is won in print before ever a cleat has dug into the turf. Establish your team as the underdog, they now apparently believe, and it's all over but the post-game victory song.

Perhaps occasionally an underdog, the team that ordinarily would be the weaker, has upset its rival because that rival was over-confident. This underdog has fought harder because it has known that fight alone could win, that in man-power and strategy it was definitely the weaker. "Psychology," if you will, of this sort is genuine, however seldom it wins a ball game.

But it is the coach who tells his team it has hardly a chance when he knows that it has a good chance, who days before a game weeps to the press and the public that the contest is already as good as lost, the coach who drums on the subject so continually that he actually develops in his own men a defeatist attitude—that is the coach who is working to death "psychology," as well as his chances for championships.—Stanford Daily.

Student Bible Class Meets For Discussion

The student Bible class of the Presbyterian church conducted its first social gathering Thursday night in the church parlors. About thirty boys and girls were there and joined together in several games, refreshments and popular songs.

This group of students, led by W. J. McKee, have regular discussions every Sunday morning during the Sunday school hour. Dr. McKee was educational missionary for many years in India and he brings his experience and knowledge into the class.

The class not only has its open discussions on Sunday mornings but all during the school year they sponsor different forms of entertainment for the group.

Daily Paper Seeks Platform Writers

U-M-M-M! STRAWBERRY!

Beginning today and continuing through Wednesday, THE DAILY TAR HEEL in cooperation with the Carolina theatre is sponsoring another contest, this time awarding guest theatre tickets to the six persons writing the best comical platforms for "The Phantom President." Fifteen tickets will be given, three guest tickets for each of the first three best platforms, and two guest tickets for each of the second three best platforms.

Such platforms as "Strawberry-flavored mucilage on postage stamps," "Short skirts for the Statue of Liberty," "Two dimes for a nickel," "Bigger thumb-tacks and smaller income tax," are the types that will be given consideration.

Those persons desiring to take part in this contest will mail their platforms to the Contest Editor, Box 672, or bring them to the TAR HEEL office before 3:00 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, October 19.

"Snuzzle" Durante will be shown in "The Phantom President" at the Carolina theatre Thursday, October 20.

cases have come from cultured backgrounds and seek enhancement of their knowledge. The English department is especially well known, having as its head Professor Edwin Mims, whose volume The Advancing South, a study of social conditions in this section, aroused considerable controversial comment when it was published a few years ago.

The spirit of modernism on the Nashville campus was manifested in recent years by the rise of a number of poets known as the "Fugitive Group." Headed by John C. Ransom and Donald Davidson, of the Vanderbilt English department, this literary movement made a distinct contribution to the advancement of modern American verse.

Fraternities Social Leaders

The social life of the school is bound up in its fraternities. Virtually the entire student body belongs to social orders, a fact which eliminates class distinction so often prominent in state institutions. While Vanderbilt encourages self-help students, there are but few of them on the campus.

A traditional period of dances begins at Vanderbilt shortly after the Christmas vacation and continues through the balance of the school year. These are highly formal affairs given by the fraternities, and often two or three will occur in the same week. The outstanding public dance is known as the George Washington ball, inaugurated seven years ago. It is a costume affair to which the girls come dressed as Martha Washington, while their escorts are expected to don colonial vesture.

Carolina Battles Georgia To 6-6 Deadlock

Tar Heels Score On Pass In Fourth Quarter To Tie Bulldogs In Close Game

Phipps Passes to Lassiter Who Rumps Thirty-Five Yards To Score.

GEORGIA SCORES ON RUN

Grant Runs Twenty-Eight Yards On Fake Lateral Pass for Bulldog Tally.

Fighting back in the second half after Georgia had taken a 6-0 lead in the second quarter, and aided by a lucky bounce on a pass, the Tar Heels pushed over a touchdown in the closing minutes of yesterday's game to tie the Bulldogs at 6-6 and break the Georgians' streak of three wins over Carolina in the last three years.

The game was played at Athens, a continuous drizzle which set in before the game opened making fumbles frequent and halting the passing of the two teams.

Carolina's touchdown came with less than five minutes to play. The drive was started on the Heels' 33-yard line, where Woollen was stopped after returning Sullivan's punt three yards. Burnett hit the line for two yards, and Chandler took the ball around end for six more.

At this point, Georgia took time out, and Lassiter replaced Chandler at fullback, Chapman taking Key's place in the Georgia backfield. The rest and the substitution did the Bulldogs no good, for on the first play after work was resumed, Phipps threw the pass resulting in a tie score.

Turbyville Helps Lassiter

It cannot be said that Providence was not with Carolina from the time Phipps got the ball from Underwood, until the time it nestled in the arms of Lassiter, who was on the Georgia 35-yard line. Turbyville, Georgia end, grabbed at the ball, and deflected it over to Lassiter, who wheeled and, with an open field ahead, dashed across the goal.

On the attempted conversion, Sullivan, Bulldog quarterback, leaped in and blocked Lassiter's kick.

The Bulldogs, by means of a fake lateral, scored in the second period Grant taking the ball over on a 28-yard run. Georgia's touchdown was likewise made on the first play after a time out.

Grant had backed the Tar Heels to their own 10-yard line by a beautiful punt from mid-field. Phipps lost two at the line, and Woollen's punt went out of bounds on Carolina's 28-yard line, the Heels taking time out.

On the first play after time out, Grant took the ball over the Carolina goal. Gilmore's attempted kick failed.

FOURTEEN TEAMS ARE UNDEFEATED IN GRID CONTESTS

Ten Fraternity and Four Dormitory Elevens Survive Second Week's Play.

Fourteen teams, ten of them in the fraternity league, remained undefeated at the close of the second week's play in the intramural tag football program. Eight fraternity outfits had two victories each, while two others had won the only games which they played. Three of the undefeated dormitory race elevens had won two games, while the fourth had emerged victorious in its only encounter to date.

Leading the fraternity chase were Beta Theta Pi, Chi Psi, Lambda Chi Alpha, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Nu, Tau Epsilon Phi, Theta Kappa Nu, and Zeta Psi, with two wins apiece, and Alpha Tau Omega and Delta Kappa Epsilon with one victory each. Aycock, Grimes, and Lewis had two conquests each in the dormitory loop, while Mangum had won one game.

Sigma Nu, 1931 winner in the fraternity chase, showed that it is in line for another flag by following up its 38-0 victory over Zeta Beta Tau last week with a 52-0 conquest of Pi Kappa Phi.

Beta Theta Pi, another prominent contender for the flag, gained its second victory of the season at the expense of Zeta Beta Tau, 20-0. After being held to a 2-2 tie in first downs in the first half, the Betas unleashed a strong running and passing attack to score three touchdowns.

Tau Epsilon Phi outclassed Phi Alpha, 19-0, in one of the best games of the week. The T. E. P. attacked effectively, while the winners' defense held the Phi Alpha eleven to no first downs throughout the contest.

In other feature games of the week Chi Psi nosed out Kappa Alpha, 4-2, in first downs, S. A. E. downed Phi Delta Theta, 6-0, and Delta Kappa Epsilon conquered Phi Kappa Sigma, 13-2.

Grimes came through its game with Carr by the narrow margin of one first down to keep its record clean, and Aycock's excellent line play was a factor in that team's 18-0 conquest of Swain Hall.

DUKE PASSES TO ONE-SIDED WIN OVER MARYLAND

Blue Devils Outclass Old Liners Before Homecoming Day Crowd, 34-0.

A fast Duke football team flashing a brilliant passing attack, outplayed the University of Maryland, 34-0, yesterday in Duke stadium. About 10,000 persons saw the contest, which was the Blue Devils' Homecoming classic.

The Old Line eleven, although outweighing the Durham lads, was completely outclassed. Not once did the Maryland squad threaten to score, and in addition, most of the game was played in the visitor's territory. Duke's passing game was at its height yesterday, four of the Devils' five touchdowns resulting from the aerial route. The other came as a result of a faked pass which sucked in the Maryland line, and Nick Laney carrying the ball, traversed thirty-four yards to be run out of bounds on Maryland's one yard line. Cox carried the ball over on the next play.

The game had only lasted a few minutes when Duke scored. After an exchange of punts, the Devils were in possession of the ball on Maryland's thirty yard marker. Laney faded back and heaved a pass to Wentz who caught it on the ten yard line and ran the remaining distance for the first score. Ershler converted the extra point with a placement kick.

No further scoring was done by either team until the third period when the Devils tallied twice, the first score coming as a result of Laney's run. Late in the same period, Rossiter passed from Maryland's twenty-eight yard line over the goal to Abbott.

The fourth quarter saw the Devils count two more touchdowns. Passes from Cox to Mason and Rogers advanced the ball from Maryland's forty yard line to the six, from where Cox carried the ball over the last stripe after three tries at the Old Line center. Another long pass, Abbott to James, advanced the ball to the visitor's eight yard line. Mason on two reverse plays carried the ball over for Duke's last score.

Scoring by periods:

Duke 7 0 14 13—34

Scoring touchdowns: Wentz, Cox (2), Abbott, Mason.

Points after touchdown: Ershler, Cox, Abbott (2).

TECH-CAROLINA GAMES ALWAYS HARD FIGHTS

The Carolina-Georgia Tech rivalry, which will be revived here Saturday, has produced some of the leading and most exciting games in the south for the past five years, including the 6-6 and the 19-19 ties of the last two years.

Branch, Magner and company toppled the Tornado from its national throne in 1929 by a score of 18-7, and the year before Tech's national champions won 20-7, but had a tough time doing it. The Tar Heels rushed the first Tech team off its feet after the Tornado second team had rolled up enough points to win. Tech's southern champions of 1927 also beat the Tar Heels, but Morgan Blake called it the "hardest 13-0 game ever played on any field."

STAR AGAINST GEORGIA BULLDOGS

FOUR UNDEFEATED TEAMS WILL MEET

Intramural Season Enters Third Week With Many Hard Games Scheduled.

Four games involving undefeated teams are scheduled for next week in the intramural tag football program released by Herman Schnell, director of intramural athletics.

Monday, Sigma Nu will meet its third rival of the season in Theta Kappa Nu. Both teams have handily won their games to date, and a fight to the finish is in the cards. Sigma Nu, by a bad break in the schedule, must play again Tuesday afternoon, this time against Tau Epsilon Phi. If it comes through both these contests with its record still unscathed, Sigma Nu will have established itself as a major contender for the fraternity championship.

S. A. E. and A. T. O. hook up Wednesday, while Thursday Mangum meets Grimes in a game which will eliminate one from the list of undefeated dormitory outfits.

The complete schedule follows:

Monday

4:00 p. m.—(1) Old East vs. Lewis.

5:00 p. m.—(1) Theta Kappa Nu vs. Sigma Nu; (2) Best House vs. Independents; (3) Pi Kappa Phi vs. Beta Theta Pi.

Tuesday

4:00 p. m.—(1) Chi Psi vs. Sigma Phi Epsilon.

5:00 p. m.—(1) Aycock vs. Old West; (2) Sigma Nu vs. Tau Epsilon Phi; (3) Zeta Beta Tau vs. Phi Sigma Kappa.

Wednesday

4:00 p. m.—(1) Phi Gamma Delta vs. Kappa Alpha; (2) Sigma Alpha Epsilon vs. Alpha Tau Omega.

McCACHREN AND SNYDER STAR AS TAR BABIES WIN

Frosh Look Impressive in First Start, Scoring Three Times Against Campbell.

FOUR FULL TEAMS PLAY

Using four different teams, Carolina's freshman football team opened its 1932 season with an impressive 18 to 0 victory over Campbell college.

The frosh backs were able to make short gains on nearly every play attempted, but were unable to break away for any long gains on line plays as a result of poor blocking in open field. However two of the yearling's touchdowns were the results of long runs.

Carolina's First Score

Carolina's first marker was made in the first quarter. Campbell received and after the Tar Babies had made a first down and had punted to Campbell's twenty yard line, the visitors attempted a pass which was intercepted by McCachren on the thirty-five yard line. McCachren ran the ball back to the one yard line behind beautiful interference. Montgomery ran the ball over for the score on the first play attempted.

Sutton counted for the second touchdown on probably the best run of the afternoon. Early in the second period Nelson shot a pass to Montgomery who carried the ball to the loser's five yard line. Here Campbell got possession of the ball on a fumble. The visitors then punted out the ball landing on the thirty yard line. Sutton scooped the ball up and ran straight for the sidelines. The fullback cut at the outside line and ran down it to the goal.

The final marker came early in the third quarter. Arthur, frosh end got off a beautiful kickoff which carried to Campbell's five yard line. After some running plays failed the visitors punted to mid-field. Phelps took the ball four yards on each of two plays. Phelps then made twenty-five yards on two more plays carrying the ball to the thirteen yard line. On the next play Phelps had to be removed from the game when he landed on his head after being tackled by a Campbell player. On fourth down Snyder passed from the six yard line to Montgomery who counted his second touchdown of the contest.

CAROLINA BILLS SEVEN FEATURES FOR THIS WEEK

Midnight Show Starring Fifi D'Orsay Will Be Offered by Local Theatre Friday.

A seven bill program including such attractions as "Mr. Robinson Crusoe" starring Douglas Fairbanks, and "The Phantom President" featuring Claudette Colbert and Jimmy Durante, with a mid-night showing of Fifi D'Orsay in "The Girl from Calgary," begins Monday at the Carolina theatre with the production "Night After Night." George Raft, Constance Cummings, and Wynne Gibson have the leading roles in this colorful presentation of a society girl's adventurous experiences in a New York night club.

Ruth Chatterton brings her unusual personality to the Carolina theatre Tuesday in "The Crash," a story dealing with the effects of the stock market slump on the idle rich. Co-starred with Miss Chatterton is George Brent, the star's latest matrimonial prospect, according to Hollywood gossip.

Doug Fairbanks Wednesday
Wednesday's attraction stars the gay, inimitable Douglas Fairbanks in what promises to be his most adventurous role. "Mr. Robinson Crusoe" is a hilarious take-off on Defoe's immortal character, with all sorts of incongruous modern appliances, radios, vacuum cleaners, etc. included in the set of the deserted island.

"The Phantom President" with Jimmy Durante for comedy, Claudette Colbert for romance, and George Cohan for drama will play at the local cinema Thursday.

The picture which has been looked forward to with so much interest, "The Big Broadcast," will be shown Friday. All the favorite radio performers will appear in a galaxy of song and orchestral hits.

Mid-night Show
Fifi D'Orsay, the vivacious French-Canadian comedienne, will star in "The Girl from Calgary" at a mid-night show beginning at 11:20 o'clock. Plenty of opportunity is afforded Miss D'Orsay to wear her new clothes.

The final bill of the week brings Richard Arlen, star of "Touchdown" in another football drama, "The All-American." Twenty-eight players who have been named on all-American teams in the past few years were brought together to take part in the feature of the picture, the "big game." Al Howard, at present assistant backfield coach at the University, and an all-American from Notre Dame, will take part in the game.

ACTIVITIES PROMINENT ON ASSEMBLY PROGRAMS

Freshmen and sophomores will hear Judge R. W. Winston, one of the University's leading alumni, speak on "The Problem of the Particular" tomorrow morning in the regular assembly in Memorial hall. Tuesday Coach Bob Fetzer will talk on "Athletics at the University of North Carolina." Wednesday the freshmen are to meet in groups with their respective deans. As part of the program to explain college activities to the freshmen, the four editors of the various college publications will present speeches concerning their respective publications Thursday. Charles G. Rose, Jr., editor of the TAR HEEL; Nutt Parsley editor of the Yackety Yack; Bob Barnett, editor of the Carolina Magazine; and Bob Mason, editor of the Buccaneer, will be the speakers of the morning.

CAROLINA SALON ENSEMBLE

The Carolina Salon Ensemble, under the direction of Thor Johnson, will present a concert in the Forest theatre this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers. Lamar Stringfield, nationally known composer, has said of the organization, "Its work represents one of the finest and most important activities in the musical field in the country."

The Wrangell institute is a junior and senior high school for native children, run by the department of Indian affairs in the Department of the Interior. The new institution is being managed under a progressive theory and is introducing many features from the program of the Carolina New college.

Students of Library School To Hear Talk

Mrs. Lillian B. Briggs, librarian at the woman's college of Duke university, will deliver a lecture before the students in the University school of library science Tuesday, October 25, at 3:00 o'clock. This lecture will be the second of a series of four which the school of library science has arranged for the purpose of acquainting its students with the different types of libraries.

The first lecture of the series was delivered Tuesday afternoon when Miss Nellie M. Rowe, librarian of the Greensboro public library, addressed the school and the University library staff, giving a survey of public library service in towns and counties.

again just before the contest ended. A frosh team made up of third and fourth string men drove down the field from their own thirty yard line to Campbell's fifteen yard marker. After a bad pass from center the ball went to Campbell on downs. The losers kicked out to mid-field and the yearling first team was sent back in. Snyder and Montgomery carried the ball to within fifteen yards of another marker when the final whistle blew. The frosh had nine first downs, seven of them coming in the last half.

Carolina's whole line functioned well on defense, Campbell making only three first downs. Evins and Kanner were the outstanding linemen, while McCachren was a tower of defense at fullback. On offense Phelps and Snyder were the best ground gainers while Snyder also got off some nice passes.

line, was far superior to the exhibitions they have been giving. The line held the powerful Bulldog backs to seven first downs, while opening the way for three by the Carolina backfield.

The work of Underwood at center was especially good, and the Sanford boy further proved that Collins made no mistake when he shifted June to center. Frank Smith played the best game of his career at tackle, breaking through to halt the Georgians dead time and time again.

Jim Tatum, who subbed for Harry Hodges at tackle, played a heady game and filled in nicely for the injured Hodges. Charlie Woollen, who was promoted to the first-string quarterback post this last week, hit his stride yesterday and punted and ran the Tar Heels out of danger many times.

Buster Mott, who has always been "bad medicine" for the Tar Heels, continued to play the role of menace to Carolina in his last meeting with them. The Georgia back turned in a fine defensive game at halfback for the Bulldogs.

DEFERRED PAYMENTS ARE DUE THIS WEEK

This notice is given in order that those who have been extended the privilege of signing notes may make arrangements to take up these notes on the due date.

DRAMA FESTIVAL AND TOURNAMENT SET FOR MARCH 31

Executive Committee of Dramatic Association Makes Plans For Spring Quarter.

Dates were set and tentative plans were outlined for the next annual drama festival and tournament of the Carolina dramatic association at a meeting of the executive committee which took place here this week.

March 30, 31, and April 1, were set as dates for the festival and tournament, and January 7 was set as the date for the annual meeting of the directors of the association.

It was decided that all original play manuscripts must be in by December 20, which gives the groups more time to prepare their play after the manuscript has been returned by the judges.

Date of Entries

All entries (registrations) in the production contests must be in by January 16, before which membership dues and tournament fees must be paid. All contests, both preliminary and final, will be held in Chapel Hill this year. This new arrangement was made in order to eliminate as much extra expense as possible.

A contest of religious plays will be sponsored this year if sufficient number of church organizations are interested.

Regulations governing the contests are being sent out by Mrs. K. H. Fussler, secretary of the Carolina dramatic association.

DEMOCRATIC CLUB TO HEAR TALK BY MAJOR McLENDON

Mass Meeting of Organization Scheduled for Tomorrow at 8:30 in Gerrard Hall.

The Young Democratic club of the University will convene in a mass meeting at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night in Gerrard hall, at which time the principal speaker of the evening will be Major L. P. McLendon of Durham, campaign manager for J. C. B. Ehringhaus, Democratic candidate for governor in the past primary. This meeting is open to all interested in the work of young Democrats in the state and nation.

Purpose of Club

The purpose of the club is to instill and preserve in young people an interest in governmental affairs, and to further the ideals and principles of the Democratic party. The local organization is one of 3,700 clubs in forty-two states and the District of Columbia, which now have a total affiliated membership of over 1,100,000. There are 50,000 young Democrats actively associated with clubs in this state. A North Carolinian, Tyre Taylor, is president of the national organization, and another North Carolinian, Mrs. James L. Scott, is the executive secretary. The officials of the state organization are: J. D. Dorsett, president; Mrs. May T. Evans, vice-president; Miss Isabel Ferguson, secretary; and R. J. Jackson, treasurer.

Campus Officials

The campus officials are: Hamilton Hobgood, president; A. A. F. Seawell, Jr., and Edwin Lanier, vice-presidents; Dan Kelly, secretary; and Claiborn Carr, treasurer. The organization of

ASSOCIATION OF WOMEN TO MEET

Miss Claudia Hunter, Vocational Director of Henderson, Will Speak This Afternoon.

The Woman's Association of the University will convene in its first meeting this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in 214' Graham Memorial. Mary Frances Parker, who is president of the association, has asked that all women students be present.

As a special feature on the program, Miss Claudia Hunter, a vocational director of Henderson, will give a short talk on vocations. Miss Hunter will be here all week, during which time she will have conferences with all girls who are seeking vocational guidance. It is her plan to make investigation into the field that each girl wishes to enter and to determine the possibilities of a position in that field.

After the meeting, the association will serve tea in the ladies' reception room, after which the game room will be reserved for co-eds for an hour. It is hoped by Mayne Albright, manager of Graham Memorial, that the women students at the University will begin to use the game room more than they have in the past.

Sophomores to Meet

The sophomore class will meet in Memorial hall Thursday night in order to nominate and elect five dance leaders for the sophomore hop.

Library Bans Display Of Political Badges

The wearing of political badges by any of the library force in the University was forbidden yesterday by officials of the library following the appearance of several political buttons on the lapels of members of various departments of the library.

Officials of the library gave as reason for the order that the library was merely following the practice of all the best in the country. The policy is that since the library is a public institution and assistants are servants of the public, it is indefensible to carry on propaganda in such an institution.

JUDGE WINSTON MAKES TALK ON 'THE PARTICULAR'

Brother of G. T. Winston Advises
Students to "Stick to Particular" in Chapel Talk.

R. W. Winston, brother of the late George Tayloe Winston, recently honored by the University, and former lawyer, judge, and legislator spoke to the assembly yesterday morning. Judge Winston who retired at the age of sixty and re-entered the University, is well known as a contributor to several national magazines.

His subject was "The Problem of the Particular." "In daily life," he said, "this could be explained as the question of the deadline of life. When we are born, we are a unit of humanity. As we grow older and our intelligence increases, we branch off in the particular or the individual. We may join a church, a political party, a fraternity, or some particular organization. Then there may be a desire to go into the universe, but it is dangerous to attempt this; we should stick to the particular."

Winston listed several groups of particulars to prove differences in thought. The different churches have different beliefs. There is a group in Germany, about to gain control, who believe that clothes are not appropriate. He also told of a group that think the political form of government of today is wrong, and that we should have a soviet form of government.

Judge Winston said that nobody can explain anything, that nothing is explainable but the best a person can do is to mix up a very little of the universal with the particular. He concluded by stating that a person would never go wrong in sticking to the old family traditions.

DEFERRED PAYMENTS ARE DUE THIS WEEK

At the time of registration, a number of students were allowed to give notes for part of their fees. These notes are all due within the current week. This notice is given in order that those who have been given the privilege of extension in signing their notes may make arrangements to take up these notes on the due date.

K. C. Fraser Reviews Activities Of International Arms Conference

University History Professor Finds Hope for Achievement in Armament Parley Despite Complexity of Problems and Issues Involved.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: K. C. Fraser, professor in the University history department, attended the Geneva arms conference during his leave of absence last year. The following article is a personal record of his impressions.)

The first session of the Geneva Arms Conference convened February 2, 1932 and adjourned July 9, 1932. The Arms Conference itself was, contrary to the general impression current in the United States, a very carefully prepared session. Preparations had been made since 1926. The accomplishing of disarmament is a function which was later given to the League of Nations by the terms of the treaties of 1919, and the erecting of ground work of the Conference has been carried on under the auspices of the League of Nations.

Problems which presented themselves at Geneva in the first phase of the Conference were perfectly inevitable because of the differences in the defense requirements of the fifty-five nations represented there.

Varied Plans Offered

Proposals for disarmament were naturally very varied in character, indicating the peculiar interest of each of the states making suggestions, the most radical of which was the proposal made to the plenary session of the Conference for complete and total disarmament immediately. The plan advanced by the Soviet government of Russia is considered in Geneva as too far-reaching and is not taking into consideration the current conditions.

Certain major problems dominated the first session of the Arms Conference. First and probably most important were the apparently irreconcilable positions of France and Germany. France demanded a guarantee of security against foreign attack. There are two alternatives which the French suggested: security under the League of Nations which she felt might be guaranteed by an international police force under the command of the League, or the security which she might find in a great French army. She also maintained as a necessary feature of her security program the absolute observance of the terms of the Versailles Treaty establishing the disarmament of Germany.

Germany Demands Equality

Measured against this was the German position which in brief was based upon the tacit pledge given to Germany under the terms of the peace treaties that the disarmament of Germany was actually the first step toward the general disarmament of the world. Upon this pledge Germany based her demand for armament equality with other nations of the world.

Generally speaking, the majority of the delegates at Geneva admitted the validity of the German contention. On the other hand there was a general recog-

CHI OMEGA GETS FIFTEEN PLEDGES

Co-ed Rushing Season for This Year Brought to Close With Pledging Yesterday.

The local chapter of Chi Omega, national woman's fraternity, pledged fifteen yesterday at the official pledging of the woman's rushing season of the University. The list of pledges of Pi Beta Phi, the other sorority of the campus, could not be obtained by THE DAILY TAR HEEL last night.

The co-ed rushing season, which lasted one week, ended Saturday night. Following this was a period of silence until yesterday afternoon when bids were obtained through Mrs. Stacy's office.

Those pledged are:

Dorothy Bradley, Burlington; Elizabeth Coates, Chapel Hill; Mae Bell Draughn, Durham; Dorothy Ensley, North East, Maryland; Helen Edwards, Hookerton; Vivian Grissette, Valdese; Peggy Anne Harris, Rutherfordton; Kitty Makepeace, Sanford; Dorothy Norman, Hickory; Emma Ray, Hiroshima, Japan; Laura Ross, Charlotte; Lore Royall, Salem; Elizabeth Strickland, Old Fort; Katherine Winstead, Roxboro; Suzanne Winstead, Roxboro.

Hartley Will Speak

Commander Herbert Hartley, former commander of the S. S. Leviathan, will speak to the sophomores and freshmen in assembly October 31, relating some of his experiences during thirty-five years on the seas.

Four Rhodes Awards Candidates Selected

R. M. Albright, R. W. Barnett, Charles G. Rose, Jr., and B. R. Thurman, students in the University, have been selected as candidates for Rhodes scholarships, according to an announcement made yesterday by the local committee on these scholarships.

These candidates will appear before the state committee December 10, when selections will be made which will send two men from North Carolina to Atlanta and four men from six southern states will be picked by the district committee, and these men will be entitled to the award.

UNIVERSITY GLEE CLUB TO PRESENT INITIAL CONCERT

Group Composed of Sixty Members; Twenty or Thirty Make Each Trip.

The University glee club, under the direction of Harold S. Dyer, will give a concert in Burlington under the auspices of the Burlington music club, Friday, October 28.

There is an improved quality in the potentialities of the candidates for the glee club this year and, under the system being used at present, the sixty men who are now in training are rated, groups of twenty or thirty men being selected for concerts on the basis of this standing. This plan gives an opportunity to a greater number of men than it would be possible to use if the club were composed of a definite, limited number.

All Men May Get Awards

The constitution of the organization, which formerly made only those men eligible for awards who had participated in a stipulated number of concert trips, has been changed. Awards are now made on the basis of satisfactory participation, as members, over a period of five quarters, though not necessarily consecutive quarters. To be classed as a member, a candidate must attend seventy per cent of the regular, called rehearsals.

New Officers Elected

The officers of the club are: Wofford Humphreys, president; Harry Lee Knox, vice-president; Lonnie Bain Mann, Jr., secretary; R. J. Somers, librarian; and Claude M. Sawyer, business manager.

Prospective concerts are being planned for Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Statesville, Salisbury, Charlotte, and several other cities in the southern part of the state.

DI SENATE HAS FOUR BILLS ON CALENDAR

The Dialectic Society will conduct its regular meeting tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the senate hall in New West.

Bills on the calendar for discussion are, Resolved: that fraternal and social order initiations be prohibited on the streets of Chapel Hill.

Resolved: That North Carolina should pass a law requiring the sterilization of the insane and feeble minded.

Resolved: That fraternity rushing should be further limited.

Resolved: That comprehensive examinations should be abolished.

ALBERT SPALDING TO OFFER VIOLIN CONCERT TONIGHT

Celebrated Musician's Concerts Received Enthusiastically in Europe and America.

Albert Spalding, famous musician, will render a violin concert in Memorial hall tonight at 8:00 o'clock; the program being the first number of the entertainment series to be presented by the student entertainment committee this fall.

Spalding is one of the most celebrated violinists in the world. His concerts have been received enthusiastically in practically every famous music house in Europe and America. He is brought to Chapel Hill by the committee through the courtesy of the Wolfsohn Musical Bureau of New York, Inc.

Andre Benoist will accompany Spalding on the piano. His program for tonight's concert is as follows:

I.
Sonata in G minor (for piano and violin)—Debussy. Allegro vivo, Intermezzo—Fantasque et leger, Finale—Tres anime.

II.
Sonata in C major (for violin unaccompanied)—Bach. Adagio, Fuga, Largo, Allegro assai.

III.
Fantasy, Opus 131, Schumann.

IV.
La Fontaine d'Arethuse, Szymanowski; Burleska, Suk; Nocturne, Lili Boulanger; Hungarian Dance in G minor, No. 1, Brahms-Joachim; Jota Navarra, Sarasate.

Tickets for the recital may still be purchased in 203 South building for the price of one dollar. Students having entertainment booklets are reminded that these must be brought and shown at the door for admittance.

PHI WILL DISCUSS FOOTBALL RULES

Consolidation of Three Institutions of Higher Learning
Will Also Be Argued.

The Phi Assembly will conduct its first initiation ceremony of the year tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the Assembly hall on the fourth floor of New East building. Several men have already been accepted for membership, and it is expected that a number of new men will be presented tonight. Dan Kelly, speaker, has invited all students who are interested in debating and forensic activities to be present.

Two bills are scheduled to be discussed. The first is "Resolved: That the new changes in the football rules concerning the kickoff, substitutions, use of hands, and the dead ball have impaired rather than helped the playing of the game, and that the rules should be revised to read as they did last year." The second reads as follows: "Resolved: That the Philanthropic Assembly go on record as endorsing the recent consolidation of the three state-owned institutions of higher learning into a greater University of North Carolina."

Think as You Please, But Vote Straight

Senator Hiram Johnson's recent refusal to support Hoover and his "ultra-conservatism" will no doubt evoke as much protest from the Republicans as praise from the Democrats. But regardless of party views his decision should remind the American public of the need for sane political thinking throughout the presidential campaign.

Adherence to a rigid set of party views is deemed at present the highest sort of political virtue, and any holder of political office who deviates from those of the party which put him in power is considered no less than a traitor to the cause of American democracy. And so will Senator Hiram be regarded by his party.

Nevertheless his decision is commendable for its fearlessness. To his way of thinking, Hoover is "ultra-conservative"; he has said as much. And in saying this he has bolted his party, as his constituents will have it. The Democrats will hardly condemn him, for his decision is all to their advantage. But the Republicans will.

The American people profess to enjoy freedom of speech, press, and other inalienable rights so dear to democracy. But freedom of political thought, it seems belongs only to Mr. John Doe—not to those whom we choose to call our political leaders. The American voter, if he has any interest in seeing the right man in office, would do well to adopt a more tolerant and far-seeing attitude, instead of condemning his representative for refusing to support blindly a dubious administration. Party creed is all right until it becomes dogmatic, but at that point it blinds political thought to its real purpose.—A.T.D.

Young Sheep

Young people's political clubs are generally propagandist in purpose. They stifle, rather than encourage, intelligent political thought. By expressed nature they are intolerant.

The Young Democrats, the Young Republicans or the Young Socialists are all trying to make party regulars of their recruits. To this end, they naturally suppress heretical questions of party policy. They allow no puerile probing into the party mysteries. All that they ask of the neophyte is that he work and vote for the party. Quite logically, their arguments are solely designed to show him the virtue of the party's ways and means.

Under this plan, the party is made an end of itself. The organizers of the young people's clubs are obligated to turn over to their national organizations as many neatly tied bundles of new votes as possible.

This is no condemnation of the Young Democrats, the Young Republicans or the Young Socialists. Rather, it is a criticism of a generation that pretends to be liberal and independent and yet forfeits its freedom of initiative by assuming a fast adherence to party affiliations.

If youth would reclaim its independence, let it organize Junior Leagues for Independent Political Action, to investigate impartially the platforms and candidates of all parties before casting its ballot.

The establishment of a Young Mugwump Club is herein proposed.—E.C.D.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Fame is a little thing, but entirely satisfying in its pettiest details to those who haven't much else to worry about. Frequently the TAR HEEL receives letters and papers from remote sections labeled with most incongruous addresses. One wonders how the postal service manages to keep up with them, but it seems that our fame has spread even into this inner institution of glorified bureaucracy.

The Ohio State Lantern invariably addressed its communications to us: "The University of South Carolina Daily Tar Heel." As such we were known in their columns and no amount of persuasion could change this sad state of journalistic inefficiency.

Several days ago the University of British Columbia had us on its mailing list as the "Daily Tar Hell." That matter will take a little arranging, for despite numerous rumors to the contrary, this publication endeavors to keep its associations on a higher plane.

The Buccaneer, too, has its difficulties. Yesterday a package appeared addressed "Buccaneer, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, North Dakota."

University officials and faculty members often find themselves in the same position. Several respectable dailies in New York city chronicled Dr. Graham's visit to the metropolis last spring as: "Dr. Frank Graham, president of Duke university, Chapel Hill, North Carolina, is staying at the _____" etc.

And so it goes. Maybe we're still in our infancy and the final mellowing of years will educate the public to the fact that the University of North Carolina, strangely enough, is located in North Carolina, and that the TAR HEEL, though it may look satanic, means well.

Our Open Door Policy

Fatalities in the class room and school buildings will soon surpass those on the athletic fields, an observer of ours notes. It seems that those energetic individuals rushing from one classroom to another have little time to momentarily hold open the swinging door for the person directly behind. Thereupon these ponderous portals crash back into the preoccupied visage of the one behind, resulting variously in smashed noses, bruised foreheads, and acute melancholia over man's inhumanity to man. To these causes and effects we might add a remedy: That the offending building doors be propped open by building janitors during the changing of classes.

Honor

Among ———!

The University of Washington Daily prints the following in a column "Collegiana," written by one Mr. Hubert Blomk, who, by his bare-faced plagiarism of the last two paragraphs, looms as our first reader:

THE FOX COMES THROUGH

"When Pete, a red fox in Central Park zoo at Chapel Hill, North Carolina, recently went on a wild escapade in search of the wide open spaces, as say Associated Press reports, he little realized what good column filler he had provided for the gentlemen who go on the loose in articles such as this.

"Poor Pete's dash for liberty was but short-lived, three blocks in fact, for the quickly assembled multitude soon declared a moratorium at such thoughtless wandering on the part of the said fox.

It seems Reynard now mourns the fact that he could not keep in training after three years of incarceration, his flabby muscles abandoning him in the rigors of the chase.

"However, said Mr. Fox offers an excellent opportunity for comparison with John J. Business. The latter gentleman broke training on a memorable October morning just three years ago. He's had a pretty hard time pacing up and down in his cage, and when he tries a break his untrained muscles give away as the ever-alert pack closes in, eager to trap him before he gets a decent start."

RUTH CHATTERTON WILL BE SEEN IN "THE CRASH"

Ruth Chatterton, one of the country's best dressed women, wears hand-painted gowns in the First National picture, "The Crash," featuring at the Carolina theatre today.

George Brent, the actress' husband, plays the male lead. William Dieterle directed and such players as Paul Cavanagh, Helen Vinson, Henry Kolker, Hardie Albright, and Ivan Simpson are in the supporting cast. It is a story of the effect of the stock market crash on the idle rich.

TAR HEELS REST AND HEAR SCOUTS ON GEORGIA TECH

Team Goes Through Game With Six Minor Injuries; Hodges Back in Lineup.

The Tar Heels rested yesterday after a hard tie with the Georgia Bulldogs Saturday and Coach Collins had his men listen to Coaches Bob Fetzner and Bill Cerney who scouted the Georgia Tech-Auburn game in Atlanta on the Tech attack and other particulars the Tar Heels did wrong against Georgia.

Jim Tatum, with a badly spiked hand, Walker and Phipps with slight charleyhorses, Barclay with a slight shoulder injury, and Kahn and Thompson with slight bruises are the casualties the Tar Heels sustained against Georgia. Harry Hodges who was laid out of the game at Athens because of an ankle injury, is back and ready for work so that the Tar Heels will be at full strength against the Yellow Jackets Saturday.

Coach Bill Cerney was yesterday emphatic in his prediction that the game with the Tornado would be a close one, saying, "You can play that game up because it is going to be one of the greatest football games ever to be played on Kenan field."

The cheer leaders are planning a big pep meeting to be staged Friday night in order to revive interest in the cheering that has lagged this year. Several speakers are being obtained for this mammoth meeting and a large crowd is expected to practice cheers in order to give a good demonstration at the game.

DUKE LEADER OF BIG FIVE SCORING

Piling Up Ninety-Eight Points In Four Games the Blue Devils Lead State.

Duke university is leading the scoring in the Big Five race by virtue of her one-sided 34-0 victory over Maryland Saturday. In four games this season, Duke has piled up a grand total of 98 points to 60 for State, her nearest rival for the honors. Up to last Saturday's rout by Duke, it was a neck and neck race between the second place State team and the leaders with the Blue Devils in front by less than a touchdown.

In the individual scoring, Bob Cox blazed his name across the top to displace that of Rex, State star, who had previously headed the list. Scott, accounting for fourteen of Duke's total points in Saturday's game, now leads Rex by a three-point margin.

AROUND the FIELD

By CLAIRBORN M. CARR

"THE LONG-LIMBED LASSITER clutched the ball manfully to his bosom like a shepherd plucking up a lost lamb and sold out down the sidelines fifty yards to a touchdown." This was the description Jimmy Jones, Atlanta sports writer, wrote of the Tar Heel score against Georgia Saturday. Hanes sped along the chalk line forever it seemed to him and finally entered the promised land.

BIG JIM TATUM, WHO filled in for the injured Hodges at left tackle, acquitted himself nobly in his first dance before the crowds. Jim had a little trouble with Moorehead, Georgia guard, in respect to the latter's knack of finding Tatum's lip on a peculiar hand charge, but he was in there rushing the Bulldogs on passes and kicks in such a way as to draw praise from the Tar Heel coaches. Coach Collins was somewhat skeptical as to Tatum's play under fire and was ready to rush June Underwood back to his old position should Jim falter, yet Tatum and all his two hundred pounds stayed in there the full sixty minutes.

SEVERAL FUNNY INCIDENTS occurred during the game at Athens and one of these could have caused a lot of trouble. Irwin Walker, Carolina end, lost the sole out of his shoe and needed another pair. Coach Bob Fetzner, Carolina shoe specialist, was in Atlanta scouting Tech, and manager Bob Mebane could do nothing but groan. Walker wears a size 9½-D and all Mebane had was a bag full of extra shoes. With the game being held up for the change, Bob reached into the bag with a prayer and pulled up a pair of shoes. Lo and behold, a pair of 9½-Ds; Coach Bob couldn't have done better.

THE RAIN IN ATHENS ruined the plan of attack the Tar Heels had mapped out last week. But Coach Collins got a lucky break at the beginning of the second quarter and missed only by a few inches of striking home. The ball was Carolina's in Georgia territory, the quarter was to begin with a new and dry ball; and Collins had held his favorite pass combination out.

Instructor Has Thirteen Spades Dealt In Hand

Sensabaugh, English Instructor, Has Phenomenal Luck in Game at Graduate Club.

This is not a story which would under real orthodox conditions make the sports page, but this should be good copy for Ripley—and anything that's different is news. So here goes.

It all happened at the Shirley Greaves Graduate club. Four students passing the while away yesterday afternoon decided that they could show Culbertson or Lentz some tricks. Well to make a long story shorter, G. G. Sensabaugh, an instructor in English, had thirteen spades dealt to him! His partner, J. P. Reynolds, assistant professor of Zoology, did the dealing.

Here's the way the bidding went. Andrew Mahler passed; Sensabaugh bid seven spades; and then Arnold Williams passed. There were some kibitzers—telling Mahler and Williams, both graduate English students, that this bid was real.

According to Hoyle, or any bridge authority, Sensabaugh was correct in bidding high; since he risked the chance of failing to get the contract. There was no double, and Reynolds had only one-half honor tricks.

CAUSE BULLDOGS TROUBLE

Hanes Lassiter, left, and Jim Tatum, right, two Tar Heel stars against Georgia. Lassiter it was who romped fifty yards for the score after taking a pass from Phipps. Jim Tatum, who filled in so nicely for Harry Hodges at tackle, played a fine game, rushing the Bulldogs consistently.

Golden Tornado Converges On Carolina With Strong Offense

Experienced But Light Squad of Ball Toters Who Pushed Auburn And Kentucky to the Limit Will Arrive Here Friday to Engage Tar Heels in Homecoming Day Affray.

For the first time since Father Lumpkin, Peter Pund, and Frank Speer smashed through all southern opposition in 1928 and overpowered California 8-7 with the aid of a 75-yard backward run by Roy Reigels, Golden Bear center, the Golden Tornado of Georgia Tech is looking up in a football way and planning to go places.

The Yellow Jackets have already lost this year and can't be classed among the strongest teams in the conference, but they have a better ball club than last year and will give some of the leading teams bad afternoons to remember. One thing that may keep the Tornado from going as far upward as it would like is the schedule which includes nine tough games and nary a breather unless one wants to consider Tulane and some of the other big boys as such.

Squad Light, But Experienced Coach Bill Alexander has a more or less veteran crew, but the entire group is handicapped by a lack of weight which will mean much against some of the powerful opponents Tech is scheduled to meet. According to statistics, the Yellow Jackets will be outweighed by each of their opponents with the possible exception of Carolina.

Tech opened its 1932 season by sounding a warning to all clubs that hoped to count the men of Alexander as easy marks this year by swamping Clemson 32-14.

Then came Kentucky with its 196-pound line and a great punter in Ralph Kercheval. Tech outgained the Wildcats throughout the game, but Kercheval's booming punts kept them backed up deep in their own territory and the great Kentucky line held magnificently in the pinches. Kentucky layed back, let Kercheval kick, and played for the breaks. Twice after Kercheval had pushed Tech deep in its own territory, giant Wildcat linemen crashed through to block kicks and each time Kentucky scored touchdowns. Tech drove across one score of its own, but the two blocked kicks were enough to spell defeat, and the game ended with the Wildcats on the long end of a 12-6 score.

Strong Against Auburn Tech fought well against Auburn's high scoring combination last Saturday, but Firpo Phipps passed and ran the Plainsmen to a touchdown in the last quarter, and the Tornado went down 6-0.

Past performances have proved that there's plenty of speed, fight, and ability in the Tech club this year, and as usual it is pointing for its clash with Carolina, a team that Alexander has often stated he would rather beat than any other.

For the past two years Carolina and Tech have played to ties. Last year, the two clubs met in Atlanta with Tech coming from behind in the last minutes of the game to convert a fumble into a touchdown and add the extra point to knot the count at 19-19, and in 1930 the result was a 6-6 affair. Carolina's 1929 club upset the Yellow Jackets 18-7 with Johnny Branch and Jim Wagner showing the way offensively, and in 1928, Tech's Rose Bowl winners downed the Tar Heels 20-7.

This year the Tar Heels will be trying to break into the win column while the Jackets will be attempting to bring their season's average back to the .500 mark.

Saturday will be Homecoming Day for Carolina alumni, and the Tech-Carolina game is always set aside as the day for a general gathering of Tech graduates throughout the state, which would indicate that this week's crowd should be the biggest of the season here.

Tech's lineup against Carolina Saturday is problematical but indications are that Slocumb will be at one end with Verrick or Jerry Goldsmith at the other. Tharpe and Williams are the tackles, Wilcox and Laws the guards, and Captain Howard Nebblet, who was injured slightly against Auburn, the center. McArthur will probably be at quarter with Cherry at full, while the halfbacks will be selected from Hart, Barron, Ferguson, and Clavis.

FRESHMEN HAVE MUDDY PRACTICE

Coaches Not Fully Satisfied With Work of Tar Baby Team in Saturday's Game.

Fresh from a victory in their opening contest Saturday, the freshman football team began work yesterday in preparation for their battle with Oak Ridge Friday.

The Tar Babies went through a long light practice yesterday regardless of rain and a very muddy field. After a short tackling drill Coaches Sapp and Howard put the squad through a long dummy scrimmage showing them some new plays and correcting their various faults of Saturday's game.

All the squad came out of the Campbell battle without injuries but in yesterday's practice two players joined the list. Snyder, star halfback, twisted the same ankle that gave him trouble last week and was forced to leave the field. The injury is not serious, however, and he will be back in the lineup before Friday's contest. Davenport, another back also hurt his ankle. Dr. Robinson, who examined the leg, expressed the opinion that the ankle may be broken, but could not tell without closer observation. Phelps, who had to be removed from the opening contest, was in good condition and ready to go again.

Although the Tar Babies came out on the long end of an 18 to 0 score in Saturday's battle, the coaches were not at all satisfied with their showing and said that some of the positions would find new faces in them and that there was not a man on the team that would not have to work hard to keep his place.

ANDERSON SCORES ONLY TOUCHDOWN FOR 6-0 VICTORY

Pi Kappa Phi Has Five First Downs to Three for Betas; Rose's Nose Broken.

Taking advantage of a break in the first two minutes of play, during which time Henry Anderson waded sixty-odd yards for the only touchdown of the game, Beta Theta Pi splashed its way to a 6-0 victory over Pi Kappa Phi in yesterday's only intramural tag football game. The victory gave undisputed possession of first place to the winners, who have emerged triumphant in all their three games to date, and was the second setback in three starts for the Pi Kappa Phi outfit.

The teams battled on even terms throughout the game after Anderson's brilliant dash had given his team the lead, with the Pi Kappa Phis having the better of the contest with regard to first downs. The losers tallied five firsts to three for the Betas, and were a constant

How To Avoid BONERS

AN INCUBATOR IS SOMETHING YOU BURN RUBBISH IN

TSK! TSK! Isn't it too bad! Bill Boner thinks a blizzard is something you find inside a fowl!

Why doesn't somebody give him a good pipe and some tobacco? For a pipe helps a man to think straight. Of course, it's got to be the right tobacco. But any college man can guide him in that. A recent investigation showed Edgeworth to be the favorite smoking tobacco at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

Which is only natural—for in all tobacco-dom there's no blend like the mixture of fine old burleys found in Edgeworth. In that difference there's a new smoking satisfaction, a new comfort, for the man who likes to think and dream with a pipe between his teeth.

Buy Edgeworth anywhere in two forms—Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed and Edgeworth Plug Slice. All sizes—15¢ packet package to pound humidor tin. If you'd like to try before you buy, write for a free sample packet. Address Larus & Bro. Co., 120 S. 22d Street, Richmond, Va.

LOCAL "Y" BACKS PETITION AGAINST DOAK MANIFESTO

Several University Students Affected By Ruling of Secretary of Labor Against Foreigners.

A petition has been circulated by the campus Y. M. C. A. as a part of the nation-wide program of student associations against the ruling by Secretary of Labor Doak forbidding non-quota foreign students in this country to obtain vacation or part-time employment in the United States. Copies of the petition are to be sent to Senator Josiah W. Bailey, Senator Cameron Morrison, and Secretary of Labor Doak.

Political observers are of the opinion for the most part that this manifesto will make heavy inroads into administration returns from college men November 8. Considerable feeling has been displayed against it already in North Carolina, as evidenced by editorials in the state press.

Since several students at the University will be affected by the ruling, copies of the petition have been placed in the "Y" office for the benefit of students who are desirous of signing it.

Epsilon Phi Delta Will Meet Tonight

Epsilon Phi Delta Cosmopolitan club will convene for its first session of the school year in room 210, Graham Memorial tonight, according to an announcement by Don Shoemaker, president of the organization, yesterday afternoon.

The organization is composed of seniors and juniors interested in international affairs and members of the student body, regardless of scholastic ranking, who claim for a birthplace a country other than the United States.

Spalding Concert Tickets

Tickets for the Albert Spalding concert tonight in Memorial hall are still available in 203 South building. The price is one dollar.

Students having entertainment booklets entitling them to the entire entertainment series are reminded that these must be shown at the door for admittance.

Playmaker Season Tickets

All students selling tickets to the Playmaker presentations are asked to meet at the Playmakers theatre tomorrow afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

Asheville Banker to Go to Jail

Wallace B. Davis, former president of the Central Bank and Trust company of Asheville, which closed in November, 1930, was refused a review yesterday by the supreme court of his conviction in the North Carolina state courts on a charge of making a false statement on the condition of the bank. He was sentenced to prison for a period of from five to seven years.

Roosevelt Opposes Bonus

Dominick DeLucco who recently asked Governor Roosevelt to declare his stand on the payment of the bonus, made public a letter yesterday in which the Democratic presidential nominee said that after cutting federal expenditures, "it will be time to consider additional expenditures from any surplus in the treasury."

The United States legation plans to submit a warrant to the Greek courts to determine whether Samuel Insull can be extracted to the United States, as soon as ratifications of the Greco-American extraction treaty are exchanged by the two governments, it was learned yesterday.

for just such a chance. Johnnies, Phipps and Daniels, were rushed into the game with resin on their hands. But the Bulldogs knew exactly what this meant and instantly the cry was "Stop 43, he is going out for a pass." Daniels started for the pass and the Georgia tackles stopped him momentarily but he was on his way like a flash and the heave from Phipps was just out of his reach. Daniels was clear and would have had a straight dash for a score.

JOHNNY PHIPPS IS HEAVING those passes of his quite effectively and the toss to Lassiter for the score against Georgia was the third heave for a touchdown Phipps has to his credit in the last three games the Tar Heels have played. Johnny passed to Bill Croom for the score against Vanderbilt and then against Tennessee it was his phenomenal toss to George Brandt that counted. More power to Johnny from now on.

THAT TOUCHDOWN PLAY of the Bulldogs Saturday can be called a "mystery play," because none of the Tar Heels can figure exactly where Grant ran through the line. It is quite definitely agreed that the play was a half spinner and that Grant then cut over center. The question remains as to whether he went between Barclay and Underwood or between Kahn and Underwood. The Tar Heels had trouble with the Bulldog spinners and cut backs all day allowing Georgia to gain most of their yardage this way.

FRASER REVIEWS ARMS CONFERENCE

tion of the necessity of giving France some measure of the assurance which she demanded. It is undoubtedly true that had the League developed into as strong an institution for the maintenance of international order as its founders anticipated France would have recognized the League as an adequate guarantee of safety.

Thus the problem becomes a question of the choice of two alternatives: an adequate international organization on the one hand or a confirmation of the traditional defense of the state by its own forces.

The problem of Russia is not necessarily regarded in Geneva as a very critical one insofar as its military power is concerned. Neither the Poles nor the Roumanians appear to be impressed by the strength of the Soviet army at present.

England Uncertain

Another problem which appeared at Geneva was the attitude of the present British Conservative party on the question of disarmament. The head of the British delegation, Sir John Simons, was regarded as being distinctly tinted in taking any positive position, and the influence which he exerted was one which led the small state delegates to regard the position of England as being at best uncertain. He appeared in distinct contrast to Arthur Henderson, the former secretary of state in the labor government, who, though not a member of the English delegation, is president of the disarmament conference.

There is at Geneva a distinct interest in bringing about a reduction of armaments. The present world wide economic depression is regarded as a direct result of the shock sustained by the world economic structure during the Great War. Again the great activity during the last ten years in devising new chemical, bacteriological, and incendiary weapons of warfare have led technicians and politicians alike to believe that the brunt of future wars will be borne by the civilian population. Probably the most significant idea which has generally been acquiesced to by the delegations at the conference is the setting up of an international commission to enforce the limitations agreed upon at the conference.

Nations Restricted by League

Under the terms of the League covenant and of the draft convention, which has been tentatively accepted by the conference, no nation will be permitted to cede the armament limits which it has agreed to observe unless special permission be given it by the permanent disarmament commission and the League of Nations.

Pessimism regarding the achievements of the conference thus far is certainly in a large measure unwarranted. The viewpoints of fifty-five nations are to be considered and reconciled. Problems which have been existent in international politics for hundreds of years are to be solved and finally, for the first time in the history of the world, an international conference is attempting to dictate to the individual states the size of the military force which it is to maintain for its defense. The hope of the conference lies in recognition of enlightened people in all nations, that no one state or people are sufficiently powerful to stand against the rest of the world and that future war is to be a world war in which every individual nation is a part of one or the other contending forces.

Football Squad Will Attend Pep Meeting In Memorial Hall

Coach Collins Urges Loyal Followers to Show True Carolina Spirit.

TAR HEELS HAVE CHANCE President Graham Claims Rally Not a Show But an Aid To Morale.

Coach Chuck Collins will have his football team out at the gigantic mass meeting Friday night in Memorial hall to help stir up enthusiasm among the student body for the Carolina-Georgia Tech game. The team will sit in the first rows of the hall as a part of the student body and listen to a series of short snappy speeches by leading Tar Heel backers.

Coach Collins and his right hand man, Coach Bob Fetzer, will speak. Hon. Norman A. Boren, of Greensboro, Judge W. J. Brogden, of Durham, and Judge E. E. "Scrubby" Rives, of Greensboro, will be guest speakers and will make short speeches to the team and students. President Frank Graham, whose stirring speech before the last trip to Charlottesville, two years ago sent the team on to victory, will make the principal talk and plans for cheers and songs are being arranged.

Coach Collins feels that the Tar Heels have an excellent chance to defeat the Yellow Jackets and urges the Tar Heel followers to come out Friday and prove to the team that they are right behind it.

ROOSEVELT CLUB HEADED BY PENN IN THIS COUNTY

Funds from Membership Fees Will Help Defeat Debts of National Committee.

Plans were announced here yesterday for an active drive for the enrollment of members in the Roosevelt Motor club. The announcement was made by Ashby Penn, local district chairman, after a conference with W. T. Dowd, state president of the organization.

Each member who enrolls in this organization will be supplied with a handsome bronze medallion carrying the likeness of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for president, and equipped with brackets for attaching to the member's automobile. Memberships will be sold in this district by the self-help students of the University.

Ashby Penn Local Head
The Roosevelt Motor club bears the approval of the Democratic national committee, and county organizations are being formed all over the state, under the direction of the state president, W. T. Dowd. Ashby Penn is the local chairman, not only for the University but also for the other cities in the county.

The funds secured by the sale of these memberships will be sent to the Democratic national committee for use in the campaign for the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt to the presidency.

Adams To Speak at Flora MacDonald

Dr. Raymond Adams, professor of English at the University, has been invited to make the address at the Founder's Day exercises at Flora MacDonald college at Red Springs, Saturday morning.

Flora MacDonald college was founded by the Scotch settlers of the Cape Fear section of North Carolina, and the celebration this year is in honor of the centenary of Sir Walter Scott. Dr. Adams, who has made a special study of southern literature, will speak on "Scott's influence on the literature and life of the south."

It is likely that Colonel Walter Scott of New York, inheritor of the title of the famous author, and a trustee of Flora MacDonald college, will be present.

HOUSE OUTLINES ESSENTIAL STEPS TO FRIENDLINESS

Executive Secretary Urges That Freshmen Live Up to Ideals of Friendship Council.

Four essential steps in forming friendships—sympathy, understanding, trust, and love, were outlined Monday night by R. B. House in an address before the Freshman Friendship Council.

The speaker advises the members of the first year group to live up to the ideals of their organization, and to really make it a friendship council. He spoke of different types of friendship, and he urged every member present at the gathering to promote friendliness in every possible way among his fellow students.

The meeting was opened with a prayer by Edwin S. Lanier, Y. M. C. A. self-help secretary and advisor to the group, and closed with a sentence prayer.

A colored quartet, slated to have been on the program as a joint feature with the speaker, was absent; but it was announced that they would be present the next meeting for the entertainment of the members.

PROFESSOR KOCH SLATED TO GIVE READING SUNDAY

Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, will give the first of the Sunday night play readings next Sunday, October 23, at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre.

It is Professor Koch's custom to open the series with a Shakespearean drama and this year the reading will be one of his favorite comedies, The Taming of the Shrew.

Professor Koch played the lead, "Petruchio," in the Forest theatre production of this comedy in 1923, when it was given in commemoration of the tercentenary of the publication of the first folio of Shakespeare's works, and it has always been one of his favorite parts. Everyone is invited to attend this reading.

Nine in Infirmary

The following nine students were confined to the University infirmary yesterday: J. F. Geiger, W. L. Heady, F. P. Abernethy, C. A. Jensen, Basil Hall, H. A. Payne, W. T. Mitchell, Brasel Lanier, and Hugh Wilson.

DEMOCRATIC CLUB TO MEET TONIGHT

Major L. P. McLendon, Campaign Manager for Ehringhaus, to Speak Here.

The Young Democratic club will gather at 8:30 o'clock tonight in Gerrard hall. The principal speaker will be Major L. P. McLendon, prominent Durham attorney and campaign manager for J. C. B. Ehringhaus, successful Democratic candidate for the governorship in the last primary election.

The local chapter is one of the 3,700 organizations of the same type throughout the United States. Tyre Taylor and Mrs. James L. Scott, president and executive secretary respectively, of the national organization, are both North Carolinians.

Such prominent men as J. W. Winbourne, state Democratic chairman, W. B. Umstead, Democratic nominee for congress from this district, A. H. Graham, Democratic nominee for lieutenant-governor, and Frank Hancock, Democratic congressman from the fifth district, will speak at future meetings.

DEBATE TRYOUTS ARE ANNOUNCED

University Will Meet State College in Forum Debate on Presidential Candidates.

At the regular meeting of the debate group last Monday night, presidential candidates for the coming election were discussed, preparatory to tryouts for the forum debate with State college. Tryouts will be conducted at the next meeting of the group Monday night, October 24, in room 214, Graham Memorial.

The discussion at the last meeting centered upon the candidates for the coming presidential election. Speakers for the Democratic candidate were Dave Morgan, T. F. Shuford, C. H. Donovan, L. T. Fountain, and Bill Eddleman. Those who made addresses for the Republican candidate were J. Little, James Bailey, S. M. Pattishall, Lenoir Wright, and John Wilkinson.

The forum debate with State college will be held Thursday, November 3. The tentative wording of the subject is: "Which party should be supported at the next election."

Fourteen Pledged By Local Sorority

The North Carolina Alpha chapter of Pi Beta Phi, national sorority, announced yesterday the pledging of fourteen women students in the University at the close of the rushing season Monday.

Those pledged are: Grace Bowes, Rockingham; Edna Cummings, Chapel Hill; Katherine Jamieson, Oxford; Rena Henry, Chapel Hill; Janie Jolly, Raleigh; Elizabeth Johnson, Eustis, Fla.; Mary Parker, Asheville; Margaret Rawlings, Mount Kisco, N. Y.; Eugenia Rawls, Dublin, Ga.; Jayne Smoot, Washington, D. C.; Mary Ellen Watts, Charlotte; Sarah Vann, Franklinton; Charlotte Winbourne, Marion; and Helene Willingham, Rocky Mount.

RULING OF DOAK DISCUSSED BY 'Y' CABINET MEETING

Morning Watch Will Be Inaugurated By Devotionals in Steele Dormitory.

The petition against the ruling of Secretary of Labor Doak, which forbids non-quota foreign students in this country from obtaining part-time or vacation employment in the United States, was discussed at a meeting of the junior-senior "Y" Monday night.

The meeting was opened with a devotional program led by Ike Minor, and committee reports followed. Lee Greer, chairman of the committee on religious activities, announced the inauguration of another morning watch in 34 Steele following the success of the morning devotionals held in 208 Old East last week.

Leonard Hutchison was elected vice-chairman of the group, Tom Nesbitt and Ike Minor were elected representatives to the state "Y" cabinet.

Bill McKee, president, announced a meeting for the committee chairmen Wednesday morning during the assembly period, and a joint session of all the cabinets Monday evening at 7:00 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

FIRST CLINICAL GATHERING WILL CONVENE FRIDAY

The first clinical meeting of the University Medical Society will take place Friday night in the auditorium of the medical building. Dr. J. P. Jones, dentist of Chapel Hill, will deliver a speech on the relationship of dentistry to medicine. Chalmers Carr, head of the society, will preside.

Composed of practically every medical student, the society is considered an extremely active organization. Membership is not compulsory, but dues are included in the medical tuition. This year every student of both lower medical classes is a club member. Lectures and talks of various scientific interest are included in the programs, speakers being usually prominent local doctors and scientists. Meetings are conducted every other week.

Tar Heel Joins Schools of Country in Determining Student Opinion.

POLL CLOSES SATURDAY

Roosevelt, Hoover, Thomas, and Foster Are Nominees To Be Voted On.

In an effort to determine the collegiate political sentiment throughout the nation, THE DAILY TAR HEEL, working in conjunction with thirty-five of the outstanding college publications in the United States, will conduct a student straw presidential ballot beginning today and continuing through Saturday.

The names of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Herbert C. Hoover, Norman Thomas, and William Foster will appear on the ballots, and the polls will be placed in the lobbies of Graham Memorial and the Y. M. C. A. The ballots will be counted by the editorial staff of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.

Students Urged to Vote

Since the results of this poll will be published in the collegiate press as representative of the true political sentiment of the student body, the TAR HEEL urges all students, as well as each of the political organizations, to co-operate in casting a complete and accurate vote.

In conducting this straw vote the TAR HEEL is acting in co-operation with some thirty-five of the more important college publications in the United States. The results of the voting conducted by these papers will be wired to the central office, that of the Daily Princetonian.

PLANS MADE BY WOMEN'S GROUP FOR CO-ED DANCE

Miss Claudia Hunter Speaks to Association on Selection Of Vocations.

The first meeting of the Woman's Association of the University convened yesterday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in Graham Memorial. The association had as its guest Miss Claudia Hunter, vocational director of Henderson.

Miss Hunter gave an enlightening talk on the selection of vocations for women. She centered her remarks on four important considerations that every woman should make in deciding on her life work; ability, supply and demand, chances for promotion, and chances for character and personality development.

Betsy Harding was unanimously elected vice-president of the association to fill the vacancy left by Jo Norwood, who did not return to school this year. The four representatives for the Union Forum elected were Sarah Vann, Grace Bowes, and Eugenia Rawls from Spencer hall and Edna Cummings representing the town girls.

Plans were presented by the president, Mary Frances Parker, for the fall co-ed dance which will be given Friday night in the Tin Can from 9:30 to 1:00 o'clock. She also presented tentative plans for an athletic program, in the absence of the committee chairman, Julia Bates Brown.

American Music Needs Leader Of Character Says Spalding

Noted Violinist Analyzes American Music, Pointing Out Its Faults And Its Possibilities, Explaining That Musical Progress Comes in Cycles and Today Is An Experimental Cycle.

The present tendency of the world, in the opinion of Spalding. Although the compositions of Sousa, Victor Herbert and others have undeniably been of merit, they have not been sufficient to give America a place beside the homes of Bach and Beethoven.

"The contribution of America to the field of music has been little," he went on. "One must not, however, take this rather pessimistic statement too seriously. The years of America's history do not lie in a period that saw musical progress in any country. They were the barren years of creative music. Musical progress comes in cycles. We are at present in the midst of an experimental cycle, and little contemporary music is of an enduring quality."

Russians and Americans
Turning in his discussion to the question of the modern Russian composers, he drew a striking analogy between the development of slavic music and the present American musical situation, pointing out the possibilities for our future progress.

"Russian music," he said, pausing a moment to light another cigarette while he gathered his thoughts, "has become popular during the last twenty-five years. Previous to that time she was as America, wading through a period of experimentation. For the most part her folk music was of an imported variety, and her symphonic music dominated entirely by Germany. It was not until

Reading the Political Barometer

As a part of a nation-wide collegiate presidential poll, THE DAILY TAR HEEL is today beginning a campus straw ballot in an attempt to find which way the political winds are blowing among the students here at the University. And because of the fact that the results of this poll will possibly be published through the collegiate press as representative of the political sentiments of this student body, it is essential that each student aid the TAR HEEL in seeing that the correct opinion of the campus is recorded.

In the minds of many people the results of straw ballots hold no weight whatsoever. They seem to think that the final count is no indication at all as to the actual beliefs of the persons taking part. Only last spring when the TAR HEEL carried a ballot on the North Carolina senatorial candidates, in which R. R. Reynolds carried the campus overwhelmingly, a correspondent of the Greensboro News intimated that that was a sure sign that Morrison would win. But when the actual state votes were tabulated in the second primary in July, "Our Bob" so completely swamped Morrison that it seemed as though "Cam" had not even been in the race.

This fairly accurate degree with which last year's poll predicted the state primaries was due largely to the fact that an exceptionally large number of students cast their straw ballots. Consequently a more representative opinion of the campus was received.

Since the present ballot carries the names of all four candidates for president, the results of the tabulations will give a good idea as to the extent that the several student political organizations have interested the students in their respective candidates, as well as in politics in general.

If the students will only take sufficient interest merely to cast their vote once, and no more, the chances are that the poll will again—as in the case last spring—be a good barometer for the coming elections. And as the expression is now, "As Maine goes, so goes the election," so it might soon come to become "Whosoever wins the DAILY TAR HEEL poll is certain to win the election."

A New Low

It is indeed a most gratifying evidence of modernism and progress in the south to see airplanes frequently flying overhead, presumably busy in their traffic of commerce. When, however, planes are permitted to skim so low that leaves of the campus trees are brushed off, the menace to life and property overshadows any feeling of pleasure which might be aroused.

Airplanes are at best temperamental mechanisms subject to every ailment and indisposition known to engineering. At any time aileron controls, strut supports, or any of the numerous delicately poised apparatus may give way and a huge monster of death and destruction comes hurtling to the earth.

If the operators of the several planes in and around Chapel Hill are of such heroic constitution, or better, of such foolhardy recklessness as to indulge in sharp banks, loops, and power dives, may we in all humbleness before such great intrepidity and infallible control suggest that they practice their so vitally necessary maneuvers in a place other than the main street of town or the campus of the University.

It is the object and aim of the University to encourage individual research of all natures in so far as possible, but there is a limit, "in so far as possible." In the chemistry laboratories where skilled men, many of whom have received masters and doctors degrees, are conducting their work, precautions of every possible sort are observed in order to prevent the slightest of accidents. Why should any less measures for safety be taken by pilots who in their field are quite obviously not of the calibre of the men occupied in chemical research. A highly skilled operator, be he a pilot or a chemical experimenter, is at all times fully cognizant of his limitations and those of his equipment.

It has been the writer's good fortune to observe some of the nation's most expert pilots, both military and civil, at Lakehurst, N. J.; Roosevelt field in New York; Bolling field in Washington; and the municipal airport at Newark, N. J., the largest in the world. These men know their sterling capabilities and the high quality of the machines which they are called upon to operate, and yet they take no unnecessary chances in the course of the day's activities. Many of these pilots are known personally by the writer and invariably they are of the opinion that stunting should be carried on only where space is plentiful.

May we in conclusion address to the high flyers of the town a request to leave our church steeples intact and our beautiful trees unharmed. The eventuality of a crash in the midst of the town we do not choose to contemplate.—O.S.S.

Liberty in Industry

The utility of the battle of labor against capital was once more made evident in the ending of the textile strike in Rockingham. Twelve thousand millhands, idle for eight weeks, are returning to work, having gained none of their demands. Not only are they to continue under the same arrangement of hours and wages as before, but they must agree also to "have no connection with any union so long as they are in the employ of these mills."

This coercion of the mill employees seems to have resulted from the usual desperate causes. The strikers feared the mills were to open soon without rehiring any workers then on strike. The strikers were without food, fuel, and clothing and, of course, had no choice but to capitulate. It seems strange in a day of at least nominal political democracy that there can be such a flagrant lack of economic democracy. The demands of the strikers to an impartial observer did not seem unreasonable. They demanded a 10-hour day, stoppage of all machinery for one hour for dinner, reduction in house rent, and the recognition of the workers' union. None of these demands were met or were even considered as worthy of being met by the capitalist executives.

It is true also that the strike was conducted in orderly fashion and did not cause bloodshed or great sorrow; and again that the strikers were pleased to get back to work. There was rejoicing on all sides and a decided holiday spirit in evidence in Rockingham; yet it is to be wondered how long this superficial reaction will last. It has more the appearance of laborers "making the best of a bad job" rather than of self-respecting working men acquiring any sort of a permanent content. Very likely the employers have been hard put to manage their affairs during the recent difficult months. Still it would seem that the workers were getting all the worst of the bargain. It would seem that some day the men in charge of capital and the supervisors of labor would realize the necessity for some sort of active co-operation between labor and its co-factor in production, capital. Friendly and peaceful conferences between entrepreneurs and workers, as represented in well-regulated unions, would not seem out of order. We are not living in an age of paterfamilism nor of feudalism. Our democracy, it would seem, calls for liberty in industry as well as in government, a right and privilege to work as well as to vote.—B.B.P.

In The Main

By MAYNE ALBRIGHT

This campus is not unaccustomed to an occasional Hal Kemp or a Kay Kyser, but a Thor Martin Johnson is an unexpected gift of the Gods. His music Sunday in the Playmaker theatre was as surprising as it was delightful. The concert also had that rare quality of being just too short enough to be really appreciated.

An encouraging thing about our educational life is the interest fraternity men are showing in biological subjects. Near an exhibit at the State Fair I saw an interested group of students including Ferguson and Binder of Kappa Alpha, Wright and Stone of Theta Chi, Drane of Zeta Psi, and Anderson of D. K. E. I am not certain about the exact nature of this particular study but the explanation of the raw-throated crier outside was: "Hey, Seeeee the Third Sex—in the naaa-ked flesh."

In congratulating the winners of the Greater Prosperity Contest, this column wishes to recall a story of a time when merchandizing in Chapel Hill was on a different scale and sales were not at such a premium. Klutz store was the one place you could buy everything and the only place you could buy anything. One day the amiable owner and sole clerk was sitting in the back of his emporium deeply engrossed in a game of checkers. A customer came in and looked around for service, coughed, tapped his money on the counter, stamped his foot, and made all the signs denoting an urgent desire to be waited upon. "Doc" Klutz pondered his next move on the checker board, blissfully unmindful of the stranger. At length his opponent called his attention to the prospective purchaser, but without looking up the "Doc" whispered: "Shhh, maybe he will go away."

And it was about the same time that young Frank Graham wandered in and asked for a nickel's worth of candy pointing at several varieties as his choices, and was asked by the genial and generous proprietor: "Will you take it all today?"

The popularity of the many recent books exposing damaging facts in the lives of prominent people tempts me to release for the press some news which would cause great consternation in educational ranks everywhere. Its a list of more than fifty people in and around Chapel Hill who say "Those kind—"

I nominate Nutt Parsley as the hardest working Yackety Yack editor of all time. He comes into his office as often as "The All American Girl" comes in on the radio, which is too much. Nutt may get out the annual on time this year, but the mental strain is telling on him. Some time ago he wanted to work unusually late at night and was afraid all the doors would be locked and he couldn't get out to go home. I assured him that if they were, he could get out of a window, and before a roomful of witnesses I got this reply: "Can you unlock the windows from the inside?"

Won't some of my readers whom I haven't insulted yet think up a new name for this column???

American Music Needs Leader of Character

fifty or sixty years ago that Russia began to break away. It was during this period of change that a great deal of oriental flavor seeped into Russian music. It was Rimsky-Korsakov and his famous pupil, Alexander Glazunov, who took this mixed salad and gave it a definite style which we call "Russian."

Lack of Form

America needs a leader, thinks Albert Spalding, a man who will demand the attention of the world and can give some semblance of form to the shapeless mass of modern music. "What we need," he continued, "is a Rimsky-Korsakov, an outstanding composer who will impregnate American music with his own personality. Music is like language, and any language is what its writers are. Italian was but a dialect until Dante and Boccaccio arose to give it character and personality."

"The main difficulty with most modern composers is that they are striving after too much originality. They are continually asking themselves, 'Is this new?' instead of, 'Is this true? Is this good?' They would do better to look to the truth of their expression than its originality."

stopping into the students and the team itself, an unbeatable spirit that will swamp Georgia Tech Saturday.

Beside the big meeting Friday night the cheerleaders have called a short cheerio practice at 8:00 o'clock in Memorial hall for Wednesday and Thursday night. This meeting is called to practice yells and to get students to learn the correct timing and words of the "Song of the Cheerios" and other yells. Dr. H. S. Dyer has consented to aid in this particular and it is hoped that a large number of students with real Carolina spirit will attend these volunteer cheerio meetings.

The cheerleaders feel as does the coaching staff that the spirit of the Tar Heel followers has lagged lately and hope that the enthusiastic demonstration at the grid-graph last Saturday when the team scored against Georgia was a good sign of what will happen in the Carolina stands against Georgia Tech.

LOCAL ASSAULT CASE BOUND OVER TO HIGHER COURT

A special session of recorder's court Monday night found probable cause in the case against Jesse King, resident of Orange county near Chapel Hill, who was charged with secret assault. King was bound over to the superior court at Hillsboro under $200 bond. John T. Johnson, charged with assault with deadly weapon in the same altercation, was convicted of simple assault and released upon payment of costs.

Johnson testified that, during a quarrel with King at Johnson's home, he had knocked King down twice and had ordered him off the premises. After leaving King at the boundary of his property, Johnson had started working in his cane-patch, when he was struck from behind with a large stone and immediately assaulted by someone whom he could not see.

Eye-witnesses were produced who testified that King was the assailant. Both the accused admitted that they were at the time under the influence of whiskey.

When the evidence had been presented, Judge Hinshaw pronounced John T. Johnson guilty of simple assault, and taxed him with the costs.

In the other case, King was released under $200 bond, while each of the witnesses was placed under $50 bond.

Attorneys in the cases were Sam Gattis of Hillsboro for Johnson and Henry Whitfield for King.

GROUP RETURNS FROM TEACHERS CONFERENCE

Dean N. W. Walker, I. C. Griffin, Professor H. W. Munch, and Misses Sallie Marks and Nora Beust, all of the school of education, have returned from Asheville, where they attended the tenth annual convention of the Western District Teachers association Friday and Saturday.

This district includes the counties west of Catawba, and Griffin reported that there were 2,000 teachers present from these counties. He said that the thing that impressed him at the convention was that the teachers, instead of talking about the depression, were invariably discussing further ways to help the students.

Professor Munch addressed the mathematics section, and Miss Beust addressed the section devoted to children's literature.

FETZER STRESSES NEED OF ATHLETICS IN YOUTH

Coach R. A. Fetzer, in his talk during the assembly period yesterday, stressed the fact that all students should go out for some form of athletics.

"Athletics are essential in the education of youth because a good mind is useless in an unfit body," Fetzer continued. He enumerated the various opportunities that University students have for engaging in athletics.

Reverend G. R. Dierlamm conducted the devotional.

TAR HEEL COACH SHIFTS BACKS TO FIND NEW DRIVE

Coach Collins Anxious To Uncork Drive and Power from New Combinations.

Yesterday afternoon, Coach Collins put his Tar Heels through a hard workout on a muddy field in preparation for the all-important game with Georgia Tech this Saturday. The Tar Heels have several injured players on their list, but a full force will be on hand for the Yellow Jackets.

Several rather unexpected changes were made in the squad yesterday by Coach Collins. Martin and Burnett, former halfbacks were shifted to quarterbacks, Croom was changed to fullback from right half and McCaskill moved to left half from the fullback position. Peacock and Jones, who have been running as quarterbacks were shifted to right halfbacks. Coach Collins denied that this was an experiment but stated that it was done in an effort to locate the drive and power the Tar Heels need in their attack. Any of these changes that produce power and drive will be permanent.

Backs Practice Passes

The squad was divided into groups of linemen and backs. The backs worked on pass combinations and pass defense. The reserve linemen ran through Tech plays while the varsity forwards practiced starts. George Barclay and Bill Collins, who have slight shoulder injuries, worked out by themselves.

The backfield men had a lengthy scrimmage with the freshmen. The quarterbacks ran back punts for about two hours with Martin and Burnett looking especially good. Burnett ran hard and sliced through the frosh tacklers with a drive that encouraged Coach Collins.

Freshman Breaks Leg

In this scrimmage J. W. Kirkpatrick, of Canton, N. C., a freshman guard, sustained a broken leg in the first serious casualty of the football year at Chapel Hill. Kirkpatrick was hurt when going down under one of the punts.

CHI PSI, SIGMA NU, AND LEWIS WIN

Intramural Play Marked by One-Sided Scores Despite Muddy Field.

Regardless of slippery fields the intramural football games were featured by high scores, three of the winning teams counting more than forty points. Chi Psi and Sigma Nu, as a result of wins, jumped into a tie with the Betas for leadership of the fraternity league. Aycock tied Lewis for the dormitory lead. All the top teams had three wins in three starts.

Lewis Gets Close One

In the only close contest of the afternoon Aycock kept their slate clean by downing Old West 7 to 0. The only marker of the afternoon came early in the second half. Overstreet taking the ball across the line after getting a long pass from Efland. The punting of Efland was the outstanding feature of the winner's attack. Womble and Crouch were the stars for the losers.

Chi Psi Victors

Flashing a neat running attack mixed in with some nice passing, Chi Psi downed S. P. E. 51 to 0. Dudley counted four of the winners' touchdowns, one of them coming from a beautiful fifty yard run through the entire S. P. E. team. LaBorne was second best scorer with two to his credit. Frazier led the

Long's Shorts On Sports

By Morrie Long

If present plans materialize, a silver loving cup will be awarded to the fraternity and dormitory tag football loop winner this fall. Randolph-McDonald and Stetson "D" may do the donating. Competition should be keener than ever in Herman Schnell's intramural league.

Carolina by a break—Georgia Tech by a single point. That's what the betting gentry of Carolina seem to think about the two teams' chances of copping the all-important homecoming clash this Saturday. If Tar Heel spirit would mean anything, the Collins' team should romp off the field victors with lots to spare. There'll be plenty of spirit at the game—in every respect.

Down in South Carolina one of Coach Laval's backs tried to pull a "Roy Reigel" but outsmarted himself by running out of bounds when he saw he was going the wrong direction. While up in New York Shipwreck Kelly, not the flag pole sitter but Kentucky's gridiron pride, is going strong with the Giant professional team. He's the best ground gainer they have, even if Red Cagle is on the payroll.

Outstanding games are scheduled for this Saturday, V. P. I. meeting Kentucky, Vanderbilt clashing with Georgia, while Army and Yale will renew their annual rivalry. Southern California and Stanford in the west, Notre Dame and Carnegie Tech, Purdue and Northwestern, and Harvard against Dartmouth are other leading encounters.

Even if Wake Forest loses all remaining games it is having a great season—what with all her moral victories. Against Duke this Friday the Deacons will have a tough time leaving the field undefeated; the coterie of good Blue Devil backs in Cox, leading Big Five scorer, Mason and Laney seem to be too powerful on paper for the Wake Forest club to beat. Yet accidents happen and it wouldn't be surprising to many if Duke loses.

Carolina fans will have the opportunity to see another contender for a conference center berth when Captain Monk Neblett of Georgia Tech plays here. Not since the halcyon days of such grid stars as Father Lumpkin and Peter Pund have the Tornadoes had a more outstanding man. Monk's a fighter through and through.

Scout Meeting Postponed

The University Eagle scout club meeting scheduled for tonight has been postponed until Wednesday night next week, on account of mid-term examinations.

loser's attack.

First Defeat

Unable to stop Sigma Nu's great passing attack, Theta Kappa Nu was defeated for the first time this season. The final score was 48 to 0. With Griffith doing the heaving and Long, Byerly, and Lane on the receiving end, the winners counted regularly throughout the contest. Long led the scoring with three touchdowns while Lane was close behind with two. Berry and Longest were outstanding for the losers.

In the third big scoring contest of the afternoon Phi Sigma Kappa was victorious over Z. B. T., 40 to 0. Kaveny's running and passing was the outstanding feature of the game. Chaplin and Evans were the other stars for Phi Sigma Kappa.

Alabama Team Built Up Around 'Hurry' Cain, Star Defense Back

"Red Elephants" Eliminated from Southern Conference Race But Still Have One of Strongest Teams in Weight, Deception, and Speed Developed under Coach Frank Thomas.

Last Saturday's defeat at the hands of Tennessee eliminated Alabama as a contender for the Southern Conference championship, but the fact remains that the Crimson Tide must be listed among the leading teams of the south.

The Red Elephants, as Alabama became known during the regime of Wallace Wade, still have plenty of beef, but they have more speed and deception than ever before. Frank Thomas, who took over coaching duties last year when Wade went to Duke, is a follower of the Notre Dame style of play, and he has taught his huskies plenty of tricks to go along with their power.

Thomas has built his team around one man, John (Hurry) Cain, who weighs around 190, punts and passes from the port side, plays defensive fullback, calls signals, skirts the flanks, or smashes the line as the occasion demands, and does all these things with ease and effectiveness. Cain's kicking and passing has been largely responsible for Alabama's great success in the last three years, and a large percentage of Crimson Tide touchdowns have been scored by him.

There are plenty of other good ball players on the Alabama squad but none so brilliant and able as Cain.

Among the other performers of ability in Frank Thomas' backfield, is a young man by the name of Holley, who happens to be one of the few men in the south with ability to garner field goals. Others are Walker and Chappell, at halfback, and Mosley at quarter. All have proved their merit under fire this year and will be ready to try to fill the gap next year when Cain will no longer be eligible.

Chief among the line stalwarts is Captain Newt Godfree, a man mountain who plays a great game at tackle and could also be called upon to kick were not Cain and Holley so skilled in that particular feat. Godfree got his start in 1930 as understudy to all-American Freddie Singleton and turned in a brilliant exhibition in the Rose Bowl game against Washington State. Last year, he jumped into a first string berth, and immediately began the job of making Alabama supporters forget Singleton. This year he has been handicapped all season with a trick knee, but there have been mighty few gains made over his sector of the line.

Another veteran, by the name of Laslie, is at the other tackle and the guards are Hupke and Kirkland. Dotherow, Leach, and Swain have been taking care of the terminals this year with Hewes at center. The line, from tackle to tackle, averages slightly over 200 pounds, and the ends have very little tendency to lower the average.

Alabama opened its 1932 season with a 45-6 win over South-

FROSH PREPARE FOR GAME WITH OAK RIDGE TEAM

Coaches Howard and Sapp Work to Iron Out Flaws in Attack for Game Friday.

The Tar Babies are working hard to obtain that co-ordination of attack that they lacked last Saturday against Campbell college. The frosh defense was good against the junior college club but their offense was ragged and a lack of smoothness was something Coaches Sapp and Howard have worked on this week.

The freshmen meet the strong Oak Ridge eleven here Friday and the coaches hope to give another impressive showing against the Cadets. Oak Ridge has a powerful team this year having already defeated Weaver college 41-0 and then conquered the Wake Forest frosh by another one-sided score, 21-0.

Phelps, Tar Baby back who received a hard blow on the head as a result of a tackle in the Campbell game has recovered and will be ready to play as will Snyder another back who is suffering from an ankle injury. The line-up for the game is still undecided but the probabilities are that Ellisburg and Barwick will be at ends, Evins and Hobbard at tackles, Moore and Joyce at guards, and Kanner, center. In the backfield, Cox, at quarter, McCahren, at full, and Snyder and Montgomery at the halves seem slated to start.

LARGE CROWD IS TO WATCH TECH BATTLE CAROLINA

Homecoming Alumni Will See Powerful Georgia Tech Team
In Action Here Saturday.

Carolina partisans are in line to see one of the outstanding games on the Tar Heel schedule this coming Saturday when Georgia Tech's destructive Tornado comes to town to resume one of the south's most colorful and intense rivalries with the Collins' gridmen. Out of all the big games on Carolina's card, alumni demand this one to top their homecoming festivities so a big week-end is anticipated, especially if the Tar Heels are victorious.

For the past two years the two elevens have battled to deadlocks, the 1930 game ending 6-6, while last year's clash terminated 19-19. Even when Tech was national champions Carolina gave the Atlantans torrid battles; the 1928 fracas going to the

COMMITTEE WILL MAKE PLANS FOR FORUM PROGRAMS

The Union Forum of the University will convene tonight at 9:00 o'clock in room 214 of Graham Memorial for the first meeting of the current year. The purpose of the meeting is to elect a secretary and three members to the board of directors of Graham Memorial.

Mayne Albright will speak on "Plans and Policies of the Management," after which the Forum will make such suggestions as it deems necessary. A committee is to be appointed to make plans for the programs of future meetings and to set dates and times for the regular meetings.

Purpose of Organization

The Union Forum was organized last year under the guidance of Mayne Albright, then president of the student body. The original purpose was to serve as an electoral college for selecting men to the board of directors of Graham Memorial. This body is the only completely democratic organization on the campus and discusses proposed legislation before being put to the vote of the student body. The group also initiates and prepares legislation on any subject regarding the welfare of the campus.

Platform Contest Will Close Today

Today will be the last day of the mammoth contest that THE DAILY TAR HEEL, in co-operation with the Carolina theatre, has been sponsoring this week. This contest is the writing of comical platforms for the picture, "The Phantom President," starring Jimmie Durante and George M. Cohan.

The writers of the first three best platforms will receive three guest tickets each and the writers of the two second best will receive two tickets each. The picture "The Phantom President" will be shown at the Carolina theatre Thursday.

All those who wish to try in this contest are urged to bring their platforms to the TAR HEEL office before 3:00 o'clock this afternoon, as none will be accepted after that time.

LARGE CROWD IS TO WATCH TECH BATTLE CAROLINA

Techmen 20-7, while the 1929 score favored Carolina 18 to 7.

The stage is set for another great battle this year. Georgia Tech opened the season with a crushing defeat of Clemson, the South Carolina team scoring 14 points against 32 for the Jackets. Despite the fact that they outplayed Kentucky, the Golden Tornado lost 12 to 6 in one of the best battles seen in the southern conference this year. Last week's skirmish with the highly touted Auburn Plainsmen was lost 6 to 0.

Carolina Slow to Start

On the other hand, Carolina has had a tough job of getting started, what with a schedule of the two biggest title contenders in the south facing them in early season. Last week's fine performance against Georgia which ended in a 6-6 tie and with the experience of these three hard conference setos behind them, Carolina should be about ready to capture a conference tilt.

Representatives to the Union Forum of University students living in town were elected at a smoker in Graham Memorial Monday night. These students will be represented by Stratford Donnell, Val Edwards, and W. D. Whisnant.

Robbers Get Rich Haul

Two daylight robberies were staged last Monday afternoon in Durham. About $5,000 in gems were taken from the homes of Victor S. Bryant, Jr., and Dr. Carl P. Norris. A leak from within police headquarters to outside papers destroyed an effort to maintain secrecy.

Britain Treaty

J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominations, announced in the House of Commons yesterday that Great Britain had abrogated its commercial treaty with Soviet Russia. Great Britain is serving a six months notice, and it is generally understood by Soviet authorities that the English are still anxious to increase its trade with Russia and is ready to enter discussions with that object in view at the earliest possible time.

Raleigh Plans Welcome

North Carolina Democrats yesterday made plans for a rousing reception for Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt when he makes his only speech in this state, October 25. He will speak from the rear platform of his private car during the fifteen minutes it will stop at Raleigh. The car will be equipped with amplifiers.

DEFERRED PAYMENTS ARE DUE THIS WEEK

At the time of registration, a number of students were allowed to give notes for part of their fees. These notes are all due within the current week. This notice is given in order that those who have been given the privilege of extension in signing their notes may make arrangements to take up these notes on the due date.

Meyer Addresses Group

Dr. Harold D. Meyer of the department of sociology went to Leaksville yesterday to address the executive leaders council of the Spray-Draper mills. He spoke before about three hundred people on "Our Responsibility to Youth."

Seminar to Meet

Dr. S. H. Hobbs of the rural economic and social department will discuss "The Economic Position of North Carolina" at the initial meeting of the Economics Seminar tonight at 7:30 in 113 Bingham hall.

CAROLINA CHESS CLUB SPONSORS LECTURE SERIES

The Carolina social chess club is sponsoring a series of lectures on the principles of chess in Graham Memorial every Wednesday night at 7:00 o'clock. The lectures are under the direction of Paul J. Miller, Jr., national president of Chi Eta Sigma, honorary chess fraternity, who has had a wide experience in tournament play and in teaching the game.

These lectures offer an opportunity to beginners to learn the fundamentals of the game, and all students are invited to attend the series, which will begin tonight. Co-eds are especially asked to participate.

From the members of the club will be selected a team to represent the University in intercollegiate matches which have been arranged with Duke university and State college and also a match with the Raleigh chess club.

western, and opened its Conference drive a week later with a 53-0 rout of Mississippi State with the entire team showing tremendous power and speed.

George Washington university was the next victim and Cain gave fans in the national capital something to talk about by scoring all four of his team's touchdowns and playing the leading role defensively in the 28-0 victory.

Then came tragedy in the form of a wet field that made Alabama's deception almost impossible. The Crimson Tide got away to a good start and took the lead in the second quarter when Holley booted a field goal from the twelve yard line following a march from midfield. The lead, small as it was, looked mountainous until the fourth quarter when Feathers punted dead on Alabama's one yard line. Cain went back to punt, fumbled a bad pass from center momentarily and, with Tennessee line-men rushing in on him, got off a bad punt that skidded off the side of his foot and went out of bounds on the eleven yard line. A few minutes later Feathers slashed off tackle for a touchdown, and Alabama's chances for the Southern Conference championship were gone.

Filming Held Up For South Sea Wedding

While in the South Seas, filming "Mr. Robinson Crusoe," showing today at the Carolina theatre, Douglas Fairbanks stopped production for two days to participate in the Tahitian wedding ceremony of Walter Pahlman, chief of his technical staff, and Simone Terai, a direct descendant of the most famous chief in the history of Tahiti.

The native ceremony was performed in the district of Tiari-roo, the bride's ancestral home. It was marked with all the colorful, ancient pageantry consistent with the historical Polynesian tribe.

More than five hundred natives, in costumes and full regalia—relatives and guests—were augmented by Fairbanks and several members of his company.

FACULTY IS TO PLAY IN GOLF TOURNAMENT

The annual faculty golf tournament which was originally scheduled to start last week-end was postponed due to the inability of some of the contestants to be present. By virtue of victories last year, the English teachers are the present champions. With their championship team intact and with Horner, hero of last year's matches, going so far as to take lessons, it appears at the outset that the English department is in a good way to retain the title.

Committee Chairmen Meet

Today During Chapel Hour

The chairmen of all the Y. M. C. A. committees will gather this morning during chapel hour on the second floor of the campus "Y" to discuss the programs for the forthcoming week.

This is a very important gathering and all chairmen are requested to attend.

FIRST OF DANCE SERIES PLANNED FOR THURSDAY

The first of a series of dances to be given during the current year under the direction of the Union Forum is scheduled for tomorrow night in the banquet hall of Graham Memorial. The affair, lasting from 7:00 to 8:00, will be informal and every one on the campus is invited to attend.

Music will be furnished by Jack Wardlaw and his band.

STUDENT VOTING IN PRESIDENTIAL POLL CONTINUES

Campus Daily Joins Thirty-Five Other College Publications in Straw Ballot Forecast.

In an effort to determine the political sentiment of Carolina students THE DAILY TAR HEEL is conducting a straw vote on the presidential candidates. The balloting began yesterday and will continue through Saturday.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL is joining thirty-five other collegiate papers in conducting this national student straw president ballot. The results of the local balloting will be tabulated and sent to the national headquarters which is The Daily Princetonian, the daily of Princeton university. Since the results of this poll will be published in the collegiate press as the true political sentiment of the student body, THE DAILY TAR HEEL is especially anxious to get as many students to vote as possible.

Ballots will be published in to-day's and to-morrow's paper. Students are asked to fill out these ballots checking the name of the candidate they prefer and turn them in at the ballot boxes which are located in the lobby of the "Y" and the first floor of Graham Memorial.

'TAR HEEL' STAFF WILL MEET TODAY

Various Boards of Paper Will Convene at Different Times in Publication Offices.

Four meetings of the different divisions of THE DAILY TAR HEEL editorial staff have been scheduled for this afternoon, all to take place in the offices of the paper in Graham Memorial.

New men wishing to try out for the publication may do so this afternoon by coming to the office of the paper to attend the meeting of those divisions of the staff they wish to work with.

Reporters will meet at 3:30 o'clock to take up several routine matters relating to the paper. Sport reporters are required to attend this meeting.

The editorial board will gather at 2:30 o'clock to confer with the editor while 3:00 o'clock is the hour set for the feature board's conference.

City editors and desk men will discuss their work at 4:00 o'clock.

Schwenning Returns From Research Trip

Dr. G. T. Schwenning, associate professor of business administration in the University school of commerce and economics, who has been in Europe on his leave of absence from the University, arrived in Chapel Hill last week. He will not resume his duties as instructor until the beginning of the winter quarter.

Dr. Schwenning spent most of his time in Geneva, Switzerland, where he collected material for a new book he is writing on dismissal wages.

Groves Lectures Tonight

Dr. Ernest R. Groves, professor of sociology of the University, will speak tonight in the east parlor of the Methodist church on "The Opportunity of the Modern Parent."

KENNEDY TO OPEN CONCERT SERIES

First Concert of Series Will Be Given in Hill Music Hall, Sunday, October 23.

Nelson O. Kennedy, of the music department, will open his annual series of vesper organ concerts Sunday, October 23, at 4:00 o'clock in Hill music hall. He will present the following program: Concert Overture in B minor, by James H. Rogers; Cantilena, by Carl McKinley; Sketch, by Robert Schumann; Toccata and Fugue in D minor, by J. S. Bach; Meditation-Elegie by Felix Borowski; and Finale from the first symphony of Louis Vierne.

All those interested are invited to attend these concerts which will be given monthly throughout the college year.

TICKETS AWARDED CONTEST WINNERS

Pete Ivey Wins First Prize in Platform Writing for "The Phantom President."

A number of the University's political and comic geni took careful consideration of the country's needs during the past four days and then entered THE DAILY TAR HEEL-Carolina theatre platform contest which ended yesterday, with the result that Pete Ivey submitted the platform adjudged the best by the contest committee.

"If I am elected president, I promise to make bread lines into cake lines, runs on banks will be slowed to a walk, and there will be six legs to every chicken, eight breasts, fourteen gizzards, and no wings and necks," was Ivey's contribution.

This contest was sponsored jointly by THE DAILY TAR HEEL and the Carolina theatre in connection with the showing of "The Phantom President" at the local theatre today.

Second prize goes to Carl Thompson who presented the platform, "The erection of clubhouses for 'forgotten men' and 'unknown soldiers' to meet in." And as a second plank in his platform he proposes, "More beef and less bull."

"Windshield wipers for spectacles on rainy days," receives the third prize. This was presented by R. C. Page.

Other students winning prizes were A. J. Barachet, J. Spotswood Smith, and Tom Hicks.

The persons whose platforms received one of the first three places, will be awarded three guest tickets to the Carolina theatre, and the next three winning platforms will merit two guest tickets each. These may be received from the editor this afternoon in the office of the publication at 1:30 o'clock.

SOPHOMORES WILL ELECT DANCE LEADERS TONIGHT

The election of five dance leaders for the sophomore hop will take place tonight at 7:00 o'clock in Memorial hall. All nominations for leaders will be made and a written vote taken, the five polling the largest number of votes receiving the positions. Other important business will be attended to at the meeting.

Business Staff to Meet

There will be a meeting of the Buccaneer business staff at 7:00 o'clock tonight in the offices of the publication.

LATEST ISSUE OF PLAY-BOOK TELLS OF FOREST DRAMA

Playmaker Publication, National-ly Read Magazine on Play-writing, Is Off Press.

The September number of the Carolina Play-Book, quarterly periodical of the Carolina Playmakers and the state-wide Carolina dramatic association, is just off the press. Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Playmakers, is editor of the Play-Book; Archibald Henderson and Paul Green are advisory editors.

Each issue of this magazine contains a play which was written in Koch's playwriting class here and has been successfully produced. Lehigh university has ordered a complete file of back numbers of the Play-Book of which the September issue is number 3 of volume 5. Mrs. Sara W. Huntley, head of the English department of Bay Ridge high school, Brooklyn, N. Y., has also just ordered a complete set of back numbers. The Carolina Play-Book is on file in the largest libraries in the country and is also in the library of the British museum in London.

The Play-Book has a very imposing subscription list with copies going to twenty-eight states, from California to Massachusetts and also abroad to England, Hawaii, British West Indies, and to Germany.

The chief feature of this number of the Play-Book is the article "A Log-Cabin Theatre," in which Koch writes of the progress made by Genevieve Woodson in developing the innate artistry of the back-country people of North Carolina. Miss Woodson is the founder and director of the Log-Cabin theatre at Ebenezer Neighborhood in the densely forested section of Wake county, twenty-five miles east of Chapel Hill. A summary of this article appeared recently in The Christian Science Monitor.

Drive For Contributions To Loan Fund Keeps Many In University

Mrs. Jesse Kenan Wise and Anonymous Contributor Increase Fund With Large Gifts; Dean Bradshaw's Organizing Influence Has Distributed Funds on Campus.

Although fifty years elapsed before eighteen student loan funds were established at the University, that meagre number was increased by thirty-two from the spring of 1931 to the spring of the present year. This astounding rise in funds for needy University students is the most significant review of the results of the Emergency Student Loan Fund drive instituted last January.

From about $60,000 last May the fund has grown to the present figure of $109,000. Among the several contributions, which served to swell the total of funds to be used for needy students, are a donation of $10,000 from an anonymous contributor and a gift from Mrs. Jesse Kenan Wise of Wilmington, in the form of securities having a par value of $47,000.

At present, only the income from this gift, estimated by President Graham at about $2,000 annually, is available. When stock market conditions warrant the liquidation of the securities, the principal will also be placed at the disposal of the loan fund.

LIBRARY RECEIVES BIBLIOGRAPHICAL WORKS OF NOTE

$30,000 Grant Permits Purchase Which Will Make Library Outstanding in South.

Through the aid of a grant of $30,000 made by the General Education board last spring, the University library has made important additions to its collection of bibliographical works. The newly acquired works include card indices and catalogues of the leading libraries in this country and in foreign countries. Works of this type are considered essential for scholarly research. The library expects, through the benefits derived from the grant it received, to build up the fundamental tools for a graduate school in the field of bibliography which will be surpassed by few universities in the nation.

The library bibliographical material before this grant was the most extensive in the south, and it furnishes an excellent foundation for a collection of the kind which has been added. Despite this fact, however, the research work in the south has been greatly handicapped by the lack of bibliographical resources.

Among the materials which have already been purchased are included monumental sets of catalogues which will be useful in locating rare books in other principal libraries and in arranging for loans with other libraries.

New purchases this year will be divided into five classes: printed cards of libraries in America, catalogues of the national libraries of other nations, such as the British Museum, period indices, and subject bibliographies.

Wilmington Club to Meet

The Wilmington club, which met last week, will have its second meeting tonight in 209 Graham Memorial at 7:00 o'clock.

CO-ED DANCE PLAN NEAR COMPLETION

Women Students Asked to Get Bids Today and Tomorrow in "Y" and Graham Memorial Lounge.

The Woman's Association of the University is rapidly advancing plans for its fall dance which will be given tomorrow night between 9:00 and 1:00 o'clock in the Tin Can.

Efforts are now being made to secure an orchestra but no definite arrangements had been made yesterday.

The affair is one of the annual events of the University's social season.

Co-eds are asked to secure their bids in the reception room of Graham Memorial from 9:30 to 1:00 o'clock today and tomorrow and also between 2:00 and 5:00 tomorrow afternoon.

PHI INITIATES NINE MEN AT MEETING

Bill Concerning Change in New Football Rules Tabled Until Next Week's Gathering.

The Phi assembly initiated nine new men as representatives at its regular meeting last night. They were: D. W. Mozier, Englewood, N. J.; S. A. Douglas, Greensboro; Simmons Patterson, New Bern; William Houston, Goldsboro; John F. Butler, Washington, D. C.; Winthrop Durfee, Hadlyne, Conn.; T. S. Rubin, Cola, S. C.; E. V. Holly, New Rochelle, N. Y.; and Guion Lee, Grantsboro, N. C.

After the initiation ceremony was completed, the assembly started discussion on the bill concerning the new football rules. Leonard Hutchison, S. A. Douglas, and Emmett Willis spoke in favor of abolishing the new changes in the rules, and Red Rankin and Roy McMillan defended the rules.

The bill was tabled for discussion at the next meeting along with two other resolutions. They are: "Resolved: That the Phi Assembly go on record as endorsing the recent consolidation of the state-owned institutions of higher learning into a greater University of North Carolina," and "Resolved: That property of churches should be taxed the same as any other property and that the sons of ministers should be compelled to pay tuition at the University."

PROMINENT CHILDREN WORKERS VISIT HERE

Misses Ann Whitney of New York, director of the American Child Health association; Mildred English, assistant superintendent of Raleigh schools; Ann Holford, supervisor of Wake county schools; and Nellie Brogden, supervisor of Guilford county schools, are guests today at the cottage of Misses Sallie Marks and Nora Beust, both of the school of education.

Miss Whitney will meet informally with a group of parents at 8:00 o'clock at the Carolina Inn to discuss child health.

MISS BEUST COMPILES LIST OF CHILD'S BOOKS

Miss Nora Beust of the school of library science has compiled a list of 100 Best Books for the Child's Own Library for the Journal of the National Education Association. This list was compiled at the request of Mrs. Joy E. Morgan, editor of the Journal, and will appear in a future issue of the magazine.

UNIVERSITY WILL COOPERATE WITH YALE IN RESEARCH

D. J. Brawley Hired to Study Lead Storage Cells for Use in U. S. Navy Submarines.

According to a co-operative agreement with the naval research laboratory of the Navy department at Washington, the University of North Carolina in conjunction with Yale university has been selected to carry out studies relating to lead storage cells and their use in submarines. All undersea movement of submarines is effected from power from storage batteries and most submarine disasters are due to explosions from battery gases. To attempt to remove the causes of these explosions is the main aim of the work.

Part of the theoretical study, which is of importance in the fundamental knowledge of the lead storage cells in general is being carried out in co-operation with Yale university. The University will confine its work to solubility studies on lead peroxide and lead sulphate in sulphuric acid solutions.

The agreement enables the University to employ a full time assistant to carry on most of the

Graham Memorial Banquet Hall Is Scene of First Dance of Proposed Series.

The first of a series of informal dances will be given tonight in the banquet hall of Graham Memorial between 7:00 and 8:00 o'clock. This dance will be under the direction of the Union Forum. Jack Wardlaw and his band will furnish the music for the occasion. Everyone on the campus is welcome and no admission will be charged.

If the dances prove to be popular with the students they will become a weekly event, being sponsored each week by a different organization on the campus. Special entertainment features are being planned in connection with the dances.

The idea of these weekly informal dances originated with the Union Forum last spring, but this is the first opportunity for testing out the idea. The purpose of the idea is to better acquaint the students with one another and bring about a closer unity among the student body.

Redheads Will Meet Friday To Organize

All red-headed students in the University that might be interested in forming a redhead club are urged to be present at a meeting scheduled for Gerrard hall Friday at 7:00 o'clock. The movement is being backed by Red Rankin. As there are a great number of redheads registered in the University this year such a club is a great opportunity for a general "get-together" for boys and girls whose heads are adorned with titian locks.

There was a club of redheads formed at the University last year and received such fame as to be mentioned in College Humor as a collegiate oddity.

This'll Leave You Cold

There comes a time in every TAR HEEL editorial writer's life and now is the time: for a denunciation of the desecraters of the campus greensward. To be consistent, a trite introduction is appropriate to a stale subject. As far back as University students can "remember when," editorial writers and administrative people—the only ones who ever seem really concerned—have importuned the casual student to preserve the beauty of the campus scenery by making use of such gravel-strewn stretches as were originally intended for walks.

One among the over-lords of South building used to appear annually in freshman assembly to show that the soil of our particular section of Orange county is not naturally suited to grass-culture, that grass actually has to be coaxed into growing here, and that the trampling of student heels is positively non-conducive to the best results in cultivating a thick turf.

There are still certain illusioned idealists in the faculty who believe that they may discourage walking on the grass by apprehending and lecturing to all offenders. The buildings department seems to be only University agency which retains no illusions on this subject.

Long ago these practical people found that it was useless to erect even the simplest "Keep Off the Grass" signs, that students were either blind or that they just didn't give a damn.

It is suggested that this problem can be more satisfactorily solved by the psychology department than by any other division of the University. There seems to be some obscure human motive underlying the perversity which prompts hundreds of people to walk out on Kenan field exactly thirty seconds after they have heard good reasons why they should not do so.

Let the psychology department discover the source of this evidently perverted notion and prescribe a course of correction for it. Otherwise, my son and yours, with no inhibitions whatsoever, will be walking on the grass twenty years from now. Can not the psychologists develop an anti-grass-walking complex?—E.C.D.

With Feet

Of Clay

Faith in Big Business lately seems to have received quite a jolt. The dramatic debacle of the Kreuger financial "empire" a few months back and the recent crash of the Insull interests amounts more or less to a revolution: A revolution in the minds of the man in the street.

One of the attributes of the American public mind during the last thirty or forty years has been placed over the heads of our so-called financial wizards—Inabobs—magnates—and continued to grow in its dazzling brilliance in the lusty years of the '20's. It becomes the fashion to deride the government official in contrast to the independent business man and to emphasize the dishonest and self-seeking pettiness of the former. Laissez faire in America became part of the average man's religion: "as soon think of public ownership as worshipping Siva." "Leave it to private enterprise," "Rugged Individualism," "Devil take the hindmost," were the watchwords of the boom times. And so it went, with America rolling merrily along in the face of world-wide post war depression—electing rugged individualists, men whose economic philosophy was to everything run the way it would.

An obvious reaction was the result. The false super-structure of American prosperity collapsed. A dazed expression of disbelief broke out upon the faces of ten million rugged individuals. However, most of them were inclined to say: "Oh, Schwab knows what he's doing" or "Insull will make everything right."

Today all this super-abundance of confidence in the business leadership of our country has given way. Men, in a sense, have become stripped of the delusions of the great, magnanimous geniuses of American financial life. Instead of putting in mice as public office-holders and then calling them mice, the public has begun to awaken to the real needs of the day. A socialized electorate is in the process of being formed.—V.J.L.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Cartographobia

It took nearly three weeks of almost constant penciling, inking, and water coloring to construct the "Wonderous Village of Chapel Hill," which reposes in its frame in the north lobby of Graham Memorial. Mary Dirnberger drew it and gave us all the information. Says that the "1929" in the lower right hand corner is the year of her class, not the date that the map was begun.

Chapel Hill and environs were first outlined in pencil with appropriate decorations on four separate sheets of heavy drawing paper. Then the four sections were fixed together, inked, painted, and the whole business shackled. This isn't the first time that the artist has tackled a job of this sort, although the Graham Memorial map is the largest yet. Several others of scantier proportion have decorated the bulletin board of the Bull's Head book shop in the past.

When Winter Comes

Through our own secret channels, we are informed that the September Buccaneer may finally get off the press early in November. Good old Buc. When the first of November rolls around each year you can be reasonably certain that the September Buccaneer which was promised for November will certainly be ready for distribution before the fifteenth of December. But what's three months more incarceration in the print shop to an already six months old joke?

Life and Letters

By Edith Harbour

Any woman who can remark that a man has a long colorless face that looks like a codfish crossed by a satyr might be expected to add that as he was the only man present at the Sunday evening soiree of a Baron Something's literary salon he was as welcome as manna from Heaven. The male of the species so characterized was George Moore, noted for the beautiful prose and decadent themes of his novels. The originator of the remark was Gertrude Atherton whom Vanity Fair recently nominated for the Hall of Fame "because she wrote thirty-seven books in forty years; because she is a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor and a descendent of Benjamin Franklin; because she has courage, wit and an exciting capacity for enthusiasm; because she recently published still another best-seller, Adventures of a Novelist, the memoirs of her rich, tumultuous life."

Gertrude Atherton (nee Horn) was born on Rincon Hill in San Francisco, which was the only part of that half-mythical outpost on the Pacific one could be respectfully born in back in the good old days. She was educated at private schools there and in Kentucky. She married young one of her mother's suitors, thereby allying herself with one of the most prominent families of her native state. Since ladies in Spain didn't write, and mother-in-law Atherton was of direct Spanish descent (by way of Chile) the fact that Gertrude read books, many books, and had a "rotten spot" in her brain which led to the fabrication of fiction was something akin to the skeleton in the closet. Fortunately it was that her husband died early, she was then free, except for family disapproval, to go to New York in search of a career. She traveled much as

The Musical University

By Vermont Royster

Playing in Memorial hall Tuesday night before an audience of 1,500 persons, Albert Spalding, noted American violinist, received an ovation second only to that which the University gave Mme. Amelita Galli-Curci at her concert last winter. Although somewhat inauspicious in his choice of an opening number, the beauty and feeling with which he imbued the entire program served to repeatedly call him back before his enthusiastic audience.

Despite the fact that the opening selection was from the pen of the ever-popular Claude Debussy, it was one scarcely suitable for an introduction to University students. While lively in tempo and calling upon the dexterity of the artist for its proper execution, it lacked the softness of theme more appreciated by the untrained ear. The occasional pizzicato passages and the shading of the intermezzo together with the hints of buoyancy in the finale did much to she wrote; she met the great and the near-great. Some of her books created sensations at the time they were written; none would cause even a ripple of disapproval today. She made many friends and, naturally, quite a few enemies. She it was who proved after painstaking research among old documents in the West Indies where she was gathering material for the book which was to be The Conqueror that the brilliant Alexander Hamilton was illegitimate. There were people who never spoke to her again. Not that that mattered in the life of a novelist. Her adventures, both at home and abroad, are recorded with rare good humor.

Adventures of a Novelist abounds in terse characterizations of fellow-writers and those who frequented the literary salons of London, Munich, and New York. Thomas Hardy was different, suffered from insomnia, and was suspected of attending literary gatherings to escape from his wife. Whistler buzzed constantly like a mosquito ready to pounce, and therefore could never be taken for anything less than a celebrity of the first rank. Bret Harte was a smallish but dapper man who always walked with mincing steps as though his patent leather shoes were too small for his feet. Of Watts-Dunton, whose vigilance kept Swinburne away from the pub (that poet could write good poetry only when under the influence) Mrs. Atherton expresses the wish that he may be frying on a gridiron in hell. And of titled noblemen to whom she frequently played hostess at Villa Montalvo in California she remarks quite inelegantly that "gilded roosters for the most part would be better in glass cages to look at."

NOTICE

Students who are interested in taking subjects not offered in the University school of Commerce—Typewriting, Gregg Shorthand, Secretarial Bookkeeping, etc.—are cordially invited to attend an investigation meeting in the Hill Building over Durham Dairy Products at 7:45 P. M. Thursday, J. Gordon Wooton of Carolina Commercial College will be present to explain the different courses, arrange schedules to meet your individual requirements, etc. Courses will be offered in the afternoon and evening.

And listen! The tuition rates are low—made while the depression was on; yet the instruction is guaranteed to be of high quality, inspired by optimism, and the faith that prosperity will soon return.

Unaccompanied Sonata

In the unaccompanied sonata of Bach which followed, Spalding had ample opportunity to display the full range of his technique and at the same time demonstrate the tone qualities of which the violin is capable. The monotonous effect produced by the continued repetition of the fundamental base and the building of the fugue were most impressive. Bach is noted for his power with the strings, and in this, the most difficult of his sonatas for the unaccompanied violin, he calls upon their greatest resources. At times we hear the full tones of the quartet or the organ, and as he reaches the upper register in the allegro, the light echo of the flute.

As an encore to the Bach

We have an opening for a local college representative that will pay several hundred dollars per year for a few hours' work daily. Man selected must be upper classman and be extremely popular with student body.

Desert air is wet . . . by comparison!

Making telephone equipment presents many an interesting problem to the engineers of Western Electric—manufacturer for the Bell System.

A case in point is the drying of telephone cable before putting on the protective lead sheath. This step is of utmost importance, for the tiny copper wires cannot carry your voice properly unless their paper insulation is thoroughly dried. To this end, Western Electric engineers devised special drying ovens in which the air is thirty times drier than desert air!

The same ingenuity and thoroughness go into every step of making cable, telephones, switchboards and many other kinds of telephone equipment. The dependable apparatus that results is one reason why Bell System service is dependable.

Tar Heels Show Determination In Double Workout Yesterday

Squad Works on Defense for Georgia Tech in Tin Can Last Night.

SHIFTS PRODUCE RESULTS

McIver Changed to Guard and Plays Well; Collins Saves Injured Men.

The Carolina gridders redoubled their efforts yesterday, spending the afternoon running through and brushing up on their offense and coming back to the Tin Can last night for a lecture on Georgia Tech offense and defensive dummy scrimmage, leaving no stone unturned in getting set for their Homecoming game here Saturday, which they seem determined to win.

The first eleven was blocking and driving well in offensive dummy scrimmage, but Coach Collins took no chances of losing valuable men and kept out all players with slight injuries, including Barclay, Hodges, and Collins in the line and Phipps in the backfield.

Chandler and Croom were running great in one backfield, Thompson and McCaskill in another.

Henry Burnett, newly converted from halfback, was getting around forty yards regularly in punting practice, and looked very good quarterbacking for the second backfield. Coach Collins liked his work and said he would play there Saturday.

McCaskill, who was converted from fullback to halfback at the same time, also looked good in his new role. Bill Croom had to go back from full to half due to Phipps' being held out, but looked fine there.

Charlie Woolen, who continued his fine punting in yesterday's practice, remained silent quarterback for the first backfield with Chandler calling signals from fullback.

McIver at Guard

Gordon McIver, reserve center, was tried at left guard in Barclay's place in the varsity line and looked good. The Durham boy likes to play guard and may see service there Saturday.

The other posts were manned by the boys who started and starred against Georgia. Walker and Brandt, ends; Underwood, center; and Kahn, guard, had relief men, but Smith and Tatum, tackles, and McIver went the whole route and did good work all the way.

HARD SCRIMMAGE ENDS FROSH WORK FOR CADET GAME

Tar Babies to Have Light Workout Today for Game Tomorrow With Oak Ridge.

Coaches Sapp and Howard drove their freshman squad hard in yesterday's practice in preparing them for the Oak Ridge game here tomorrow. After the customary warm-up exercises the coaches put the entire squad through one of the hardest scrimmages they have had this season.

At the end of the scrimmage the second team was given the ball to try various pass plays in a dummy practice with the first team on defense. Oak Ridge's best offense is a passing attack which is hard for any team to solve. The majority of the team was back out to practice. Snyder, first string halfback, still has a bad ankle but will be ready to start the game tomorrow.

The coaches held a meeting with the quarterbacks last night in order to drill them in fundamentals of both offense and defense. Tonight at 7:00 o'clock in Bingham hall there will be a meeting of the entire squad.

Tennis Tourney Delayed

All second round matches in the fall tennis tournament for non-lettermen must be completed this afternoon, according to an announcement by Coach Kenfield yesterday.

The tournament, in which most of the first round matches were concluded Saturday, has been delayed by the recent heavy rains, and the coach is anxious to get the players advanced as fast as possible.

CAKE RACE ENTRY LIST WILL CLOSE THIS AFTERNOON

Annual Race Will Be Run Between Halves of Carolina-State Freshman Game.

Today is the last day to register for the ninth annual intramural Cake Race, slated for Friday, October 28, during the halves of the U. N. C.-State frosh game, it was announced yesterday by the department of intramural athletics.

In order to get in all of the six workouts required of all entrants before they are eligible to enter the race, it will be necessary to begin today. Dale Ranson, cross-country coach, in charge of the workouts, admonishes all boys who have completed their required workouts to keep in shape.

The race will commence in front of the Patterson-Morehead bell tower, and it will end at the east goal in Kenan stadium. The feature will be an added event to the State-U. N. C. freshman tilt.

The course will be marked with white flags Monday to indicate the course to participants who wish to give it the once over.

Supper for Winners

The first ten men to finish will be awarded medals by the intramural department, and as a special feature they will be entertained that night at the home of "Dean" G. H. Paulsen with a supper cooked by Mrs. Paulsen.

Team prizes will be given to each group having four men to finish in the first fifty. A cake will also be given to the organization having the largest number of men to start the race, and to the team having the most men to finish in the first fifty.

DASHIELL STARS FOR BLAIR TEAM

University Professor's Son Plays Halfback for New Jersey Preparatory School.

Richard Dashiell, son of Dr. J. F. Dashiell, head of the psychology department of the University, is one of the star football players on the strong Blair Academy team of Blairstown, N. J., this year. He is playing left halfback on the preparatory school team and making quite a name for himself.

Last year young Dashiell graduated from the Chapel Hill high school where he starred in football and baseball. He was quarterback on the local eleven last fall and played shortstop on the baseball team. He is to enter Carolina next year and with this year's experience at Blair, should be a promising freshman back next fall.

Blair has been undefeated this year and has encountered such strong opposition as Lafayette, Pennsylvania State Teachers' college, and Lehigh freshmen. Dashiell has scored a touchdown in each game this season and has been a power of strength on the defense.

CAROLINA'S HANDY MAN

STUART CHANDLER, CAROLINA QUARTERBACK

Stuart Chandler, star Carolina back, who has played all over the Tar Heel backfield and turned in a steady game against Wake Forest, Vanderbilt, Tennessee. His shining play against Georgia last Saturday stamped him as one of the best backs in the south.

Seven Letter-men Form Nucleus For Potential Wrestling Team

Squad, Led by Captain Percy Idol, to Begin Work Next Monday; Schedule Not Yet Completed But to Include Four Conference Foes and Two Intersectional Matches.

Coach P. H. Quinlan, Carolina wrestling mentor, will have seven letter-men and a fine group of reserves from which to build this year's mat team. The schedule has not yet been completed, but a tentative card has been compiled.

There will be six meets, four with Southern conference foes, one with Davidson, strong Big Five contender, and then a couple of intersectional matches are being contemplated, with either Army, Navy, Princeton, Columbia, or Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute.

Four Conference Foes

The Southern conference teams with whom matches will be scheduled are: Duke, Washington and Lee, V. M. I., and V. P. I.

In the 118 pound division, there is a letter man to help out the team. Thad Hussey, junior, will lead the contenders, but Jack Tillery, another third year man, should give them some competition. The 126 pound division, as usual, has a fine crop to pick from. Clark Mathewson, junior monogram man, will have an uphill fight to clinch his position. Hollingsworth and P. P. Davis, both sophomores, will give Mathewson lots of trouble.

Although the graduation of Wayne Woodard in the 135 pound class leaves a big vacancy, there are two men who can fill his shoes, they are Diblee and Olman. The 145 pound class looks like it will be headed by Hiller, junior letter man, who saw service last year.

In the 155 pound division, Don Conklin, undefeated during the 1929-30 season, should look like a fine veteran. Conklin fought only once during the past season, and that time was against the Washington and Lee Generals, who have maintained a high reputation in southern mat circles for years.

Another vacancy which must be filled is that left by Tsumas, captain of last year's club. A monogram man in the 165 pound class, Spell, a law student, should have the inside track despite the fine competition offered by Slim Effin, a junior, and Frank Hargraves, a sophomore, who saw service on the yearling squad.

Idol Heads Unlimited Class

The 175 pound division has for its best bet, Mack Auman, another junior who won his spurs last year. The unlimited class will be led by Captain Percy Idol, a senior. Dalzelle, a junior, will be another outstanding candidate for the berth.

The first workout of the combined freshman and varsity squads is slated for Monday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the Tin Can. Although Coach Quinlan will not be able to be on hand for all the workouts, he will keep in close touch with his assistants, Captain Percy Idol and the monogram men, concerning the progress of the candidates. It is very important that all men interested in making this year's team or even the yearling squad should be present.

Rockne System Still Strong

Because of the poor starts made by several major teams using the Notre Dame system, Yale and Navy being among the most prominent of this class, the opinion became prevalent that the new rules were putting the damper on the Rockne style of play.

However, with Notre Dame rolling up an average score in two games that came near to two points a minute, and with our own Tar Heels and Georgia, both exponents of the famous style of play, showing plenty of power in the tie game last Saturday, it appears that the new rules have little effect on this system.

INTRAMURAL PLAY IS MARKED WITH EXCITING GAMES

A. T. O., Phi Gams, and L. C. A. Score Wins in Play on Soggy Fields.

Some of the best football played to date was shown by the teams participating in yesterday's intramural tag football contests. Phi Gamma Delta, although outplayed by Kappa Alpha, turned defeat into victory in the closing moments when Henry Hodges crossed the line for a touchdown and June Bateman, a substitute, dropkicked the winning marker.

Alpha Tau Omega outplayed the S. A. E. team to gain a well-deserved 12-0 win. Lambda Chi Alpha downed Delta Psi, 6-2 in first downs, while Steele and the Independents forfeited to New Dorms and Ruffin, respectively, in others of the day's scheduled encounters.

A. T. O. Wins

A. T. O.'s big red team was too aggressive for the S. A. E. eleven. Alan Smith snared one pass while standing in the end zone to give his team a 6-0 lead early in the first quarter, and, in the second, tossed a long forward to Clarence Stimpson, who stepped across the line to bring the A. T. O. total to its maximum.

This last touchdown play was a thriller, with Smith showing excellent headwork in converting an attempted end run into a sure score by passing to Stimpson.

Wally Kendal was another star performer for the A. T. O. outfit, while Buck Harris and Pinky Connor led the S. A. E.'s in their vain attempt to hold their opponents.

Phi Gams Best Kappa Alphas

Kappa Alpha started its game with Phi Gamma Delta by rolling up a half-time lead of three first downs to one, and completely outplaying the Phi Gam outfit.

About midway in the second half, Kappa Alpha resorted to the old sleeper play to send Everett across the goal line after a dash of about twenty yards.

The Phi Gams here staged a rally which carried them to a touchdown, with Henry Hodges scoring the tying points and June Bateman accounting for the winning conversion.

Delta Psi Loses

Lambda Chi Alpha met with unexpected resistance from Delta Psi, which held its goal line from being crossed, but could not match the superior pass combination of Sparks Griffin to several Lambda Chi Alpha receivers. L. C. A. won on first downs 6-2.

GALLOPING GHOST ANALYSES IRISH SYSTEM OF PLAY

Former Illinois Star Says Notre Dame Style Depends on Power; Warner Style on Speed.

Those football fans who have, in the past, held that the Notre Dame system was superior to the Warner style because speed and deception were, in their opinions, superior to power plays, and those who rooted for the Warner system because they favored the power style of football are both wrong.

According to Harold "Red" Grange, Illinois University's famous "galloping ghost," who has played against both systems, made a study of them, and ought to know, the Notre Dame system is, contrary to the general idea, based not upon speed and deception but solely upon power, while the teams coached in the Warner style of play depend upon speed and deception instead of power, again refuting a wide-spread impression.

KIRKPATRICK CONFINED TO WATTS HOSPITAL

J. W. Kirkpatrick of Canton was injured Tuesday while in football practice with the freshman squad. He was taken over to Watts hospital in Durham to be X-rayed and it was found that both bones in his right leg were fractured.

The following six men were confined to the University infirmary yesterday afternoon: Paul B. Ceason, Lee Davenport, J. F. Geiger, W. L. Heady, F. P. Abernethy, and T. N. Peacock.

Intramural Schedule

Intramural tag football contests scheduled for this afternoon are as follows:

4:00 p. m.—(1) Kappa Sigma vs. Delta Kappa Epsilon; (2) Best House vs. Swain Hall; (3) Mangum vs. Grimes.

5:00 p. m.—(1) Phi Delta Theta vs. Zeta Psi; (2) Phi Kappa Sigma vs. Sigma Phi Sigma; (3) Carr vs. Everett.

ROCK THROWER'S MOTIVE WORRIES PLAYMAKER CAST

Production Group Thinks Attacker Opposes Putting "Uncle Tom's Cabin" on Boards.

Members of the Playmakers organization have been puzzled over a mystery which may reach great proportions if the solution figured out by the group proves correct.

Unknown parties threw a rock through a window of the Playmaker theatre Monday night and the Playmakers, trying to solve the mystery, believe they have a solution.

The smashed window, they think, may be a protest against the production of Uncle Tom's Cabin, Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's anti-slavery and anti-southern classic. If this is the case and red-blooded descendants of the Confederacy are taking these steps, the Playmakers hastened to announce yesterday that their attitude in choosing the play as their opening vehicle bore no malice toward slavery or the south.

They state their intention of producing the piece as two fold. First they wish to afford their patrons with the opportunity of seeing what is perhaps the most famous and most discussed American drama. Second the organization aims at amusing its audience with the naive exaggeration of the theatre of the 1850's. The play, it is stated, will be done as nearly as possible, in the grand old style.

experimental work, and he will be with the University for ten months for a period ending in the middle of next August. The work will be under the direction of H. D. Crockford, associate professor of physical chemistry. Dr. Crockford has for the past three years been employed by the division of physical chemistry of the Naval Research Laboratory spending his summers and vacations there and carrying on certain phases of the work in Chapel Hill. D. J. Brawley of Statesville who received the M. S. degree at the University last summer has been selected for the assistantship.

The department of chemistry has carried on much solubility work during the past few years and a number of papers by Dr. Crockford and Dr. F. K. Cameron have been published in the Journal of Physical Chemistry.

Dr. F. R. Bichowsky, superintendent of the division of physical chemistry of the naval research laboratory was in Chapel Hill last Monday for a week to discuss final plans for the work.

Carolina's Attraction Features Radio Stars

"The Big Broadcast," a romantic comedy set against the background of a radio studio, and featuring many of radio's greatest personalities in company with a cast of screen favorites, is playing at the Carolina theatre today.

Bing Crosby, Kate Smith, the Boswell Sisters, the Mills Brothers, Cab Calloway and his orchestra, Burns and Allen, Arthur Tracy (the Street Singer) and Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, all of whom have radio audiences numbering millions, are cast with Stuart Erwin, Leila Hyams, and other movie players in the picture.

The story revolves around Crosby, Miss Hyams, and Erwin. Crosby, in the film as in real life a radio favorite, is so fascinated by another woman that he never shows up at the studio in time for his broadcasts, and consequently gets himself fired.

FRESHMAN CO-ED CLASS ORGANIZES FOR FIRST TIME

Peggy Rawlings Elected Chairman of First Women's Class; Frances George, Secretary.

For the first time in the history of the University, the co-ed freshman class met and organized at a meeting Monday night. Heretofore this class has been too small to permit organization, but since there are twenty-seven co-ed freshmen this year, some form of government was deemed necessary.

Officers elected were: Peggy Rawlings, chairman; Naomi Hockutt, vice-chairman; Frances George, secretary; Edna Cummings, social chairman; Jayne Smoot, athletic chairman; and Frances Wood, publicity chairman.

This class will meet on the first Monday in each month. Tentative plans were made for a freshman dance.

lovers. This minuet, with its charmingly careless swing, became under his touch a delightful morsel. Even its technical runs possessed a light airiness, not found in the two sonatas, and in its lyric moments it held a suggestion of the songs of Polly Peacham.

With this minuet of Mozart's the tone of the program changed to one of a quieter and deeper beauty. The remaining numbers were of a lighter spirit and one more appreciated by his audience. A Fantasy by Schumann, and a number by Lili Boulanger as an encore, concluded the first part of the program. The Schumann selection was a romantic tone poem abounding in counter-melody and violin runs against the piano. It was in this number that Monsieur Benoit proved himself the master of his art. The more mature and experienced performer of the two he showed himself the guiding hand and worthy of the distinguished reputation as piano accompanist he has won during the past twenty-five years.

Szymanowski, the composer of La Fontaine d'Arethuse, though not widely known to the general public has gained for himself quite a reputation by his impressionistic writing. This number is in reality a duet for the piano and violin, each instrument alternating in the domination of the theme. The use of the two instruments to picture the mythological story of Arethusa is skillfully though somewhat fantastically done. It is a number of changing temperament, and the varying tempi bring about a distinctly unusual effect. The last half is muted to produce the soft, gentle tones, and a unique touch is added by the glissando on the muted strings.

Of the next two numbers little attention may be paid to the Burleska of Suk. While it was a delightfully humorous sketch abounding in runs, it is among the lesser known of the works of the modern Bohemian composer. The dreamy Nocturne of Lili Boulanger, a talented young French girl who died at an early age, presented the quietest picture of the evening. It was suggestive of the more plaintive melodies of the Russian composer, Rimsky-Korsakov. Characteristically it had little form, being for the most part a light, romantic poem.

No concert program would be complete without a Hungarian dance and Spalding played a Joachim interpretation of Brahms' Hungarian Dance in G Minor. The concluding number, which was from the pen of Sarasate, the Spanish Kreisler, was built around three popular Spanish themes. Its rhythm was of a distinctly Spanish nature and

In answer to the insistent applause of the audience, Spalding returned and gave an unusual arrangement of Schubert's lyric, Hark, Hark, the Lark, for which Mary Gordan may be well remembered. SYSTEM OF RESERVING GAME TABLES CHANGED

A new system for reserving and claiming reserved tables in the game room of Graham Memorial has been instituted this week. To reserve a table in pool or ping-pong one must go to the desk and receive a slip made out in duplicate which indicates the time. When the specified time arrives he takes his slip to the desk, receives his cue or ping-pong equipment; then he claims his table by virtue of his receipt.

DEFICIENCY REPORTS DUE NOT LATER THAN FRIDAY

The reports of deficient students are due in the office of the registrar not later than October 21. The so-called "mid-term" tests have been moved up two weeks to enable the deans of the various schools to make a check and to enable the student to see where he is weakest. The extra two weeks will be valuable to the student who is deficient in his grades in that he will be able to make these deficiencies up before the quarterly exams.

DEMOCRATS HEAR MAJOR McLENDON DISCUSS POLITICS

Speaker Tells Young Democrats
That Party Will Have Great
Year in State and Nation.

Attacking the present Republican administration and predicting a greater day for the country under the leadership of Roosevelt, Major L. P. McLendon addressed the Young Democratic club Wednesday night in Gerrard hall.

After the regular business meeting, Major McLendon, who is one of the most prominent members of the Durham bar, a staunch Democrat, and campaign manager for J. C. B. Ehringhaus, was introduced by Obie Harmon, one of the most ardent Democrats in this part of the state.

Describes National Situation

Major McLendon opened his speech with the statement that the country is facing a period of reconstruction, that the period of destruction was still going on, but that it would soon be ended and the Democrats would be victorious in the coming elections. He proceeded to show that the country reached its highest peak of patriotism under Woodrow Wilson, but that it began to degenerate as soon as Harding was elected president, and that, as a result of the Republican administration, the country is in a deplorable state of affairs.

Roosevelt Ideal Candidate

Then, having built up the idea that the country must have new leadership, he said that Roosevelt was ideally suited for the presidency as he is a progressive and a man of vision.

STAFF OF ANNUAL MAKES PLANS FOR CLASS PICTURES

Juniors and Seniors Are Given
New Opportunity to Have Pictures Taken.

In an effort to have the picture of every junior, senior, and fraternity man included in this year's Yackety Yack, the business staff has arranged facilities for making appointments so that it will involve but a minimum of inconvenience to the individual. The seniors and juniors have their photographer's fees included with their tuition this year, and consequently no additional expense is involved for the picture.

The arrangements which have been made in order to facilitate the making of appointments are: 1. Each dormitory store has an appointment sheet on which dates with the photographer may be made. 2. Each day at Chapel period there will be a desk in the "Y" where appointments may be made. 3. There will be an opportunity for students to sign up at Pritchard-Lloyd's every day between 9:00 and 5:00 o'clock, except between the hours of 1:00 and 2:00. 4. If necessary, appointments will also be made at the Wooten-Moulton studio.

November 1st is the last day upon which appointments will be made. After that date, all persons not having an appointment will not be able to have his picture made and included in the Yackety Yack.

FATHER AND SON BANQUET IS GIVEN BY LOCAL ROTARY

Professor T. Smith McCorkle, President of Rotary, Acts as Toast Master for Event.

The Chapel Hill Rotary club, which has always taken an active interest in the welfare of the boys of the community, invited more than twenty youngsters of the village for dinner last night. The occasion took the form of Rotary's father and son banquet, which was given at the Carolina Inn, with Professor T. Smith McCorkle, president of the Rotary, as toastmaster.

The youngsters had one of the best times in their lives, and so did the grown-ups who entertained them. Shelton Henninger was in charge of the program. Professor George A. Howard, of the University's school of education, made the principal address and boys from the local scout troop put on a song fest, after which there were contests and prizes.

ALBRIGHT SPEAKS TO UNION FORUM AT FIRST MEETING

Student Union Manager Talks on Plans and Policies for Graham Memorial.

The Union Forum met Wednesday night for the first meeting of the current year at 9:30. The fifty-six members present showed much interest and enthusiasm.

Ike Minor was elected secretary, and Red Boyles, J. K. Taylor, and Donald Shoemaker were elected to the board of directors of Graham Memorial.

Mayne Albright gave a talk in which the plans and policies of the management of Graham Memorial were outlined. At the conclusion he asked that any suggestions for the betterment of the building be given to him or to the board of directors. A motion was made and passed that a committee be appointed to assist Mayne Albright in planning regular mid-week programs of entertainment. This committee is composed of Tom Broughton, Eugenia Rawls, and Simmons Patterson.

Program Committee

A committee made up of L. L. Hutchinson, Dan Lacy, Stratford Donnell, Elizabeth Moore, and Joseph Sugarman was appointed to assist the president in arranging future Forum programs.

Plans to discourage students from walking on the grass were discussed and the Forum voted cooperation in this matter. A committee was appointed to carry out these plans. Donald Shoemaker is chairman of this committee and is assisted by John Wilkinson and George Fountain.

Until further notice the Forum will meet on Wednesday nights in the middle of the months. The time will continue to be 9:30.

Game Room Plans Made

The manager of the game room in Graham Memorial announces that an extensive program is being planned for the next few weeks. There will be a ping-pong tournament and the bowling alleys will be formally opened.

The new miniature shuffle board is seeing much service along with the other new games.

Babylonian Clay Tablets In Hanes Collection Date Back To 2350 B. C.

Collection of Ancient Volumes in University Library Was Made Possible by $30,000 Memorial Fund; Books Date From Beginning of History to Present Time.

Twenty Babylonian clay tablets dating back to 2350 B. C. are a feature of the recently established Hanes Foundation for the study of the origin and development of the book, which includes volumes from the beginning of history to the present day. Among the types stored in two rooms on the third floor of the University library are Egyptian papyri, medieval manuscripts, incunabulae, Chinese block books, palm leaf books from India, leather scrolls and printed books.

The collection was made possible by a $30,000 memorial fund established in April, 1929, by the children of John Wesley and Anna Hodgin Hanes of Winston-Salem. Since the original sum has been exhausted, the University has continued to enlarge the aggregation.

Ancient Material

Translations of the Babylonian clay tablets are available, so that the pieces are not a total mystery. Several fragments of the papyri which date back to about 100 B. C. are included in the collection. Papyrus was made from weeds which grow along the banks of the Nile river.

The group of incunabulae which number 460 are the largest in the collection. The incunabulae are books which were printed with movable type before 1500. The oldest book in the stacks is the Biblia Latina, which was printed in Strassburg, Germany in 1467. A history of the world set up in Nuremberg, Germany in 1493 contains more than two thousand illustrations. In general, books of this period were not illustrated since the cost of the wood cuts used to reproduce the drawings was exceedingly high. The drawings are crude but interesting.

Religious Works

There are a dozen Indian palm leaf books which contain the text of the Buddhist religion. They are more than twelve inches in length and about three inches wide. A leather scroll book written in Hebrew is also among the relics. Among the Chinese block books is one of the first dictionaries of the Chinese language. Block books were printed from blocks of wood instead of by movable type.

One of the most interesting of the oddities are the ostraka which are broken pieces of pottery used by the Egyptians for their everyday records. The ostraka was similar to modern scratch paper.

A Mexican text of the species, Maya hieroglyphs, precedes the Conquest of Mexico in the sixteenth century. There are also leaves which contain the Syriac, Coptic and Arabic languages of Asia.

The books are especially useful to the departments of Greek, Latin, ancient history, European history, German, romance languages, and English. The manuscripts are of value to students of the fine arts. The collection may be inspected at any time, and admission can be gained to these rooms by applying at the circulation desk on the second floor of the library.

EDITORS SPEAK IN CHAPEL PROGRAM

Freshmen Hear Heads of Publications
Speak on Purpose of Student Organs.

The editors of the four publications of the University, the DAILY TAR HEEL, the Carolina Magazine, the Buccaneer, and the Yackety Yack, were the featured speakers at assembly yesterday.

Charles G. Rose, Jr., editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL, said "It is the duty of our publication to present that side of every question which will be for the best interest of the student body. The DAILY TAR HEEL is acting as the mouthpiece of the student body of Carolina. It also acts in the capacity of a publicity agent for the University on other camps."

Bob Barnett, Carolina Magazine editor, announced that "the policy of the Carolina Magazine is to present articles that have a direct bearing on the interest of the student and which are written in a clear, simple style."

Nutt Parsley, editor of the Yackety Yack, explained the work and purpose of the annual.

STUDENT STRAW VOTE CONTINUES

Balloting Goes on at "Y" and in Lobby of Graham Memorial Until Saturday.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL, working in conjunction with thirty-five of the outstanding college papers in the United States, is conducting a student straw presidential ballot. The voting which began on Wednesday, and will continue through Saturday, is now at its height. All students are urged to vote if they have not already done so, since the results will be published in the collegiate press as representative of the true political sentiment of the student body.

The ballots, which contain the names of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Herbert C. Hoover, Norman Thomas, and William Foster may be deposited in ballot-boxes located in the lobby of Graham Memorial and the "Y."

McLendon Will Speak

Assembly this morning will be devoted to the practicing of cheers. Major McLendon of Durham will also speak.

SOCIAL PROGRAM OF WEEK END TO FEATURE DANCES

Woman's Association Dance Set for Tonight, and Grail Dance Scheduled for Tomorrow.

Beginning with an informal dance sponsored by the Union Forum in Graham Memorial last night, the dance activities of the University this week-end will offer a full social program.

The fall affair of the Woman's Association will take place tonight in the Tin Can between 9:00 and 1:00 o'clock and a large number of persons are expected to attend the event. Jack Baxter and his orchestra will furnish the music.

The Order of the Grail will sponsor its second dance of the year tomorrow night in the Tin Can with Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra furnishing the music.

In addition to these events several fraternities plan informal gatherings for alumni who will return for Homecoming Day.

CHARLOTTE POLICE FREE ACCOMPLICE IN PENN SHOOTING

Robert Thompson, Alleged Member of Group Responsible for Shooting Student, Freed.

Robert G. Thompson, supposedly an accomplice in the shooting of Ashby Penn, University student, last spring, and reported to be connected with the robbery of a Chapel Hill store preceding the shooting, was freed Tuesday by Frank Littlejohn, chief of detectives in Charlotte.

Despite the fact that Thompson was suffering with an illness and had been living under an assumed name in Washington, Indiana, he voluntarily surrendered himself at the police headquarters in Charlotte, while Chief Littlejohn communicated with Chapel Hill authorities. Chapel Hill police wired back that Thompson was not wanted, resulting in his complete freedom.

One evening last spring, Thompson drove up in a car to a cafe in Chapel Hill with three companions. Two of the group went into the cafe intent on holding up the proprietor but the alarm was given, forcing the men to return to their friends in the car. Thompson, not knowing the plans of the intended robbery, thought that the two had become mixed up in a fight and were running away. Meanwhile the police commanded the car of Ashby Penn in which the owner was driving and gave chase to the fleeing group. While the first car stalled after a short distance, the pursuing car was also disabled with a flat tire. Thompson, eager to get away from the scene, was half a mile from the shooting when it occurred, according to his statement to Chief Littlejohn.

From North Carolina, Thompson traveled to Indiana where he lived as Robert Rowe. A short time ago, ill in health and constantly preyed upon with the idea of being a hunted man, he returned to this state to offer himself up to the authorities.

SCHOLARSHIPS TO BE AWARDED BY HOLT COMMITTEE

Applications for Holt Scholarships Must Be Turned in to Hobbs by November 12.

Applications for Holt scholarships must be presented at Dean A. W. Hobbs' office, South building, before Saturday morning, November 12. These applications must be accompanied by three good recommendations, one from the student's home town, giving information regarding the applicant's desirability.

Blanks may be obtained from the president's office. The scholarships are available from the interest of a fund of $10,000 bequeathed in the University's favor by Lawrence S. Holt, Jr., of the class of 1904. The stipend of $125 is given to each of four students, one from each class in the University, who excel in scholarship, and are in need of further financial aid to continue their work.

Committee on Selections

The committee that selects the students is headed by Dean Hobbs and composed of Dean N. W. Walker, D. D. Carroll, F. F. Bradshaw, M. C. S. Noble, H. G. Baity, and J. M. Bell, R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, and H. F. Comer, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. The meeting of this committee for the purpose of the selection will take place Saturday morning, November 12.

Holt has also made available funds for needy and worthy students. These funds are not to exceed a stipend of $400 per student, and are to cover necessary expenses in tuition, board, and other University charges.

Late Nerve Specialist, Donor
Of Scientific Volumes.

The University library has recently received a gift of about a hundred and twenty-five volumes, containing the works of many scientists and historians. Mrs. W. B. Pritchard, a friend of the University, made the donation.

These books are from the library of the late Dr. W. B. Pritchard, a noted nerve specialist of New York. Although neither Dr. Pritchard nor Mrs. Pritchard are indebted to the University in any way, their only connection with it having been that they were natives of North Carolina. Mrs. Pritchard has endeavored to show her interest and her late husband's in the University by her donation of a part of his library.

The collection includes selected works of Charles Darwin, a series of seventy-five volumes entitled The History of Nations, the Complete Works of Herbert Spencer and a selected library of modern science, composed of well known books by authorities in the various fields of science.

The Campus Voice

Organized last year when the need for immediate crystallization of student opinion became mandatory in the interest of good student government, the Union Forum stepped into a long vacated niche and began its agitation for the recognition of the legislative wishes of each member of the student body. This year, under the leadership of E. C. Daniel, vice-president of the student body, the Forum begins its second year of service to the campus in convening for the purpose of centralizing student opinion and making recommendations to the Graham Memorial board of directors and other bodies active in the final legislation of campus affairs.

Ex-President Albright, the new manager of Graham Memorial and the leading spirit in the Forum movement of last year, remains with the body in the capacity of occasional adviser in matters pertaining to the maintenance of the Memorial. Through the manager and the Forum's representatives on the board of directors, programs will be planned for the building, additional games obtained, and various business affairs handled—all indirectly through the student body, which elects its Forum members.

The Forum is in a position to occupy an important role in the stimulation of student interest in campus government and general affairs. May it enjoy its rapidly mounting prestige in an unpartisan manner conducive to the regeneration of student initiative.—D.C.S.

The Pulpiters Train Their Guns

Much to be regretted is the fact that a large proportion of the ministers of our state continue to view this campus as an incubator for scepticism in religious philosophy. While there are many exceptions to this platitude, yet it is all too generally subscribed to by the brethren of the holly orders.

Although Carolina is justly proud of her reputation as a center of liberalism, she can hardly assent to a theory which would brand her as a harbor for atheism and extreme radicalism. It is inconceivable that her student body, representing the average type of young manhood and womanhood of the country, could constitute such a menace to society as these men have from time to time implied.

Having contributed to it many of its most intelligent and zealous crusaders, this institution remains the butt of obloquies of the most petulant and desecrating sort, on the part of this hieratic body. Just what prompts this attitude, remains an enigma.

In the face of these maledictions which have been hurled against her, the University has not steered athwart of her pathway to revenge herself, but has peacefully pursued her course, according to the rules laid down by that great preacher and teacher whom they purport to follow, when he said: "Seek ye the Truth, and the Truth shall make you free."

Just what is to be gained for them by the jealousy with which they guard their doctrines and principles against the scrutiny of an analysis, is not known, but it seems to imply that they are thus actuated by a fear that these doctrines will be found lacking in the great fundamental truths which lie at the bottom of the universe, thus diminishing their own prestige.

This University does not seek to destroy the principles which have been ordained, but to analyse them, eliminating those that are unsound, and perpetuating those that have foundation, to light men on their pathways; the sooner our ecclesiastical brethren acclimate themselves to this fact, the better it will be for them, for the University, and for the cause for which they labor.—W.A.S.

Nearing the Millennium

All indications point to a record Socialist vote this fall. On the basis of the first two million votes returned in the Literary Digest's presidential poll, Norman Thomas' total had reached 105,000. With the expectation that forty million ballots will be cast in the November elections, the Socialist candidate bids fair to poll close to three million votes.

One of the most astonishing facts which manifests itself in our political history and organization is the weakness of any collectivist movement. When one realizes, however, the peculiar conditions to which such a movement is subjected, it then seems only natural that this condition has existed for such a long time. In the first place, there is the influence of our pioneer heritage, with its emphasis upon individual initiative and self-reliance. Then there are the inherent weaknesses of our labor unions,—their pitifully small membership, their lack of strong, constructive leadership, and the problem of Negro membership; also there is the tremendous influence of Samuel Gompers upon Labor's insistent non-partisan political stand.

Another factor of great importance is the political system itself which, in its inflexibility, makes the position of a third party a precarious one. Likewise, the huge, million-dollar campaign chests make it quite impossible for a party composed of labor, for labor,—fighting special privileges—to raise a campaign fund.

We see, therefore, many almost insuperable obstacles to be overcome if a party such as the Socialist is to become a potent factor in national politics. That the party of Norman Thomas is assuming that status is fast becoming realized. The repercussions of the economic depression have been both intensive and

'SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

No Martyrs, Our Socialists

I wish to call your attention to an omission of fact in your news item in the Tuesday issue of THE DAILY TAR HEEL concerning the prohibition of the wearing of political badges by assistants in the library.

The truth of the matter appears to be that there would have been no such prohibition, had the badges involved been other than those of the Socialist party.

The truth of this assertion and the evasiveness of the explanatory statement later given out by the library authorities can be judged by making a comparison of the two orders issued. The first (both appeared over the initials W. P. K., apparently W. P. Kellam, head of the circulation department) read as follows: "You may be a Socialist, but do not display your badges here." Some one must have realized that this sort of verboten was lacking in finesse, because after it had been up a few hours this notice was replaced by one which read: "Please do not display badges of any political party while on duty in the library." The pretension of the neutrality made by the officials can well be considered in the light of these two orders.

So-called "general orders" of this nature appear most frequently when Socialist activities occur. Prior to the issuance of this library order, there had, fortunately, been only one such incident on this campus, namely, the ukase by R. B. House, the executive secretary of the University, excluding Socialist ballot petition from the Y. M. C. A.

The Socialists on the campus are, I am sure, trying to avoid anything like a persecution complex. In general they have enjoyed equal privileges with other political groups. They prefer to bid for the intelligence of the University student rather than to capitalize a cheap martyrdom.

It is above the dignity of a great university to stoop to such prussianizing tactics and to display a pettiness of spirit which one would hardly expect from the smallest bored preschool.

extensive. Labor is shedding its coat of conservatism; the interest in national planning is a steadily growing force; the strength of the Socialist party is in great measure due to the huge increase in student interest in the movement.

It seems fairly likely that Socialism and Collectivism in America—in the next decade—will become as much of a power as it is in most European countries.—V.J.L.

Pep Meeting In Memorial Hall Tonight

Large Crowd Expected To Attend Rally With Good Program Planned

Drive and Spirit of Team Good In Final Scrimmage Before Game Tomorrow.

SQUAD WILL BE AT RALLY

Judge Brogden Will Make Talk To Team at Big Meeting Tonight.

Everything is in readiness for one of the largest and peppiest pep meetings ever held in University history tonight when students, townspeople and old grads will gather in Memorial hall at 8:00 o'clock. Plans are complete for a brief but interesting program.

The University band will start the meeting with several selections, and the cheer leaders will lead the crowd in Carolina yells throughout the meeting. Judge W. J. Brogden, Judge E. E. "Scrubby" Rives, Hon. Norman Boren, Coaches Chuck Collins and Bob Fetzter, and President Frank Graham will make short talks to the team and students. The first three named are Carolina alumni who have been closely connected with Tar Heel athletics.

Team on Stage

The big Blue team will be on the stage in Memorial hall and it will be an excellent chance for students to get a good look at the players and to show them that the Tar Heels will be backed to the last minute in tomorrow's set-to with Tech. The cheerleaders have been practicing the "Song of the Cheerio" for the last two nights with an enthusiastic cheering body and tonight the new organ will blast out the tune.

The first team yesterday afternoon looked to be in excellent shape. Coach Collins had his team run against a scrub team using Yellow Jacket plays and the reserves were smothered time and time again; the tricky Tech offense offering little for the fast charging varsity forwards. Pass defense which, was slow at first, showed a vast improvement as the scrimmage went on.

MacKinney of History Department Denounces Captain of Opposing Aggregation.

The faculty golf match between the English and History departments which was scheduled for yesterday was postponed due to the illness of Mr. Hudson, captain of the English teachers' team.

In an interview regarding the possible result of the match, MacKinney, captain of the History team, vigorously asserted himself concerning the English team by calling their claims as a championship contender "all wet." Citing his team's recent victory over the Commerce department, MacKinney was confident that his boys could do the same thing to the English teachers, only in a bigger way.

He stated that this was the second scheduled match which the English department had postponed but if his team ever did entice them onto the links that he would undoubtedly, doubtless and without a doubt proceed to "wallop" Hudson, his star, Horner, and all the rest.

BEST HOUSE WINS FROM SWAIN HALL

D. K. E., Phi Kappa Sigma, Carr, Grimes, and Zeta Psi Are Other Winners.

None of the leaders saw action in yesterday's intramural football games. The Dekes in the fraternity and Grimes in the dormitory leagues however went into a tie with the other leaders of their respective loops as a result of forfeits.

Swain Hall Defeated

In the closest of the afternoon contests, Best House, last year's champions, downed Swain Hall 6 to 0. Both teams had four first downs. The only marker came early in the first period. After the winners made two first downs, Jones threw a long pass to Henson who dashed the remaining fifteen yards for a score. Besides the touchdown combination, Powell was the outstanding man on offense and defense for Best House. The line play of Barnes and the passing of McRae were the features of Swain Hall's attack.

Zeta Psi Wins

In the fastest and most exciting of the afternoon battles, Zeta Psi downed Phi Delta Theta 7 to 0. Both teams had fast offenses and threatened on many occasions to count more touchdowns. Barber made the only marker of the contest when he took a long pass back of the goal line. Barber was also the star on defense, breaking up many Phi Delt passes. Tabb and Sasser also starred for the winners. Moffit and Tucker led the losers' attack both on offense and defense.

Phi Kappa Sigma Win

Phi Kappa Sigma had an easy time in taking a 27 to 0 victory over Sigma Phi Sigma. All the winners' touchdowns came as a result of passes. Queen led the point-making, crossing the goal line twice. Reid and Markham counted the other two scores, both on long passes. Markham was also the outstanding man on defense. Turpie and Froneberger led the play of the losers.

Everett Loses

Using a varied attack, Carr crossed the goal line twice to down Everett 14 to 0. The winners mixed running plays with passes which kept the losers baffled during the entire contest. Ray and Kykendall scored on passes thrown by Erb. Erb was also the star on defense. For the losers Carruth and Rosen led the offense and defense.

Two Forfeits

In the afternoon forfeits Grimes and D. K. E. were victorious respectively over Mangum and Kappa Sigma.

Dyer and McCorkle Will Attend Meeting Today

Dr. Harold S. Dyer and Professor T. Smith McCorkle of the music department will attend an informal gathering of the state music teachers at Greensboro today and tomorrow. Carl Gerkins of Oberlin, Ohio, and Norval Church of New York City will speak.

Redhead Club Meeting

A redhead club very much like the famous one of last year, may be formed tonight. All boys and girls with flaming hair interested in such an organization, are urged to be present at Gerrard hall tonight at 7:00 o'clock.

WILL THEY BREAK DEADLOCK?

When the Tar Heels and the Yellow Jackets meet tomorrow they will be striving to break the ties of the last two years and the prediction is that somebody is going to win that man's ball game. The game has all the earmarks of a football "natural" and a big crowd is expected to flood Kenan stadium. Pictured above are two of the outstanding players from each team.

Captain Monk Neblett of Tech and June Underwood of Carolina, both centers and leading contenders for all-Southern honors, and Stuart Chandler, Carolina quarterback, and Pat Barron, Tech halfback, who is a brother of the famous Tech Barrons of former days. Pat is the boy who made that epochal run against Pennsylvania last year.

Georgia Tech Has Won Four Out Of Seven Games With Carolina

Contests Have Been Close; Tar Heels Have Won Once And Tied Twice.

Carolina and Georgia Tech will meet in Kenan stadium tomorrow to renew a rivalry, which for the past five years has produced some of the finest, closest, and hottest football the Southern conference has ever seen.

Tech Leads in Series

In the seven games that the two squads have played against each other, victory went to Carolina but once, with two games being tied. The lone Tar Heel victory came in 1929 when Branch and Magner led Carolina to an 18-7 decision over the Engineers. Since that time, the teams have been unable to reach a verdict, the contest in 1930 ending in a 6-6 tie and that of last year resulting in a 19-19 deadlock.

That all of the recent Tech-Carolina games have been close is seen by the scores. Take the 1927 game, for example. The final score was 13-0 for Tech, but Morgan Blake, premier Atlanta sports writer, called that the "hardest 13-0 game ever won on any field." Time after time the Tar Heels threatened to score but the Atlantains' superb goal stands were too much. Coach Alexander's men were in their heyday that year and the following one, 1928, the year the Techmen were acclaimed national champions. That season the game was played in Chapel Hill and was won by the champions, 20-7. The reserves saved Tech from marring its slate, for the Tar Heels whipped those Georgia Tech stars, Thomason, Pund, Mizell, Father Lumpkin, and Dupree, soundly.

Prior to 1927, there were two games played, both being won by

Tar Babies Meet Strong Cadet Team At Kenan Stadium This Afternoon

THIRD ROUND IN TOURNNEY REACHED

Fifteen Players Win Triumphs in Tennis Tournament; Minor And Harris Star.

Fifteen players reached the third round of the fall tennis for freshmen and non-lettermen yesterday, with seeded men gaining easy triumphs for the most part. None of this select group was forced to a third set to gain his decision.

In the upper bracket, Harvey Harris gained his third round bracket as a result of a 6-4, 6-3 conquest over Mark Lynch, and Ike Minor, last season's varsity reserve man, gained a 6-2, 6-3 victory to continue his march. He and Harris are expected to meet in the semi-final match in this bracket late in the week.

Walter Levitan, heading the lower bracket, downed Stanley Levett, 6-0, 6-1. Rickey Willis, Bernie Friedman, John McGlinn, and Jimmy Johnston, other seeded men, all gained straight-set victories. Hunter Lott won his first set, 6-1, after which his match was called on account of darkness. It will be completed early tomorrow afternoon.

After downing Campbell college in its opening contest last Saturday, Carolina's freshman football team will meet Oak Ridge this afternoon at 3:00 o'clock on Kenan field.

The Cadets are one of the strongest prep school teams in the state and will probably offer the Tar Babies their hardest battle of the season. Last year Oak Ridge was victorious over the freshmen 7 to 0 and, although many of the Cadets of last season have graduated, the visitors will have a club just as strong or better than the one of last year.

The death of Lindley M. Garrison, former secretary of war, yesterday, recalled his sharp disagreement with Woodrow Wilson over national defense problems and his sudden resignation from that president's cabinet in 1916.

France to Pay

France plans to pay promptly the December installment of the $400,000,000 French "commercial" war debt to the United States. Premier Herriot was quoted by the Paris newspapers yesterday as saying, but she will continue efforts to secure cancellation or reduction of the rest of the debt by negotiation.

Georgia Tech Has Won Four Of Seven Games

(Continued from page three) the Yellow Jackets. The scores were 23-3 in 1915 and 10-6 the following year.

Close Game Tomorrow

Saturday's game is expected to be fought with the traditional closeness of the Georgia Tech-North Carolina rivalry. Neither team is a conference contender, but both have been giving their foes plenty of trouble. Tech has won one conference game from Clemson while losing decisions to Kentucky and Auburn. Carolina, on the other hand, has yet to win its first game although two contests have ended in deadlocks. The Tar Heels lost to Vanderbilt and Tennessee while tying with Wake Forest and Georgia.

R. M. GRUMMAN LEAVES FOR PITTSBURGH TODAY

R. M. Grumman, director of the University extension division, leaves today for Pittsburgh, where he will attend a meeting of the executive committee of the National University Extension Association. The purpose of the meeting will be to make plans for the annual convention to be held next spring at the University of Indiana.

The association embraces extension divisions of almost fifty colleges and universities. The meeting of the committee will be conducted at the University of Pittsburgh.

Comprehensive Exams

The schedule for the comprehensive examinations for the year 1932-33 has been agreed upon as follows: fall quarter, December 3; winter quarter, February 18; spring quarter, May 6. Examinations are supposed to begin promptly at 9:00 o'clock.

DEMOCRATS HEAR MAJOR McLENDON DISCUSS POLITICS

Passing to state politics Major McLendon said that the Democratic party had guided the destiny of North Carolina for thirty years, making it one of the greatest states in the country. He praised Ehringhaus as never being surpassed in character and ability by any gubernatorial candidate and R. R. Reynolds, nominee for United States Senate, as excellent.

In conclusion, Major McLendon said that the government of North Carolina must be revamped so that "the business man will get a chance to improve his business, the laboring man will be treated fairly, and the farmer will be encouraged."

Hamilton Hobgood, president of the club, announced that A. H. (Sandy) Graham, Democratic nominee for lieutenant-governor, will speak next Tuesday evening in Gerrard hall.

0 win in their first game of the year, and last week Oak Ridge got an easy 21 to 0 victory over Wake Forest's yearling team. Among the players in the starting lineup will be Shore, left end, who was an all-state high school player at Charlotte; Leven, half-back, who made the Florida all-state high school team last year; Smathers, another half-back, named on the class B all-state team; Wagner, tackle, an all-state player in Kentucky and who had a chance to go to any number of Southern Conference colleges; and Shoup, center, whose brother is a star tackle at State college.

The Oak Ridge coaches are also preparing for a hard fight from the Tar Babies. McCachern and Sutton, yearling fullbacks and stars on Oak Ridge's team last year, were responsible for two of the freshmen's touchdowns last week. Both of these boys will see plenty of action against their former teammates. Coaches Sapp and Howard have been running the freshmen hard all week, drilling them especially in pass defense in order to break up the Cadets' aerial attack which has been outstanding in their first two games. The yearlings were taught a few plays during the week and may give the spectators some unexpected thrills during the contest when they pull off one or two of the most tricky ones.

As least two of the Tar Baby teams will see action with a chance of three or four teams getting in the contest if the freshmen can get a safe lead.

Socialist Club Meeting

In response to the widespread interest shown in the Norman Thomas meeting which will take place in the municipal auditorium at Raleigh, 8:00 o'clock Saturday evening, the Chapel Hill local of the Socialist party will gather in Gerrard hall tonight, at 9:00 o'clock, to arrange for the transportation to the Raleigh meeting of as many people as possible.

Thomas, the Socialist candidate for the presidency, is also scheduled to speak at Winston-Salem, High Point, and Greensboro.

Knight Addresses Teachers

Dr. Edgar W. Knight of the school of education, speaks before the New York State Teachers association in Albany today. He will deliver a speech to the Maryland State Teachers association tomorrow morning, and Saturday evening will address an educational society of Johns Hopkins university in Baltimore.

Medical Society to Meet

The regular bi-weekly meeting of the University medical society is planned tonight at 7:15 o'clock in the auditorium of the medical building. At this meeting, which is the first of the year, Dr. J. P. Jones will speak on the relation of dentistry to medicine.

Adams Will Speak

Dr. Raymond Adams, professor of English in the University, will deliver the Founders' Day address at Flora MacDonald college, October 29.

Paul Green Honored

The House of Connelly, by Paul Green, of the University, has been included in The Best Plays of 1931-32, by Burns Mantle.

COMMITTEE ASKS ENDORSEMENT OF BILLIARD PARLOR

Group Appointed by President
Graham Studies Situation at Request of Petitioners.

As a result of the petitions for and against the establishment in Chapel Hill of an amusement center with pool tables and bowling alleys, a committee was appointed at President Graham's suggestion to discuss the matter and make recommendations.

The committee, composed of three members from the University, D. D. Carroll, Francis Bradshaw, and H. F. Comer, and three from the board of aldermen, M. E. Hogan, Clyde Eubanks, and B. D. Sawyer, made a thorough inquiry and drew up a report recommending that President Graham give his written permission for the establishment of one recreation center and that town authorities grant a license for its operation.

Included in the recommendations were these: that a committee of three citizens appointed by the president and three appointed by aldermen be made responsible for the supervision of the center; that the committee approve all managers and employees in the establishment; that the manager post a $1,000 bond; and that hours of operation be from 7:00 o'clock a. m. until midnight except Sundays.

(The petitions and discussions are founded on the opinion that, since pool tables were installed in Graham Memorial building, it is unfair for the pool-playing privilege to be extended to University students and at the same time denied to other people in Chapel Hill.

SOCIAL BILL FOR WEEK WILL CLOSE WITH GRAIL DANCE

Reunions of Graduates Planned
As Alumni Return to University for Tech Game.

Continuing the round of entertainments started last night with the fall co-ed dance, tonight the Order of the Grail will sponsor a dance in the Tin Can from 9:00 until 12:00 o'clock. A large crowd is expected to attend the affair, and admission for all will be $1.00. As in previous years freshmen will not be permitted to attend the dance.

The Tin Can will be decorated with purple and white, the colors of the Order of the Grail, while the couples will dance to the music of Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra.

The arrangement concerning the price of admission was made with the University, thereby avoiding the federal tax. Herebefore the price per person was quoted erroneously at $1.10. Use of the Tin Can has been secured by special arrangement with the athletic association when the gymnasium proved inadequate for the function.

Reunions Scheduled

Also scheduled on the week-end's program will be reunions of alumni who are expected to return in large numbers for the Carolina-Georgia Tech football game. These reunions, for the most part, will be conducted at the various fraternity houses.

Library Shows Works Of Christopher Wren

To commemorate the 300th anniversary of the birth of Sir Christopher Wren, famous English architect, the University library is exhibiting photographs of some of the best known buildings designed by him. These are being shown in the lobby at the main entrance of the library.

Wren, one of the greatest architects of all time, designed numerous churches, hospitals, theatres, palaces, and libraries. Probably his most famous structure is Saint Paul's Cathedral in London.

CHEROKEE INDIANS MAY PLAY TRIBAL BALL GAME HERE

Cherokee Ball Players Agree
To Play Here at Dogwood
Festival in Spring.

A unique and thoroughly native type of athletic contest may be seen in Chapel Hill next spring, if efforts to bring two teams of Cherokee ball players here during the Dogwood Festival next year are successful, according to an article by Phillips Russell in the Chapel Hill Weekly yesterday.

Efforts are being made to have two Cherokee teams play their game here in Kenan stadium during the proposed festival next April. Players have agreed to come and bring their Green Corn and Ghost dancers, if expenses for about thirty persons could be guaranteed them.

Game Is Unusual Mixture

The game, a mixture of lacrosse, hockey, basketball, and football, is of native Indian origin and is still practiced by the Cherokees on a reservation near Asheville. It is played on a grassy field having about the same dimensions as a football field, with goal posts at each end. The players, nine on a side, are naked except for a loin cloth and carry a wire-netted racquet in each hand.

The two teams line up as in football or basketball, with their forwards, centers, and goal guards. The ball is scarcely larger than a golf ball, and is caught and carried in the racquets. Though piling on is not permitted, the ball-carrier may be severely tackled and held to prevent his throwing the ball.

TAR HEEL STRAW VOTE ENDS TODAY

All Students Who Have Not Voted
Are Urged to Cast Their Ballots
For President Today.

Since the polls close today, all students who have not yet cast their ballots in the student straw presidential ballot which THE DAILY TAR HEEL has been conducting since Wednesday are urged to do so without delay. The polls are located in the lobbies of Graham Memorial and the Y. M. C. A., and in order to determine the true political sentiment of college student bodies, everyone is requested to fill out a ballot and drop it in the box at one of these places today.

During the first three days the voting has been heavy, but it is expected that ballots cast today by those who have not yet voted will increase the total vote greatly. Ballots will be counted by the editorial staff of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.

This poll is being conducted in conjunction with thirty-five outstanding college publications.

MUSIC TEACHERS OF STATE GATHER FOR CONFERENCE

Dr. Harold Dyer and T. S. McCorkle Attend Music Meeting at Women's College.

The fourth annual conference of teachers and supervisors of music in this state, which convened yesterday and will end today, has been in progress at the Women's college of the University of North Carolina. Dr. Wade R. Brown, dean of music at the Women's college, is directing the work of the organization which was founded a few years ago for the purpose of raising the standards of efficiency of music teachers and supervisors.

Special speakers for the conference are Karl W. Gehrken, of Oberlin college, Norval L. Church, of Columbia university, and Miss Ella H. Mason. Dr. Harold S. Dyer and Professor T. Smith McCorkle of the University are attending the conference.

Plans for the fourteenth annual state music contest, which will take place at the Women's college in the spring, will be made this morning at 9:00 o'clock. The conference will be adjourned at 12:00 o'clock.

NEW BIOGRAPHY OF JOHN SEVIER ISSUED BY PRESS

Dr. Carl S. Driver Describes Life of Well Known Pioneer of The Southwest.

The University of North Carolina Press has announced the publication of John Sevier: A Pioneer of the Old Southwest, by Dr. Carl S. Driver. This is an interesting new biography of the well known Tennessee pioneer by the assistant professor of history at Vanderbilt university.

John Sevier, an Indian fighter, governor, congressman, and adventurer, was a most interesting character in the early history of the United States. "All characteristics of the pioneers," says the author, "blended in the personality of this man." A contemporary of Andrew Jackson, he at one time engaged in a bitter feud with that other native of Tennessee. The author relates an account of a duel between Governor Sevier and Jackson, at that time a judge, during which neither of the "distinguished gentlemen" fired a shot.

This new publication of the University press made its appearance October 17.

Leaders Conduct Pep Meeting In Assembly

At the freshman-sophomore assembly yesterday morning the featured speaker was to have been Major L. P. McLendon, one of the most outstanding members of the bar in North Carolina, but because of unforeseen complications he was unable to speak as scheduled.

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, turned the meeting over to the cheer leaders, who took advantage of this opportunity to conduct a short pep meeting in preparation for the big meeting last night.

DIRECTORY TO BE DISTRIBUTED FOR STUDENTS TODAY

Y. M. C. A. Finishes Work on Master Directory and Begins
Distribution to Campus.

The long-heralded arrival of the master directory, annual publication of the campus Y. M. C. A., was announced yesterday by Edwin Lanier, self-help secretary of the local association.

The work was done completely by students and officers affiliated with the "Y". It contains a list of all students and the faculty members in the University with several other supplements. The publication is being distributed by a group of about a dozen students who have volunteered their services in the work, and a large part of them had been circulated yesterday.

Each student is admonished that only one directory will be given to dormitory room, and only three to each fraternity house; in other words a limited number is on hand and it would be too expensive to give a separate copy to each student. One copy is also sent to each office in the University; one to each student residing out in town; one to each business house; and one to each professor's home.

Students who volunteered to distribute the pamphlets are as follows: Charles Trexler, Frederick Ogburn, M. H. Latham, A. H. Suiter, Broadus Henderson, A. W. Lowe, T. H. Lingerfelt, John Paul Strother, Locke Craig, Jr., C. H. Fries, William A. Huston, H. C. Wimberley, C. C. Wagner, L. W. Wilson, and Francis Fairley.

COMER TO SPEAK TO BIBLE CLASS

Secretary of Y. M. C. A. Will Lecture
On "Christian Fundamentals"
At United Church.

Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the campus Y. M. C. A., will appear before the newly organized student Bible class of the United Church Sunday evening at 8:00 p. m. as the principal speaker in the second gathering of the current scholastic year. A large number of members of the groups are expected to be present, and all students who are interested are invited to attend.

The "Y" secretary will speak on "Christian Fundamentals," a subject which is of vital interest to all members of the Carolina student body. Dr. Raymond Adams spoke last Sunday evening on "A Practical Religion" before a large group.

There will be a social in the church parish house immediately after the meeting to which a cordial invitation is extended to the public.

ODUM IS HEAD OF SOCIAL RESEARCH WHILE ON LEAVE

University Professor of Sociology
Is Director of Social Study of South.

Dr. Howard W. Odum, professor of sociology and director of the Institute for Research in Social Science, is engaged during his leave of absence from the University this year in directing the Southern Regional Study of the Social Science Research Council.

The study emphasizes, among other features, the south's capacity for educational and social development. Dr. Benjamin B. Kendrick, of the Women's college, University of North Carolina, is chairman of the southern regional committee. Dr. Odum, in addition to this work, is also conducting his regular graduate class in an introduction to social research, and is still busy as director of the Institute for Research in Social Science.

The study has been active since January of this year, and will probably continue for two years. It entails much research in every phase of southern educational and social conditions, and, in characterizing its objectives and methods, will be descriptive, explanatory, comparative, and purposive. It will present statistics but it will also utilize culture charts, or composite social base maps, or whatever other technical devices may guarantee an appropriate, emerging regional portrait. The study will be made in two groupings, physical geography and natural resources, and population and cultural resources. It will attempt to present, first, the picture of the southern region.

COMPETITION FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS TO PAPER ENDS TODAY

Free Passes to Carolina Theatre
Given for Subscriptions to Daily Tar Heel.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL's campaign for subscriptions will be brought to a close today. A drive for increased circulation for the daily was begun more than two weeks ago, and many new subscriptions have been added. Spirited competition for show passes was begun when the business staff of the paper with the cooperation of the Carolina theatre announced that two passes to the theatre would be given for each new subscription.

The drive for increased circulation was begun when the business department of the publication launched a campaign with the idea of reaching every home in Chapel Hill and giving those who are not already receiving the paper an opportunity to subscribe for it. A thorough canvassing of the town by students seeking to win passes resulted in many new subscriptions being turned into the business office.

As an inducement to prospective subscribers, THE DAILY TAR HEEL and the Carolina theatre offered a free pass to the theatre during the latter part of the campaign, and through this arrangement the salesman was able to give each of those who subscribed one and also win two for himself.

Chapel Hill Struck By Cyclone Scientists Observe Phenomenon

A cyclone hit Chapel Hill last Monday. However, the buildings are intact, the streets keep their natural appearance, and no commission has been appointed to relieve suffering and starvation. Yet this section of the country actually sustained a cyclonic attack early this week.

The phenomenon, which also swept across parts of Tennessee and Virginia, was a cyclone in the truest sense of the word. In fact, last Monday's occurrence was not an unusual one for Chapel Hill. Such natural disturbances which may be called cyclones move through this district once or twice each week.

Cyclone Not a Tornado

Those who expect devastation and desolation for this area fail to distinguish between a cyclone and a tornado. According to Jack Craven, of the physics department, and Charles Ray, of the department of water conservation, a cyclone is nothing more than a period of extremely low wind pressure, accompanied by an excessive amount of rainfall. The center of the storm district is characterized as the lowest pressure point and escapes the detrimental effects popularly assumed to accompany cyclones.

Thus, since Chapel Hill was near the heart of the cyclonic area, it remained absolutely unharmed, although it can truthfully be stated that it has been in the path of a cyclone.

Aside from the extraordinarily low wind pressure, the recording of the rainfall during the cyclonic period was the most amazing feature of the entire phenomenon. The local weather bureau reported that the rainfall for the early part of the week totaled five inches, most of which fell Monday. This figure, reckoned over a period of three days, is approximately more than the average rainfall for the entire month of October. In fact, only six times in the past eighty years have more than five inches of rain been recorded in Chapel Hill for October.

Craven and Ray observed the progress of the storm. Having noticed last Saturday that the barometer in the physics laboratory was falling in a peculiar manner, they watched the various instruments in Phillips hall denoting atmospheric pressure, and wind velocity.

Sharp Barometer Drop

From the time the pressure began to decline, the barometer continued to show a decrease in atmospheric pressure, falling slowly and gradually until Monday afternoon. It reached the point of 29.4 inches, unusually low for this section. A small amount of rain accompanied the falling of the barometer, and this precipitation indicated the passing of the foremost part of the cyclone.

When the point of lowest pressure occurred Monday; that is, when the center of the cyclone reached here, the rain ceased, and the sky became relatively clear. Then as the center moved on, the barometer began to rise and the rain fell once more, indicating the passing of the latter portion of the storm.

Webster Has

A Term for Them

How often it is that controversies are concluded with the discovery that the disputants are individually employing incomparable terms. But more often, controversies are unduly prolonged because this discovery is never made, because the disputants never realize that a discrepancy exists between their respective conceptions of the subject of debate.

Positive definitions of terms used, a complete appreciation of varying viewpoints, and a thorough understanding of the ultimate issue are prerequisite essentials to a logical debate and a fair conclusion.

To illustrate: There is a certain ancient quarrel, between the attackers and the defenders of liberalism, that will never be resolved because of a confusion among the controverters of the terms "liberalism" and "radicalism."

According to a reliable lexicographer, liberalism is "the quality of being open-minded or benevolent, the principles or theories of one who advocates freedom of thought or speech in religion, politics, etc." In that sense, the first nine amendments to the Constitution of the United States are a guarantee of liberalism.

Radicalism, on the other hand, is defined as "advocacy of revolutionary changes in laws and methods of government, with a view to remedying social conditions." Thus, radicalism is an active principle, while liberalism is a passive mental attitude.

The two terms are incomparable and so are undebatable. Unless this fact is recognized bitter battles will continually be fought on these really irreconcilable premises.—E.C.D.

Too Much Caviar

Notwithstanding the gratifying reception of violinist Albert Spalding's recital last Tuesday evening, the number of seats unoccupied by students bore witness to the fact that the Student Entertainment Committee is not living up to its name. We must admit that it is confronted with no easy task in choosing suitable entertainment for some 2,500 students, but it might at least give as many of these as possible the benefit of the entertainment which it goes to so much trouble to make possible.

The Committee is faced with a dual problem; it must select not only those programs which will evoke a higher appreciation of true artistic values, but also those which will entertain. Obviously it is difficult to incorporate these desirable standards without sacrificing one to the other. But the Student Entertainment Committee must bear in mind that after all the student body pays for these programs, and they are meant to be enjoyed insofar as possible by those who foot the bill.

With no derogation—rather with compliment—to Spalding's musical genius, his recital was too far beyond laic comprehension, mainly because of the technicality of his selections. On the other hand, it could not have been lowered to the level of popular appeal. Nevertheless, there is a middle way, a moderation of two extremes which would have been infinitely more suitable to the requirements expected of student entertainment.

Whose fault is this? Did the Student Entertainment Committee have no choice whatever of the selections to be rendered? If not, then it should leave such programs to the sponsoring of Phi Mu Alpha, the Glee Club, or any other organization interested in musical entertainment of this character.

The members of the Student Entertainment Committee have no doubt a difficult and thankless task; but they must allow for the unfortunate fact that only a few of us can appreciate—and at the same time enjoy—the finesse and subtlety of classical composition.—A.T.D.

White Man's Burden

Three mid-term examinations in one day and one right after the other is rather a stiff assignment for a student, but this would seem to be an unfortunate occurrence for which there is no remedy. There is no obvious reason why professors in charge of courses giving mid-term examinations should not get together and arrange dates for their tests, so that the student is not put under such pressure as will prevent him from doing his best work. It is not evident why three exams must come on a Wednesday. If the college office desires grades at a certain date, it would seem possible to advance certain of the test dates so that conflicts may be avoided. It is not reasonable to suppose that a student learning on Tuesday of three written papers to be given the next day can prepare himself in such a short time.

It would be more business-like and certainly more advantageous to both professor and student if examination dates could be arranged at least a week in advance, or at least in such a way as to give the student sufficient time for quiet preparation. And by arranging a schedule in advance, the professors could avoid dates which would be liable to rush the student and to crowd his work.

Since, then, the professors (or is it the college office?) feels the mid-term check-up necessary to bolster up students, let them give a thought to developing a system as they do for the final examinations.—B.B.P.

Okay,

America!

One of the unfortunate results of the tremendous pressure of modern business competition is the methods of advertising that American manufacturers employ in attempting to promote the sale of their products. The necessity of selling a lot of goods to a large market is a great one, and there is little stopped at in the attempts to part the public from its money.

The great battle of advertising manifests in numerous ways one of which takes the form of actual attacks on rival products as far as this may be done without danger of prosecution. This is well illustrated by the methods of some of our leading cigarette manufacturers whose pointed depreciations of one another may be seen in any paper or magazine. Advertisements of the "do you inhale?" variety are just a little harmless bunk, but the faking process goes into many stages and finds its lowest field where many worthless products are sold with great promises to suffering men and women.

Another despicable form of modern advertising resulting from the great fight to sell, are the scare type. These threaten one against certain unpleasant results from the non use of a certain soap or mouth wash and the social disgrace that attends. This type should serve to antagonize an intelligent public against the vulgarity of the company, but such does not seem to be the case. In fact these methods seem ever on the increase and threatens to become far more prevalent.

The complete submission of the radio into a mouthpiece for business is another example of how we are dominated by big business methods. In European countries programs of a generally high type are provided for by taxes paid by the radio owners. In this country we hear little worth while that is not a medium of advertisement. Almost every program that comes to us is thru the courtesy of some tooth paste, shoe, malt, cigarette or yeast company and the announcements as to who are our benefactors detract much from the enjoyment. It is a pity that a great invention such as this has become the creature and tool of business.

Perhaps the most insidious phase of our advertising system is the ruin of a large portion of our landscape thru the erection of signs and billboards of all varieties. Mile after mile of our most beautiful roads are robbed of their loveliness by huge signs obstructing views and intruding the commonplace and the sordid into the charm of meadows, woods and mountains.

It is unfortunate that the undesirable advertising is more successful than the other. It is difficult to rid ourselves of it for our better advertisers are forced to resort to the level of their competitors if they hope to keep up. Hence a vicious circle of increasingly offensive advertising in increasing bad taste and vulgarity for the benefit of big business and the glory of the almighty dollar.—J.F.A.

Petition Parasites

A Northwestern instructor of that pedagogical clan which believes in the eternal gullibility of the human race (excepting pedants) recently circulated about the streets of the city of Chicago a petition which requested that the undersigned "want to be hanged." Some 270 tired business men, button-holed on the way home to a four-thirty golf date, signed without a murmur and blushed later when the report of the young instructor's findings was revealed to the public.

For the all-important privilege of affixing their names to any sort of important looking document, thousands would gladly sign away their lives. Next to book agents and I'm working-my-way-through-college magazine peddlers, we feel petition-getters are the most pestiferous individuals. Most any important looking document, craftily worded, need not go begging for signatures, more so when the signers are unaware of the whole business. Perhaps the good people of Chicago have learned a thing or two from their North Carolina cousins who wielded the petition pen in the fair month of August.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Correction, Mr. Ericson

I note with surprise that in a communication published in THE DAILY TAR HEEL, Friday, October 21, 1932, Mr. Ervid Eric Ericson, of the class of '31, refers to "the ukase by R. B. House, the Executive Secretary of the University, excluding a Socialist ballot petition from the Y. M. C. A." The alleged "ukase" he characterizes as a "general order" issued by me as an official of the University. I do not doubt the sincerity and honesty of Mr. Ericson, but his inaccuracy of statement and of characterization would certainly lead to misunderstanding and I, therefore, want to give the facts.

I have issued no order concerning Socialist petitions in the Y. M. C. A. That institution is competently handled by its own board of directors, of which I am proud to be a member, and the functions of which no person would assume as a personal prerogative. I know of no action excluding Socialist petitions from the Y. M. C. A., and I believe Socialists are as free there as any other students.

In the Y. M. C. A. building the University operates a book exchange, and, as a subsidiary to it, the Book Market. These University work-places are under competent management. I made a suggestion to the management which was heartily assented to. The suggestion never reached the status of command and obedience; it was simply a reminder of University policy which the management was as careful of as I was. The policy referred to is that University employees do their appointed work and not confuse University working time and working places with non-University business such as partisan-political, propagandist, or private-commercial enterprises.

I had simply noticed in passing through the Book Market on one of the registration days that it was being used as headquarters for a partisan, political purpose—the circulation of the Socialist ballot petition, an activity worthy enough in itself, but certainly not one for which the Book Market is operated. I reminded the management of this departure from the governing principle and the management quietly prohibited the use of the Book Market for this purpose. On that same day, and in pursuance of that same policy, I had to request the representative of a local boarding house to absent himself from one of the desks in the registration hall, where he was confusing University business with private, commercial enterprise.

And frequently it is necessary thus to preserve the integrity of University functions, work-places, and work-time from encroachment by non-University, partisan-propagandist, and private-commercial enterprises. For instance, this year a candidate for a Democratic nomination requested the use of Gerrard hall for a mass meeting privately engineered by himself. He was refused in line with this policy. Also in this same year a fiscal officer of the University was requested to engage in fund-raising for a Democratic organization. He refused because of the danger of confusing his standing as a fund-raiser for the University with functions of a partisan-political nature. And this policy would prohibit a Democratic headquarters at Swain Hall or a Republican headquarters at the Buildings Department as much as a Socialist headquarters at the Book Market.

Surely there is no issue here about freedom of opinion, of expression, of assembly, or of petition. The attitude of the University, of the President, and my complete identification with this attitude, are matters of well-known, time-tested record. But as freedom is vital, so also are clarity, honesty, and devotion to the work in hand vital in a freedom that would not betray its very ground and instruments.

R. B. HOUSE,
Executive Secretary.

Furthermore

I am sorry that Mr. Ericson did not ask me about the withdrawal of the petitions from the Y. M. C. A. building. I had one on my desk at the Bull's Head. I believed in the principle behind the demand, as any straight thinking American would and my name headed the list. I showed it to my friends when they came into the shop and a number signed. However, I realized the trouble the petition in general was stirring up around this University community. I put mine quietly aside and only brought it out for people to sign upon request. Then Mr. House came in and confirmed my suspicions about the "smoke" being all too great in proportion to the "fire" and reminded me that, because of my "official position" in the Y. M. C. A. building, my private activities might be misunderstood to the detriment of the University. The next time a representative of the party came around I handed in my copy of the petition containing some fifty odd signatures. There was no "general order" issued nor any "ukase." I was greatly surprised at my rapid martyrdom and speedy canonization which is so obviously undeserved since I was not the subject of any form of persecution.

The administration of this, my University, because it stands for the things I believe in most, claims my first and unflinching support.

MARY DIRNBERGER, Manager
Bull's Head Book Shop.

And in Conclusion

Mr. Ericson's letter in Friday's TAR HEEL gives a totally mistaken impression of the library's action on the political buttons.

Briefly, the situation is this: several days ago a student assistant in the library, who has been very active politically, came to work with a collection of political literature and buttons for distribution to other assistants in the library. This assistant took time when he was scheduled to be working in the library to dispense the material and, of course, took the time of other assistants in discussing it. Using University time for such activities is inexcusable, and a general ban was placed on partisan propaganda while carrying on library functions. Assistants were requested not to wear buttons of any political party while on duty, as the library is supposed to serve all parties and classes alike and it would be better taste to refrain from such propaganda when meeting the general public.

It is not the general University policy, however, to dictate what any one should wear or think, and the library willingly conforms to this policy. Student assistants in the library are free to display buttons, ribbons, or any other insignia. I should like to reiterate my uncompromising opposition, though, to the use of time paid for by the University to carry on propaganda of any variety.

There is no justification for the idea that Socialists have been discriminated against. Practically every member of the library staff signed the Socialist petition recently circulated, and a copy of the petition was placed on the library bulletin board for general attention.

R. B. DOWNS,
Acting Librarian.

An enthusiastic crowd of Carolina followers gathered last night in Memorial hall in one of the largest pep meetings ever held on the campus. The speakers were good, the cheering was sincere, and its results will be seen this afternoon when a determined Tar Heel eleven will "open up" against the Golden Tornado from Georgia Tech.

Star End Out

The Yellow Jackets come into Durham this morning at 10:30 and will come over for the game in busses. Coach Bill Alexander is bringing forty men with him and with the possible exception of Jerry Goldsmith, brilliant Tech end for the last three years, who is still limping badly from an early season injury, will throw full strength against the Tar Heels. Trainer Mike Chambers of the Tornado stated that Shorty Roberts, flashy back who hurt his ankle in scrimmage Tuesday will be ready for action today.

Coach Alexander has a capable substitute for Goldsmith in George Vierick who played such a flashy game at right end against the Auburn Tigers last Saturday.

Our own trainer, Chuck Quinlan, announced last night that

The writer has always thought that while the 1932 Tar Heels have not met with much success this year, they still have a mighty fine team and one of the best in the state. But the Davidsonian evidently is on another opinion, or perhaps it's the "rah rah" spirit breaking loose. In an editorial the Davidsonian paper criticizes a TAR HEEL scribe for taking the Wildcats as only an average team, and the story concludes, "However, Carolina is no set-up..." Well, time will tell, but the writer has a hunch that after the Carolina-Davidson game, there will be a badly mangled Wildcat.

Carolina-Georgia Tech

The feeling is prevalent that Carolina will enter this game in the "won" column. Apparently the Tar Heels found themselves in the Georgia game last Saturday, and if so, there should be clear sailing the rest of the way. However, Tech has a mighty dangerous ball club and might break loose any Saturday now. In spite of that, one vote for North Carolina and the alumni.

Vanderbilt-Georgia

The Commodores upset the Bucket last week by holding Tulane to a 6-6 tie. That contest established Vandy as a real contender in addition to having given them plenty of confidence. We'll take Vandy by about three touchdowns.

Florida-State

The experts dope this game as a duel between two soph backs, McAnley of Florida and Rex of State. We'll string along with McAnley and Co. by about one touchdown.

DEACONS SUCCUMB TO DUKE ATTACK

Nick Laney Slips Away for Sixty Yards for Only Touchdown of the Game.

Wake Forest championship aspirations were reduced to a more natural state by the powerful Duke Blue Devils yesterday in Durham when the Wademen scored a 9 to 0 victory over the courageous Deacons before a crowd of 7,000.

Nick Laney's spectacular sixty yard run, reminiscent of Johnny Branch's halycon days, and Abbot's conversion gave the Blue Devils a 7 to 0 lead in the first quarter. In the second period, Duke's outstanding line-man, Crawford, tackled Meyers behind his own goal for a safety to conclude the afternoon point getting.

Two Duke scoring chances were nullified, one in the opening session when a fifteen yard penalty shoved them back to the nineteen yard line while a fumble on the five yard mark in the fourth stanza ended a forty-five yard drive when Wake Forest recovered.

The Deacons threatened in the fourth quarter driving the ball to the twenty-three yard mark only to be penalized fifteen yard.

First downs favored Duke, 8 to 5.

All-University Team Proves To Be Dark Horse In Faculty Tournament

Dr. Henry's Team Places Itself In Competition by Touncing Commerce Department.

Dr. G. K. G. Henry has formed an all-University team and has entered it as a dark-horse in the faculty tourney. This team is made up of faculty men not affiliated with any of the departments that are represented by regular teams in the competition.

Henry's Team Furnishes Action

Thursday afternoon, while the English and History departments were carrying on their renowned argument about who was to win the championship, Dr. Henry's all-University golfers, who heretofore had been given no mention and who had given no rash promises to the press, proceeded to put in a word about that championship and back it up by snatching eleven out of a possible fifteen points in a match with the Commerce team. Captain Henry, himself, took a total of three points from Woosley of the Commerce department. Another three points were added to the victors' score when Huse of the all-University played Ferger. M. A. Hill dropped three points to the losers in his match with Winslow, captain of the Commerce team. Matched with Carroll, Winsor succeeded in taking two and a half out of three for the winners and in the last match, Bagby accounted for the remainder of the winners' score by upsetting Heath, the latter gathering only a half point.

Dark Horse Not so Dark
It must be conceded that, in view of this scalping, the so-called "dark horse" is no longer so dark, but is now a real threat in the tournament. In an interview following the match, Dr. Henry said, "I haven't talked as

SIX MEN WIN IN TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Harris, Minor, Johnson, Levitan, Willis, and Friedman Will Enter Quarter Finals.

In the top bracket of the placement tennis tournament yesterday, Harris defeated Sobal in a hard fought match by the score of 6-3, 8-6; Minor was pushed hard by Borroughs who carried him to three sets, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2. Johnson won his match against Linker, 6-4, 7-5, and the match between Lott and Lovill was postponed.

In the lower bracket Levitan easily defeated Trainer 6-2, 6-1. Willis defeated Baukney, 6-4, 6-4. Friedman with his superb drives easily defeated Bennet, 6-2, 6-2. The match between McGlims and Atwood was postponed.

The winners of these matches will enter the quarter-finals in the tournament on the strength of their victories yesterday.

The two postponed matches must, however, be played before Monday in order not to slow up other matches.

The remainder of the matches should be interesting as only first rate players are left in the field.

Harris, Minor, and Friedman seem to be the best players and from them one can expect some very good tennis.

CAKE RACE ENTRY BOOK CLOSED AS 150 MEN TRY-OUT

Individual Prizes Will Be Awarded to First Fifty Men to Finish in Annual Event.

The entry book for the ninth annual intramural Cake Race has been closed, with about 150 men working out daily to complete their required quota of six workouts before they will be allowed to enter the race.

The event is scheduled for Friday, between the halves of the Carolina-N. C. State freshman tilt as an added attraction. The starting point will be the Morehead-Patterson bell tower, and the last lap will end at the goal nearest the field house in Kenan stadium.

Coach Dale Ranson, cross-country mentor and workout supervisor, is looking forward to some of the hottest competition in years, and he announced also that some fine prospects for Carolina's great cross-country teams had been manifest in the ranks of the entrants.

Scoring and Prizes

Herman Schnell of the University intramural department has announced that this event will be one of the biggest factors in the year's schedule of events toward determining the ultimate victor in all-year competition.

Schnell announced that, according to the intramural department's handbook, the team winner would receive 25 points; second place, 20 points; third place, 15 points; fourth place, 10 points; and fifth place, 5 points. Teams having most entrants in the cross-country meet shall receive 25 points; second, 20 points; third 15 points; fourth 10 points; and fifth, 5 points. In

Yearlings Win From Fast Cadet Team By 7-6 Score

Pass From Phelps to Ellisberg In Third Quarter Responsible For Tar Babies' Score.

BOTH TEAMS SHOW POWER

Oak Ridge Eleven Tallies in Last Quarter With Only Two Minutes to Play.

In probably the best game that has been staged on Kenan field this season, Carolina's freshman football team fought their way to a thrilling 7 to 6 victory over a fast and determined Oak Ridge eleven. A pass from Phelps to Ellisberg scored the extra point that gave the Tar Babies their triumph.

Both teams counted in the last half on steady drives from their own territory with passes playing an important part. The Cadets made their marker with only two minutes of the battle to be played. The freshmen's score came just before the third period ended and was featured by the play of Montgomery and Phelps. After an exchange of punts were made when neither team could gain, the yearlings got possession of the ball on their own thirty yard line. Two passes from Phelps to Montgomery and a fifteen yard run by Montgomery took the ball to Oak Ridge's thirty yard line. Phelps and McCachren made another first down on line bucks. Montgomery took the ball nine more yards to the six yard marker. After two bucks failed Phelps crossed the goal line on an off tackle dash.

Cadets' Passing Good

Oak Ridge went into a passing attack late in the final period after the Tar Babies had stopped their running attack dead. The Cadet's drive for a touchdown started from their own

FRESHMAN COACH WILL APPEAR AT CAROLINA TODAY

Last Year's All-American Team Will Appear in Picture, "The All-American."

"The All American," starring Richard Arlen, who is supported by a team of all-American players, is featured today at the Carolina theatre. Al Howard, former Notre Dame player and present freshman coach at the University, is included in the cast. Other famous athletes who will be seen in action are Ernie Nevers of Stanford, "Hurricane" Cain from Alabama, Albie Booth of Yale, Frank Carideo, Johnny Baker, Marchmont Schwartz, and Fred Linehan.

While assembled for the picture, these men contested in various events which were judged by Amos Alonzo Stagg, W. A. Alexander, Hunk Anderson, Jesse Harper, Glenn "Pop" Warner, and Christy Walsh. Ernie Nevers punted nine times and averaged sixty-one yards to win his event.

There will be a special showing of this attraction at 10:00 a. m. this morning.

CAKE RACE ENTRY BOOK CLOSED AS 150 MEN TRY-OUT

(Continued from page three) no case is the number of points to any particular team in a cross-country meet to exceed 150. The same number of points, 25, will be awarded to an organization entering a team in the race just as if they enter a team in any other sport.

Cakes will be given to each group having four men to finish in the first fifty. A cake will also be given to the organization having the largest number of men to start the race, and also to the team having the most men to finish in the first fifty.

Individual prizes will be awarded to the first fifty contestants to finish the race, and also to the first ten to finish the intramural department will award special medals. To these first ten to cross the finish line a supper will be given by "Dean" G. H. Paulsen.

World News Bulletins

Roosevelt Makes Pledge

Before a throng which filled the Springfield, Ill., arsenal to its official capacity of 10,000 Governor Roosevelt asserted in a campaign speech yesterday that "as president" he would "propose to congress a definite plan for the refinancing of farm mortgages."

40 Guards Hold 900 Prisoners

The Portsmouth penitentiary at Kingston, Ont., where more than 900 prisoners rioted last Monday, was in a state of siege yesterday. The mutineers had lost none of their spirit of defiance, but they have had no food for 24 hours. No effort has been made to starve them out, but it has been impossible to supply them with any food, the prison officials said. A definite move will be made to restore order.

Japs Launch New Drive

The Japanese army was reported to have begun a new drive against Chinese bandits in the Newchang, Manchuria, area.

Taxes Fail to Stem Deficit

September's increased tax collections failed to halt a national treasury deficit that yesterday had pushed beyond the half billion dollar mark to trail last year's deficiency by only $10,000,000.

Thomas Proposes Levy

A levy of possibly $40,000,000 on large fortunes was advocated last Thursday by Norman Thomas when he addressed a campaign audience in Columbus, Ohio, as a practical means to readjust economic unbalance. He would begin at five per cent on fortunes over $25,000 or over $25,000.

OUR TIMES

"... an appeal to the love of justice inherent in American youth—an appeal which cannot fail," is the way Mr. Santesson looks at it.

So now they're going to add a Young Gandhi club to the Young Democrats, Young Republicans, Young Socialists, Young Would-Be Repealers of the Eighteenth Amendment, Young Blop-for-Government Leaguers, and Young We Want Beer-ers (ad infinitum.) We venture to assert that the number of youths in this democracy who possess a clear conception of the Gandhi problem wouldn't equal the number of touchdowns Drake makes against Notre Dame every October.

Young America will continue to see its infant prattlings go ignored until Gandhi, Prohibition, the Russian peril and other petty trivialities are laid aside as childish toys and the questions of war debts, tariff walls, and clean government are assumed.

Errata

We feel pretty bad about those cracks we took at the Buccaneer several days ago. Seems the darn thing will be out tonight, so that makes it only one month late, instead of two. However, we won't believe that the Buc is actually off the press until we get a copy of it in our own hands, b'gosh. Or maybe until we see the editor wandering about the streets wondering what the points to his jokes are.

Grades to Be Posted

An announcement will appear in the Tuesday edition of THE DAILY TAR HEEL advising when failing grades will be posted on the bulletin board in the registrar's office. The list will probably be ready and posted by that date.

TAR HEELS READY FOR GAME TODAY WITH TECHNICIANS

all the injured on the Carolina squad were ready to go against Tech today and this means that George Barclay, Johnny Phipps, Harry Hodges, and Bill Collins, who have been recovering from slight ailments during the week, are in tip-top shape.

Underwood Meets Test

June Underwood will meet a strong test today when he faces Captain Monk Neblett at center. The Tech captain is a veteran pivot man and one of the leading centers in the south. June has been improving rapidly at the pivot position and has drawn much favorable comment from scribes all over this section. His play today will have an important bearing on his conference rating.

Another good match will be that between George Barclay, star Carolina guard, and Laws, the Tech star who has been receiving so much mention lately. Barclay is fast making a name for himself and should give Laws a lot of trouble today.

The Tar Heels watched the frosh play Oak Ridge yesterday and then came out for a snappy limbering up exercise. The whole squad romped around the field and then a brief punting and passing practice was held. The Carolina coaching staff scouted the Duke team against Wake Forest in Durham yesterday and returned in time to put their own charges through the light workout.

TAR BABIES WIN FROM OAK RIDGE

thirty-five yard line after a yearling punt. Three passes Kitchen to Nuzam, who made beautiful runs, after catching the passes, carried the ball to Carolina's twenty yard line. Thurmn took the ball across the zero line from the ten yard marker on a pass from Kitchen. Thurmn had been sent in the game at the beginning of the Cadet's drive with instructions to pass. A kick for extra point was wide by inches.

The Tar Baby second team started the battle and Oak Ridge opened with a threat to score, counting three first downs and passing over the goal twice. After the second pass was grounded the first string was sent in which stopped the Oak Ridge attack until the final period.

Punting Duel

Except for the two scoring drives and twenty and fifteen yard runs by Snyder and Montgomery respectively, both Tar Babies, the contest was a punting duel between McCachren of Carolina and Edens of Oak Ridge with the Tar Baby star holding a slight advantage. Both kickers had an average well over forty yards for their boots and McCachren got off one punt that carried sixty yards.

Besides the kicking of McCachren, Montgomery was the outstanding back for the yearlings, advancing the ball nearly every time he carried it. Phelps also did some nice passing which has already been mentioned. The whole freshman line charged, and tackled hard with Joyce, Moore, and Hobgood doing the outstanding work. Besides Edens' kicking, the passing of Kitchen was best in the Oak Ridge backfield. Smathers also made some nice runs for the Cadets.

Geological Society Hears Prouty

gion as it is and how it came to be as it is, and second, to present this picture in comparison with other regions in the United States, as well as to emphasize the sub-regional comparisons within the larger southern states.

Partial and varying comparisons will be made among six different districts in the United States: the southeast, the southwest, the northeast, middle-America, the middle-west, and the far-west. These comparisons will be a means of measuring each region in general known terms, and will also afford opportunity of possible discovery of new truths through the study of differences and resemblances. The study of the southern region will be presented in a more vivid and unauthentic picture than previous researches. Instead of a statistical report that does not give a complete series of pictures, the purposive formation of the details will rather present a comprehensive view of the situation that entails less actual data. The study will also embrace an appraisal of the south's capacity to develop its resources and to utilize better its available public income as well as its capacity to raise and absorb funds from special endowments. It may be an introduction to a program of regional planning, the extent and nature of which will be determined by the results of the study.

A series of volumes covering the research in the various regions will probably be published after the culmination of each study. In that case, the southern study would present a picture not only of the south, but of the south's growing part in the national development.

Perhaps Captain Winslow of the Commerce department team is the best judge of how loud these unheralded actions speak. At any rate, we now have another team added to the list of would-be champions. The all-University team will challenge the History department for its next match. When this was revealed, a member of the English department's championship aggregation was heard to express the hope that the new entry would "wear down" the History teachers before the oft-postponed English-History match materialized. Can it be that the present champions are afraid of those Historians?

LEADERS OF SOPHOMORE DANCE CHOSEN THURSDAY

Stump Franklin, president of the sophomore class, was unanimously elected leader of the sophomore dance at a meeting of the class in Memorial hall Thursday night. Emmett Joyner, Frank Wilson, Edgar Broadhurst, Erwin Laxton, and Gene Bagwell were elected assistants.

President Franklin reported that final permission to conduct the dance had been obtained from the University dance committee and that the athletic committee had granted the privilege of using the Tin Can for the dance. He announced that other details of the dance were being attended to but were too indefinite to be announced. The dance will be staged November 5.

Norman Thomas Gives Roosevelt Close Race In Voting On Campus

Herbert Hoover Left Far Behind As Fight Becomes Two-Sided Battle.

GOVERNOR'S LEAD SIXTY

Returns Will Be Tabulated With Others Gathered at Thirty-Five Schools.

An immense protest vote which exceeded the wildest expectations of campus Socialists gave Norman Thomas more than a 2 to 1 majority over Herbert Hoover and sent him within sixty votes of Franklin D. Roosevelt in THE DAILY TAR HEEL presidential student vote, finally tabulated late last night.

The count: Hoover 82; Roosevelt 240; Thomas 179; Foster 0.

These returns, together with those gathered from thirty-five other colleges in twenty-eight states, will be tabulated at midnight October 26 in the city rooms of the Daily Princetonian, which sponsors the contest. Final returns are to be made public the morning of October 27, when THE DAILY TAR HEEL will carry a telegraphic account of the ballot direct from Princeton, N. J.

Tribute to Thomas

In interviews late last night with student body leaders and several faculty members, the consensus of opinion was that the Thomas vote came largely as a tribute to the man himself, whose frequent appearances here have endeared him to the vast throngs of students present on each occasion. The vote was also construed as an indication of general dissatisfaction with the platforms and principles of

FAMOUS DRAMA WILL BE OFFERED BY PLAYMAKERS

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" Was One Of Greatest American Successes in Drama.

The first presentation of the Carolina Playmakers which will be given in the Playmaker theatre on the nights of November 3, 4, and 5, will be a revival of that famous propaganda novel Uncle Tom's Cabin by Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe.

The book was published in March, 1852, and so great was its popularity that it was dramatized by Charles Weston Taylor in August of that same year, but it ran only eleven nights in Purdy's National theatre in New York. However, the manager of a Troy museum was so impressed by it that he wanted his daughter Cordelia to play the part of Little Eva, and asked a cousin of his, George Aiken, to rewrite it.

Aiken's version was an instant success and ran for 100 nights in Troy, opened once again in Purdy's National theatre in New York, and played over two hundred times successively from July 18, 1853 to August 19, 1854, an unprecedented run for that time. The play showed twice a day for a while, and then became so popular that it was given three times a day, and the actors remained in costume all day, eating behind the scenes.

Joseph Jefferson took a role in Aiken's play in Philadelphia and other versions were acted in Paris and in London, where anti-

Nelson O. Kennedy to Present First In Series of Organ Concerts This Afternoon at 4:00.

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy of the University music department, will present the first in a series of vesper organ concerts at 4:00 o'clock this afternoon in the Hill music auditorium.

Concert Overture in B Minor, by James H. Rogers; Cantilena, by Carl McKinley; Sketch, by Robert Schumann; Toccata and Fugue in D Minor, by J. S. Bach; Meditation-Elegie, by Felix Borowski; and Finale, from the first symphony of Louis Vierne will be the numbers on the program.

All are invited to attend the concerts which have been received favorably in the past as feature attractions of the musical season for the year.

WORKER'S SCHOOL BEING SPONSORED FOR TENNESSEE

Dr. Branson Endorses Plan for School in Mountains Similar To Danish Schools.

Myles Horton of Montague, Tennessee, visited the campus Friday in an attempt to arouse interest here in support of a school for workers which he is establishing in the mountains of Tennessee. He interviewed a number of University persons in the interest of his endeavor.

The purpose of the school will be to train the rural and industrial young men and women of the south for leadership in their respective fields.

Dr. E. C. Branson of the department of rural social economics at the University gave his endorsement to Horton's plan to establish schools along the lines of Danish folk high schools.

In an interview Friday, Dr. Branson remarked: "I am anxious to see a country school that is fit for country people."

Studied Danish Schools

Horton spent last year in Denmark where he studied the educational system of that country and is planning to fashion his school somewhat after the type of Danish folk high schools. He plans to use the educational approach of the Danish school for specific purpose of preparing young workers in mines, on farms, and in factories to become leaders in their native occupation.

"We would be very much disappointed," Horton said, "if any great number of our students should forget their people and go out into the world and try to get rich."

Serving on the advisory committee of the worker's school, which opens at Montague November 1, are Norman Thomas, Reinhold Niebuhr, Sherwood Eddy, and Carl Taylor. Don West, young mountaineer whose poems on the mountains are attracting considerable attention, is associated with Horton in this project.

SENATE TO DISCUSS N. C. CONSTITUTION

Dues of All Old Members and Fees of New Men for Fall Quarter Are Payable.

The Di Senate will discuss the following bills at its meeting Tuesday evening at 7:00 o'clock in the Di hall in New West:

Resolved: That the students of the University have too little control of extra-curricula activities.

Resolved: That the University should adopt a policy similar to that recently adopted by the University of Pennsylvania.

Resolved: That a constitutional convention should be called in 1933 to revise the constitution of North Carolina.

Resolved: That there should be a consolidation of counties in North Carolina.

At the time of the meeting new men will be accepted and plans are being made for the initiation of those already accepted within the coming month. The dues of the members will fall due at this meeting which is the sixth of the year for the Di. It will be necessary to pay these dues in order to keep the privileges of the floor.

All students who are interested in public discussion of the issues of the campus, of the state, of the nation, or of the system and institutions of today are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

Financial Struggles Have Marked History Of University Of Georgia

Established in 1785 by Son of Eli Yale, University Has Become Leading Educational Force in Georgia Despite Lack of Public Support.

The University of Georgia, oldest state chartered university in America, is literally a child of Yale university. Founded by the son of Eli Yale in 1785, it has sought throughout its development to maintain the tradition and spirit of the New Haven institution. The school has forged its way steadily through a century of home unpopularity and financial constraint to emerge leader of the many colleges in its state. The life of Georgia university is typical of educational struggles south of the Mason and Dixon line.

In a sense, it was the kinship with Yale that earned Georgia its national reputation. When, some four or five years ago, the sons of Eli traveled to Athens to play the Georgia football team, the journey was made in recognition of the school's lineal association with Yale. Georgia's victory in that game was the beginning of a long line of successful intersectional encounters. At present it is best known throughout the nation as a school which produces championship gridiron squads.

School Opened in 1801

The school received its charter in January, 1785, a full seven years before the granting of the University of North Carolina's. However, it was not until August 1801 that the new school was opened to students, while North Carolina had been operating its state university for over seven years prior to this date.

After three years forty-five students were enrolled. The school was called Franklin college, a name which was not changed until after the Civil War. Most of the Georgians who

Y. M. C. A. GROUPS PLAN JOINT MEET

Members of "Y" Cabinets to Be Given Varied Entertainment Tomorrow Night.

The three cabinets of the Y. M. C. A. will gather in the initial joint meeting of the year tomorrow night at 7:00 p. m. in Gerrard hall, it was announced yesterday by "Y" officials.

Reverend Tom Wright, assistant parson of the local Episcopal church will be the evening's principal speaker. The Episcopalian minister promises an inspiring message to all of the members of the trio of clubs, and all members are urged to be present. Any students desirous of joining are cordially invited to attend.

One of the best features of the year will also be presented in the Chapel Hill negro quartet. This group is one of the most popular vocal organizations in the vicinity, and they have a most diversified program on hand for the "Y" meeting.

DYER WILL BE JUDGE OF GOLDSBORO CONTEST

Professor Harold S. Dyer of the music department will judge a singing contest which will be given under the auspices of the County Recreation and Community League in Goldsboro Tuesday. At the Rotary dinner in the evening, Professor Dyer will speak on "Amateur Music."

Playmaker Reading

Professor Koch to Read Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew" in Playmakers Theatre Tonight.

The first of the monthly Sunday night play readings will be offered tonight at the Playmakers theatre at 8:30 o'clock when Professor F. H. Koch will give The Taming of the Shrew.

In most of Shakespeare's plays the woman appears to be the dominant character, determining the fate of the man associated with her in the plot. Bernard Shaw says, in his famous preface to Man and Superman, "It is always the woman who hunts the man down; woman is the pursuer and contriver—man is the pursued and disposed of." According to Professor Koch The Taming of the Shrew might seem an exception to the rule but he says he will endeavor to reconcile this paradox in his acting of this famous comedy. The entertainment is free to all.

DORMITORY CLUB TRIES TO OBTAIN IMPROVEMENTS

Group Will Meet With Buildings Department to Discuss Dormitory Improvements.

The Carolina dormitory club, a University organization composed of the presidents of the various dormitories under the direction of William Medford, met last week to discuss several problems.

The organization has the dual purpose of attempting to coordinate the forces for regulating order in the dormitories, and acting as an intermediary between the residents and the buildings department.

The problem of the disturbance caused by students yelling to one another from building to building was discussed. It was decided that offenses are to be handled by the student council.

Recommendations Made

Several recommendations were made to the buildings department which, if enforced, will better living conditions in the dormitories. It was requested that additional mirrors be placed in the wash rooms of several dormitories. Lack of sufficient mirrors has caused quite a bit of confusion in the mornings. The club asked that all rooms at the University be supplied with three chairs, that a combination card holder and message clip be attached to each door in order to facilitate the finding of students and to enable them to become better acquainted with one another, and that the University provide a place for football practice near the dormitories in order that the grass will not be destroyed by the teams practicing the intramural games.

STUDENT TICKETS GOOD FOR ORCHESTRA CONCERT

Arrangements have been made by the student entertainment committee with the managers of the North Carolina symphony orchestra by which holders of student tickets and season tickets will be admitted free to a concert to be given in Memorial hall Friday, December 2.

There will be reserved seats which, if desired, will cost fifty cents extra. Holders of student tickets and season tickets may exchange coupons for tickets at the Y. M. C. A. during the week of November 14 to 19.

PREPARATION FOR DRAMA FESTIVAL NOW UNDER WAY

Carolina Dramatic Association Has Revised Procedure of Former Years.

Preparation is being made by the Carolina Dramatic Association, under the supervision of the University, for the Tenth Annual State Dramatic Tournament, which will be conducted in Chapel Hill March 30, 31, and April 1. If practical, all contests, both final and preliminary, will be staged in the Playmakers theatre.

Preliminaries to Run Here

This annual tournament is conducted yearly by the Carolina Dramatic Association. Various school and community dramatic societies throughout the state produce plays, acted entirely by members of the respective organizations. Heretofore, preliminary contests have been held in different parts of the two state sections, but on account of the financial conditions this year, it has been suggested that all contests, both preliminary and final, be staged in Chapel Hill, thus saving the costs of making more than one trip. This plan will be voted upon and considered at the annual directors' meeting which will take place here in the Playmakers theatre, January 7. If the new plan is adopted, preliminary contests will be staged in the mornings of the three festival days, and finals in the afternoons.

There are seven classifications of competitors which are:

County high schools and junior community organizations; (Continued on last page)

SEDALIA SINGERS TO APPEAR HERE FOR 'Y' CONCERT

Colored Choir From Alice Freeman Palmer Institute to Sing Next Sunday Afternoon.

The Sedalia Singers, colored choir from the Alice Freeman Palmer Institute, will appear in Memorial hall next Sunday at 4:30 o'clock, it was announced yesterday by Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the campus Y. M. C. A.

"Y" officials, who are sponsoring the event, announced that there would be no admission; but a silver offering would be taken in order to defray traveling expenses of the organization.

The choral group is known throughout the nation for its brilliant concerts, and very flattering criticisms have been made of it in the Boston Evening Transcript and the New York Times. The Gotham paper said: "The singing of the Sedalia group caught the dwellers in the big city with a wonderful power of primitive appeal. The male quartette, one of the best heard in these parts, was received with enthusiasm and responded to repeated encores."

Home folks are just as enthusiastic over the glee club as New York. The Greensboro Daily News of April 19, 1929, praises the Sedalia association in this manner: "The Sedalia Singers' concert is the event of the year. They sing like angels. The rendition of 'Study War No More' was alone worth the price of admission."

Shifting Some of The Blame From Hoover

"The one educational institution which has produced the greatest amount of unemployment" is the American College of Liberal Arts, according to Dr. M. R. Trabue's address before the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dr. Trabue (absent on leave from this University) is a present executive secretary of the unemployment research institute at the University of Minnesota; but in spite of his capabilities in the field of economics he is barking up the wrong tree when he accuses Liberal Arts of showing America's future citizens how not to find work. Unemployment has been attributed to a great many causes, but this is the first time that the trouble has been wished on an educational institution.

Evidently Dr. Trabue has confused cause and effect and blamed the latter for being so. Liberal Arts is a wholly innocuous institution, whatever he may say to the contrary. If he must condemn, why does he not blame those graduates bearing the A.B. sheep-skin for their joblessness? Liberal Arts no more manufactures a future unemployed than a court of law does a criminal.

In any event, a student enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts, here or elsewhere, knows what he has bargained for. If he studies its curriculum in no other hope than that of becoming a bond salesman, he has himself to blame for being minus a job. The modern college or university offers a number of opportunities for entering a profession. Why choose Liberal Arts?

This division of American education is a survival of the times when economically independent fathers sent their equally well-off sons to college for the purpose of absorbing a little culture. Few were blessed with that opportunity then, and it was all very well for those few to acquire a broad educational background in anticipation of passing the rest of their days serenely in contemplation of the finer things in life.

Not that the College of Liberal Arts serves no purpose today. The number of undergraduates looking forward to A.B. degrees is sufficient evidence that it is in no danger of becoming extinct. But those students know its curriculum, know what it has to offer.

Yet Dr. Trabue heaps this time-honored institution with unbecoming abuse. Let him seek the cause of unemployment elsewhere.—A.T.D.

We the People

Of the many evils apparent in our political system, probably none are more open to attack than those relating to the election of our national president.

First, and foremost among the problems needing attention, is the electoral system. Under existing conditions, there is no guarantee that the will of the people will be exercised in the choice for president. With the entire electoral vote of a majority of a state going to a candidate who polled only a hundred votes more than his opponent, in each state, he might easily be elected, while the opposing candidate may have received an overwhelming majority of votes in the remaining states, giving him a majority of several millions of popular votes, and still be defeated. This has never happened in such an exaggerated proportion; it has happened at least twice in our national history in a lesser proportion, which demonstrates the evil just as well.

A second evil of the system may be found in the machinery set up by the constitution for selecting a president in a case where neither of the candidates has a majority of the electoral votes: In this case, the responsibility of electing the chief executive reverts to the House of Representatives, which proceeds, giving the state with only three electors the same weight in the balloting as is accorded to New York state, with its forty-seven electors. To make matters still worse, this election is carried out by "lame duck" congressmen, who may have been completely rejected by the people at the polls, and who might be entirely impervious to the desires of the people.

These conditions should receive the attention of our lawmakers, and steps should be taken to remedy them.—W.A.S.

The Scottsboro Case

The Supreme Court of the United States, most august tribunal of a mighty nation, is deliberating over the question of the life or death for seven darkies who for the last few months have been confined in Alabama awaiting death. Nine learned men deliberating over the lives of seven negroes who due to the unfortunate predicament of their race have never had a chance from the moment of birth until the courts of Alabama condemned them to die. Poverty and race maladjustment have denied them almost everything and it is strange that our greatest court should occupy its valuable time with these seven men whose lives are of no conceivable value to anyone. Seven men who have been convicted of a terrible crime aggravated by the unfortunate relation of the black race to the white for behind their trial looms ever present and ever ominous our greatest problem—the negro.

These seven have been sentenced to death upon the testimony of two white girls who dressed as men were stealing rides on freight cars but whose word is sufficient in Alabama to snuff out the lives of these seven men. The position of the negro in the south has been and will be a tremendous source of trouble. The negro race is at present an inferior one. The negro cannot be permitted to infringe on white privilege or threaten in any way white supremacy. Yet justice and humanity must impose some limit on the extent to which efforts to that end may go. The offering of seven lives convicted under most extenuating conditions is a very costly sacrifice to be laid upon the altar of white supremacy vital, though it be to the people of the south.

The Supreme Court may go beyond the prejudiced and provincial stand of Alabama. This case is not a question of guilt but a question as to whether the people of the United States—the home of the free—demand the lives of these men of a down-trodden race to placate the dignity of the whites of Alabama. The elements of doubt, prejudiced courts, pressure of public opinion, and low mentality must figure in determining the decision of the judges that means life or death to these seven. May the teachings of Christ in which Alabamians believe prevail over section—of their Penal Code and over their antipathy to a race that is without a country and without a hope.—J.F.A.

Corncob Comics

I am in a constant state of wonderment as to why these gentlemen who are always poking their heads out of dormitory windows to make loud remarks they consider very funny ever left the farm in the first place. Their humor would certainly be more suitably expounded in an atmosphere of pig-pens and Sears-Roebuck catalogs than at Chapel Hill.

A few moments ago, approximately sixteen heads were lifted from study because some student made the quadrangle resound with these words, addressed to one of his friends who was crossing the campus: "Watch out Tubby, you don't want to get your feet wet!" Whereupon, both he and Tubby enjoyed a good laugh. It's a wonder to me their sides didn't split.

Good clean sport occasionally indulged in by a few of the inhabitants of the quadrangle I reside in takes place between twelve and three o'clock at night. Several residents of one dorm gather at a window and fling invectives at the dormitory opposite them. As soon as they gain a response from their mental equals across the way, the real process of vilification begins. The ancestry in general of the occupants of each dormitory is revealed in colorful language which, if accepted as truth, bespeaks ill of the genealogy of both. Frequent invitations to "come on over and say that here" are as frequently refused.

A form of nuisance which, although it is not closely related to the subject under discussion, I should like to mention here concerns those persistent persons looking for "Bill." Why they are always looking for Bill rather than Tom, Henry, or Joe is as much a mystery to me as it is to you, but it is Bill whom they are always seeking.

To me or you, or any rational persons, it would seem that the best way to find if Bill was in or not would be to go up to his door and knock upon it. Such a solution never occurs to Bill's friends. Instead, they stand outside of the dormitory, where a hundred other students are quietly pursuing their affairs, and bellow.

Not once do they bellow, but many times. You or I would quite naturally conclude that if

Bill did not respond to three minutes of our shouts he would not in all probability be in his room, but if you expect Bill's friends to reach that conclusion you have sadly misjudged them. Some of them spend as many as ten minutes repeating their loud pleas for Bill's appearance. It is almost as if they think Bill will eventually show up whether or not he was there at their first call, if only they are earnest and persistent enough. And request him in loud enough tones.

Rainy-day Madness

I am quite ready to believe, in accordance with the plot of "Doctor X," that the moon may induce insanity, after reading what my roommate wrote one rainy day of the past week. When I entered the room, he crumpled a sheet of paper and threw it in the wastebasket. I rescued it later, and read:

Rain, droppy rain descending mudward

From whence

It came

One knows not

Perhaps, like love, gulched from some heavenly cherubim.

If rain can produce such, it seems plausible to suppose that moonlight may have similar effect.

THOSE NEW BOOKS

THE GODS ARRIVE. Edith Wharton. D. Appleton Co. New York. 1932. $2.50.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Chesby Beatty

Here is the story of a splendid aristocrat who throws away everything except her love for a young middle-western writer who needs her help, only to find that she is unable to forget her ingrained culture with its love of beauty and order long enough to become at home in the loose-thinking bohemian society which alone will still receive her. The breach between her inherent breeding and his genius which recognizes no laws beyond its own impulses is widened by the re-appearance of the dark star of his past, a beautiful and rapacious girl whose influence is always cataclysmic.

Through their suffering the lovers come to understand what Gradma Scrimser alluded to in her deathbed message and what was meant by the voice which cried to St. Augustine—but the book is no less fascinating because of this suspicion of a message.

In the background move the entertaining and immensely varied procession which Mrs. Wharton knows so well: one sees the New York and London hostesses waddling in the wake of Art, using their intriguing artists as bait for millionaires and their millionaires as bait for the artists. Around these glittering people move a crowd of parasitic creatures of varying natures, all very much alive. Mrs. Wharton's prose is, as usual, distinguished and pleasing; a few pages of it and the reader is not willing to go back to his own problems before he learns how the lovable Halo succeeds in settling hers.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Turn Coat

Many so-called modern thinkers are clamoring for optional attendance and elective courses. Perhaps such ideas are the results of advanced thinking, but we think the wrong kind of advanced thinking. Never has an enterprise of any kind existed long without certain definite rules and laws. A company with workers using the optional plan would not last. A people with absolute freedom to do anything would soon see just another "Reign of Terror" episode in their country.

When we are left to choose, we are naturally going to choose the easiest method. We are lazy by nature and would perhaps never do the hard tasks. The scope of our minds is so great that our thoughts would never be focused long enough on one idea. Civilization would take a downward trend, if things were on an optional basis.

The same idea applies in colleges. Since men naturally have a tendency to lag intellectually, options in college would certainly encourage this lagging.

We are not taking the narrow view-point of saying that the optional idea is all wrong and will never work, but we do say that it will not work as long as such as our present youth attend our present colleges.

The Yale 'News' Football Policy The News believes in the following points in connection with University football at Yale:

1. Uniform coaching, practice, scouting, and scholastic eligibility conditions in all colleges and universities.
2. Permanent continuation of university teams at Yale.
3. Seven or eight game schedule.
4. No set-up or rest games.
5. Pre-season practice beginning September 15 to condition players and avoid injuries.
6. Maximum of two hours practice per day.
7. Voluntary spring practice.
8. Good coaches at salaries paralleling the scale in other departments of education.
9. Best seats in Bowl reserved for undergraduates at minimum costs.
10. Understanding of the function of athletics in education. Recognition of the manner in which football has carried out this function.

Continuation of University Football

University football is, we believe, the greatest single factor in perpetuating the Yale spirit. As such, it is vital to the life of the university. It must never be discontinued.

By Yale spirit, we mean that devotion which binds about 40,000 alumni, 5,500 undergraduates, and many hundreds of teachers into a united body. Yale has gained her standing in the world today through this unity. And the dependence of the university on the spirit of alumni, undergraduates, and faculty has never been more obvious than it is now.

The full weight of this fact is not at first appreciated. Consider what Yale would have been but for the alumni contributions to buildings and endowment. Remember also that the success of an educational institution is measured by the success of its graduates. It is a very narrow view which does not consider the alumni body as the backbone of Yale's prestige in the world.

The condition of the university without its faculty or undergraduates is obvious. Each group of Yale men plays an essential part. Is it not clear that the present status is the result of a long-enduring unity of purpose and co-ordination of action? Is it not clear that the spirit which held generations of Yale men to this course is the life of the university?

If the true nature and operation of the Yale spirit is understood, every precaution will be taken to perpetuate and strengthen it. When it is recognized that Yale football is more than a game, and more than a tradition; that it is one of the great forces holding the university together, its continuation will be assured.

The continuation of university football at Yale does not mean two-game schedules with Harvard and Princeton, nor half-hearted attempts at inter-collegiate competition with light practice and second-rate coaching. It means good games with the leading colleges of the East. It means that Yale teams will play their hardest and best to win, that they will have the advantages of good instruction, and that they will draw the alumni back for the reunions of undergraduates and faculty which have meant so much to Yale in the past.—Yale News.

Golden Tornado Sweeps Through Staggering Tar Heels For 45-14 Triumph

Georgia Tech, After Slow Start, Had Field Day Yesterday On Kenan Field.

CAROLINA STARTS WELL

Tar Heels Displayed Determination Which Seemed to Fade As Game Progressed.

Releasing a deluge of fast running backs, the Golden Tornado from Georgia Tech after a calm first quarter gained momentum and unleashed its fury upon the Tar Heels in the remaining sessions and in a storm of touchdowns swamped Carolina 45 to 14 yesterday to drench the hopes of 17,000 homecoming fans who gathered in Kenan stadium to see the Collins team trounce the two years of deadlocks between the two rival contingents.

Davis Scores First

A scintillating sixty-eight yard run by Davis behind perfect interference and a conversion by Lackey gave the Techmen a 7 to 0 lead in the second quarter after the Tar Heels had outplayed the Tornadoes in the opening session. A beautiful kick of fifty-three yards by Burnett which went out of bounds on Tech's three yard line led to Carolina's first touchdown. Galloway kicked short to Carolina's nineteen yard marker and five plays later Daniels carried the ball around right end for a touchdown, after Chandler and Phipps had carried it to the five yard line. Lassiter tied the count at 7-7 when he placekicked the goal.

Not to be denied, Barron barged around right end again in the second period for sixty-three yards behind perfect interference for the second score. A few minutes later, after Hart scored on McArthur's twenty-four yard pass by running the remaining thirteen yards. The ball trickled off Beale's fingertips on this play. The score at the half was 19 to 7.

Not more than five minutes had elapsed of the third period when McArthur tossed a sixteen yard pass to Viereck who then galloped the thirty-six yards to the goal. Barron missed the try for goal. An exchange of kicks favored Georgia Tech when Burnett's boot was partially blocked by Tharpe. In five plays, the Atlantans with Cherry and Hart hammering away at the line, took the ball over from Carolina's thirty-two yard stripe, Hart scoring the touchdown. McArthur missed the placement, the score remaining 31 to 7.

Demonstrating driving power, Chandler carried the ball twelve yards in three attempts and coupled with a fifteen yard penalty and a pass from Phipps to Brandt Carolina reached the eight yard line only to see touchdown chances go glimmering when Peterson, intercepted Phipps' pass and streaked down the sidelines for eighty-seven yards to bring the score up to 37 to 7.

Galloway completed the Tornado scoring in the fourth quarter when he romped around right end for forty-one yards and a touchdown.

Peacock Uncorks Rally

A belated rally was started by Johnny Peacock when he twisted twenty-seven yards through the Tech team to its twenty yard mark. A pass, McCaskill to Martin, netted thirteen yards and gave the Tar Heels the ball on the seven yard line where they lost the ball on downs. A kick put Carolina back in its own territory but a pass of thirty yards from McCaskill to Beale who ran twenty-five yards gave the Collinsmen new life. A minute later McCaskill passed to

High Spots

OF THE GAME

By JACK BESSEN

Yesterday, a cloudless, warm, dry, day was more suitable for baseball than for football. Scouts from Tulane and Vandy were in the press box taking notes on the Yellow Jackets. What they saw didn't make them feel any too good. Against the members of the Tech squad, the Tar Heels looked like pygmies, but they don't pay off football games on size. In Bill White, the Carolina band has the struttin'est drum major in the Conference.

The depression was noticeable in the Homecoming Day pregame rites. Instead of the usual four or five bands, the Tar Heel musicians were the only ones on the field.

Some of the spirit exhibited at the pep-rally in Memorial hall Friday night was evidenced yesterday. It was gratifying to see and hear the improvement over the previous games. And of course there were other kinds of spirit. Judging from the hand the Engineers received from the north stands, there were plenty of Tech rooters present.

The Tar Heels were troubled by loose tackling. Time after time Carolina players got hold but couldn't keep it. If there's a better end in North Carolina than Erwin Walker, the writer would like to meet him. The Tar Heel player made a determined bid for all-southern yesterday. The Tar Heels uncovered three good booters in Woolen, Burnett, and Martin. This boy, A. Williams, end for Tech, punts them high, wide, and handsome and with his left foot.

Second Quarter

Thompson was the best ground gainer for Carolina. He rattled off those eight yard gains with monotonous regularity. Tommie also gave the crowd heart trouble when he fumbled momentarily. But that was when it was still a ball game. That touchdown run by Davis for the Rambling Wreck's first score was behind perfect interference. The Tech halfback traveled sixty-eight yards on that play. Four other touchdowns made by the visitors came as a result of long runs. But what impressed most was Tech's blocking and interference. The Tar Heels got a touchdown indirectly from Burnett's beautiful kick. Standing on his own thirty yard line, Burnett booted the ball out of bounds on Tech's two yard line. Galloway's poor punt to his nineteen, a few rushes and score: North Carolina 7, Georgia Tech 7. But the Carolina team couldn't but prosper.

Third Quarter

The queer situation of time being called for the linesmen arose yesterday when they became entangled with their chains. Coach Collins tried to Peacock who drove over the line. Martin kicked goal to terminate the scoring.

Nebitt Leads Techmen

For the victors Captain Monk Nebitt was the outstanding linesman, his play being spectacular, while Barron, Cherry, Hart, Davis, and Peterson did the best yard gaining for the Atlanta coterie. Chandler, Thompson, and Peacock were the best ground gainers for Carolina, while Walker, Barclay, and Kahn played well in the line. First downs favored the Tar Heels, eleven to three.

STARS IN TAR HEEL DEFEAT

Plans Completed For Local Golf Tourney

Plans have been completed for a tournament of two-ball golf foursomes to take place next Wednesday, October 26. The event is being sponsored by the Chapel Hill Country club, and Dr. S. E. Leavitt, of the Spanish department, is chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements.

In the two-ball foursome arrangement each foursome is allowed only two balls, one to each pair of players, instead of the custom of allowing each man a ball. In the tournament, an experienced player will be paired with a novice in every case, and they will drive the same ball with alternate strokes.

Seventeen prizes will be given away during the tournament. The list includes golf balls, golf socks, passes to the theatre, and similar articles. Each player who scores a birdie will be rewarded with two one-week passes to the Carolina theatre.

Approximately eighty people will take part in the tournament, and a great deal of interest has already been manifested among the faculty members and townspeople.

convinced Headlinesman Major that the Georgia Tech backfield was in motion, but who ever won an argument from the officials. From the coop, it seemed as if Mr. Major was wrong a few times. Wasn't Brandt's catch of Croome's pass a beauty, and Martin's in the last quarter from McCaskill wasn't so bad either. Tech started to rough up the Tar Heels, having two major penalties called in rapid order, one for clipping and the other for piling on.

Fourth Quarter

When Tech scored forty-three points, it was the largest score rolled up against the Tar Heels in Kenan stadium. Also the fourteen points made by Carolina was the largest number made by them this year. Toward the end Peacock was doing some mighty fine ball carrying. He was finally rewarded by scoring Carolina's second marker. Martin also broke into the scoring column by converting the extra point. State at Kenan next Saturday.

Sing Sing Star Lost To Team As Jumbo Is Freed

Marino Is Given Job Upon Release and Will Play With Professional Team.

"Jumbo" (Powerhouse) Marino, big cog in the green and white Sing Sing gridiron machine, has been ruled ineligible for further play this season. The Sing Sing coach, John Law, former Notre Dame football luminary, ruled that the big fullback could no longer participate in the institution's sports; because Marino's sentence ran out last Wednesday.

There may be depressions, jobs may be scarce, but this does not apply to the late inmate of Sing Sing. The swarthy young back smashed through the hard line of life for a long gain when he succeeded in obtaining a job with the Patterson, N. J., Night Hawks, a professional football eleven in the Eastern League, immediately upon his release.

Goodbye Forever!

Marino's valdictory to his pals and dear ol' Sing Sing will go down in the annals of the institutions as one of the most memorable. Last Saturday before a crowd of 4,000 spectators, Powerhouse reaped sweet revenge over the Port Jervis, N. Y. police gridsters. The representatives of law and order trounced the convicts last year 13-0, but this year the prisoners saw to it that the disgraceful beating was forever erased as the Sing Sing eleven whipped the policemen 7-0.

Although Marino did not do the scoring for Sing Sing, he did pave the way for the victorious penitentiary. He let the honors of scoring go to his team mate, Joe Lewis, a comparative youngster. However, when "Jumbo" came off the field, all battered, bruised, and hobbling, the victory clearly in the hands of dear ol' alma mater; the whole audience arose as one man to shout his name as none other has been shouted before or will be—that's the ol' fightin' spirit, you know.

The absence of Marino in the Sing Sing line-up will surely be felt, but Warden Law and the Powerhouse, himself, were very anxious for the release. "Jumbo" came to Sing Sing three years ago on a theft charge when the boy was only seventeen years old.

Rankin to Arrange Schedule

E. R. Rankin of the extension division will go to Winston-Salem tomorrow to arrange the schedule for the western section in the general state high school football competition.

FOOTBALL RACE TO SEE EXCITING FRAYS THIS WEEK

Sigma Nu to Encounter T. E. P. And Aycock to Meet Lewis In Important Games.

Twenty-three games are scheduled for the fourth week of the annual intramural tag football campaign with several of the league-leading outfits listed to risk their undefeated records. Two games will bring together hitherto undefeated teams, and these contests will go far to clarify the present many-sided tie for first place, especially in the fraternity loop.

Monday afternoon Sigma Nu will seek its fourth victory in as many starts when it meets Tau Epsilon Phi, which has come through its two contests so far without a defeat.

Tuesday afternoon will bring together Aycock and Lewis, undefeated dormitory teams, in a game which will remove one from the select group which now holds a three-cornered monopoly on the lead in that circuit.

The week's complete schedule follows:

Monday

4:00 p. m.—(1) Alpha Tau Omega vs. Theta Chi; (2) Pi Kappa Phi vs. Phi Sigma Kappa; (3) Chi Phi vs. Sigma Chi.

5:00 p. m.—(1) Sigma Nu vs. Tau Epsilon Phi; (2) Delta Tau Delta vs. Phi Alpha; (3) Phi Gamma Delta vs. Delta Kappa Epsilon.

Tuesday

4:00 p. m.—(1) Grimes vs. Ruffin; (2) Chi Psi vs. Kappa Alpha; (3) Best House vs. Old West.

5:00 p. m.—(1) Aycock vs. Lewis; (2) Phi Kappa Sigma vs. Kappa Alpha; (3) Kappa Sigma vs. Sigma Phi Sigma.

Wednesday

4:00 p. m.—(1) Carr vs. New Dorms; (2) Steele vs. Swain Hall; (3) Sigma Alpha Epsilon vs. Zeta Psi.

5:00 p. m.—(1) Mangum vs. Everett; (2) Independents vs. Manly.

Thursday

4:00 p. m.—(1) Beta Theta Pi vs. Theta Kappa Nu; (2) Question Marks vs. Old East; (3) Zeta Beta Tau vs. Theta Chi.

5:00 p. m.—(1) Phi Delta Theta vs. Lambda Chi Alpha; (2) Delta Psi vs. Sigma Chi; (3) Chi Phi vs. Delta Kappa Epsilon.

No tag football games will be played next Friday because of the Cake Race and the freshman football game against N. C. State.

It seems pretty well agreed the peak of the depression is passed, and that we are now climbing up into a better role.—Detroit News.

SMILIN' THROUGH OPENS CAROLINA'S PROGRAM MONDAY

Norma Shearer, Warner Baxter, Sally Eilers, and Nancy Carroll Star During Week.

Norma Shearer in "Smilin' Through," with a supporting cast headed by Frederic March, Leslie Howard, O. P. Heggie, and Ralph Forbes opens the week's bill at the Carolina theatre.

Warner Baxter, Miriam Jordan, a newcomer from the London stage, John Boles, George Marion, Sr., Halliwell Hobbes, and Edwin Maxwell have the principal roles in "Six Hours to Live," Tuesday's production.

"Once in a Lifetime," Wednesday's engagement, gives an intimate glimpse within the forbidden precincts of the sound stage during actual filming operations. In biting satire it deals with events which transpire behind closed doors in the private offices of great executives—film mongers whose methods of conducting their studios are held up to ridicule.

Sally Eilers' latest Fox role is the title characterization in "Hat Check Girl," Thursday's production, with Ben Lyon opposite her and a supporting cast that includes Ginger Rogers, Monroe Owsley, Arthur Pierson, Dewey Robinson, and Eulalie Jensen.

"Hot Saturday," the story of a girl who walked home from a Saturday-night date, but awoke Sunday morning to find she might have saved herself the trouble is Friday's feature. Nancy Carroll plays the role of Ruth Brock, a girl who works in the town bank, and is chased by every lad in town because she has a reputation for being fast.

Laurel and Hardy will be seen in their latest feature-length comedy, "Pack Up Your Troubles," at the Carolina, on Saturday. The popular comedians portray entirely new characterizations. As a couple of vagrants they are kidded into joining the army, and when once in olive drab they find themselves involved in numerous predicaments.

Norman Thomas Gives Roosevelt Close Race In Voting On The Campus

(Continued from first page) the two old line parties. This is increasingly apparent in the light of an unofficial rumor reported to THE DAILY TAR HEEL which indicated that the Young Socialists have only fourteen active members on their books and fifty-odd sympathizers of the more undemonstrative nature on the campus.

Hoovercrats Pass

A striking feature of the poll was the complete passing of the Hoovercrats, who put this state in the Republican column four short years ago.

Campus sentiment indicated that the majority of the Hoover vote came from out of state students who hail from provinces to the north of us, as well as the industrial and financial sectors of the middle-west.

The Roosevelt plurality was a surprise in that it was expected that he would attain at least a clear majority in the 501 ballots.

Buccaneer Late Again

It will be noted with much glee on the campus that the October issue of the Buccaneer is finally out. It was delivered on Saturday and Sunday, October 22 and 23. Those who are accustomed to scoffing at the Buccaneer will note that it came out one week late instead of one month as one prominent columnist wrote. The business and editorial staffs both promise an early November issue.

World News Bulletins

Johnson for Roosevelt

Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California, Republican independent, will speak in support of the candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt for president at a mass meeting to be held in San Francisco, October 28, it was announced yesterday by Maurice E. Harrison, chairman of the Democratic state committee.

Hoover to Probe Tariff

Speaking from an improvised platform at Laidly stadium at Charleston, W. Va., President Hoover announced yesterday that he had asked the tariff commission to investigate whole tariff schedules to determine whether many commodities were being given adequate protection "in the face of depreciated foreign currency."

France Facing Debt Crisis

Nineteen millions are due the United States December 15. The fate of the French ministry may hang in balance when the chamber meets next week. Premier Eduoard Herriot may confer with Great Britain. The situation is aggravated by the high government operating deficit.

Hancock Raps President

Representative Frank Hancock, Democrat, issued a statement at Winston-Salem yesterday saying that President Hoover had "falsely" placed blame on the house of representatives for the delay in creating the home loan bank system.

Mayor and Son Beaten

W. E. Harris, mayor of North Wilkesboro, and his son, Spencer, were recovering from painful beatings yesterday while the police were searching for Joe Welch who, with his brother Woodrow, were charged with attacking the two on the highway near North Wilkesboro.

INTERESTING SPEAKERS ON ASSEMBLY PROGRAMS

Programs for freshman assembly have been announced for the coming week, October 24-28. Tomorrow Mayor "Zeb" Council, of Chapel Hill, will address the students on "The Relation of the Town to the University." Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers organization, will speak Tuesday on that group and its activities. Mayne Albright, whose subject will be the Graham Memorial, will speak Thursday, and Professor K. C. Fraser, of the history department, will address assembly Friday.

Baptist Sunday School

The young men's student bible class of the Baptist Sunday school invites all students of the University to come out and join the discussion of the lesson this morning at 9:45. Dr. Cecil Johnson leads the discussion and gives a very thorough, interesting, and inspirational lecture on the lesson, which we are sure you will enjoy. Come out and hear Dr. Johnson once and we believe you will continue to come.

Election of class officers is also scheduled for this morning.

Women Visit University

Led by Mrs. Carl Council and Mrs. John Barry of Durham, fifteen women, the wives of newspapermen attending the Carolina Circulation Managers association meeting in Durham, visited the University last Tuesday. The little party inspected all of the prominent buildings on the campus, and were much impressed with Carolina's quaint and attractive layout.

STATE COLLEGES PROTEST FEDERAL ADMISSION TAXES

Movement Against Taxes on Gate Receipts for State Schools Get Under Way.

A movement has been started by which state-controlled schools are seeking to have the federal tax on admissions declared not applicable to such institutions.

Carolina has joined this group which is composed in the greater part of mid-west and Pacific coast schools. It is expected that the number of colleges participating in the movement will eventually include nearly all state-controlled universities.

As an indication of the high hopes of the movement, little slips were stuck on the back of each ticket purchased for yesterday's game. It read:

"Important! In case internal revenue tax declared illegal, mail this certificate for refund to ticket office, Box 100, Chapel Hill, N. C." This tax, which went into effect last June is for ten percent of admissions over 41 cents.

Although the little sticker is at present worth nothing, it may some day be to the holder's advantage to mail it to the ticket office, and receive as a refund the amount of the tax; that is, if the movement is successful.

PREPARATION FOR DRAMA FESTIVAL NOW UNDER WAY

junior high schools; city high schools, special charter and private preparatory schools; junior colleges; senior colleges; adult community groups and little theatre organizations; and individuals (playwrights).

Besides the production contests, there is an open contest for amateur playwrights. Restrictions are that the plays must be of one act only, must be typed and in the office of the secretary of the association by December 20. The two best plays selected by a special committee will be presented at the contests in competition.

All registration or entries for the production contests must be in the secretary's office by January 16. The tournament fee was two dollars last year, but it is thought that it will be slightly larger this year due to increased expense on the association in bringing the entire delegation to Chapel Hill. This matter will also be discussed at the directors' meeting.

Several changes from last year's methods of procedure will be enacted. Two new classifications, those covering junior colleges and high schools, have been added. This year, stage scenery will not be considered in the final judgment of the plays, for the facilities and properties of the Playmakers are to be at the disposal of all contesting casts.

Tragedies will be produced only by junior and senior colleges, adult community groups, and Little Theatre organizations while comedies can be used by city and county high schools, and community groups. Awards for costumes, make-up, and stage models will be given. No winning play can be entered into the forthcoming contests for three years.

A religious play contest will also be sponsored if sufficient numbers of church and social organizations are interested. This is a new plan and is considered an important inauguration.

Membership to the association costs two dollars, and entitles the member to four issues of the Carolina Playbook, published jointly by the Carolina Playmakers and the association.

Fraternity Eating Club Elects New Officers

At a meeting of the Cabin, fraternity eating club, this week the following men were elected to offices in the club: L. C. Skinner, president; Phillip Markley, vice-president; Lewis Peeler, secretary; and W. T. Minor, Jr., treasurer and manager. These four officers compose the executive committee, of which George Little is chairman.

The Cabin was organized at the beginning of this year as an elective fraternity eating club, designed to replace the old Cabin and the Coop. The Cabin is composed of the five fraternities whose names follow below and its present membership is fifty-five. Sigma Nu, Pi Kappa Alpha, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Chi Phi, and Phi Kappa Sigma, are the five fraternities from which the Cabin members are chosen.

Nine New Pledgings Announced By Dean

Nine pledgings which have taken place since Thursday of last week through the dean of student's office were announced yesterday as follows: Delta Psi: Alexander H. Y.; Phi Delta Theta: James Alfred Miller, Wilmington, and Edward Orr, Brevard; Pi Kappa Alpha: George T. Fawcett, Mount Airy; Zeta Psi: Malcolm Moore, Hartford, Conn.; Kappa Sigma: Earle Cox, Atlanta.

Financial Struggles Marked History Of University of Georgia the students, probably due to his enthusiasm for athletics.

Soundly in the tradition of state universities, Georgia maintains military training which has long been an unpopular requirement. Campus sentiment also objects to the compulsory class attendance regulations in effect.

Social and Political Life

The social life of the 1800 students is dominated by fraternal orders. Unlike the Carolina debating societies, however, the Phi Kappa and Demosthean, founded in the first years of the school, have defied disintegration and are still keen rivals for political honors. One or the other is yearly the nucleus for a campus frame-up.

Although Georgia's colors are red and black, the school has retained the Yale bulldog as a mascot and symbol. Athletically, at least, the Georgia canine has repeatedly proven superior to its New Haven progenitor.

FAMOUS DRAMA WILL BE OFFERED BY PLAYMAKERS

slavery sentiment was strong. In the catalog of social forces, Uncle Tom's Cabin remains probably the most potent weapon developed against slavery by the literary crusaders. It may not be a great play or novel from the standpoint of dramatic or literary criticism, but it is more than that: it is a landmark of the history of the nation.

Abraham Lincoln hardly exaggerated when, on meeting Mrs. Stowe, he said, "So this is the little lady who brought on this great war."

French Picture Tonight

A Nous, La Liberté, the sensational French picture which is being shown at the Carolina theatre today, is especially recommended by the Romance Language department of the University. Directed by Rene Clair, the celebrated French producer, it is said to combine comedy, romance, slapstick, adventure, satire on industry, prisons, society, the Machine Age, and love with a brilliant musical score and very clever photography. No knowledge of French is required for the comprehension of this remarkable cinema, which had a very successful run in New York.

NORMAN THOMAS PLEASED BY POLL ON LOCAL CAMPUS

Socialistic Candidate Expresses Gratitude for Interest Accorded Him in Vote.

Norman Thomas, for the second time socialistic candidate for the presidency, had little comment to make when questioned Sunday concerning the results of the DAILY TAR HEEL'S campus-wide poll. "There is nothing I can say," he stated to a DAILY TAR HEEL reporter, "except that I am gratified in the interest and appreciation which the University of North Carolina and the people of the state have accorded me."

Thomas, who is making an extended tour of the south on his presidential campaign, addressed 3,000 persons in the city auditorium at Raleigh Saturday night, outlining the basic principles of his American socialism. The first aim of socialism, Thomas said, is to change the present form of American government and substitute a socialistic government for a capitalistic one.

Speaks of David Clark

Thomas was very pointed in his remarks towards David Clark, Charlotte editor, who has been severely criticizing the University for its liberalism, and for its reception of Norman Thomas, in particular. He repeatedly referred to Clark as the "editor of the power trust magazine."

The results of the University poll will be tabulated with those from other universities over the country and will be released in the DAILY TAR HEEL Friday.

University Students Contributed Generously To Y. M. C. A. Building

Campaign for Funds Instigated by Committee Headed by Dr. F. P. Venable Proved Successful for Erection of Club House For Members of Christian Order.

The building which houses the Young Men's Christian Association at Carolina stands as a monument to the generosity of University students. Inspired by Dr. Francis P. Venable, whose great ambition was to establish permanently upon the campus a Christian order, young men of the school themselves furnished over half the money required for a building. Dr. Venable, who was president of the University at the time, is largely responsible for the ten year campaign for funds which culminated in construction of the present building in 1904.

Building Needed

Need of a building was keenly felt. For almost twenty years after founding of the local Y. M. C. A., the organization faced a housing problem. It met in Swain hall, then called Commons hall and used as a gymnasium until converted into a dining hall. Old Memorial hall, now razed, was concurrently occupied. For a time a room in South building was used. However, all places were inconvenient and inadequate for all the necessary meetings and functions of a rapidly expanding association, and none might serve as a clubhouse.

A. H. Graham To Speak To Young Democrats

There will be a meeting of the Young Democratic club in Gerard hall tonight at 8:30 o'clock. A. H. "Sandy" Graham of Hillsboro, popular Democrat, and candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, will be the speaker. Graham, who is an alumnus of the University, has represented Orange county several times in the state legislature, and in 1929 was speaker of the state house of representatives.

At the meeting November 3, Harold Cooley, prominent young Democrat from Nashville, N. C., will be the principal speaker.

MEETINGS OF PHI AND DI SOCIETIES PLANNED TONIGHT

Di Senate Will Accept New Men;
Phi Assembly Will Discuss
New Football Rules.

Both the Di and Phi societies will have their regular meetings tonight at 7:00 o'clock. The Phi will meet in the assembly hall on the fourth floor of New East, and the Di will meet in the assembly hall on the third floor of New West.

At tonight's meeting of the Di, new men will be accepted, and plans will be discussed for the initiation of members already accepted within the coming month. The dues of the members must be paid at this meeting, and it will be necessary to pay them in order to retain the privileges of the floor. The bills for discussion tonight are as follows:

Resolved: That the students of the University have too little control of extra-curricular activities.

Resolved: That the University should adopt a policy similar to that recently adopted by the University of Pennsylvania.

SIX HUNDRED CAROLINA STUDENTS EAT ONLY TWO MEALS EACH DAY

Survey by Daily Tar Heel Shows That There Are Eighty-Four Different Eating Places in Chapel Hill; Many Managers Complain That Students Have No Manners.

By W. O. Marlowe

Hungry? With eighty-four different eating places in Chapel Hill? Eighty-four establishments, where from one to six hundred students are served at each meal, provide a means of diet variation guaranteed to satisfy the most exacting epicures. This number includes boarding houses, cafeterias, restaurants, fraternity house dining rooms, sandwich shops, and the two University dining rooms, Swain hall and Spencer hall.

This information is the result of a survey recently completed by the DAILY TAR HEEL. In the course of the investigation, every house in Chapel Hill was canvassed as a possible food dispensary. Although no official figures are available, it is evident from the study that the number of boarding houses shows a tremendous increase over last year.

Many Students Employed

In these eighty-four establishments, catering to the needs of 2886 students and guests, ninety student managers are employed. In addition to these, employment is furnished 195 students as waiters, dishwashers, sweepers, and the like.

The average charge for two meals per day is $20.60 per month. Check-put systems range from a straight check-out with a refund for all meals missed, down through a check-out at half-rate to no check-out at all.

The survey disclosed a number of interesting facts concerning the eating habits of the student body. Almost twenty-five per cent of the students here eat only two meals per day. That is, today, there are more than 600 students who habitually miss one meal each day; and that meal is, almost without exception, breakfast. Economic and social reasons have been advanced in explanation of this situation. It is probably true, however, that most of the students in this group, particularly those with classes beginning at 9:30, have a preference for sleep instead of oatmeal.

On the other hand, the manager of one boarding house stated that most students missed the morning meal in order to effect a saving that enables them to go to the movies more often or to buy an extra pack of cigarettes during the week. Another owner threatened to go out of business because his clients who missed breakfast so often ate so much at the other two meals that he was being forced into bankruptcy. The large scale consumption of "dopes" and crackers at 8:30 in the Book Exchange testify to the number who pass over ham and eggs in the morning.

In all places the money question appeared to be uppermost. One manager ventured that business was "lousy," that his place was too good for the town and that "what this town needs is a flophouse." Collection of accounts trouble many establishments. One female operator solicited the aid of the campus daily in collecting her bills, and suggested that a blacklist might be published of those who are delinquent in the payment for meals already consumed.

Poor Table Manners

Not a few complaints were registered about the manners of the students. One lady declared that "students are anything but gentlemen and have no manners whatsoever." She added that the appearance of food on the table was always a signal for a free-for-all grabfest. Another manager stated that all her boarders had been driven away by medical students. Fresh from the dissecting room, their conversation at meal time was anything but conducive to a healthy appetite. The breaking point came when one of the would-be doctors proclaimed lamb chops to be cadaver meat.

Y.M.C.A. PETITION IS SENT TO DOAK

Protest Against Secretary of Labor's Ruling Also Sent to Bailey
And Morrison.

The petition of the campus Y. M. C. A. against the ruling of Secretary of Labor Doak prohibiting foreign students in this country from working in vacation or part time in the regular scholastic year was dispatched yesterday from the main "Y" office.

A copy of the petition has been sent to the junior senator from North Carolina, Josiah William Bailey; to the senior senator, Cameron Morrison; and to Secretary of Labor Doak.

The students on the campus have given a fine response to the call for signers, and the protest includes some of the most prominent signatures on the campus both in the student body and faculty.

Mid-Term Reports

The names of all University students receiving grades of "X" and "W" on mid-term reports will be posted today at noon on the bulletin board in the registrar's office, South building.

Deans of the various schools will confer with failing students.

"Y" Deputation Trip Planned Tomorrow

The second deputation team of the year will be sent out tomorrow by the campus Y. M. C. A. The personnel has not been announced as yet.

They will appear before the N. C. State college Y. M. C. A. freshman friendship council tomorrow night at 6:00 o'clock, and they will later be guests of the various State college cabinets at their gatherings.

Ed King, general secretary of the State college Y. M. C. A., invited the team from the state University to give their program.

WEATHERFORD TO DELIVER SERMON AT CHURCH HERE

President of 'Y' Graduate School
At Nashville Will Also Address Y.M.C.A. Cabinets.

Dr. Willis Duke Weatherford, president of the Y. M. C. A. graduate school in Nashville, Tenn., will visit this campus during the coming week-end.

Dr. Weatherford will be the guest of the campus "Y" during his visit here, and his appearances will be sponsored by the local association. He will be available for private conferences with any students desiring to meet him during his stay on the campus. He is widely known as an advisor to young men.

Will Speak in Church

Dr. Weatherford's main appearance will be in the University Methodist church Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock in which he will occupy the pulpit in a special sermon to University students. The subject of his sermon has not been announced as yet.

He will make several other speaking engagements while in

Playmaker Presentation Will Have Many Different Scenes

More Different "Sets," Costumes, and Scenes Will Be Used in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Than Any Other Production Ever Given on Campus by University Dramatic Group.

Because in Uncle Tom's Cabin there will be more scenes and different "sets" and more costumes will be necessary than in any other Playmaker production ever given on the campus, Playmakers are at work in the scene shop from morning until as late as 12:00 o'clock at night.

The play, which will be given in the manner of the period during which it was written, calls for twelve different sets; a new roll curtain, customary at that time, is being made. It will be a "garden vista" showing huge marble columns through which may be seen a garden of flowers and over all will be cupids with garlands of roses. There will be a false proscenium likewise customary at that time.

All the scenery is being designed by Mary Dirnberger, with the exception of the set for Uncle Tom's Cabin which will be done by Closs Peace. Mary Dirnberger and Bob Proctor are making a stage model which will be on exhibition this week at Alfred Williams.

Instead of the "box sets" used nowadays the Playmakers in order to be strictly in keeping with the times are to use old fashioned wings and elaborately painted "drops" before which much of the action will take

PIERSON TO ACT AS DELEGATE AT ANNUAL MEETING

Graduate School Head to Attend
Association of American Universities Meeting.

Dean W. W. Pierson of the graduate school will represent the University of North Carolina at the 34th annual meeting of the Association of American Universities. The meeting will take place in Iowa City, Iowa, November 10, 11, and 12. Delegates will be guests of the University of Iowa during their stay.

Dean Pierson will leave several days early in order to attend a meeting of the committee on classification of colleges and universities. This is one of the most important functions of the convention.

Carolina Admitted in 1922

The University of North Carolina was admitted into the association in 1922. At present, the organization consists of the twenty-nine outstanding universities of the United States, and is generally considered the foremost educational body in America.

Last year the University of North Carolina was host to the delegation in Chapel Hill. Sixty-seven representatives attended and met in the Dialectic Senate chamber. Dean John C. McLennan of the University of Toronto presided.

The association is founded "for the purpose of considering matters of common interest relating to graduate study." Texas and Virginia are the other two universities of the south that are members.

Dr. H. D. Meyer of the department of sociology was in Spring Hope yesterday, to address the parent-teachers' association.

place. There will be no pause between scenes since the players shift around and the stage hands merely lower another drop to indicate a change of locale.

There are twenty-seven different scenes in this play, which is to be given November 3, 4, and 5. The most effective probably will be those showing Eliza, a runaway slave, escaping from the tavern window and leaping from block to block of the rapidly moving ice with her baby in her arms and the bloodhounds on her trail; the snow scene of Uncle Tom's Cabin in the moonlight, and Little Eva going to Heaven on a milk-white dove, her arms outspread in benediction over her father and Uncle Tom who are kneeling below her will be equally as touching and emotional.

Among those who are working constantly in the scene shop are: Aron Krich, Neward, N. J.; Raymond Umstead, Chapel Hill; Brad White, Chapel Hill; Jobie Matthews, Goldsboro; Arnold Snider, Salisbury; Rene Prud'hommeaux, New Canaan, Conn.; Bob Proctor, Halles, L. I., N. Y.; Marion Tatum, Raleigh; Sylvia Stecher, Los Angeles; George Pierson, Gastonia; Wilbur Dorsett, Closs Peace, Henderson; and Ellen Stewart.

Paths of Least Resistance

It is a careless bit of vandalism to walk on the grass and an offense of which scarcely one of us is blameless. Preaching against so petty an evil assumes mock-heroic proportions and an ethical halo, but in spite of its disagreeableness this question has become a perennial one on the University campus.

There is little that can be done to prevent students from walking on the grass. They cannot be intimidated, threatened, or persuaded by signs bearing the proverbial Verboten. Besides, signs would be no more of an aid in keeping the campus beautiful than are a lot of paths worn hard by hurried students. Putting a fence around all grass plots would be disadvantageous for the same reason, though no doubt a few hardy souls would surmount even this barrier. So we can do nothing but ask ourselves to refrain from trampling the grass and use gravel walks for what they were meant.

We all know that the shortest distance between points is a straight line, but the geometrical axiom does not give us license to demonstrate its practicality on every class day. And the only reasons that we do it are to save time in some cases; effort in others. Conserving the little energy that it takes to reach destination via the longer route, however, is not worth the damage done to the grass; nor is being on time to every eight-thirty a greater boon to the University than leaving the lawn intact. Saving time and effort is after all a little niggardly when we have these benefits for the asking.

A little more thought and less action on the matter of walking on the grass would soon eradicate the scars on our campus. Those who continue this thoughtless practice will leave to future classes an unappreciated heritage.—A.T.D.

And the Bandwagon Blares On

It has been an effort for both major political parties to dramatize the present presidential campaign. Issues are so general as to defy poignant presentation.

When the pope-baiting, prohibition battles, the Brown Derby, and Great Engineer myths of 1928 are remembered, the 1932 campaign begins to look like a small-time vaudeville show in comparison with the Follies.

Franklin Roosevelt is an orthodox Protestant, a member of an aristocratic and wealthy family, and withal a respectable citizen. It would be unportsmanlike to play up his crippled legs; besides he has proven them to be no handicap in his whirlwind campaign. As for his liberalism, he himself has suppressed any dramatization of that issue.

Herbert Hoover appears in 1932 to be more of a stodgy personality than ever. The myth of the Great Engineer has been discredited, despite the efforts of every Republican campaigner to revive it. The two chickens in every pot have long since been cooked and eaten; the car in every garage still stands there with no gas in its tank and no tires on its wheels.

Prohibition is no longer an issue but the name of a broken-down band wagon. Both parties have climbed aboard the 1932 "Repeal" model and are fighting for the controls.

In an effort to inject a little vitality into their appeals, the candidates have resorted to all sorts of political stunts.

Roosevelt attracted first attention by flying to Chicago where he was notified of his nomination on the floor of the convention hall. Quite unconventional procedure, but good stuff for the press. It was then announced that such non-political celebrities as Gene Tunney, Admiral Byrd, and Marian Davies would make speeches for Roosevelt. The Young Democrats were organized to corral young voters and to put some youthful spirit into the campaign; their big contributions were the ideas of selling Democratic soap and auto tags. Of course, the more than usual news-reel shots of the candidate and the radio talks were made.

When President Hoover finally got around to reading the newspapers he found that his competitor's antics were stealing the headlines. So, the Republican candidate was forthwith humanized and dramatized, though rather unsuccessfully. He was news-reel in various popular pursuits; he recruited a couple of football stars to campaign for him; and he decided on a few extra speeches, in one of which he exposed the alleged perfidy of the Democratic attack. In self defense, the Republicans also organized their young people. On the whole, however, the Republicans have been poor showmen.

But, in 1928, the greatest political ring-master of them all, the man who would have made the brown derby the national head-dress, the candidate who mispronounced his words with comical gusto, lost his campaign for the presidency.—E.C.D.

In Our Midst

Mr. Roosevelt, now stumping the south, and more recently the state of Georgia, faces the task of being a professional optimist between now and November. In the south, he must be in favor of repealing the depression and soft pedal the liquor issue; in the North he must shout repeal of the eighteenth amendment and bigger and better business, and in the west, he must get busy reminding "the forgotten man" to vote for Roosevelt next month. His task is indeed a delicate one, but apparently well worth the trouble and inconvenience. Very likely there are many voters at this moment who are still in doubt as to whether to vote for Thomas or to move to Russia.

It is these important citizens who are the bone for which the Republican and Democratic candidates are to fight.

It seems fairly sure that Roosevelt will carry the desperate Middle West and that he has lost prestige heavily in the north and east, in spite of the vote of little Maine. It would appear, then, that the pivot states which will decide the election are New York, California, Ohio, and Illinois. The anti-Roosevelt feeling is unbelievably strong in New York and Massachusetts, and it would seem that Mr. Roosevelt had better return and look to the home fires rather than make a good will tour of the south.

Nevertheless, Mr. Roosevelt feels that his southern parade, which will serve only to show what is already apparent, that Mr. Roosevelt has won the south in a walk, is worth while. And so we are to see the "rememberer" of forgotten men in Raleigh today. For a few brief moments, a large crowd will cheer the man of the hour with his hat in his hand and his smile ready for the photographers of the local paper to reproduce. He has just been preceded in Raleigh by Mr. Norman Thomas, a man for whom the students of this University have just shown their profound respect. In that city, Mr. Thomas gave the Democratic leaders a few uneasy moments when he attracted a crowd of three thousand people to the city auditorium of the state capitol.

Mr. Roosevelt's fate seems to be hanging in the balance. Just how far can he get away with the forgotten man stuff, how long can he afford to do anything even remotely resembling pussyfooting on the prohibition issue? If he can acquit himself in the next few weeks with some good speeches as full of sincerity as off fine phrases, then Mr. Roosevelt should certainly deserve to occupy the White House. But any more beating around the bush and voters of intelligence may be inclined to believe that, other things being equal, a man with four years bitter political experience would be more valuable in the White House than one whose only experience since Wilson's day has been playing politics and increasing the already enormous budget of New York state.—B.B.P.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Magic Carpet

Three networks comprising nearly every major radio station in the country brought in to millions of homes last night publicity for the gigantic public relief program which will be launched in thousands of municipalities all over the U. S. this fall. Ted Husing and Graham MacNamee chaperoned a magic carpet across the country to Los Angeles, down to Dallas, Texas, to New York, then Chicago, and numerous other points where the athletes of the nation were gathered to do their bit in obviously ghosted pep talks to unloosen the purse strings of the public. Babe Didrickson, Babe Ruth, Ted Coy, Cris Cagle, Tommy Hitchcock, Johnny Weismuller, Walter Hagen and Gar Wood, not to forget William Green and Newton D. Baker, orated briefly on each one's particular sport in such a manner as to drive home the point of filling empty mouths and warming chilly little "bodies." Jack Dempsey thought that "first we ought to have faith in our government," Walter Hagen felt somehow that golf requires the stamina necessary for relief work, and the University of Illinois played a medley of Mid-Western university songs which didn't have much to do with any institution but Illinois—it was some party. The whole affair was apparently aimed at the adage that "the way to a man's heart is through his sporting blood," or at least that's the way we interpreted it.

Gar Wood ruined the whole show for us, however. Speaking from Detroit he related the thrills of riding a full grown speed boat at 125 m.p.h. and then finally drew from his account the philosophy: "you ought to give as you've never gave before."

Greatest Show On Earth

Cinema reviewers in the New York Times and Life magazine turned their pens against the ultra-ballyhooed movie filler in the dramatic departments of their publications last week and elicited some rather clever comment on the art of high-powered movie advertising. No mean critic ourselves, we clipped from the Sunday Times what we consider the ultimate in the art of movie newspaper ballyhoo: "SIX HOURS TO LIVE... with Warner Baxter... A GREAT STAGE SHOW 'On to Rio' Stupendous in size; biggest show in town at the lowest prices"

"PARAMOUNT, World's Wonder Theatre... On the SCREEN—Greatest Comedy in Years 'Movie Crazy' plus (ON THE STAGE) Donald Novis, the Singing Idol of Hollywood.

"Joan Crawford breaks records in San Francisco! Hits new highs for receipts in New Orleans and Baltimore—Supreme in 'Rain.' 'Joan Crawford supreme in 'Rain'—says Bland Johansen in N. Y. Daily Mirror (sic ed.)"

SPEAKING

the CAMPUS MIND

Calm Your Fears, Mr. McIntosh

I wish to dissent from A.T.D.'s editorial of Saturday, "Too Much Caviar," though I do not quarrel with his proposition that those who pay the bill should be able to enjoy the program for which they pay. For years I have attended programs supposed to feature classical music, but every one of them prior to Spalding's appeared to me nothing more than a fiddle-tuning orgy. I went to hear Spalding because I was sleepy, but had to change my plans for a nap. Only once did he seem to be spoofing, that being the time he professed to display a bit of music in "pastel." For all I know, he may have been displaying that violent red which makes a Spanish bull decide that life is not worth living, or he may have been flashing the color which gives Amos the blues. At any rate, that number missed me entirely, but I got something from the others that I did not know existed and I liked it.

I am ready to be psycho-analyzed or otherwise maltreated if I can only find the answer to this question: Am I about to become a highbrow?

Contemporary Comment On The Tatum Petition

North Carolina's 'Best' Citizens Speak

About 100 of the most prominent persons in North Carolina have sent a plea to O. Max Gardner, governor of the state, asking him to "save our state from further predatory acts by these so-called modern educators against 'things of the spirit'..." The attack is not surprising, because the University has become known as one of the most liberal institutions in the realm of state universities...

Bertrand Russell, British philosopher, was attacked by these one hundred fanatics in North Carolina. Langston Hughes, Negro poet, was condemned, but this is not to be marveled at in the minds of these white southerners to whom a Negro is half-beast. Their attitude toward new ideas and a reasonable liberalism is precisely analogous to what it is toward the black race and is as smugly complacent and self satisfied as is the person's described in a little verse by Countee Cullen, another Negro poet: "She even thinks that up in heaven, Her kind lies in bed and snores, While poor black cherubs rise at seven To do celestial chores."

College 'Reds'

... That the three hundred citizens who signed the petition to North Carolina's governor, are worried, there is no doubt. But their entreaties for immediate action will lead to only one thing: delay. Governor Gardner and Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, realize that here is a problem that cannot be solved in weeks or even months.

—Ohio University Green and White.

Liberalism in College

The University of North Carolina, which in the last few years has become known in this country and abroad as one of the most liberal state educational institutions in the United States, has been attacked on this very ground by a group of about 100 prominent North Carolinians...

... Indicative of the growing conservatism among business men throughout the country, who are shying at any new idea because of the disastrous results of their most recent flirtation with so-called modern schemes of industry, such expressions as this criticism of the North Carolina university are dangerous (if heeded) to the freedom of American colleges. Neither condemning nor upholding the ideas or philosophies of Russell and Hughes, we maintain that it is the duty of college students to be conversant with the viewpoints of such men.

—Southern California Daily Trojan

Let Us Decide For Ourselves

The eternal disciples against education and liberalism are crusading again—this time on the North Carolina campus at Chapel Hill, where they have raised their voices in alarmed protest against the appearance of philosopher Bertrand Russell and the Negro poet Langston Hughes before the students of that university. In attempting to keep the words of such men as Russell and Hughes from reaching the ears of the American college students, those who object would seem to be admitting that our continental social and religious order lacks the strength or the characteristics which would defend it against the encroachments of a new order...

The Theatre

Professor Koch's reading of The Taming of the Shrew, by William Shakespeare. Reviewed by Jack Riley.

Once again "Proff" has tamed the shrew, this time in the opening Sunday night reading of the year and before an audience made up largely of men. All summer he was urged to tame her before the summer school girls, but maybe he was wise in abstaining. At least he performed the job admirably Sunday night and escaped unscathed.

As a news correspondent recently said, "the relations between men and women are the supreme triumph of Nature and the Humorist. They provoke most of the laughter of Olympus and furnish out most of the fun on earth." Shakespeare certainly realized this when he contrived The Shrew and perhaps he should be paid tribute for his insight, but not so lengthy a tribute as "Proff's."

Professor Koch might be excused for his lengthy preface because of his enthusiasm for Shakespeare, but his audience forgot that Sunday night. At the end of every sentence they sat up to hear the reading begin, but when it didn't come for half an hour they became slightly restless.

"Proff," however, even with this handicap, got a hearty response when he plunged headlong into the wooing scene in act two. The theatre was appropriately arranged with branches that lent the warmth and color of the beautiful autumn day just past. It took little imagination to picture old Padua after the introductory remarks.

The gallant Petruchio made arrangements with the old shrew-pecked and doubtful Baptista, who acted so fearfully we were sure Petruchio would be devoured when the raging Kate finally burst upon the scene. But not so. Petruchio knew his woman and angled with her so skillfully, she was forced to marry him to seek her revenge.

It was all good fun and "Proff" enjoyed it thoroughly himself, but while he was doing so, old Baptista, the sly fox, stole the show. His sincere fear for the safety of Petruchio, mingled with his admiration for man's unbelievable courage in the face of such peril, set the audience howling; and they were sorry to see him go.

How To Avoid BONERS

MONOTONY IS THE CUSTOM OF HAVING ONLY ONE WIFE

HEAVEN have pity on the poor lad! He also thinks a parapet is a tropical bird.

But where there's life there's hope. If somebody will introduce Bill Boner to a good pipe and good tobacco, perhaps he'll improve. You see, a pipe helps a man concentrate, think right. And be sure you fill his pipe with Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco. As you know, Edgeworth has proved to be the favorite smoke at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

Ah! There's a smoke for you! Notice how that blend of fine old burleys helps you think out a difficult problem. See how cobwebs fly from a tired brain on its fragrant wisps of curling blue smoke!

DUKE TAKES LEAD IN BIG FIVE RACE FOR GRID HONORS

Cox of Duke and Rex of State Hold Lead in Individual Scoring for Big Five.

Winning by a 9 to 0 score over Wake Forest in the only Big Five contest last week, Duke took a decided lead in the race for the state championship. The Blue Devils also held on to the scoring lead in the state, although they were out scored by both Carolina and State.

Cox of Duke with 27 points and Rex of State with 24 points held on to the first two positions in individual scoring honors, although neither boy scored in the contests of last week. McQuage of State took over all kicking honors when he booted a field goal and counted for two points after touchdowns in the contest of last Saturday between State and Florida. The State back has two field goals and four points after touchdowns for a good lead in both of these departments.

In the only Big Five contest this week Carolina meets State on the Tar Heel field. Both teams have been tied by Wake Forest in their only starts against Big Five teams. This contest will be very important in the race for the state title, as a loss will probably put either team out of the Big Five race.

TAR BABIES WORK FOR STATE GAME

Squad in Good Condition After Tilt With Oak Ridge; Play Techlets Here Friday.

Coaches Sapp and Howard gave their freshman football team a light workout yesterday in their first preparation for the contest with State's yearling team here next Friday afternoon. The freshmen played a great game last Friday and deserved the extra day of rest before getting down to real work for this week's contest.

The first two teams and the rest of the squad that saw action against Oak Ridge were out only forty-five minutes, going through a passing and signal drill, before the coaches excused them. The rest of the squad was put through a lengthy practice. Phelps, who starred against the cadets, was shifted to the first team backfield where he replaced Snyder, who has not fully recovered from a leg injury he received in a practice game against the varsity squad early in the season.

Team in Good Condition

All the team but Sutton, second string fullback, reported in good condition after Friday's battle. Sutton was out with a

Wrestlers Have First Workout Of This Year

Carolina's freshman and varsity wrestling squads, under the direction of Coach Quinlan and Percy Idol, varsity captain, went through their first workout yesterday in preparation for the coming season. The team is working every afternoon, at 4:00 o'clock in the Tin Can.

Coach Quinlan stated yesterday that he wished to see the following men out for the team. He also wanted to see all freshmen interested and any other upperclassmen that wanted to try out for the team. The list follows: Hussey, O'Brian, Olman, Bennett, Hollingsworth, Diblee, L. L. Davis, Greengold, Spell, Grier, Thompson, McFlay, Hargraves, Lawder, Efeely, DeHart, Cameron, Matheson, Davis, Spencer, Dalzell, Hiller, Conklin, Idol, Auman, C. B. Blood, Reagan, Southard, and Kellenberger.

AROUND the FIELD

By CLAIRBORN M. CARR

"WE HAVE JUST HAD THOSE touchdowns in our system all season and today they seemed to have been saved for you folks," Bobby Dodd, all-American quarterback at Tennessee in the past and at present in charge of all backfield maneuvers of the Yellow Jackets, told the writer after the game Saturday. "I think that Carolina, like Tech, has encountered too much stiff opposition on too many successive Saturdays. Today it was just a case of which one of the two teams could take the most and still have a scoring punch left. The game was close and hard until Carolina cracked and Tech still had enough power, gaining more after each score, to push the Tar Heels deep in defeat."

DODD, A TALL, LANKY FELLOW, and one who has a very pleasing personality, was tickled to death with the win, remarking that it was the first game Coach Bill Alexander had won on the road in two years. When asked what he considered the most important requisites for a forward passer, he said, "Of course the first essential is accuracy, but next to this all important requirement I consider deception something that every passer must have to rank with the leaders. Phipps is a good passer; he fakes well with his eyes as he passes, but should make this fake with his body also."

THE FORMER TENNESSEE flash rates Zimmerman, Feathers, and his own protege, McArthur, the leading passers in the Southern Conference. "This boy McArthur," he said, "is one of the most deadly passers in the south and one who fakes with the best." Dodd said that he thought Feathers was the greatest back in the south, Zimmerman and all included. "I don't think that my feeling is based entirely on prejudices, because I have played against the rest and with Feathers; still Beatty seems best to me."

WHEN INFORMED THAT several Carolina linemen who had played against both Feathers and Roberts lately felt that Feathers had shown up better because he had had more interference, Dodd said, "Probably there was more help given Feathers, but he is a shifter, and cleverer ball player than Dixie."

THERE IS A LITTLE UNCERTAINTY among the Carolina ends as to how many Tech players hit them on those two long dashes for scores by Davis and Barron. It is the general opinion that there were either two or three men on the Tar Heel

COURSE FOR CAKE RACE MARKED BY FLAGS FOR TURNS

Competition in Annual Event Expected to Be Hottest in Years; Many Men Entered.

The ninth annual intramural cake race, slated to be run off Friday, has had its course marked with red and white flags for the benefit of those participants who wish to observe it.

The red flags will denote a left turn, and the white flags will denote a right turn. A marker with flags of both colors has been set at the starting point, the Patterson-Morehead Bell Tower.

Coach Dale Ranson, head coach of cross-country, and Herman Schnell, of the intramural department, have announced that they expect the competition in the race to be the hottest in years. Quite a few promising runners have manifested their ability in early workouts. About a hundred and fifty boys are expected to turn out for the event.

The course will begin at the Patterson-Morehead Bell Tower, and the competitors will proceed from under the underpass on the Pittsboro highway until they reach the Carolina Inn; there they will make a left turn and proceed to the Chi Psi lot where another left turn will be made; from there they will go one block down to McCauley street and make another left turn; they will then go straight down McCauley street over the Pittsboro highway to the left bank of the bell tower, make a right turn, go on down to the stadium's west gate, and negotiate the final lap down Kenan Stadium to the east goal, which will be the finish line.

A.T.O. WINS FROM THETA CHI, 30-0

Sigma Nu, Phi Gams, Phi Alpha, Phi Sigma Kappa, and Sigma Chi Are Other Winners.

Two hitherto undefeated tag football teams were unceremoniously removed from the class of undefeated leaders in yesterday's intramural league play.

Tau Epsilon Phi went down fighting before the superior coordination and size of Sigma Nu, and Delta Kappa Epsilon dropped out of the top flight of flag contenders when Phi Gamma Delta outplayed the Dekes to gain a 5-2 decision on the basis of first down supremacy.

In other contests of the afternoon, Alpha Tau Omega advanced into the group of three-victory leaders by virtue of a 30-0 victory over Theta Phi, and Paul Kaveney's Phi Sigma Kappa eleven downed Pi Kappa Phi to the tune of 13-0.

Delta Tau Delta and Phi Alpha battled for the privilege of remaining victoryless, with Delta Tau Delta winning the privilege and Phi Alpha the game. The score was 26-6. Sigma Chi won from Chi Phi by forfeit.

Sigma Nu encountered stern opposition from the T. E. P. outfit, which contested the game throughout. There was little doubt of Sigma Nu's supremacy, however, with Joe Griffith hurling long passes with a fine degree of accuracy. Morrie Long was an outstanding figure in the Sigma Nu attack, and Jack Glace, in the line, played an excellent game.

For the Tau Epsilon Phi eleven, which gained an 8-8 tie in first downs with the 1931 fraternity champions, Leonard Eisenberg and Bob Lessen performed to the best advantage.

The victory was Sigma Nu's fourth use of the whitewash brush in as many starts and put this outfit in a class by itself above the other undefeated teams, all of which have three wins to their credit.

Minor Defeats Johnson In Tennis Tournament

Ike Minor entered the semi-finals of the tennis tournament on the strength of his victory over Johnson yesterday, 6-0, 10-8. This was the only quarter-final match played. McGlinn went into the quarter-finals by defeating Atwood, 6-3, 6-2.

In the top bracket Harris will play the winner of the Lott-Sobol match and the winner of that match will play Minor for a place in the finals.

In the bottom bracket the winner of the Levitan-Willis match will play the winner of the Friedman-McGlinn battle for a place in the finals.

In today's match Minor looked fine against Johnston but after an easy first set was pushed rather hard in the last set. Minor, however, never let up and his consistent tennis finally won.

DURHAM LEADING CLASS 'A' HIGHS FOR GRID TITLE

Victory Over Rocky Mount Gives School Undisputed Lead in Race for Championship.

North Carolina scholastic football has afforded some peculiar facts this year.

In the eastern section, Durham high school has been the only team in Class A competition that has scored this year. Of the three class A games, two were scoreless ties; in the other game, only one team scored. In the western section, there has been one scoreless tie in the four games played, and the losing teams have tallied only six points all together.

Durham, by virtue of its 39-0 victory over Rocky Mount, leads the eastern section of class A. Goldsboro, Wilmington, and Raleigh each have tied in their games. This week-end, Wilmington will meet Durham in Durham, and Rocky Mount will journey to Raleigh for its game.

In the western section four class A teams are undefeated. Charlotte defeated Greensboro 14-0, High Point beat Winston-Salem, 7-6, Salisbury won from Greensboro, 26-0, and Gastonia was held by Greensboro to a scoreless tie. Incidentally, Greensboro has been unable to score a single point in three games. This week Gastonia will tackle Winston-Salem, and High Point and Salisbury will meet at Salisbury.

In the fourth eastern district conference, Sanford has defeated Red Springs and Hamlet convincingly, but has been beaten by Lumberton, 13-6. The latter team, with a win over Red Springs by the score of 48-0 in addition to its Sanford victory, leads the conference. Red Springs has two defeats, and Hamlet one, against no victories for either. This week-end Hamlet plays Lumberton.

In group one of the third eastern district conference, Chapel Hill and Oxford Orphanage will play for the leadership this week-end. Both teams have defeated Bethel Hill. In group two Apex leads with two victories over Irwin and Wendell, Smithfield and Irwin have both won one and lost one, and Wendell has dropped two encounters.

Whiteville has already won the championship of the second eastern district conference, and Elizabeth City is leading the first district, in which are Edenton, Aden, Hertford, and Richmond Square.

The state championship game in Class B between the eastern and western winners will take place Friday, November 25, in Kenan Stadium. The class A final will be played the following day in the same bowl.

PRIZES FOR GOLF TOURNEY OFFERED BY LOCAL STORES

Eighty Persons Expected to Enter Chapel Hill Country Club Event Tomorrow.

Much interest is being manifested in the two-ball foursome golf tournament which is sponsored by the Chapel Hill country club and is to take place tomorrow. About eighty persons are expected to take part in the tournament, and local merchants have contributed a number of attractive prizes to both guests and club players.

To the foursome making the lowest score the Book Exchange is presenting four "Top-Flite" golf balls, and a week's pass to the Carolina theatre to each two-some making a "birdie" is being offered by the management.

The prizes for guest players are: a pair of wool golf socks, offered by Andrews-Henninger; a hair-cut and shave, through the courtesy of the University Barber Shop; a tie, presented by Sol Lipman; a three-day pass to the Carolina theatre; a card case from the Alfred Williams Company; a golf lesson, which Don MacCraken is offering; a pair of golf socks from Berman's; two bottles of Gary's ginger ale, through the courtesy of the Food Mart; a grease job through the courtesy of the University Service Station; a wash and polish job to be given by the Strowd Motor Company; a carton of ginger ale offered by the Model Market; eight "Top-Flight" golf balls are presented by the Book Exchange; a hair-cut and shampoo offered by the Carolina Barber shop.

Dr. S. E. Leavitt of the Spanish department of the University is chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the day.

Intramural Schedule

4:00 p. m.—(1) Grimes vs. Ruffin; (2) Chi Psi vs. Kappa Alpha; (3) Best House vs. Old West.
5:00 p. m.—(1) Aycock vs. Lewis; (2) Phi Kappa Sigma vs. Kappa Alpha; (3) Kappa Sigma vs. Sigma Phi Sigma.

SATURDAY'S GRID CARD FEATURED BY MANY UPSETS

Far West Teams Run True to Form; Tulane Defeated for First Time in Four Years.

Last Saturday was a particularly bad day for the dopesters as upset after upset toppled top-heavy favorites from the ranks of the undefeated and untied. With the exception of the far west, which ran true to form, the other sections of the nation, the south, east, and middle west, were astounded at the reversals in form of the major football teams.

Tulane and Kentucky Lose

In the south alone, there were five important upsets. V. P. I. surprised Kentucky, a conference favorite, by displaying heads-up football throughout to win by a 7-0 score, thus eliminating the Colonels' title aspirations for 1932. Little Auburn, for the first time a conference contender, inflicted a 19-7 defeat upon Tulane's powerful squad. It was the first time in four years that the Green Wave has been defeated by a southern school. A week previous the skids had been greased by Vanderbilt which played a 6-6 tie with Tulane.

North Carolina teams figured in two upsets with a .500 average resulting. North Carolina State journeyed to Gainesville, Florida, to play the hitherto undefeated Gators. When the smoke cleared, the home team had been beaten decisively by a 17-6 count. On the other hand, a scrappy Citadel club outplayed a heavily favored Davidson team to eke out a 7-6 decision. In

Roosevelt in Raleigh Today
North Carolina Democrats made final plans yesterday for a rousing welcome today to its candidate for president, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt. State Democratic headquarters stated that preparations were being made for 25,000 persons to hear the New York governor when he stops in Raleigh at 10:00 o'clock this morning for a brief speech.

Two plainclothes policemen attend Samuel Insull, the American who is under indictment in Chicago for larceny, whenever he appears in the streets of Athens, Greece. Insull had previously been advised by police to tell them of any trips he planned to make.

Beer Tax Would Pay Nearly Billion
Legal beer and a tax thereon would bring the United States government as much as $754,000,000 additional revenue, the Investment Bankers association convention was informed by its federal taxation committee yesterday.

Hoover Plans Fast Finish
President Hoover is engaged with plans for closing his campaign for re-election with a vigorous two-week drive which yesterday included a speech in New York City and another swing inland through mid-western territory.

flankmen. Jake Wade of the Charlotte Observer said there were three the first and two the second time. Wink Davis, the stocky little halfback who lugged the pigskin in that beautiful sixty-eight yard jaunt to start the scoring, told the writer after the game that only one man was assigned to the end, and he the best blocking back in the combination. From the press box the two Davidson scouts said that one man was all that handled the ends on both plays.

AT THE WAKE FOREST
Duke game in Durham last Friday an admiring Deacon graduate was in the stands encouraging the Demons to victory, yelling at the top of his voice "Come on Wake Forest, I know it's Capital against Labor, but you look mighty good to me. We haven't got any of these big football players from all over the country like Duke but we will give them a good fight." The game progressed and it was announced that Rodrigues would go in the Wake Forest lineup. Someone up in the stands behind the ardent Demon supporter yelled, "That doesn't sound like a good Baptist preacher's name to me." The grad hasn't said anything since.

FURMAN WON FROM MERCER
last Saturday in Macon 2-0 in one of the closest games on the books. The victory came as the result of a blocked punt. There were two first downs in the whole game; Mercer got them both, one on a penalty. The longest run from the line of scrimmage was for seven yards. A most exciting game, yes, and more people killed.

MRS. L. B. BRIGGS WILL SPEAK THIS AFTERNOON

Speaking on "The College Library," Mrs. Lillian B. Briggs, librarian at the woman's college of Duke university, will address the students in the University school of library science and members of the library staff at 3:00 o'clock this afternoon in the library school.

Council Is Speaker At Assembly Period

The freshman and sophomore assembly yesterday was addressed by Mayor "Zeb" Council on the topic "The Relation of the Town to the University." Mayor Council said that the town of Chapel Hill and the University had the same relation as a man and his wife—they are inseparable and must work together whether they like it or not. He concluded by saying that all that was asked of the students was to meet the people and officials of Chapel Hill on a fifty-fifty basis and relations would continue in a harmonious manner.

Preceding the talk given by Mayor Council Dean Bradshaw related briefly the relationship between the medieval universities and the towns in which they were located.

The Theatre

and the only other scene that was read, "Proff" took an unfair advantage of the physically absent Shakespeare to give his own opinion of these absurd relations between shrew and shrewd. His own remarks were as thoroughly enjoyed as those he read of Shakespeare and at no time was the audience entirely sure whether it was Koch or Shakespeare they were laughing with.

One of the reader's quotations was from Shaw: "woman is the pursuer and contriver—man is the pursued and disposed of." In the end when the moon has been thoroughly disposed of, Professor Koch attempted to reconcile this statement to the play. Perhaps he did and perhaps he didn't, we'll leave it as you like it. At any rate the fiery Katherina was not at all pleased with her former self after Petruchio's exhibit of a sample of her temper, so she obeys him meekly.

Shaw's statement may apply to Shakespeare's comedy, but we are a little inclined toward Correspondent Bunn's remark: "Among the lower orders the comic actors seem unconscious of the comedy, though relishing their parts; one excepts, however, the Queen Bee, who really must sense the preposterousness of her triumph." So, after all, was the conclusion in Shakespeare's mind Katherina's disposal of Petruchio, or was it Petruchio's disposition of Kate's former disposition.

Any decision tempered in the light of Sunday night's performance would undoubtedly lean in Koch's direction. One decision easily reached is: It was an enjoyable occasion and we look forward to the next, which will be a reading by Belford Forest, of the Columbia Playhouse and author of Lost Sheep, of one of his own plays in November.

Accident

A friend of ours was driving over Greensboro way Sunday night and halted his car five miles out on the Graham road to see an accident. A large automobile had apparently skidded across the road and hurtled down a hill where it lay between two trees, a twisted mass of wreckage. The friend, fearing a serious accident, hurried over to the wreck and was amazed to see that it was nothing more than a stripped sedan, planted to draw attention to a huge bunting which swayed between two nearby trees and bore the reminder "NORMAN THOMAS WILL SPEAK IN RALEIGH FRIDAY."

"SIX HOURS TO LIVE" IS CAROLINA SHOW TODAY

In "Six Hours to Live," the new Fox feature showing at the Carolina theatre today, a famous scientist accidentally discovers a formula by which he can extend life for a period of six hours.

Warner Baxter, Miriam Jordan, a newcomer from the London stage, John Boles, George Marion, Sr., Halliwell Hobbes, and Edwin Maxwell have the principal roles. The story centers about the efforts of Baxter, representing a small republic, to save his country from ruin of an unfair trading treaty which the world powers are trying to force through a session at the Peace Palace at Geneva, Switzerland.

TALK BY WRIGHT FEATURES JOINT Y.M.C.A. MEETING

Chapel Hill Colored Quartet Also
On Program as Cabinets
Meet Together.

Information, appreciation, and consecration are the three cardinal points in a college education, according to Reverend Tom Wright who addressed the three Y. M. C. A. cabinets Monday night in Gerrard hall. It was the initial joint gathering of the current scholastic year for the association groups.

Wright, who is the assistant pastor of the local Episcopal church, spent this summer in Holland at a convention of the World's Christian Student Federation. In describing the group, he emphasized the fact that the potential power of the young men representing the various nations was tremendous. He spoke of the very future of the world as laying in such groups as this.

Gerrard hall was almost packed with the members of the three cabinets who turned out for the occasion. An added feature on the program was the Chapel Hill colored quartet. The four local negroes gave a half dozen excellent renditions, and were very enthusiastically received by their audience.

Interracial Work
Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the campus Young Men's Christian Association, made several important announcements. In giving the features scheduled for the "Y" cabinets during the remainder of

DEBATING SQUAD WILL MEET STATE

Chosen Carolina Men Will Speak
In Favor of Individual Political Parties.

Representatives of the University to meet the State college team were chosen at the meeting of the debate squad Monday night.

In addition the tentative wording of the subject was phrased: "Which party should be supported at the next election?" The representatives are Bill Eddleman, speaking for Roosevelt; Red Rankin, speaking for Hoover; and John Jenkins, representing Thomas.

Students who competed in the try-outs were Bill Eddleman, Dave Morgan, Ike Minor, C. H. Donavan, T. F. Shuford, A. S. Kaplan, George Fountain, L. T. Fountain, all speaking for the Democratic candidates; Red Rankin, S. M. Pattishall, J. Little, James Bailey, Lenoir Wright, all speaking for the Republican candidate; John Jenkins speaking for the Socialist candidate.

The forum debate with State college will take place Thursday, November 3.

Dr. Manning Speaks at Duke

Dr. I. H. Manning, dean of the medical school, attended the annual anniversary banquet of the Beta Nu chapter of the Alpha Kappa Kappa medical fraternity of Duke university Monday night. Dr. Manning was one of the speakers of the occasion. The meeting was also attended by several members of the local chapter of this national medical fraternity.

Socialists To Hear Dr. Ericson Tonight

The Socialist club of the University will meet tonight at 7:30 in Gerrard hall. Dr. E. E. Ericson will talk on the subject of "Norman Thomas in North Carolina," after which there will be a short discussion meeting for the purpose of procuring suggestions as to how to wage an efficient "Thomas for president" campaign in the state between now and election. A special effort will be made to secure new members.

Socialists, those who wish to become Socialists, and all supporters of Thomas are particularly urged to be present.

AXEL BOETHIUS TO SPEAK ON STUDY OF ARCHAEOLOGY

Swedish Scientist Will Give Illustrated
Lecture on Student Entertainment Program.

The next in the series of student entertainments for the fall quarter will be an illustrated lecture by Axel Boethius, world famous archaeologist, next Tuesday night.

Boethius is a graduate of the famous Uppsala university in Sweden. He spent three years in Greece as a member of the British School of Archaeology. While in Greece he devoted a short time excavating with the American School of Archaeology expedition of which Dr. J. P. Harland of the University was a member.

Boethius' work deals mainly with the ancient architecture of Greece and Rome, but his special field is that of the architecture of the small Roman town. He is in America on the invitation of the Archaeological Institute of America to deliver a series of lectures on Roman Domestic Architecture and the problems of the small town of Rome in the ancient times.

For the last five years Boethius has been director of the Swedish School of Archaeology in Rome.

Dr. W. E. Caldwell To Address Scouts

The University Eagle Scout club will be addressed by Dr. W. E. Caldwell, chairman of the local Court of Honor board, tonight at 7:30 o'clock at its meeting in room 209, Graham Memorial.

The club was organized this fall exclusively for University men of Eagle Scout rank, with a view toward carrying on advanced scouting and forming a fellowship among men of this rank.

Recently elected officers of the group are: Billy Greet, president; Alvin Zinc, vice-president; and Wendell Dunbar, secretary-treasurer. The charter members are H. L. Hinson, Kirby Smith, Henry Allison, Alvin Zinc, Donald Seawell, Lee Greer, Billy Greet, James Montgomery, Wendell Dunbar, Craig McIntosh, Nat Walker, and Parks Austin. Visitors are invited to attend the organization.

Geometry Deficiencies

Students wishing to make up deficiencies in plane geometry are advised to report to Dean A. W. Hobbs, in South building, at once. He will inaugurate a class under an efficient tutor if enough students desire to enter.

'Bull's Head' Originally Founded For Informal Literary Discussion

Howard Mumford Jones, Former University Instructor, Started Meeting Place as Recreation for Intellectuals; Change in Name Proved Unsuccessful From Many Aspects.

"It is only fitting that a University which is known as the seat of liberality and culture of the south should have some place where men may get together, irrespective of their social standing, to discuss the literature and morals of his fellow man." It was this sentiment that prompted Howard Mumford Jones, formerly of the University English department, to found the original "Bull's Head" bookshop. Since the establishment of the shop four years ago, Jones, shaper of its purposes and ideals, has gone to the University of Michigan.

The old idea of a club where men might talk and exchange ideas, such as the Elizabethan taverns and Queen Anne coffee shops, has all but disappeared. Campus literary societies now belie their names by having become practice grounds for debating teams. It was in the mind of Howard Jones to furnish a place which would perform the original service of the Dialectic and Philanthropic societies.

It was when he was toying with this idea that the name which the present bookshop in the "Y" bears caught his fancy. "The Bull's Head!" Well grounded in campus vernacular, he conceived it as a gathering spot where students might find the proper atmosphere for their "bull sessions." To his mind it seemed a romantic name; one well suited to arouse the imagination and interest of the more intellectual students.

The initial "Bull's Head," which was not intended for profit, was located in Murphey hall. There was at that time no other book shop on the campus where students might ramble and browse, and perhaps occasionally buy a volume of prose or poetry. Receiving warm faculty and student support, the project prospered financially, and in the spring of 1931 was moved to the "Y."

Imposter Perpetrates Big Hoax On Unsuspecting Carolina Men

By Claiborn Carr

A group of University football idolaters and gridiron gloriifiers, feel injured. Their vanity has been touched, their knowledge of their favorite sport has been minimized. They were the victims of one of the most successful hoaxes ever perpetrated on the Carolina campus. An unidentified person, masquerading as Bert Metzger the all-American guard at Notre Dame three years ago, completely hoodwinked a number of Carolina sportsmen and threw a bombshell into University athletic circles during the past week-end.

Stephen Douglas, University sophomore and inmate of 106 Ruffin, was the center of all the commotion. Steve was accosted Saturday by a fellow bearing a letter of introduction to him from his father's law office in Greensboro and signed by Steve's sister. The fellow refused to enter Douglas' room and waited outside until the latter had dressed. The two started to walk off together and then the mystery began.

Gives Famous Name

After swearing to keep his identity a secret Steve learned that the man was none other than Bert Metzger, the all-American guard of a few years ago who weighed only 157 pounds and stood five feet ten inches. Douglas could not believe it all, but he had the letter from his sister which read, "Here is a man you have heard a lot about and always wanted to meet. Show Chapel Hill to him, and I know you will want to show him to Chapel Hill."

The letter had no name of the bearer included but this was done to assure secrecy so the imposter declared. Steve was overjoyed at his good fortune and afforded an interesting listener and interviewer. but found it hard to keep from disclosing the identity of his famous friend. First it was his roommate, Leo

Manley, who was brought into the deal. Manley, like Douglas, was convinced and the two made wonderful prey for the fake. Before long several others were in on the secret and Metzger was taken to the Grail dance where "Red" Hamlet was told and the eminent treasurer of the Order bowed and scraped; and in walked Metzger, free of charge.

Secret Creeps Out

Douglas was very popular Saturday night as he pictured an all-American as a particular friend of his and that he was sitting out the dances, not wanting to attract any possible attention. "Of course," he told Steve, "There are some here who would recognize me and then swamp me for autographs." Douglas brought his girl friends over to meet the phenomenon, and was even so kind as to arrange for a late date for the gentleman—no telling what appeal an all-American football star has on poor innocent Tar Heel girls.

Sunday morning the tales of old deeds were continued and a few others were told by Steve's boy friend. The same morning, Cabell Philpot, told the writer about something mysterious that had occurred Saturday night and that he was afraid he could not let the DAILY TAR HEEL in on the know.

Steve went to Philpot Sunday night to round up the guards and take them to a lecture in his room on the finer points of guard play from an all-American. Cabell was a little skeptical as to the veracity of Douglas and refused to take advantage of the wonderful opportunity. However, your correspondent, ever on alert, pictured the possibility of an interview with an all-American and rushed off to the wilds of Ruffin.

Delta Sigma Pi Will Be Host At Smoker

The Alpha Lambda Chapter of the Delta Sigma Pi international fraternity will conduct its first smoker of the year Friday night, October 28, at 121 W. Rosemary street. The principal speaker will be President Frank P. Graham.

The smoker, which will be held for a large number of the undergraduates of the Commerce school of the University, will begin at 8:00 p. m. Each year Delta Sigma Pi holds a series of smokers for the purpose of facilitating a closer relationship between the faculty and students.

REPRESENTATIVES OF STATE PRESS GROUPS TO MEET

Plans Will Be Made for Mid-Winter Meeting of Newspaper Institute.

Plans for the next annual mid-winter Newspaper Institute will be made and dates set at a meeting here Saturday morning.

Members of the executive committee of the North Carolina Press Association and the University Committee on the Institute will be present.

Representatives from the press association will include John A. Park, publisher of the Raleigh Times, who is president; R. E. Price, publisher of the Rutherfordton Sun, vice-president; Miss Beatrice Cobb, publisher of the Morganton News-Herald, secretary; Josh L. Horne, publisher of the Rocky Mount Telegram, past president; Roy Parker, publisher of the Hertford County Herald; W. C. Dowd, publisher of the Charlotte News.

University Representatives

Representatives from the University will include Russell M. Grumman, director of the University extension division; Robert W. Madry, director of the University news bureau; and O. J. Coffin, head of the department of journalism.

Seven Experimental Plays Will Be Given

Try-outs for casts in the experimental production of original plays written in the play-writing class have been arranged for tomorrow afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the Playmaker theatre. There are seven one-act plays all offering opportunities for a number of actors. Those who failed to get a part in Uncle Tom's Cabin should try out for the new plays. They will be produced soon after the production of the play just mentioned. The plays are:

The Shadow For Davy, a frontier drama by Philip Milhouse; Old Ninety-Seven, a railroad tragedy by Wilbur Dorsett; Hell Bent For Honolulu, a college play by William Bonyun; Chauncy's Dress, a mystery play by Mary Hoffman Shepard; And They Lived Happily, a domestic comedy by Marion Tatum; Nothing Ever Happens, a tragic-comedy by Elmer Oettinger; and Four On A Heath, a fantasy by Foster Fitzsimmons.

Regular Co-ed Tea

Another of the series of week-ly teas given by the co-eds of the University will take place this afternoon in the reception rooms of Spencer hall from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock.

WEEK-END DANCES TO BE CONDUCTED BY GERMAN CLUB

Date for Annual Festivities Is Shifted to November 19 for Carolina-Duke Game.

Announcement was made yesterday of the plans of the forthcoming German club dance November 19 by the executive committee of that organization. The festivities will start with a tea dance Friday from 4:30 o'clock until 6:15, the series continuing Saturday morning from 10:00 a. m. until 1:00 p. m.

Following the Duke-Carolina football game there will be a dance from 9:30 until midnight. The selection of an orchestra has not been definitely made, nor has the arrangement of decoration of the Tin Can, in which all the dances will take place, been decided upon.

Dances Shifted

The dance was shifted back to the week-end of the 19th this year because of the fact that on Thanksgiving week-end many students will be in Charlottesville attending the Virginia-Carolina football game. As a result the earlier date is expected to attract the larger crowd, combined with a large delegation of alumni who will return to Chapel Hill for the Duke game.

A new innovation in connection with the German club dances this year will be the opportunity for a few freshmen to become members of the club. Fifty of the first freshmen to apply for membership will be considered and if the experiment proves successful the change will become permanent.

'Y' MEN TO GO TO RALEIGH TONIGHT

Deputation to Present Program
To Freshman Friendship
Council at State.

A dozen members of the various Y. M. C. A. cabinets will journey to Raleigh tonight to appear before the North Carolina State College Freshman Friendship Council at 8:00 o'clock P. M. This is the second deputation trip of the current scholastic year.

Those making the trip will be as follows: Jesse Parker, Mark Lynch, Russell Mickel, George Fountain, Jack Poole, Ed Martin, Locke Sloope, J. D. Winslow, L. L. Hutchinson, Bill Spradlin, Don Shoemaker, and Bill McKee.

After presenting their program they will be the guests of the cabinets of the technical school at other gatherings.

Ed King, general secretary of the State college association, invited the team from the University to present their program at these meetings.

An important feature of the trip will be to attempt to work up a little good feeling between the State boys and the Carolina boys for the State-U. N. C. football game Saturday in Kenan stadium and the freshman game between the two institutions Friday.

Co-eds to Be Entertained

Mrs. M. H. Stacy, adviser to women, will be at home to all women students of the University tomorrow afternoon from 4:30 until 6:00 o'clock at 612A North street.

The Fraternity Leach

With pledge day now only a memory, the young pledge is beginning to form his habits of conduct for his college life. But may he not allow himself, because of his inactivity, to be classed as a large majority of his older fraternity brethren as nothing more than a "fraternity leach"—that is, one who came to college with but one aim and that to "make" a fraternity; and now that he has made one he is completely satisfied.

This fraternal parasite does absolutely nothing. He refuses to take part in activities because he has too little time—seeing the movies. His studies worry him only to the extent of his passing them. He receives nothing from college but what his fraternity gives him. The only honors he might get—such as making a social order, or being elected dance leader—are got purely and simply through his fraternity membership. His friendships are few. And even to his closest acquaintances his opinions are regarded lightly.

He is a non-entity. He takes all from the fraternity and gives nothing in return. His grades pull down the fraternity average, and his general conduct is oftentimes a disgrace to his more respectful brothers.

He is a hypocrite. He delights in dominating the freshmen, and takes great pleasure in telling them they must get into activities and make the honor roll. He makes a fine first appearance with his light conversation and hearty, hail-fellow-well-met attitude. To a group of rushees he is in his prime. But after pledge day he is hardly heard of—except when the mid-term warnings are posted.

His membership is a curse to any fraternity. And the sooner the other fraternity men as well as the pledges themselves realize this fact that soon will membership in a fraternity mean more than a mere social stamp. And until this truth is definitely perceived the success of fraternities in general still hangs in the balance.

The Young Voter Raises His Voice

The opinionated portion of the student body expressed its sentiment on matters political with a registration of more than five hundred votes in the DAILY TAR HEEL presidential straw ballot last week, an amazing number in the light of recent criticism which has upheld the American college as a center where flip conversation and asinine conjecture reign. Certainly the large ballot may be construed as an open answer to these attackers within our own state, regardless of party alignment.

The value of the straw ballot, particularly in the college, is often underestimated. It is without dispute that the majority of voters here contributed much more than adult-influenced opinion to their balloting. This is most ably illustrated in the large number of votes polled for Norman Thomas, particularly since the Socialist strength on this campus was estimated at about one-fifth of the actual number of ballots cast for the candidate. Protesting against what he thought to be the weak platforms of the two old line parties, the student expressed himself by turning toward the best alternative offered, the Socialist program.

How many qualified citizens might find haven in this harbour before November 8 may well worry the Old Liners.—D.C.S.

Students, But Treated as Visitors

Carolina spirit? Carolina courtesy? Folks, there were "visitors" in our midst Saturday. They attended the football game. They were students of the University of North Carolina from Greensboro.

They were invited to attend the homecoming game of last Saturday, that is, if they paid a fifty cents admission fee. For an appreciable part of the Greensboro student body it was to be a gala day. It was worth securing permission from parents, worth bus fare to Chapel Hill, and the sacrificing of any individual liberty which would have come to them by remaining in Greensboro. And too, college authorities made an unusual departure when they granted permission for this excursion.

They came with a proper spirit for the University of North Carolina. They wanted to sit on the Carolina side. They wished to lend their voices to the strengthening of the Carolina cause. But they were placed on the Tech side of the stadium and then, far enough in the end the stands so they would interfere with no Tech supporter paying for a two dollar ticket.

This action is characteristic of a student body that as the ranking of its individual members rises that it becomes blase and sophisticated, too much so to shout itself hoarse. Pep meeting enthusiasts state that a becoming school spirit is "transfused" into the body of the players, making their efforts more effective. If this be so, and it seems a fact when one considers fighting Davidson, why not utilize the Women's College of the University of North Carolina for this purpose. Is the imagination of the University cheerleaders entirely chilled?

These students at the Women's College should be invited to every game. They should be given their place in the stands. And if Kenan stadium will not accommodate both students and other Carolina supporters, let the "management" find a remedy other than the virtual exclusion of Carolina students. They should have their cheerleaders. And we should find a heightening of the collegiate spirit which, if it does not bring victories, brings the satisfaction of the student body.—J.D.W.

In The Main

By MAYNE ALBRIGHT

I am just beginning to realize what rewards are to be had from this business of writing a column. Since last week's offering I have been the receiver of the most amazing news of all kinds—all of it interesting and most of it unprintable. Particularly have I been furnished with the name of any number of fraternity men who did any number of surprising things at the State Fair and were not mentioned last week as having been there at all. My apologies! And I never have time to listen to that sort of thing in room number 100 Graham Memorial from 9 till 4 every day.

Associations now formed in the First Year Law Class point to several famous law firms of the future. Seemingly best established is that of "Marm" Rose and "Choppy" Bell who are in constant argument, and agree only when they can unite against some third party. Another partnership will probably be that of Floyd, Block & Tillery. Barnes & Novins may team under the same roof, and mayhap Finch & Clemire shall share a single shingle.

Lawyer Finch, however, teamed with Lawyer Thorton Brooks recently in an interesting case that should establish some sort of precedent for young lawyers.

It seems that Finch & Brooks on behalf of their client, Pinkie Connor, a rather cautious lover who by his own admission never makes a serious statement, drew up an intricate document whereby a certain young lady was to come down for the Duke game as the guest of Cautious Connor provided; that she should eschew all such practices as interfraternity dating, late dating of any sort save with the party of the first part, Mr. Connor; and provided: that said party of the first part should have first, last, and exclusive rights to all attention and affection for the period of the visit. The contract looked good to Finch & Brooks but they reckoned without the lady in the case. She graciously accepted the invitation, thought the idea was just darling, and ignored altogether the terms of the contract. Ah Portia, you live in every age!

And before leaving the lawyers this column wants it known that it has no idea who called Lawyer Rose (of Rose & Bell) long distance from Carrboro at five A. M. recently and spoke at length in neither soothing tones nor complimentary terms. Besides it never prints such stories, nor any about freshman co-eds who ring the doorbells of all the fraternity houses and ask to look them over. The column is glad, however, to assure its readers that Lenoir Wright now has definite word that the girl he invited up to the Vanderbilt game on October 1st will be unable to accept the invitation.

"Is this boy on your Campus?" asks a poster in South building as it describes a wandering student from Lansing, Michigan who was struck in the head and constantly says "Yes Sir" and "Yes Ma'm." The picture looks very much like the new Student Councilman from the law school to me, but shucks, there's no reward anyway.

SPEAKING

the CAMPUS MIND

A Misunderstanding

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Lawrence is mistaken in his belief that the author of Our Times deliberately attempted a pun on Mr. Proctor's accident, which, if the writer had been aware of this development, would assuredly have been a "crude joke." Furthermore, representing the facts in hearsay as he knew them, the writer found no fault in what he first believed to be "a deliberate devising of our own," and rather commended it as clever political strategy.)

This letter has reference to the item entitled, "Accident" in the Our Times column of Don Shoemaker in Tuesday's TAR HEEL. The story has to do with the accident to one of the Socialist cars on the Graham highway last Saturday night. Mr. Shoemaker writes, "a striped Sedan, planted to draw attention to a huge bunting nearby, (which) bore the reminder 'NORMAN THOMAS WILL SPEAK IN RALEIGH FRIDAY.'" This throws out the impression that it was a Socialist advertising stunt. Nothing could be further from the truth. The car was driven by Ben Proctor, University student and member of the Socialist party, and contained the literature intended for distribution at the Raleigh meeting. In the accident Mr. Proctor received a compound fracture of the skull and is still in a serious condition in the Burlington hospital. The other member of the party, Vernon Ward, escaped injury.

It was not, I repeat, a Socialist "stunt," but it did represent, or at least the aftermath did, a working example of the capitalist motto, "the economic race is to the swift and the strong." For, according to the report of a lady living nearby, fifteen minutes after the wreck two white men were seen stripping the car of all its belongings. The miscreants were apparently superior individuals along that line. Not only did they remove the tires and all the personal property in the car, but they even carried away the back-seat cushion and the driver's license. Then, as a last derisive gesture, they scattered the Socialist literature in a long row and tramped it into the dirt and brazenly stretched the street-sign between two trees just beyond the wreck.

The accident has caused deep gloom in the Socialist headquarters. Over $300 was lost by it, an amount which only the Republicans and Democrats can afford to spend for bally-hoo. It has caused a serious upset to Socialist plans. Calls are coming in from all over the state for meetings, but we now have neither conveyance to meet these calls nor literature to mail to inquirers.

It seems to us, therefore, that it is rather a crude joke to represent this loss and the serious injury to one of our friends as a deliberate devising of our own. ALTON A. LAWRENCE, Sec. State Socialistic Party

Book Vandalism

The latest instance is reported from the library of the department of rural social-economics.

An honest and cooperative student yesterday morning brought in Watson's Behaviorism, and reported that he had picked it up in the bushes near the carillon on his return from Saturday's football game. The book had not been charged out to anyone, so it was impossible to locate the offender. His particular brand of Behavior has more followers on this campus than we like to admit. In this instance, the only retribution was that the vandal himself lost the use of the ill-gotten volume.

We can never have a library that measures up to the needs of our students unless our students (Continued on last page)

Los Angeles 'Times' Columnist Praises Work Of Paul Green

(Editor's Note:—The following is a column by Lee Shippey appearing in the Los Angeles Times giving an idea of the impression Paul Green has made on Hollywood during his stay there thus far.)

Paul Green is one of those serious southerners. He looks at life very earnestly, almost as earnestly as he does at Paul Green.

In 1917, when he was about to go to war, he realized that he might never come back and had never put his thoughts into permanent form to bequeath the world. So he used all the money he could spare to have thirty copies of a little booklet of poems published.

When he joined the staff of Warner Brothers a few weeks ago story after story was submitted to him, all of which he read intently and rejected. "I think they would all be merely wasting my time," he said. So the studio turned those stories over to other men to write, and Green is writing a story for George Arliss around the great character of Voltaire.

He considers Paul Green's time much too valuable to waste.

Books Were Rare

Green was born in North Carolina in 1894 and still lives in North Carolina. His people were land owners who had been impoverished by the war between the States. He labored as a farm boy and went to a country school. He came to love books because they were so precious. He had only the Bible and a newspaper to read in those days of genteel poverty and his language still smacks of the Bible; his style is the simple, straight yet poetic narrative style of the Good Book.

"I wanted to express myself," he told us. "Everyone does that. The negro was poor and hard worked and had no instruments for expression, but still had his voice. He could use that as he worked, and because his songs were his expression of his life they have risen to an art. So much for the imperativeness of expression. My mother gave me piano lessons, but I was fond of baseball, and baseball fingers made piano practice difficult. I loved reading and when I earned money bought what books I could. Then I began to write poetry."

Composed While Picking Cotton

But Paul never got too poetical to be proud of being a champion cotton picker. He took his farm work and his baseball as earnestly as he did his books. He was such a good baseball player that he helped pay his way through school by playing ball.

When he went to the University of North Carolina he did not know a great many books, but he knew a few very well. He had read but one play, Hamlet, and part of another, and had never seen a play. Yet when there was a play competition, in his freshman year, he entered into the competition earnestly—and won the prize. His play was presented by the senior class during the following commencement.

He was in a field, picking cotton, when his first letter of acceptance came, from the Atlantic Monthly. Instead of singing at his farm work, as the negroes did, he made up stories.

Intimate Knowledge Is Power

Most young fellows in rural communities who yearn to write think they could do so if they could only get out and see the world—New York, Paris, Egypt, India—any place far away. But Paul Green always has written about his own people, "black and white." He is very fond of that phraseology, "my people, both white and black." He has not felt it so necessary to study other people as to study his own people. He knows the history, traditions and psychology of the people of North Carolina and far more about the southern negro than the southern negro knows of himself. He has become the voice for a race which cannot speak for itself.

Why Hurry Through School?

Paul Green was not one of those lads who are so bright

Tar Heels Start Heavy Work For State Tilt Here Saturday

Coach Collins Pushes Charges
Hard in Effort to Find Power and Drive.

LONG SCRIMMAGE IS HELD
Two Varsity Teams With Several Changes in Line-ups Work Against Frosh.

The Tar Heels were out yesterday after a rest Monday and working hard for the game this Saturday with N. C. State. Coach Collins was disappointed at the showing his team made after the first half against Georgia Tech but put that game behind him and drove his men harder for their tussle with the Wolfpack.

There were no serious injuries to any of the Tar Heels with the exception of Gus McIver and George Barclay. Gus hurt his knee but was out on the field yesterday in civilian clothes and said that it would be ready in a few days. Barclay hurt his shoulder again and yesterday had to retire from the scrimmage, but will be ready Saturday.

Tom White, whose leg injury against Vanderbilt robbed the Tar Heels of one of their most promising backs, was out for the first time yesterday in light togs and cavorted around announcing that he would be right against Florida.

Hold Lengthy Scrimmage
The work-out yesterday consisted of a lengthy and spirited scrimmage with the frosh of the first and second teams. There were several changes made in the first team backfield combination, Peacock, McCaskill, and Burnett, running with Chandler. Cozart was at right end in place of Brandt. This team scored several times against a strong and sturdy frosh eleven.

A second team worked against another frosh eleven and the backfield of this combination was Martin, at quarter, Daniels and Croom at half, and Lassiter at full. The line showed, Manley and Frankel, ends; Collins and Barrett, tackles; Philpot and Newcombe, guards; and Gardner, center.

A pass combination of McCaskill to Burnett looked good in the early scrimmage, connecting for several nice long heaves. Peacock also looked good at halfback for this team. On the second team the Croom to Daniels pass was effective and made several gains.

State's strong stand against Florida and their impressive victory has put another outlook on this coming setto and Coach Collins is determined to put the dash and drive the Tar Heels have lacked all season into the team this week and swamp the Wolfpack.

MOVIE SATIRE AT CAROLINA TODAY

"Once In A Lifetime," Universal comedy playing at the Carolina theatre today, gives glimpses within the forbidden precincts of the sound stages during actual filming operations. Satirically it deals with events which happen in the private offices of film executives, whose methods of conducting their studios are held up to ridicule.

The story of this cinema begins with the advent of the first talking picture, when three small-time vaudeville actors decide to go to Hollywood in an attempt to pick up some easy money.

The picture is an adaptation of the stage comedy by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman. The cast includes Jack Oakie, Sidney Fox, Aline MacMahon, Russell Hopton, Zasu Pitts, Louise Fazenda and Onslow Stevens.

LEADING SCORERS HEADED BY BUSH

Massachusetts Back Leads Nation
With Credit of Eighty-Four Points.

After the dust had settled from the conquest of the gridiron this past week-end, a mite of a half-back, a boy from the East broke into the leadership of the nation's football scorers; this diminutive adding-machine back was Little Lou Bush, prominent grid luminary at Massachusetts State. Bush has 84 points to his credit while Graham of Kansas State trails only seven points behind with 77.

The South is also represented in the high powered scoring of the nation, "Hurry" Cain of Alabama's Crimson Tide is third with 60 points.

The leading scorers in the nation's nine major groups or conferences:
East—Bush, Mass. State, 84; Bix Six—Graham, Kansas State, 77; South—Cain, Alabama, 60; Mid-West—Momett, Michigan State, 51; South West—Oliver, Texas Christian, 48; Rocky Mountain Conference—Dunn, Wyoming, 39; Missouri Valley—Hall, Oklahoma A. and M., 36; Pacific Coast—Smith, Idaho, 30; and Big Ten—Sahlin, Chicago university, 24.

Tar Heelia is represented in the southern high scorers by Cox of Duke university who has scored four touchdowns and converted as many extra points, to have a total of 28.

THREE LEADERS KEEP SUPREMACY

Lewis, Grimes, and Chi Psi Still Undeclared as Intramural Season Progresses.

Four undefeated teams participated in yesterday's intramural tag football games, three of them keeping their records clean, while the fourth, Aycock, of the dormitory league, went down before the superior running attack of Lewis, which gained its fourth victory in as many starts.

Aycock and Lewis entered the game with perfect records to date, and the removal of Aycock from the unbeaten class left Grimes and Lewis tied for first place with four wins apiece.

Lewis gained a slim 1-0 lead in first downs in the first half, and then went on to gain the decision, 4-1, by the same effective use of running plays. Snooks Aiken led the winning attack, aided by Pepper and Peacock. Sim Eiland stood out for the losing aggregation.

Grimes breezed to a 14-0 triumph over Ruffin, with Watson and Fiore showing to best advantage for the winning outfit. Joe Barbano, aided by Bell, played best for Ruffin, which gave the leaders a sterner fight than had been expected.

Chi Psi gained its fourth victory in the fraternity loop when it crushed Pi Kappa Alpha, 35-0. Ellis Dudley, Wyant Wilday, and Don LaBorne ran and passed their way to a 6-3 supremacy in first downs and scored freely to completely outclass the Pika team.

With Willie Powell and Dan Jones playing alert football, Best House, 1931 champion, gained its third victory in four attempts by downing Old West, 18-0. First downs favored Best House, 5-1. Womble and Croucher played best for the losing outfit.

Kappa Sigma gained a 2-0 victory over Sigma Phi Sigma by virtue of a safety which came when Houston tagged Froneberger behind the goal line. Kappa Sig led in first downs, 4-2. Phi Kappa Sigma nosed out

ENTRANTS IN CAKE RACE READY FOR EVENT ON FRIDAY

Nearly One Hundred Cakes Are to Be Awarded to Winners in Annual Affair.

The total number of cakes slated to be awarded to the victors in the ninth annual intramural Cake Race Friday will amount to almost a hundred.

A fine response has been received from townspeople in the donation of the cakes, and Herman Schnell of the intramural department assures us that the taste of victory this year will be sweet.

About one hundred and fifty boys entered in the event are in line for the cakes, as are nearly two dozen organizations, fraternities, and dormitories which have groups entered in the two mile run. Up to this year dormitories have always emerged as the victors from the event, but this time several lodges, boarding houses, and organizations are making strong bids for the championship.

Coach Dale Ranson of cross-country said that some of the finest cross-country prospects in some time had evidenced themselves in the early training, six workouts being required of each entrant before he is eligible to negotiate the heavy grind of a couple of miles.

In the past practically every winner of the runs has turned out to be a star in cross-country or track. The nuclei for Carolina's championship Southern Conference harrier outfits have been built around cake race winners for the past decade.

The race course was marked Monday by red and white flags, and many potential winners have been making the dust fly over the path of the run for the past two days. Entrants in the run are reminded that on the race course a white flag indicates a right turn, and a red flag shows a left turn. Double flags have been placed at the starting point at the Patterson-Morehead bell tower.

"Bull's Head" Was First Founded For Literary Discussion

viting "Book Market" that caused a sharp change in the complexion of the establishment last year. Although it continued to reap a profit, it failed to realize the ideals given it by Howard Jones. In that it was not conducive to the gathering of the University's intellectuals, last year was an unsuccessful one for the shop, despite increased size and scope.

Sensing the passing of the old spirit, this year the management re-opened under the popular sign of the bull's head. Something intangible has effected the gradual return of the original atmosphere of the "Bull's Head." The adoption of the old name may be the cause of the resumption of casual literary visits and discussions that were the hopes of the founder. It is certain, however, that the weekly readings have also contributed to re-establishing the "Bull's Head" on the basis that Howard Mumford Jones conceived it.

Intramural Schedule

4:00 p. m.—(1) Carr vs. New Dorms; (2) Steele vs. Swain Hall; (3) Sigma Alpha Epsilon vs. Zeta Psi.
5:00 p. m.—(1) Mangum vs. Everett; (2) Independents vs. Manly.

Kappa Alpha in a closely contested setto, 3-2 in first downs. Bill Markham, George Wilson, and Nick Rhawn played best for the victors, while Moe Morrison and Bill Binder were the most effective Kappa Alpha players.

Tulane's Great Team Suffers Elimination From Conference

Loss of Captain, Star Halfback and Coach Has Disastrous Effect
On Greenies; Team Still Powerful Regardless of Defeat by Auburn; Promising Material Ready for Next Year.

The King is dead! Long live the king! Tulane, the monarch of southern football, was defeated last Saturday by Auburn, 19-7, and that defeat eliminated the Green Wave as a prospective champion of the Southern Conference, but while the Greenies lasted they were great. There won't be many teams to equal the record compiled by the New Orleans boys, and even in defeat they are still among the great teams of the south.

Fate played its share in the fall of the Greenies and that share was a large one. At the end of the 1931 season Tulane hadn't lost a conference game for three years and had climaxed the streak by putting up a great fight against Southern California in the Rose Bowl game, but Bernie Bierman, who had guided Tulane through its greatest successes, received a call from Minnesota and left the scene of his triumphs for his alma mater. Ted Cox, who was assistant to Bierman at Tulane, took over the coaching duties and began to build another strong team, but Fate stepped in and smashed his plans before the season was well under way.

Many Stars Ineligible
The first blow was the ineligibility of Captain Nollie Felts, brilliant fullback, and that hurt, although Joe Loftin, a sophomore, wasn't bad as a replacement. But the second blow was too much, for it took Francis Payne, a fine halfback and great running mate of Don Zimmerman. Payne went out of the picture with a broken leg and left only Zimmerman and the 1931 ball carriers to carry on.

Graduation had taken the two sensational ends, Jerry Dalrymple, the all-American who was nothing less than a football genius, and Lefty Haynes, a scintillating pass snatcher who was considered by many as equal to Dalrymple. The replacements, Hardy and Phillips, weighed 187 and 173 respectively, and they were good, but they couldn't compare with their predecessors.

Aside from the ends, Cox had a veteran line which, incidentally, boasted the greatest guard in the south, John Scaife, a plenty of strength. The line from end to end averaged 197 pounds with Bob Tessier 210 and Tom Cunningham 220 at tackles, Winnie Lodriques, 190, at center, and George Tessier, 185, and Scaife, 212, at guards. The original backfield of Richardson, Zimmerman, Payne, and Felts averaged 177 pounds to the man, but now that Payne and Felts are gone the average has fallen to 173. Roberts has replaced Payne at halfback and Loftin has taken over Felts' duties.

UNUSUAL MATCH PLAY FEATURED AT LOCAL CLUB

Teams Composed of Inexperienced and Experienced Players to Oppose Each Other.

The Chapel Hill country club has released the pairings for the golf tournament it is sponsoring this afternoon. The matches between the teams, each of which made up of one experienced player and one inexperienced player, and plays only one ball, will begin at 2:00 o'clock, and the various teams will tee off at five-minute intervals.

A great deal of interest has been shown in this contest as attested by the fact that 102 persons have entered. The nature of the tournament promises to offer many amusing situations.

In case of rain, the event will be postponed until the next fair day.

Schedule

The Winslow-Peacock vs. Fenger-Plyer match will begin the tourney at 2:00 o'clock, and will be followed by Howell-Olive vs. MacKinney-Mangum; Hudson-W. J. Miller vs. Evans-Basnigh; Neal-Blocksidge vs. Bullitt-Pugh; W. B. Abernethy-Madry vs. Andrews-Dr. Clark; G. M. Hill-Connal vs. Connor-Butler.

At 2:30 o'clock: Henry-Harrer vs. Huse-Boggs; Bagby-N. B. Adams vs. W. Wheeler-Emory; J. Pratt-Lyons vs. Bost-S. Saunders; Sparrow-Burch vs. Suttonfield-P. R. Perry; Shields-Green, bye; Wagstaff-Booker vs. Caldwell-Harland.

At 3:30 o'clock: Cannon-Phipps vs. Utley-Harmon; C. D. Miller-Nathan vs. E. C. Smith-M. Durham; Bennett-Godbold vs. Cobb-Best; Dey-Wiley vs. Murchison-Brooks; George-Stoudemire vs. E. R. Rankin-R. W.

LEE IS NAMED ARMOUR HEAD

Former Stenographer Chosen
As President of Packing Firm in Chicago

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—(AP)—The firm of Armour and company, packers, today was headed by T. George Lee, a former stenographer, whose election to the presidency was followed almost immediately by the resignation of Philip D. Armour, III, first vice president and member of the company's board of directors.

Thus executive control of Armour and company, which for 63 years has had some member of the famous family in an official position, passed completely into the hands of others.

Stenographic skill has proved to be of inestimable value to thousands of young men and women in their upward climb.

A secretarial position, instead of being a mere clerk's job with no prospects of advancement, is a position in which one can advance rapidly, as did T. George Lee.

When a manager for a new department is needed, or when a great executive drops out, it is natural for the board of directors to turn to someone who knows all the details of the business—and the shorthand secretary is the logical candidate.

The fact that shorthand was used and recommended by such men as Woodrow Wilson, Elihu Root, George Cortelyou, Edward Bok, Herbert Hoover, and others shows that it is not merely the equipment for a clerkship. It is greatly useful to a man in any profession, even to the president of the United States. And through the efforts of Jno. Robert Gregg and his advisers the science and art of shorthand has been made easier to learn and faster to write than ever before.

Expert instruction in Gregg Shorthand, Touch Typewriting, and Secretarial Bookkeeping is now available afternoons and evenings in Carolina Commercial College, Hill Building, above Durham Dairy Products.

Tuition rates $6 to $10 a month according to hours of instruction.—adv.

MAGAZINE WRITERS TO MEET FOR DISCUSSION

Contributors to Sunday's issue of the Carolina Magazine, together with others who consider contributing will meet with the editor, Robert Barnett, in room 207 of Graham Memorial at 7:45 o'clock tonight.

The meeting is called for the purpose of outlining the plans for the forthcoming issues of the periodical, for discussing magazine standards, and for evoking criticism of the issues already on file for the current year.

Imposter Perpetrates Big Hoax On Students

up all the "dope" Metzger was pouring out. A mattress was on the floor so that the big all-American wouldn't throw the boys too hard. Wide open mouths and eager eyes followed each and every move. Bill Reid, freshman candidate for center, was the most ardent listener and worked endlessly on the little suggestions that the football wonder made.

The imposter was asked why he did not go out and work with the varsity and help Coach Collins. To this, he answered that he and Collins were not close friends and that since he was considering coaching next year at the Agriculture and Training school near Greensboro, a colored institution, it might appear that he was down here to take Coach Collins' place after a short stay in Greensboro.

Mystery Clears

The alias Metzger was to leave Monday morning and go back to Greensboro and see Steve's father and then go on to Washington where he was to play professional football. Douglas came back to his room during chapel period and no Metzger. In the meantime Coach Howard had cleared the mystery by saying the real Bert Metzger was a blonde and very wealthy. This imposter was a brunette and professed to be poor. Douglas could not believe that it was all a fake until Coach Collins told him Metzger was one of his closest friends.

Steve was non-plussed, he ran to his room to see if he missed anything and found that everything was left as he had put it and that no money had been taken. Coach Collins called Mr. Douglas in Greensboro to warn him about what had happened. Mr. Douglas, who is a very prominent alumnus of Georgetown and a close friend of Tommy Mills, the Georgetown coach, said that this man had come into his office Friday and said that Mills had sent him down to see him about getting a coaching job in this section and that he was none other than Bert Metzger. That was enough, everyone was called in and a holiday declared to entertain the all-American. He was taken to the Douglas home and treated royally and sent down here to the game Saturday with the letter to Steve.

Identity Unknown

There has been no definite word as to who this man could have been. Bill Collins, brother of Coach Collins, said yesterday that he had waited in Douglas' room most of Monday to get a look at him, but in vain.

Dr. I. H. Manning, dean of the medical school, went to Troy, N. C., last night to make an address before the Troy medical society. The occasion was the annual district meeting of the branch of American Medical Society of Troy and vicinity. Dr. Manning talked on Some Problems of the Medical Profession.

Short terms of rural school, some ill health and the World War delayed him, so he was twenty-seven years old when he was graduated from the University of North Carolina, to which he had turned when he came home from the war. Even then he remained there for graduate study and then went to Cornell. He returned to the University of North Carolina as assistant professor of philosophy in 1923. His first book of plays appeared in 1925, and ever since he has been telling the story of the people he knows best in plays, short stories and a novel. The latter, The Laughing Pioneer, is his latest published work. He is married and has three children. STUDENT BADLY INJURED IN COLLISION OF CARS

Ben Proctor, University student, suffered a fractured skull in an automobile collision on the Graham road Friday afternoon. His companion, Vernon Ward, another student here, escaped injury.

Proctor is now lying in a hospital in Burlington.

The two students, in a car belonging to Harold Glasgow, were carrying literature for a Socialist meeting in High Point. The automobile was stripped by vandals of tires, seats, and literature to the value of one hundred dollars.

Koch Speaks to Assembly On Carolina Playmakers

Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, delivered a short address to the freshmen at assembly yesterday. Professor Koch in his talk said that the theatre is irresistible because all persons are actors—all born with a dramatic instinct. He added that any civilization has been and is measured by the kind of theatres it has.

In conclusion he announced that parts in the Carolina Playmakers' plays were open to every student in the University.

he'd ever received before. So his contract ended. This year he was recalled to finish that unfinished work in his own way. Which comes pretty near to establishing a record.

YOUNG DEMOCRAT SPEAKER ATTACKS G. O. P. PLATFORM

Graham, Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, Declares Republicans Incompetent.

In addressing the Young Democrat's club last night A. H. "Sandy" Graham, Democratic candidate for lieutenant-governor, flayed the Republican administration for ineptness and inefficiency, and urged that all Democrats of age vote, and see that everybody else votes the Democratic ticket who can.

Graham, a prominent Hillsboro lawyer, who has often represented Orange county in the state legislature both as a representative and as speaker of the House, and who has been for many years a member of the board of trustees of the University, was introduced by Ed Lanier, vice-president of the club.

People Interested in Election

He opened his address by commenting that interest in the election this year is more widespread than in a number of years, attributing this to the fact that during days of prosperity the great mass of people allowed politicians to do most of the political thinking, but that since prosperity has gone the people have begun to realize the need for a change.

The Democratic speaker attacked the Harding regime for corrupt politics, and flayed Mellon, secretary of the treasury under Coolidge, for advancing his own interests while acting in that capacity by refunding forty-eight millions in taxes to himself, and a total of nearly three billions to companies in which he was interested. He expressed the opinion that under Republican administration the favoritism of big business

SPANISH CLUB TO SELECT OFFICERS

First Meeting of Year Will Be Conducted Friday Night in Graham Memorial.

The Spanish club will meet for the first time this year tomorrow at 7:30 o'clock in 210 Graham Memorial. This meeting will be confined to business and the election of officers will take place at the time.

A new faculty advisor will be elected to replace Dr. A. K. Shields, who served in that capacity last year. The present president is E. J. Jaffe. The offices of vice-president and secretary-treasurer are to be filled when the new president and faculty advisor are elected.

The purpose of the club is to speak idiomatic Spanish, and all meetings are conducted entirely in that language. All who are interested in Spanish are cordially invited to attend.

It is expected that club members will be privileged to see some moving pictures taken in South America by J. G. Douglas of the University geology department who was prominent in club activities last year. This, and several other programs of interest will be discussed and arranged at the meeting Friday.

Interfraternity Council

The interfraternity council will meet tonight at 7:00 o'clock in 214 Graham Memorial.

Tar Heel Staff Will Take Style Book Quiz

The reportorial staff of THE DAILY TAR HEEL, including sports reporters, and men working on the city desk will meet this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in 205 Graham Memorial for the purpose of taking a quiz on the style book of the paper.

All will be required to be present.

The purpose of the quiz is to make sure all members of the staff are familiar with the style of THE DAILY TAR HEEL.

GRADUATE SCHOOL ENROLLS LARGEST CLASS ON RECORD

Two Hundred and Forty-Seven Students Take Work in Eighteen Departments.

Enrollment in the graduate school of the University this fall numbers 247, the largest on record, according to a report Dean Whately W. Pierson, Jr., has just made to President Graham. The enrollment is made up of 180 men and sixty-seven women.

Those already holding bachelor's degrees represent 113 institutions, with the University supplying fifty-five of the total number. The Woman's college of the University, Davidson, and Wake Forest follow respectively as to number. Ninety-three students possess master's degrees, representing twenty-seven institutions, with the University again leading with a total of forty-six out of the ninety-three. Columbia university supplies the next largest number possessing the master's degree.

Subjects chosen for specialization by graduate students this fall are distributed among eighteen departments of the University, with English, history, chemistry, sociology, and economics supplying the greater number of majors. English heads with a total of fifty-three, history follows with thirty-three.

State Well Represented

Geographically, the enrollment represents twenty-five states and three foreign countries. North Carolina again is prominent, supplying 129 of the 247 students. Southern states supply the majority of students, although New York, Pennsylvania, and other states are well represented.

Of the total number of graduate students enrolled, twenty hold University scholarships.

Phi Assembly Favors New Football Rules

After a discussion by Coach Bob Fetzer concerning the purpose of the new football rules this year, the Phi assembly defeated the bill "Resolved: That the new changes in the football rules concerning the kickoff, substitutions, use of hands, and the dead ball have impaired rather than helped the playing of the game, and that the rules should be revised to read as they did last year."

The assembly also went on record as endorsing the recent consolidation of the three state-owned institutions of higher learning into a greater University of North Carolina.

Speaker Dan Kelly appointed a committee to meet with another committee from the Di senate to make arrangements for the Mary D. Wright debate, which will take place sometime during December.

PI BETA PHI WILL SPONSOR SECOND INFORMAL DANCE

Sorority Will Play Hostess Tonight From 7:00 Until 8:00 O'clock In Union Lounge.

The second of the series of informal receptions instituted last Thursday by the Union Forum will be given tonight in the main lounge of Graham Memorial from 7:00 until 8:00 o'clock under the auspices of the Pi Beta Phi sorority. The reception will be composed of dancing and entertainment and everyone is invited to attend.

The informal gathering held last week proved to be so popular that tonight the entertainment will be conducted in the main lounge to accommodate the crowd. These receptions, begun and managed by the Union Forum, are given every Thursday, and different organizations are invited to sponsor individual receptions. In the future various amateur entertainment acts will be given by University students from time to time as part of the programs.

The committee, appointed by the Union Forum to arrange the receptions, is composed of Tom Broughton, Simmons Patterson, Miss Eugenia Rawls, and Mayne Albright. The entertainment is open to all students, co-eds, and members of the faculty. The committee demands that all gentlemen wear coats and ties.

MEMORIAL HALL ORGAN OBTAINED THROUGH EFFORTS OF E. C. SMITH

Instrument, Rendered Valueless to Greensboro Theatre by Use Of "Canned" Music, Brought to Chapel Hill by Manager of Local Playhouse With Aid of Friends of University.

The curiosity of E. Carrington Smith, manager of the local Publix-Kinney theatre, resulted in the installation of an organ in the new Memorial hall. However, it was also his unfailing interest in the University's progress and comfort that made possible the highly useful musical instrument. While inspecting the building shortly after its completion in the summer of 1931, he wondered whether it was to be equipped with an organ or was to remain without one as had the old Memorial hall.

Accordingly, he visited the office of Business Manager Charles T. Woollen and learned that there was no intention on the part of the University to install such an instrument. Immediately, Manager Smith inquired whether the University would accept one as a gift if he could arrange it. He was assured that the gift would be accepted with pleasure and gratitude.

Organ Unused for Some Time

When he intimated the possibility of securing an organ gratis, he was thinking of one which his company had used in its Greensboro theatre, but which had fallen into disuse since the advent of the talking pictures. Due to the value of this organ, a month of negotiation was necessary before the final transaction was completed.

The agreement reached provided that the University was to furnish the funds for its arrangement in the local auditorium. Even this requirement impeded the progress, for the budget cutting a year ago permitted no funds for such work. Thus, the parts of the organ lay untouched in the wings of the stage of Memorial hall long before the formal dedication in fall of 1931. Contributions from

DI URGES CHANGE IN PURCHASE OF SEASON TICKETS

Six Men Are Accepted Into Body at Meeting Conducted Last Tuesday Night.

Six men were initiated into the Dialectic senate at its weekly meeting Tuesday night. The new initiates are: David Scott, Phillips Russell, Hugh Daley, James Keel, Edgar Hamilton, and Luther Brooks.

Senator McKee read a letter to the senate from Professor J. F. Dashiell requesting the use of the senate hall as a meeting place for his psychology group. A motion favoring such action was passed.

An amendment to the constitution was proposed by Senator McMichael. He advocated that an exception be made for fourth year students from the clause requiring all dues to be paid within six weeks of the opening of school. The proposal was tabled.

The most important bill of the evening dealt with the method of purchasing athletic pass books. The senate passed a motion favoring optional purchase.

A committee was appointed by Speaker Rose to meet with a similar committee from the Phi to discuss plans for the Mary D. Wright debate. Members of the committee were: Bill Eddlema, chairman; Billy McKee, and H. T. Lyon.

Sophomores Released From Friday Assembly

Dean F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students, announced yesterday that members of the sophomore class will be required to attend assembly exercises only on Mondays for the remainder of this quarter except on occasional Fridays when special programs lead to a called meeting, or some special reason makes it necessary to assemble. On such occasions, notice will be given in advance. This change will go into effect beginning today.

NOVEMBER 1 SET AS DEADLINE FOR ANNUAL PICTURES

Pictures of Juniors and Seniors Must Be in Hands of Photographers at This Date.

With the rapid approach of the deadline, November 1, at which all pictures of juniors and seniors must be in the hands of the photographers. The Yackety Yack staff is making a final appeal to the members of the two upper classes to attend to this duty. The photographer's fee is included in the class dues and it is but logical that the pictures be taken.

At the present time there are still many persons who have failed to make appointments with the photographer. In order to remedy this situation the staff of the annual has sent letters to the fraternities whose men have not yet had appointments made. It is requested that the lodges deal with this matter at their meetings.

Requests Made

Those men in the dormitories who have neglected to attend to their pictures are being seen personally by members of the staff. Students in town are being sent personal cards admonishing them to hasten their picture appointments.

Underclassmen who are members of fraternities should make appointments with representatives in their respective houses for the taking of pictures. These pictures have not been paid for in class dues, and hence a fee of one dollar and a half will be paid. It is urged that these pictures be taken at the earliest convenience.

No pictures of juniors or seniors will be able to be placed in their respective sections of the Yackety Yack after November 1 because the pictures will be in the hands of the engravers on the following day.

Wilmington Club Will Not Convene Tonight

There will be no meeting of the Wilmington club tonight, according to H. M. Pickard, vice-president. At the last meeting it was decided to conduct gatherings every other Thursday night in Graham Memorial.

At an executive committee meeting which took place Monday a tentative draft of a constitution was made, and plans for the coming year were discussed. Joseph Newton, president of the organization, was chairman of the committee, which consisted of Mack Pickard, Erwin Jaffe, Alfred Miller, and Phil Hammer.

The club was formed to promote fellowship among Wilmington boys, and to give aid to all Wilmington freshmen during the first several weeks.

FEWER STUDENTS RECEIVE WARNING MARKS THIS YEAR

Several Courses Have More Deficient Students Than Were Reported Last Year.

Fourteen hundred and sixty students in the University were reported with mid-term deficiencies in one or more subjects, according to a statement issued yesterday by the Registrar's office. This number is 291 less than the total deficiency listing of last year. Remembering the difference in enrollment between the years '31-'32 and '32 and '33, a total of 1608 marks of W and X might have been expected on the basis of last year's total mid-term deficiencies. The list of last year showed 1751 such grades.

In several subjects, however, the number of deficiencies this year exceeded those of last year. There were 160 marks of X and W in history courses to 136 such grades last year. Two languages, Spanish and French, both caused more failures and near failures than in the previous year. In commerce, government, and zoology, more deficiencies were reported this year than last.

Math Grades Poorest

The department of mathematics showed the greatest number of poor grades. There were 221 students whose work in mathematics for the first period of study was failing or near failing. English was the next hardest subject, 169 deficient marks being reported. French, with 164, and history, with 160, were the two next highest subjects in number of deficiencies. Music and philosophy reported no marks of X or W, although in both subjects there were several such grades last year. Rural social economics has been passed successfully by every student for the last two years.

GRAIL PLANS NEW CAROLINA ANTHEM

Thornton W. Allen, Nationally Known Composer, Secured to Write Tune and Words.

There is a definite move on foot to have a new, distinctive, and individual song for the University of North Carolina. The Order of the Grail is sponsoring this project and has entered into an agreement with Thornton W. Allen, nationally and internationally known song writer and composer to write the anthem.

Wrote "Spirit of V. M. I."

Allen has been working on the plan for some time and has already submitted several melodies and words for approval and is still working on a suitable tune. He will be remembered as the composer of such college songs of triumph as "The Washington and Lee Swing," "The Spirit of V. M. I." and the song of the fighting Florida Gators.

It has been included in the contract that the song, once it is approved, will be included in Allen's song book of national intercollegiate melodies; and he also guarantees its inclusion in a national radio hook-up program.

It is to be clearly understood that this new song will in no way replace "Hark, the Sound," but will merely supplement it, and the two will go down in the annals of the University together.

Handwriting On the Wall

Statistics collected over the past five years by Ben Husbands, assistant to the registrar, prove beyond the least shadow of a doubt that the mid-term warnings posted each quarter are accurate indications as to the students' ability in academic work. And they show conclusively that unless heeded carefully these warnings will finally result in conditional or failing marks.

According to the survey the fact is brought out that as a rule those persons making at least one "w" at mid-term will at the end of the quarter find themselves with an average of a low "C" on all their courses. And those who are posted for as many as one "x" will have an average of something less than a "D."

Mr. Husbands' tabulations also indicate that those students who are on the registrar's mid-term list seldom find themselves on the honor roll. As a matter of actual statistics, during the last five fall quarters, of all the persons receiving an "x" at mid-term only seventeen of this number registered a grade as high as a "B," and not one of these recorded an "A" on their courses.

Many students who find their names on this mid-term registrar's list try to make light of the matter without paying it much attention. Ofttimes even the professors will humor the students by intimating that mid-terms have little effect on the final mark. This fact is probably true. But it can not be denied—as these figures show—that on the average those students who are doing poor work at mid-term are the same ones who are doing poor work at the end of the quarter.

If these students continue to be posted quarterly, or even every other quarter, with at least one "x" they will in all probability at the end of four years find themselves unable to graduate because of an insufficient number of grades of "C" or better.

In view of all these facts, therefore, it would seem wise for those students whose names are now on the registrar's list that they profit by the mistakes of their predecessors on the list and buckle down to some hard work between now and final examinations. Faculty members and students may contend that being placed on the registrar's mid-term list is not a sign of scholastic danger ahead—but statistics prove otherwise.

The Horizon Brightens

In the flux of conditions and consequences, the ethics of honor also change.

When the University was younger and smaller than it is today, the strictest code of southern honor was in force on the campus. Beyond all doubt, to cheat was to act dishonorably. And to act dishonorably was to be expelled from the University. Such was the strictest of the code.

As the University grew, this idea was forgotten. The tradition could not be perpetuated in the inhomogeneous thousands of students whose mere mass made the old system impracticable. In its place, a peculiar code of school-boy honor found its way from the schools into the University. Cheating became a legitimate sport and a favorite device for lazy students. It was, then, unsportsmanlike to report a fellow student.

Parallel with the new code, however, there was the unspoken conception of cheating as a form of stealing. It is manifestly unfair to a good student who works hard to have his ideas stolen by a lazy pupil on examination.

Such an act arouses resentment and indignation. No question of moral scruples is involved. So far, this resentment of an unfair practice has taken no active form. University students generally show the same discouraging apathy to campus governmental affairs that their elders display in regard to political corruption.

Such is the state and condition of honor at the University of North Carolina. But it will not always be so.—E.C.D.

Gone Are The Days

Regardless of the action taken on the eighteenth amendment, it is almost a surety that before many months have passed, alcoholic beverages may be had in many sections of the country without hazard of the law.

Both major parties seem definitely committed to schemes for making legal the sale of intoxicating liquors. The issue swings from a moral to an economic one in the eyes of political leaders, who hope, by either a plan of direct sale by governmental agencies, or by private concerns operating under close governmental supervision, and highly taxed, to direct the profits of the liquor traffic into Federal coffers, and, thereby, seal the widening gaps in our national budget.

No one doubts that such a system would constitute a step toward removing the disparity between treasury receipts and expenditures, but that it can have the equalizing effect claimed by its propagators, seems hardly credible.

To bring in such an enormous revenue, would necessitate an exorbitant tax, and would produce such a wide discrepancy between the initial cost and retail prices of the products effected, as to afford a very lucrative field for exploitation by organized bootleggers and racketeers.

To avoid such illicit competition would require an army of officers not smaller than that now mobilized to enforce the eighteenth amendment, which would inflict no light burden on the revenue derived from this source.

On the other hand, if the government undertakes to preclude the necessity for such a force by underselling these highly organized bands of marauders, then it must be at such a low price as to render the returns far from sufficient to reinstate the salubrity of our economic system.

While forced to admit that government control of spirituous liquors has many wholesome aspects, yet the plan does not take due cognizance of the influence which would be wielded by a militant underworld, with which Federal authority has failed to cope in the past, and the plan, like all Utopian theories, when put into practice, will doubtless be very sadly emasculated.—W.A.S.

The Spider Spins Silently

Let no one be deceived by the apparent quiet hovering about Manchuria. The newspapers are printing only an intermittent exudation of news about the situation; there is little public interest manifest—even the so-called intelligentsia have branded the subject "out of fashion"—but things are happening!

When a campaign speech is made; when a fire razes a movie palace; when a football hero weds—that's news; but when there are little or no surface indications of activity, such as is the case between Japan and China—that's not news. However, one has only to probe behind the seeming quiescence of the Far-East to see the multitude of history-making factors at work.

Although little fighting is reported from Manchuria, it is estimated that there are well over 100,000 Chinese and about 80,000 Japanese troops awaiting duty there. Meanwhile the actual struggle between China—the yawning giant—and Japan—the strident Tom Thumb, has been proceeding apace in spheres other than the political.

China's boycott of Nipponese products is slowly bearing fruit. The fact that approximately ninety-five per cent of Japanese foreign investments are in China, and that Chinese trade in normal times constitutes a large majority of her total, makes it apparent that Japan's economic dependence upon her neighbor is all-important. Thus, the situation reaching the impasse that it has, the island Empire has begun to feel the pinch more and more each day. Already we find that the value of the yen has depreciated fifty per cent; already starvation, rioting and reaction have reared their ugly heads; the stalemate cannot long remain as it is.

Manchuria is a rich prize, but she also bears thorns. A territory comprising an area twice that of Germany, with abundant forests, rich soil, and mineral resources of almost fabulous extent; a province containing but thirty million people (although ninety-five per cent of these are Chinese and the Japanese population is but 200,000)—Manchuria is indeed well worth having. Japan feels that she must go thru with this Manchurian annexation, come what may. She realizes that a crossroads has been reached in her national existence, and that there must be no turning aside from her Dream of Empire. Well does she know that if thwarted in this effort, the growing strength of both China and Russia will become an unsurmountable bulwark to overcome.

Japan is taking the long chance. Will she realize her dream? Or—defeated by the very forces which she has engendered—will she sink back into the position of a second-rate power, strength shattered and growth permanently impaired? —V.J.L.

Tripping Along On Trivialities

The campaign speeches of Hoover and Roosevelt have been full of promise for economic recovery and better times. Much has been said about federal aid, farm relief and attitudes toward the bonus demands. These are important issues, but ones that fade into nothingness in comparison with questions that have been practically ignored by the two candidates—questions of world conditions. There seems to be a great unwillingness on the parts of our leaders to face the present conditions in the light of their true origins, the light of world chaos and world disorder. It may be that American diplomats feel themselves inferior in ability to the diplomats of other nations, and are therefore unwilling to risk anything through any attempt to arrive at some international agreement, imperative though it be. It may be that America has not yet found herself able to discard the advice of Washington, timely though it was a century and a half ago, and remain strictly out of European affairs. If so, this petty and provincial attitude stands as a serious barrier in the way of international accord and consequent bettering of world conditions.

It must be realized that in the world of today one nation can no longer be an entity relying upon itself for support. With the machine age the nations have become more and more dependent upon one another, and the present world-wide disorder is probably due in no small part to the failure of international comity to keep abreast with international necessity. In Washington's day a panic in Germany or a revolution in Russia would have produced a relatively minor effect upon our economic order. Today, with highly industrialized Germany groaning under the intolerable burdens inflicted by the post war treaties, it is obvious that the American people having millions of dollars invested in German industry will feel the results of Germany's terrible plight. Founded upon the palpable lie of war guilt, the crushing German debt remains as evidence of the greed and hostility of the allies as well as an effective bar to German economic recovery and hence to any change for the better in the status quo.

The time has come when nations must realize that to survive they must cooperate. Policies of aloofness and splendid isolation are antiquated ones that must soon disappear. The day is here in which each nation must depend to a greater and greater degree upon the other and must work hand in hand with its fellows. The sooner world leaders practice mutual trust and mutual aid, the sooner will depressions cease and the world enjoy far better times than the lean years she knows now.—J.F.A.

REPUBLICANS PLAN TO HAVE FRAZIER HERE

Plans are pending to have Clifford Frazier, candidate for governor on the Republican ticket, speak to the students under the auspices of the Young Republican club of the University. If present negotiations are completed Frazier will speak in Gerard hall the first of next week. A meeting of the club is scheduled within the next few days to arrange final details.

The Young Republican club is making every effort to secure a nationally prominent speaker to address the students of the University within the next few days.

Life and Letters

By Edith Harbour

Since I was born on a Wednesday long, long ago I might paraphrase an old folk rhyme something like this:

... Wednesday's child is full of woe;
Thursday's column has far to go.

Or if I were a devotee of football jargon I might say that with only a few words down on this page there are still two pages to go. With a procrastination worthy of the proverbial Mexican I always put off writing columns until tomorrow. And my only interest in that revolutionary republic to the southwest is Stuart Chase's Mexico and a lingering desire to know more about those ... old, unhappy, far-off things,

And battles long ago...

For I still remember from undergraduate days that Goldenweiser said that many civilizations other than our own have achieved things of genuine and unique worth.

It was Somerset Maugham who interestingly observed that the best use of culture is to talk nonsense with distinction. . . . Thirty Years in the Golden North by Jan Welz, the garrulous Czech, reveals among other things that the first and last bath an Eskimo ever has is immediately after birth. . . . Hint to a fellow-columnist: You might re-name your "colyum" MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING. . . . Proof-readers may be the salt of the earth, as I have heard, but when they turn my "diffident" Thomas Hardy into a person who is merely "different" I am prone to remark that when salt loses its savor it is good for nothing. . . . Without my window Saturday after the game "Asphalt Arabs" were hailing rides up Greensboro way. One smallish lad was not satisfied with the ordinary request for a ride. With a grandiose wave of his hand he begged in stentorian tones: "Greensboro, High Point, Salisbury, Charlotte!" . . . My pet abomination is to be traversing the main thoroughfare of the village and to see there movie advertisements on which actresses have been decorated with mustachios. . . . Incidentally, I'm still wondering who wrote the speech President Hoover delivered last Saturday night and who sang the theme song for Norma Shearer in "Smilin' Through."

The worst pun of all times was included in the recent radio broadcast of one of the great refining companies which pays high for the privilege of entertaining as well as instructing the Great American Public: A certain Englishman was asked to leave an estate, more or less unceremoniously. He demanded imperiously, "Mahatma Gandhi and my gloves!"

Skunks

We note with a sigh for the good old days of the Winter and Spring of '32, that the famous skunk filler is now on the rounds of college dailies again, this time appearing initially in the Princetonian, who brought it to light from the files of The Lafayette. The skunk filler, if you remember the good old days, is a little story whereby some university, football team, or fraternity "has adopted a baby skunk for its mascot."

This time it's a fraternity house at Marquette university. Last year it was the University of North Carolina football team that had adopted a member of the genus Mephitis mephitis. We wrote a little piece about the matter last year charging the N. C. State Technician and the Duke Chronicle as the perpetrators of the original deed, but before we could get to the bottom of the matter, it had spread all over the country. For awhile it was good publicity, but pretty soon it became monotonous. Something like a chain letter.

Darb

For three years we've practically resisted the temptation to "go collegiate," except perhaps for the occasional sporting of a yellow-stemmed pipe. But the Inter-Collegiate Press people out in Kansas City, Missouri, have got us in a pretty bad place now, we'll admit. Sent out a pretty colored circular announcing their new "Varsity" Windbreakers which "are the new vogue that boosts school spirit and peps up the campus."

The "Varsity" Windbreaker is a sort of "high-grade garment with your team mascot or emblem embroidered on the back in school colors." It's a "dar" for campus and class room wear; "studies and co-eds both are wearing it;" it is a "wow for campus, field, and bleachers;" and besides "its a bear for looks and wear."

Personally the "darb," "studies," "wow" and "bear" specifications got us right away. The whole business brought back memories of our red hat—striped blazer—yellow tie—corduroy days, now buried in a mouldering pile of high school annuals.

Intellectuals

Plenty of folks who take their intellectual nourishment seriously have complained about a feature story on the front page of yesterday's TAR HEEL. The over-zealous feature board member handling a history of the Bull's Head book shop remarked that "... Although it continued to reap a profit it failed to realize the ideals given it by Howard Munford Jones. In that it was not conducive to the gathering of the University's intellectuals, last year was an unsuccessful one for the shop, despite increased size and scope..."

Now to anyone who enjoys his chapel hour "dope" browsing through the various volumes of poetry and prose in the Bull's Head, the above is nothing short of a slap in the face. There's nothing worse than calling an intellectual an illiterati, unless it's calling him a litterati.

Coach Collins Works Hard To Improve Ragged End Play

Tackling and Blocking Is Also Stressed in Lengthy Scrimmage Held Yesterday.

COACH BOB DRIVES LINE

Seeks Speed and Charge From Carolina Forwards Against State Saturday.

The Tar Heels were out again yesterday in another hard scrimmage that showed careless tackling and blocking. Coach Collins is not the least bit discouraged and is confident that his charges are getting rid of their errors now and saving the drive and power for the go with State Saturday.

The scrimmage yesterday was a long one in which the first and second teams ran against State plays and scored several times. Members of both teams showed scoring potentialities by blocking punts, recovering fumbles, and connecting for passes; the flashy sort of football Carolina has lacked all season.

Coach Collins is afraid to do any more heavy work between now and Saturday because of the risk of losing valuable men. He intends to stress passing and blocking today and tomorrow and polish up on the ends' defensive play.

Yesterday after the scrimmage was over, the ends were put through a lengthy defensive drill, with three complete backfield combinations running against them. Coach Bob Fetzner had the linemen and put them through their defensive work and work on blocking. Coach Bob is anxious that the line charge fast and hard against the State forwards and worked on speed at length today.

LARGE GROUP OF CONTESTANTS IN RACE TOMORROW

Annual Cake Race Promises to Be One of the Hottest in History of Event.

The complete list of entrants in the ninth annual intramural cake race was released yesterday by the intramural department. The race will be run Friday afternoon between the halves of the U.N.C.-State college frosh grid tilt.

This year's cross country run promises to be one of the hottest in the history of the event, and students entered in the run have shown some of the best potential material for cross-country and track teams in years, according to those in charge of work-outs.

Each contestant is asked to report any discrepancy in the organizations of their names as given below to Coach M. Dale Ranson at Emerson stadium as soon as possible.

Those who have completed their workout requirement in whole or in part are given as follows with their organization: H. J. Allison, New Dorms; Sam Atkinson, Aycock; W. J. Armfield, Lewis; C. W. Aman, Best House; Eben Alexander, S. A. E.; D. P. Bennett, Grimes; J. E. Barney, Sigma Chi; M. V. Barnhill; J. T. Barnard, Chi Psi; Tom Bost, Sigma Nu; E. Gayley, Jr., A. T. O.

L. W. Barnes, Grimes; W. Bynum, Sigma Nu; E. B. Connell, Everett; J. A. Crawford, no organization; W. W. Carraway, no organization; L. Conte, Battle; A. Cope, S. A. E.; A. A. Cohen, Aycock; W. T. Chichester, Chi

Basketball Managerships

All sophomores interested in going out for basketball managership have been requested to see Arlindo Cate at the Sigma Chi house this afternoon between 3:30 and 5:00 o'clock.

I Only Heard

by MORRIS LONG

Looming big in the football spotlight of North Carolina is Johnny Branch's Charlotte Bantams, a professional galaxy of former collegiate grid warriors, who will clash in Durham at El Toro park this Sunday with the Ahsokie All Stars, whoever they might be. If you want to see Carolina's edition of Red Grange perform besides Ray Farris, Harry Schwartz, Roy McDade, and Potts Daniels, take the afternoon off and see the skirmish.

Did you know that Montgomery of Columbia, second highest scorer in the east, has a brother on the yearling grid squad here in school—that Duke has seven men instructing line candidates—that Harry Mehre, Georgia coach, believes Pete Gracy of Vanderbilt will make the all-American this year—that Bozie Berger, Maryland's all around star of last year, played ball with the Cleveland Indians in the American league—that Auburn is the high scorer of the nation's undefeated teams—that an Arkansas high school has a lineman weighing 400 pounds and a 100 pound back—that Ray Poppelman of Maryland was dropped from the squad because he slugged a frosh in scrimmage the other day—that Ken Byerly, instructor in geology here was an all-American hockey player at Minnesota in his undergraduate days—

Outstanding teams in the nation yet to be defeated are Auburn, Tennessee, and Virginia Tech in the south, Michigan and Notre Dame in the midwest, Southern California in the west, Colgate, Columbia, Harvard, and Pennsylvania in the east. Auburn's toughest remaining foe is Georgia, Tennessee has Duke, Vanderbilt, and Kentucky as obstacles, while V. P. I. has Alabama. Notre Dame must lick Army, Northwestern and Southern California if she is to claim national honors. Colgate has Penn State and Syracuse to hurdle while Columbia has Cornell and Syracuse to sidestep. Harvard's "horse shoe" aggregation has Army and Brown to block her victory path while Penn has two tough ones in Pittsburgh and Ohio State. The experts call for Auburn, Notre Dame and Michigan to be mythical contenders but that's all right—didn't some one predict a Carolina win over Georgia Tech?

Coach Bo Shepard's basketball squad swings into action next week with three regulars from last year's southern conference finalists back—Captain Hines, Weathers, and McCachern form the nucleus of this year's team with Stud Henry, George Brandt, Bill Markham, Stuart Chandler, and Dan Jones, all lettermen, back to help. With a host of promising freshmen coming up, Shepard's second year as cage mentor should be as impressive as his first.

Coach Chuck Collins, Carolina mentor, who is pushing his charges at a furious pace this week determined to get the Tar Heels to uncork the power that so far this season has failed to function.

TENNESSEE AND AUBURN IN SOUTH REMAIN UNBEATEN

Mid-Season Finds Only Twenty-Six Teams in the Nation Are Still Undefeated.

Mid-season has registered its toll on pre-season dopesters with the swindling of the national list of undefeated and untied grid outfits to twenty-six.

Auburn's powerhouse has continued to mow down all opposition to set the pace for scoring in the latest tabulation with 181 points, while Columbia is but one point behind, and Notre Dame is third with 177.

On the defense Notre Dame, Colgate, Southern California, St. John's of Minnesota, and Wagner of New York top the list, all of these having uncrossed goal lines.

In the south Auburn, Tennessee, V. P. I., Centenary, Catholic university, and Johns Hopkins have yet to taste defeat; in the east Columbia, Colgate, Holy Cross, Waynesburg, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Susquehanna, Temple, Brown, and Wagner; in the mid-west, Dayton, St. John's (Minn.), Illinois Normal, Cincinnati, North Dakota State, and Notre Dame; in the far west, Southern California, Calparaiso, and University of California at Los Angeles.

Lott Defeats Harris In Big Tourney Upset

As the semi-finals of the tennis get under way today Lott, Minor, Levitan, and Friedman will see action.

In the top bracket Lott defeated Lovill, 6-1, 9-7. Lott then defeated Harris in an easy battle, 6-1, 6-4. These victories place Lott in the semi-finals. Minor will face Lott for a place in the finals Friday at 3:00 o'clock. The match will be the best three out of five sets.

In the bottom bracket Levitan defeated Willis in a hard fought battle, 2-6, 9-7, 6-2. Friedman defeated McGinn easily Tuesday, 6-2, 6-2. The semi-final match between Friedman and Levitan will be played at 3:00 o'clock tomorrow.

FALCONS SOAR TO HIGH RATING WITH MAGNER COACHING

Former Tar Heel Star Is Succeeding As Mentor of Mount Pleasant Football Eleven.

Jim Magner, erstwhile Carolina star fullback who won not only all-state and all-southern honors but who was prominently mentioned for mythical all-American laurels, is now putting his experience and knowledge into practice as he coaches the Mount Pleasant Falcon eleven to another fine gridiron season.

The Falcons have won five straight games, and are already making a fine bid for southern prep school honors. Their contest for this week will be with the Carlisle School, at Mount Pleasant, Friday.

Last week found the Falcons soaring on to greater prominence in their successful campaign when they downed Weaver college at Salisbury, 12-2.

Their consistent victories over fine teams has given them a fine standing by the leading sports scribes in the state. It seems that the leaders in the prep school race have narrowed down to only three, Mount Pleasant, Oak Ridge, and Campbell college. The crown for this group will be fought for later on during the season when the fast Oak Ridge cadets clash with the Magnerites.

Not only have the Mount Pleasant gridders done well in their percentage of wins, but they have hung up an enviable record by their high scoring tactics. The Falcons have counted 104 points to their opponents' ten.

The big cogs in the Mount Pleasant attack are, Stern, who has collected four touchdowns and one extra point; Rief and Griffin, both having made three touchdown trips and having converted only one extra point; Rohr rounds out the scorers with two touchdowns to his credit.

Tar Heels Will Strive To Break Into Win Column In State Game

ZETA PSI, CARR, AND STEELE WIN

Zetas Defeat S. A. E.'s by One First Down in Closest Contest of Season.

Two forfeits marred yesterday's intramural tag football program, only three actual games taking place. In these Zeta Psi remained undefeated by eking out a victory over S. A. E. Carr downed New Dorms, and Steele conquered Swain Hall.

Zeta Psi Scores

Zeta Psi's victory was by the narrow margin of six first downs to five, and was earned on the final play of the game. After being tied at 2-2 when the first half closed, the teams battled on even terms throughout most of the last half. Near the end, with S. A. E. leading, Zeta Psi rallied to tie the score, and, on the last play, Sam Hanff reached out to snare a forward pass for a gain of about twelve yards, a first down, and victory. Nutt Parsley played best for S. A. E., while Phil Sasser's receiving ability enabled Zeta Psi to gain its fourth win in as many starts.

Carr Triumphs

Carr, which is making a determined effort to regain its place among the leaders of the dormitory league, emerged victorious over a small and indifferent outfit representing New Dorms, 19-0. Larry Hammond tallied after catching a long pass early in the first period, and Carr was never in any danger of being headed. Lee Greer and Bill Anglin played well for Carr, the latter scoring his team's third touchdown near the end of the game. Shorty White and James Keel did everything in their power to stave off the Carr onslaught, but with a weak line in front of them, their passing attack was smothered nearly every time. White, however, got off on some sensational runs, although he never threatened to score.

Swain Hall Bows

Steele pulled itself out of last place and gained its initial win of the season by taking a 4-1 decision from Swain Hall. Steele threatened twice, but in the first half was repulsed on downs after a march from midfield had given it several first downs, and, in the latter part of the game, had a pass intercepted by Edwin McRae to lose its last chance to

State College Will Be Favorites In Gridiron Tilt This Week-End.

STATE SEEKING REVENGE

Carolina Victorious in Contest With State Last Season by Score of 18 to 15.

Riddled with defeat bullets but still courageously bearing up under the assaults of the big guns of the Southern Conference, Carolina's Tar Heels intend to start their annihilation plans this Saturday by firing buckshot into the flanks of the victory-hungry Wolfpack from North Carolina State.

Last year's battle at Raleigh between the two rivals ended 18 to 15 for Chuck Collins' contingent, but this triumph was only garnered by staving off a final State rally in the last quarter which came close to being disastrous for the Tar Heels.

State Favored

This year the odds of the betting gentry are in favor of the State team, their record of the season showing no defeats and only one tie, that with Wake Forest. Last week-end the Wolfpack journeyed down to Florida and conquered the Alligators 17 to 6. With a victory psychology in their make-up, State warriors will be unbeatable, so the Wolfpack partisans claim, but it is the contention of Carolina's adherents that an overconfident crew is the easiest to lick.

The scoreless deadlock between State and Wake Forest and Carolina and the Deacons put the two teams on a par, and though the Tar Heels have been on the short end of the score four times their foes have been first division contenders in the Southern Conference while State's opponents are far from that coveted rank.

cross the Swain Hall goal line. Clarence Peacock led the Steele outfit in its successful attempt to get out of the dormitory league cellar.

Two Forfeits Occur

Manly gained its first victory of the season when the Independent team forfeited, and Everett scored over Mangum by the same method to bring its record to two victories and two defeats.

GLEE CLUB WILL OPEN YEAR WITH EVENT TOMORROW

Selections for Piano and Violin
Will Be Additions to Program in Burlington.

The University glee club, under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer, will present a concert in Burlington Friday evening. T. Smith McCorkle, violinist, will be the guest soloist. Harry Lee Knox will accompany the glee club, and offer a number of solos during the evening.

The program is as follows: Reapers Song (Bohemian); Fireflies (Russian); Fight (Finnish); The Well-Beloved (Finnish); Finnish Lullaby. The last three named are by Deems Taylor.

Ye Watchers and Ye Holy One, German melody; Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming, by M. Praetorius; Adeste Fideles, J. Reading; Bring a Torch, Jeanette, old French carol.

Toll de Bell Angel; Little David Play on Your Harp; Swing Low; Chorus of the Camel Drivers, by C. Franck; Bugle Song, by Arthur Potte; Lift Thine Eyes, by F. Logan; and the Alma Mater.

Knox will play Allemande, Gavotte, and Musette, by E. D'Albert, and Polichinelle, by Serge Rachmaninoff. McCorkle, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. McCorkle, will play Gopher, by Burleigh; Serenade Espagnole Chominate, by Kreisler; Barcarole, by MacMillan, and Scherzo, by von Goens.

Professor Dyer, who will speak before the music section of the State Teachers' association, in Charlotte, Friday morning, will go to Burlington Friday night to direct the glee club.

has exceeded reasonable bounds. Turning to Hoover, he pointed out that the president's glowing campaign promises have gone unfulfilled, with the advent of the most severe depression the country has ever known. He stated that as secretary of commerce, Hoover's policy was one of encouragement to free trade, as conducive to prosperity, but pointed out that as president he signed a tariff bill which brought about a practical boycotting of American goods abroad, even where foreign nations failed to erect retaliative tariffs.

Hoover's indecision, it was stated, has been concealed very poorly by the appointing of committees, and the speaker cited the case of a man in the naval service who stated that Hoover was abysmally ignorant concerning naval affairs. Disconcerted by this attack, the president appointed a committee to look into his abysmal ignorance. He compared President Hoover to a new bridge over the Hudson which is dry on top, wet on the bottom, and faces both ways.

As to the question of prohibition, the Republican party platform suggests referendum. Hoover has gone a step further than that and says that something must be done about it, but fails to indicate anything definite. This was presented in contrast to the clearly defined statement of both candidate and platform of the Democratic party.

Entreating his listeners not to allow North Carolina to make the same mistake twice by casting Carolina's electoral votes for Hoover, Graham closed his speech by urging all good Democrats to turn out at the polls November 8 to vote the Democratic ticket.

Wardlaw Will Play For Sophomore Hop

Tentative plans for the sophomore class dance Saturday, November 5 from 9:00 p. m. until 12:00 o'clock include the securing of Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra. The Tin Can, which is to be used for the function, will be decorated with the sophomore class colors, according to Stump Franklin, president of the class and leader of the dance. Invitations will be sent out through the "Y", and the dance will be limited to sophomores. Assistants to leader Franklin who were selected Thursday night, are Emmet Joyner, Frank Wilson, Edgar Broadhurst, Erwin Laxton, and Gene Bagwell.

Morning Watches To Be Conducted Daily

Commencing yesterday at 7:30 o'clock, morning watches are to be conducted daily at this hour in the room of Sherwood Barefoot and Dick Bunn, 302 Mangum.

There will be two scripture readings and prayers in the brief ten-minute session. On one selected reading there is slated to be a short talk by one of the participants.

New Supply Room

A new room, which will be used as a supply room, is being built in Graham Memorial next to the barber shop. The present supply room, which is on the second floor, will be used as a meeting room due to the increased demand for meeting places.

twenty-six are holders of teaching fellowships, won in competition in which about 1000 applicants participated.

The graduate school has been fortunate this year in being the recipient of several attractive outside fellowships. Among these are the Commonwealth fund fellowship, the fellowship awarded by the state department of conservation and development, fellowships awarded by the Rockefeller foundation, the social science research council, and the Rosenwald foundation. Several industrial companies have this year established special fellowships to enable projects of research to be undertaken. Very recently, it was announced that the United States Naval Research laboratory had established a fellowship to facilitate an important investigation to be undertaken under the guidance of the department of chemistry as to lead storage batteries.

Koch Lectures in Raleigh

Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, spoke in Raleigh last night at a dinner given by the recently reorganized Little Theatre group. Erskine Duff, who was formerly active in productions of the Carolina Playmakers, is president of this group. Koch spoke on "The Contribution of the Little Theatre in Your Town."

MADRY GOES TO NEW YORK FOR PUBLICITY MEETING

Robert W. Madry, director of the University News Bureau, left last night for New York to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the American College Publicity association to take place at New York university today.

Madry is vice-president of the association, which conducted its annual meeting at Chapel Hill two years ago.

The executive committee was called in session to select the place and dates and to formulate the program for next year's meeting.

Madry will return to Chapel Hill tomorrow.

SALLY EILERS STARS IN "HAT CHECK GIRL"

Sally Eilers' latest Fox role is the title characterization in "Hat Check Girl," featuring today at the Carolina theatre. The star portrays the sophisticated and self-reliant check girl at a big New York night club, and Ben Lyon makes an ideal screen partner as the Park avenue playboy who falls for her.

Ginger Rogers makes her first appearance under the Fox banner as Sally's companion, and much of the picture's humor is due to her efforts. Monroe Owsley, Noel Madison, Arthur Pierson, Purnell Pratt, Dewey Robinson, and Harold Goodwin all perform their roles excellently. The film was adapted from Rian James' novel of the same name.

A. M. White Addresses Chemical Engineers

The student chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers conducted its regular meeting, the purpose of which was to show the freshmen the relationship between the chapter and chemical engineering, last Tuesday night. Dr. A. M. White, head of the department of Chemical Engineering gave a talk on the topic, "What Chemical Engineering Is."

Dr. White has been able to secure Dr. Webster N. Jones to be with the local chapter December 5 for a series of seminars. Dr. Jones, formerly president of the Goodrich Rubber company, is now a member of the faculty of Carnegie Tech, and is well informed in the fields of modern chemical engineering.

Assembly Programs

Mayne Albright will address freshman assembly today on the subject of the Graham Memorial.

Professor K. C. Fraser will speak to the first year men tomorrow on the interesting theme, "The Disarmament Problem." Professor Fraser of the history and government department is a recognized authority in the field, and has spent the last year in Europe attending the conference of the League of Nations.

"Nature in the Raw"—as expressed in the famous rodeo cry; inspired by the picture in the July issue of the National Geographic Magazine taken at the Ski Hi Stampede, Monte Vista, Colorado. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

Engineering Society Taps Seven Leading Students

Four Seniors and Three Juniors Inducted Into Tau Beta Pi at Meeting Last Night.

DR. McKIE MAKES TALK

Membership in Order Based on Leadership, Fellowship, Scholarship, and Character.

Seven new members were inducted into Tau Beta Pi, national honorary engineering fraternity, last night at the tapping ceremonies in the physics lecture room in Phillips hall.

The pledges, chosen by their scholarship, character, social standing, capacity for leadership, personal appearance, and congeniality with other students, are as follows: George W. Gorham, Jr., Rocky Mount; Leonard C. Surprenant, Springfield, Mass.; John A. Preston, Lewisburg, W. Va.; and Edward Brenner, Hendersonville, seniors; and Floyd D. Higby, Sterling, Ill.; Paul R. Hayes, Greensboro; and Frederick E. Culvern, Asheville, juniors.

Dr. McKie Speaks

Dr. George McKie of the English department was the speaker of the evening. His subject was "Is the Engineer Human?" His address was most enthusiastically received by the audience.

Following the speech the active members donned black robes and hoods for the tapping process. Lights were put out and the new men were tapped and then escorted to the stage. After the induction ceremony the pledges were introduced to the audience.

Quality Stressed

Qualities of leadership, fellowship, scholarship, and character are emphasized in the selection of men into this order. The student must show much interest in engineering and must fulfill as high scholastic requirements as the Phi Beta Kappa

LOCAL LIBRARY IS MADE CENTER BY RESEARCH GROUP

University Library Has Charge Of Collecting Government Documents for State.

The University library was designated this week by the Social Science Research Council, as the official government documents' center for North Carolina. This council has named an important library in each state to preserve and collect complete sets of the public documents and related material originating within the state.

The University library was selected because it already possesses the most comprehensive collection in existence of Caroliniana, including both official and unofficial documents. These are found in the North Carolina Room and the Rural Social Economics library.

Though the collection of this type of material for research purposes by libraries in the past, has generally been a matter of chance, social scientists are beginning to realize its importance and to arrange for its preservation.

Scientific Society Considers Programs

The first meeting of the North Carolina chapter of Sigma Xi, national honorary scientific society, will take place Tuesday, November 15. Following a supper for the members, Dr. Archibald Henderson will speak.

A meeting of the executive committee took place this week, and the chief business was the consideration of the kind of programs to be presented the coming year.

Sigma Xi was formed for the purpose of promoting research in pure science. It is strictly honorary and membership is restricted entirely to those who have made some definite contribution in a particular science.

FORREST TO READ HIS LATEST PLAY FOR PLAYMAKERS

Eminent English Actor Has Had Varied Experiences in Many Countries.

Belford Forrest, well-known English actor, playwright, and director, has accepted an invitation from the Carolina Playmakers to read his latest play, How It All Began, at the Playmakers theatre Sunday evening, November 6.

Forrest has had a wide and interesting career in the theatres of both England and America. His first engagements were with a small English stock company, which he joined immediately after his graduation from Trinity college, Dublin, thirty years ago. He later acted in small parts with the great English actress Ellen Terry, and was for many years a member of the famous stock company of Osmond Tearle, father of Conway Tearle. With Tearle, Forrest played all over the British Isles and in South Africa. In the latter country he had many exciting adventures incident upon the Boer troubles. In his London experiences, Forrest once turned down a part in one of Bernard Shaw's earlier plays, because Shaw was then an unknown upstart beneath the notice of a self-respecting actor.

Lost Sheep is the best known of Forrest's plays. It had a brilliant run on Broadway two seasons ago, and discovered the young actress, Sydney Fox, now starring in the movies. The play which he is to read November 6 is concerned with the founding of the first professional theatre in London by Burbage, and will be of particular interest to Shakespearean students and scholars. The reading will begin at 8:30, and the public is invited to attend.

Spanish Club to Convene in First Meeting Tonight

The first meeting of the Spanish club is scheduled for tonight at 7:30 o'clock in room 210 of Graham Memorial. The meeting will be confined to business, the election of officers, and the selection of a faculty adviser to replace Dr. A. K. Shields.

Regarding Students' Attitude Toward The Football Team

AN EDITORIAL

With three overwhelming defeats against the football team and only two ties, members of the student body are becoming somewhat down-hearted as to the team's chances for the remainder of the season. They are pessimistically pointing to the fact that Carolina will do well to keep from finishing the year in the Big Five cellar position. And some are even going so far as to predict that unless some super-natural forces intervene the Tar Heels will not register a single victory on the entire schedule.

But these gloomy pessimists are forgetting several important factors which have entered into making the season thus far appear so unsuccessful for the Tar Heels. When the fact is considered that in the last four games the team has faced without question some of the best teams in the South, the record is not as bad as it would first appear.

And even though the scores give the impression that the team was completely out-classed in three of the contests, a tabulation of the total number of first downs in all the games will indicate that nothing is further from true. As a matter of actual count Carolina led its opponents in first downs 51 to 25. True this record does not place the University team in the win column. But it is conclusive evidence that the Tar Heels were not as badly trounced as one would be led to believe after glancing at the actual scores.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL does not intend to be a Pollyanna going around trying to make everyone happy and gay about the team. Nor is this intended to be a pep talk to the student body. But the TAR HEEL realizes the fact that many of the student body have not actually faced the facts in this matter squarely and have been unjustifiably disgruntled over the Tar Heels' showing thus far. And as a result they have not given the team the backing to which it is rightfully entitled.

So far as material is concerned this year's squad is as good, if not better, than any of those of the last several seasons. But no matter how good the squad may be, it can not be expected to achieve any sort of success when it is encountered on all sides by the scoffs and sneers from pessimistic students.

The team got off to a bad start by not living up to the pre-game predictions and giving Wake Forest the usual licking. Consequently a great many of the one-time supporters have tended to take the critical and pessimistic attitude toward the team. They were not satisfied to broadcast their feelings to their individual friends but have taken it upon themselves to condemn the members of the team to their faces. They intimate that Carolina this year has no team at all. And as proof of this statement these would-be football sages are pointing to the fact that the team continues to meet defeat after defeat.

But these persons seem to for-

WEATHERFORD TO GIVE TALK HERE SUNDAY MORNING

President of 'Y' Graduate School At Nashville, Tenn., to Talk in Local Churches.

The University Y. M. C. A. is bringing to the campus this week-end Dr. W. D. Weatherford, president of the Y. M. C. A. graduate school in Nashville, Tennessee; founder and builder of Blue Ridge, the "Y" assembly grounds near Asheville; and leading figure in the Young Men's Christian Association movement of the south for the past thirty years.

Chapel Hill churches are co-operating with this program. At 11:00 o'clock Sunday morning Dr. Weatherford will speak at the Methodist church, directing his message principally to students. At 7:45 o'clock in the evening Dr. Weatherford will speak at the Baptist church to a combined audience of the Young People's Union (composed of the young people's organizations of all churches and the "Y" cabinets) and the evening churchgoers. The public is invited to both of these services.

On Monday Dr. Weatherford will speak to University classes, to personal and group interviewers, and will meet the "Y" cabinets at 7:00 o'clock in the evening.

From here he goes to State college for four days of addresses.

UNIVERSITY BACKS WOMEN STUDENTS' ATHLETIC EVENTS

University Officials Support Division of Physical Education for Women.

Under the direction of Miss Gladys Angel of the University extension division, a definite athletic program will be inaugurated this afternoon on the athletic field behind President Frank Graham's house. This is the first time in the history of the University that any arrangements have been made for the participation of co-eds in athletics.

President Frank Graham has recently set up the administrative board of the division of physical education for women. This board is composed of Mrs. M. H. Stacy, chairman, R. A. Fetzer, Dr. R. B. Lawson, C. T. Woolen, R. B. House, Deans A. W. Hobbs, N. W. Walker, F. F. Bradshaw and Misses Sally B. Marks and Gladys Angel.

Program Mapped Out

The board has had two meetings at which a program was mapped out and a yearly budget proposed. A resolution was also passed asking for the co-operation of the campus committee, of which Dr. W. C. Coker is chairman.

Efforts are being made for the women graduates of the University to be eligible for membership in the American Association

Albright Makes Talk On Graham Memorial

Mayne Albright, manager of Graham Memorial, was the featured speaker at the freshman assembly yesterday morning. He spoke on the topic "Graham Memorial and Its Purposes," saying that the building offers a place for entertainment, and encourages entertainments previously not enjoyed on the campus. Continuing, he said that a building of this type must grow gradually into the life of the campus; and as the students have come to know the building and appreciate it, it has expanded, so that at times conditions are rather crowded.

Reverend A. S. Lawrence conducted the devotional exercises.

CLARK ATTACKED BY E. E. ERICSON IN ADDRESS HERE

Socialist Group Is Told That the Party Is Gaining Prominence in This State.

Dr. E. E. Ericson of the department of English told Socialists assembled in Gerrard hall Wednesday night that the rise of both the Socialist party and its candidate for the presidency, Norman Thomas, in this state has been due largely to the reaction against biased and unfair criticism of the party and its leader.

Sketching briefly the uphill struggle of the Socialist party in this state against anti-radical movements, the speaker charged that David Clark, editor of the Southern Textile Bulletin, succeeded in having Carl Taylor of State college discharged, ostensibly on the grounds of economy, but actually for radicalism. He stated that Clark offered financial inducement to persons in Chapel Hill who would give him information as to professors here connected with radical movements.

Says Attacks Aid Party

He indicated that the election board's antagonism toward putting the Socialist candidate's name on the ballot making it necessary to have ten thousand names signed to a petition supporting the Socialist party, spurred the party to activity and stimulated state-wide interest in Socialism. It was further suggested that the ill-founded attacks of Clark on Thomas, charging that he advocated atheism, communism, and free love, brought the latter many audiences who came to scoff and remained to pray.

"Many indications," stated Dr. Ericson, "point to a fuller appreciation of the Socialist party as an intellectual and social influence and to an awakening to the worth of Norman Thomas. The result of the straw ballot conducted by the DAILY TAR HEEL bears this out, as do many requests for Socialist literature from throughout the state." It was stated that the great mass of people are gaining a clearer view of Socialism—that workers

SOLID SOUTH STANDS PAT

Roosevelt Leads by 5,028 Votes In South; Thomas Is Ahead In Five Institutions.

(Special wire to the DAILY TAR HEEL) Princeton, N. J., Oct. 27.—Herbert Hoover, Republican candidate for re-nomination, polled ten thousand votes more than his nearest competitor, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee, to win the Daily Princetonian nation-wide campus presidential poll, returns finally tabulated here last night revealed.

Final Count

The final count: Hoover, 28,180; Roosevelt, 17,712; Thomas, 10,490; and Foster, 715.

More than fifty thousand students in forty-six colleges, selected from nearly every state in the union, voted through their college newspapers. Results were sent in to the Princetonian and made public together with the returns from this university late last night.

Solid South Predicted

If the returns from nine large southern universities are any criterion, the south will again be solid this November. At the universities of Arkansas, Florida, Kentucky, Texas, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia Military Institute and Vanderbilt university, Hoover polled but 1,136 votes while Roosevelt polled 6,164.

Ohio, Yale, Princeton, Harvard, Smith, Cornell, Massachusetts Tech and Northwestern contributed the largest number of votes to the Hoover majority. Though polling a high vote on some campuses where in most instances he exceeded those of

PATTERSON WILL GIVE ALL-REQUEST CONCERT TONIGHT

Memorial Hall Organist Comments on Number of Requests For Classical Numbers.

Walter B. Patterson, organist, will present an all-request program of classical numbers in Memorial hall this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

"It has been an interesting surprise to note the large number of requests made for this type of music," Patterson stated. "Students, for all their jazz-minded appearance, are vitally interested in and appreciate the classics and semi-classics."

The program is composed of: Ballet Egyptian, by Luigini; Erotic, by Grieg; La Cinquantaine, by Gabriel-Marie. The selections from Tchaikowsky will include: Marche Slav; Andante Cantabile, from the String Quartet; Ballet of the Flowers, from the Nut Cracker Suite; June Barcarolle; Chanson Triste; Le Lac Des Cygnes; and Largo, from The Serenade.

Patterson will conclude the program with Serenade, by Schubert and Largo, by Handel.

An Ounce or So Of Prevention

In last year's campus elections Haywood Weeks, now president of the student body, made the major issue of his platform the proposal that a general auditing board for all organizations handling student funds be set up with its offices in South building. Now it seems that the general auditing board is about to become an actuality, for all but a few of the campus organizations have entered into co-operation with the plan and have announced their intentions of incorporating their auditing systems under this general head.

The transactions of many of these organizations are so few or are of so little relative financial importance that they would find it an unwarranted expense to conduct regularly an audit of their books. Those such as the Athletic Association and Publications Union Board, of course, maintain their own auditing systems. Under the proposed plan, however, the general auditing board will supervise and audit the financial accounts of every student organization. In brief, it provides that each may have its books kept and audited at a minimum expense, which is made possible because all pay for a common service.

Its ultimate purpose is to safe-guard student money, and under this type of system only is this assurance possible. No organization on the campus that cannot afford an annual audit is immune from the sort of petty graft that has been going on here practically unrestricted for years. Pilfering from student money, misappropriation, can hardly be dignified by calling it embezzlement, but in spite of the meanness of its proportions it has been a source of constant leakage. The student body, whether it knows it or not, has been paying for more than it's been getting. Up until now action taken by the University has been to punish the offender rather than to prevent the offense.

But by demanding an accounting for every cent of student money, the general auditing board assures all undergraduates that their funds are not being misappropriated for dubious purposes—or to use a less polite term—stolen. When once the general auditing board secures the co-operation of every campus organization, it will correct this deficiency. And to this end it deserves the full support and endorsement of the student body.—A.T.D.

Carolina's Gentlemen

At the football game on Saturday, there was an exhibition of ungentlemanly behavior such as was not worthy of this or any other university. It was requested on the loudspeaker at the stadium that people of the crowd please refrain from crossing the field and leaving by the south stands. This request came loud and clear over the amplifiers in good English. But a large contingent of the spectators ignored the request as if it were quite beyond possibility that they should be obliged or even requested to do anything to which the spirit did not happen to move them at the moment. Unconcernedly they straggled across the field even while the man at the speaker again exhorted the crowd not to go that way.

To any outsider, it would seem that there were only two conclusions to be drawn from this exhibition: either that the game was attended by a large group of foreign guests cognizant only of the Semitic languages; or that a certain group of students at this University were woefully ignorant of the most elementary rules of courtesy. The keepers of the grounds at Kenan stadium have been trying for years to grow some grass on the locker building end of the stadium. It is no wonder that their lack of success is exceeded only by their recurrent exasperation.

It would seem, then, that, being unable at this late date to train men in the ground rules of politeness, it would be well to reward such rude and thoughtless conduct in a proper manner. It has been suggested that the names of the chronic rule-violators be taken and that they henceforth be refused admission to the stadium at all times and for all occasions. Then, it seems likely, some of those people who suppose themselves specially privileged will learn to practice their obnoxious independence elsewhere and at other times.—B.B.P.

get the class of teams that are being encountered. They refuse to give the team a fair trail. They overlook the fact that when the team members know that they do not have the confidence of the students and supporters, they are naturally unwilling to put up the fight that they otherwise would. When the members of the team do have this confidence, and know it, they have a standard which they must uphold, an expectation which they must live up to, an ideal which they must strive to make a reality. They are willing really to exert themselves and put out every ounce of energy that is in them.

There is not a single conscientious criticism that can be made of the team Carolina has this year. In fact there is little doubt but what the team's standing would be much better off now had it not had the misfortune to engage so many strong teams one after the other.

And if the students will but stop and realize this fact and give the team their confidence, it is almost a foregone conclusion that the team will have little trouble in finishing the remainder of the season undefeated.

are realizing that labor unions are a form of socialism, and that farmers are beginning to understand that cooperative farming is another form of this theory. The speaker expressed the opinion that Socialism is bigger than Norman Thomas, and stated that its success does not depend on the fact that it has a particularly forceful leader at its head.

"Farmers and factory workers are coming to recognize the capitalist as their common enemy," stated Dr. Ericson, "and they are turning to the party which favors 'land for the man who farms it, not for the man who speculates in it'. Since there is but slight difference between the two major political parties of the day it is believed that the depression is bringing about a reaction against the feudal system which is an outgrowth and over-development of the old capitalistic ideal."

"Socialism," Dr. Ericson said in closing, "is rapidly becoming more respectable, as is proven by the change of attitude toward Socialists in newspapers everywhere, and especially in North Carolina, and as is shown by the increasing interest in Norman Thomas and the Socialist party which is being evidenced on all sides."

Ninth Annual Cake Race Set For This Afternoon

Intramural Event Scheduled to Start in Front of Patterson-Morehead Bell Tower.

MANY AWARDS OFFERED

Race Will Be One of Biggest Events of Year on Intramural Program.

The ninth annual intramural Cake Race is slated to start today in front of the Patterson-Morehead bell tower at 4:15 p. m., between the halves of the Carolina-State frosh grid tiff. Those present at the game will witness the finish at the half.

The course has been marked by flags for turns—white flags for right turns and red flags for left turns. After leaving the carillon the participants will go down to the Pittsboro highway, turn to their right and go under the underpass up to the Carolina Inn, make a left turn there, run down Cameron avenue to the Chi Psi lot, make another left turn, go down one block over the railroad bridge, turn to the left for the final time when they reach McCauley street, and go past the Pittsboro road and the Pittsboro highway up to the lower bank of the carillon lot, turn to the right and go down to Kenan stadium through the west gate and finish at the east goal.

All runners will be given a number, to be worn in the race. These numbers will be given out at the bell tower beginning at 3:30 o'clock. Contestants should be there as early as possible in order to secure their number, as no one will be allowed to run without a number.

Many Awards

The first ten men to cross the east goal in Kenan stadium will receive from the intramural department special medals for their work in the race, and the eleventh through the fiftieth man to finish will receive cakes.

THETA KAPPA NU BEATEN BY BETAS

Phi Delt, Sigma Chi, Theta Chi, And Old East Win in Intramural Tilts Yesterday.

Yesterday's intramural games provided plenty of excitement for those who took advantage of the opportunity to see them.

The Beta Theta Phi team continued its undefeated ways by downing the Theta Kappa Nu team, 13-0. Anderson scored the first touchdown on a nice run, and then dropkicked the extra point. Linker scored the second touchdown by intercepting a pass and running 80 yards for the score. The try for extra point failed. Coan and Hargreave also stood out for the winners, while Longest and Berry led the losers.

Sigma Chi Wins

Sigma Chi defeated Delta Psi 7-0 on a touchdown by Bill Wood. Wilmer Hines scored the extra point on a pass. Hines' play stood out during the entire afternoon. Henry also played a good game for the winning team. Haines and Blount played best for the Delta Psi squad.

Zeta Beta Tau and Theta Chi engaged in a hard game with the Theta Chi team having an edge. The final score was 7-0. Bennett scored the touchdown on a beautiful pass and Temple converted the point. McCollum and

MID-TERMS THIN OUT FROSH PUGS

Intramural Tourney Will Take Place After Thanksgiving Recess.

The mid-term examinations for the fall quarter decidedly cut down the number of freshmen trying out for boxing, as is evidenced by the small number who take their daily workouts as compared with the two score candidates who reported for practice before the examination results were posted.

Allen Announces Tourney

Coach Archie T. Allen, yearling mitt coach, said last night in an interview, "More men are needed now that the mid-terms are over, for we are going to plunge immediately into heavier work. It is very essential that all men who are planning to make the freshman boxing team come out regularly. Not more than a week after the Thanksgiving recess, the intramural tourney will take place, and all men participating should be in top form."

Allen announced the names of a few boys who have been looking well in their weights. These are not representative, it was announced; since more than a dozen boys who gave their names for boxing are now out for football.

In the 119-pound class, Louis Barnes, Ernest Eutsler, and Harold Blalock have looked best. Among the feathers, J. Flaherty, M. Frucht, and Locke Craig are the best candidates. In the 135 pound division, Lane Fulenwider and Ed Joyner are the most promising battlers.

The 145-pounders have two likely looking boys, John Ogburn and Paul McKee. There is a general scarceness of heavyweights. Only two boys are out for these classes; in the 160-pound division, "Red" Mehafty seems to have the inside track while in the unlimiteds, only one candidate, Robert Henson, has reported so far.

FIFTY-SIX CAKES ARE SECURED FOR UNION WINNERS

Local Townspeople and Firms Offer Cakes for Winners in Intramural Race Today.

Fifty-six cakes have been secured thus far by the intramural department to be awarded to the winners of the ninth annual intramural Cake Race this afternoon.

LOCAL GOLF MEET DRAWS BIG FIELD IN NOVELTY PLAY

Two-Ball Foursomes of One Experienced and One Novice Player Attract Crowd.

One hundred and four players, the largest number ever to use the course, took part in a two-ball foursome tournament at the Chapel Hill Country club Wednesday afternoon.

The tournament was especially interesting because experienced players were in every case matched with men who had played before, or whose experience was very slight. At the first tee there was a continuous gallery of from ten to fifty spectators, at least half of whom had no conception at all of golf etiquette.

Smith Almost Safe

It seemed for a time that Manager E. C. Smith, of the Carolina theatre, had offered his prize of a week's pass to the theatre to every foursome making a birdie in vain, but the forty-eighth pair of players came through on the ninth hole with a birdie. They were H. M. Burlage, and Carl Durham. The prize to the foursome making the lowest score went to Utley and Harmon, and Phipps and Farborough.

All the other prizes, which were offered by local merchants, were awarded to the guests. In the first group the first pair off the tee tied the pair which was the last to leave the course. Dundas and Williams, students, tied D. E. Peacock and R. S. Winslow. The third prize went to L. C. MacKinney and Dr. C. S. Mangum. For the fourth prize, J. C. Lyons and Joe Pratt a student, tied M. A. Hill and J. W. Laslie, and A. S. Winsor and Dr. J. P. Jones.

In the second group, the first prize was won by Phipps and Farborough, the second by Harmon and Utley, the third by G. K. G. Henry and G. A. Harner; and the fourth was tied between J. G. Evans and S. H.

CAROLINA HAS BIG LEAD IN ANCIENT SERIES WITH PACK

Tar Heels Have Won Sixteen Out Of Twenty-Three Games Played With State.

Before the quest for state honors, which Carolina resumes this Saturday against Carolina State, a backward glance at the thirty-seven years of competition between these teams shows that Carolina has compiled a record of sixteen victories, four ties, and three defeats out of the twenty-three games that they have played. The Tar Heels have developed the satisfactory habit of winning rather consistently, but, after State's fine showing against Florida last Friday, it begins to look as though Saturday's game will be a real contest—anything but the one-sided affair that it has been so often.

The rivalry between these teams began in 1894, and it took seven games before State was able to even cross the Tar Heels' goal line. This first trip into the promised land took place in 1899, when the game ended in a 11-11 tie. After that, State failed to score again until 1919. Except for that tie of 1899, Carolina won every game from 1894 to 1901 by scores ranging from 10-0 to 44-0.

In 1904 and '05, the Wolf Pack held matters to a scoreless tie; but after the latter meeting, a break in relations followed and State had to wait until after the war to register their first victory.

Carolina won the first post-war game 13-12, but State took the 1920 edition 13-3. Dick Gurley, Lenoir Rhyne coach, led State to that victory. "Runt" Lowe saved the Tar Heels from a shut-out by kicking a field goal; but, the following year, this same Lowe fumbled and permitted Faucette of State to run fifty yards for a touchdown and a 7-3 victory for the Wolf Pack.

Too often constipation is permitted to sap health and undermine vitality. It can become a serious handicap.

A delicious cereal will overcome this condition. Two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN will promote regular habits. ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk," vitamin B and iron. Ask that it be served at your fraternity house or campus restaurant.

The most popular ready-to-eat cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include Kellogg's Corn Flakes, PEP Bran Flakes, Rice Krispies, Wheat Krumbles, and Kellogg's WHOLE WHEAT Biscuit. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee—real coffee that lets you sleep.

Power Companies Make Proposal

North Carolina's four major power companies yesterday proposed to the state corporation commission that they voluntarily reduce their rates for domestic electric service, but two of them sought to make the lower schedule probationary.

U. S. Ready to Match Navies

A navy built to the London treaty limit and "equal to that of the most powerful in the world" is considered by President Hoover a necessity if arms limitation efforts fail.

Unemployed Riot in London

Rioting unemployed, yelling defiance at the police, participated in the most serious disturbance of this kind that London has seen in years. Two thousand people marched through the streets of England's capital yesterday crying for bread. The continuance of the "means test," a test used to prove that a person has a right to claim the "dole," was the cause of the disturbance.

Hoover Heading West

Turning all else aside, President Hoover prepared yesterday for his fourth swing through the west, beginning last night, and his initial invasion of the eastern section Monday.

Roosevelt Ponders Relief

With most of his presidential campaign behind him, Governor Roosevelt turned his attentions to a serious state problem, the care of New York's thousands which will be unemployed next winter.

Gandhi Stays in Jail

"Mahatma Gandhi, who was imprisoned on January 4 for reviving his campaign of civil disobedience, will not be released," Victor Willingdon said yesterday, "until he makes a declaration dissociating himself entirely from the civil disobedience movement."

OFFICERS OF CABINETS WILL DISCUSS CONCERT

The officers of the three Young Men's Christian Association cabinets will convene this morning during the student assembly period. Plans for the next week will be discussed.

An important feature of the meeting will be the discussion of the problem of handling the large crowd expected to turn out Sunday afternoon in Memorial hall at 4:30 o'clock to hear the Sedalia Singers in a concert which the "Y" cabinets are sponsoring.

Ninth Annual Cake Race Slated For Today

The first ten men to finish will also have a supper as guests of "Dean" G. H. Paulsen later.

A cake will be given to the team having the largest number to start the race. Another cake will also be given to the team having the largest number to finish in the first fifty. All organizations having at least four men to finish in the initial fifty will also receive awards.

Intramural Scoring

The Cake Race will be one of the biggest events on the year's intramural card, judging by the large number of points awarded to the victorious teams in the all year round competition.

Each team entering shall receive 25 points. The team winner shall receive 25 points also; second place will be good for 20 points; third place, 15 points; fourth place, 10 points; and fifth place, 5 points. Teams having the most entrants in the Cake Race shall receive 25 points; second 20 points; third, 15 points; fourth 10 points; and fifth, 5 points. In no case shall the number of points to any particular team in a Cake Race exceed 150.

Librarians to Hear Talk

Miss Lucile Nix, librarian of the Reynolds senior high school of Winston-Salem, will speak to the students of the school of library science and the members of the library staff tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock in room 313 of the library. Her topic will be "The School Library."

CAROLINA HAS BIG LEAD IN ANCIENT SERIES WITH PACK

shut-out scores but, in 1927 Jack McDowell, State's all star of all-time, quarterback, showed the way to a 19-6 win. The 1928 game ended 6-6, Mac Gray tallying for Carolina on a long pass in the last play of the game. This tie was more than atoned for by the Tar Heels who nipped State 32-0, the next year. In 1930, Carolina was one touchdown better than State, as the 13-6 score indicated, the latter team's six points resulting from Gurneau's long run.

Last year's clash at Raleigh developed into a genuine dime-novel thriller. Rip Slusser, Carolina's great halfback, scored three touchdowns in the first few minutes of play. From then on the game State team fought like demons, bringing the final score to the record books at 18-15.

THETA KAPPA NU BEATEN BY BETAS

Neale also stood out for the Theta Chi boys, and Stern Straus and Myers played good ball for the losers.

Lambda Chi Alpha Loses

The game between Phi Delta Theta and Lambda Chi Alpha was the gem of the afternoon. The final score was 6-6 which reverted the decision to the number of first downs made. Phi Delta Theta was declared the winner four first downs to three. The game was an upset as Lambda Chi Alpha was thought to be almost a certainty to take the game. Moffit scored the Phi Delta Theta touchdown but failed to make good the point. Tucker was a big factor in the victory. Lothien scored the Lambda Chi Alpha score, but he also failed to convert the point. The losers had many stars, but failed when they got close to the goal line. Lothien, Blood, Sparks, and Batt all played good ball.

Old East Wins

In the final contest of the day's play Old East beat the Question Marks 14-0. Mathews scored both the Old East touchdowns, while Ellis converted both points. Barham and Fox made some nice gains during the course of the game. Strayhorn, Stone, and Beam bore the brunt of the Question Marks running and passing.

One game was not played as Chi Phi forfeited to the Delta Kappa Epsilon team.

Playmakers Seek Ushers

All students who have handed in their names to the Playmakers for positions on the ushering staff are asked to report for an important meeting at the Playmakers theatre Monday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. All Playmaker season ticket salesmen are asked to report to the business manager at the Playmakers theatre by Monday, October 31, at the latest.

Fraser to Speak Today

Professor K. C. Fraser of the history and government department will address freshman assembly today on the subject "The Disarmament Problem." Professor Fraser is a well-known authority on this subject. Sophomores are not required to attend the exercises this morning as a result of Dean Bradshaw's announcement yesterday to the effect that second year men will be compelled to attend assembly on Mondays only.

The executive committee of the senior class will meet in Graham Memorial tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

TAR BABIES MEET STATE FRESHMEN AT KENAN TODAY

Carolina will start their second string again today regardless of the poor showing they made last week when they began the battle with Oak Ridge. This team will be left in the contest most of the time if they are able to keep an upper hand. The first string, however, will be ready to go in any time the State freshmen seem to be taking the advantage. Sutton will be the only Tar Baby on the bench with an injury. The big fullback came out of the Cadet fray with a bad leg which seems to stay with him regardless of treatment. Very few of the freshmen, as compared with past years, will be out of the game because of mid-term reports. Although the offense is still not up to the standard the coaches are looking for, the Tar Babies have one of the strongest defenses that a freshman team has had in many a year. In their only two contests the opposition has been held to one touchdown and this was the result of a pass.

Today's contest will have a big bearing on the race for state honors among Big Five freshman teams; especially is this true in the case of Carolina. If the Tar Babies win this one and the game scheduled with Duke's yearlings, Thanksgiving, they can hardly be denied top position. An added feature to the game will be the annual Cake Race which will be run off during the half, finishing at the east end of Kenan field.

CARY GRANT PLAYS IN "HOT SATURDAY" TODAY

Cary Grant, Nancy Carroll, and Randolph Scott have the leading roles in "Hot Saturday," today's showing at the Carolina theatre. The supporting cast includes Lillian Bond, Rita La Roy, William Collier, Sr., Edward Woods, Jessie Arnold, Rose Coughlan, 2nd, and Jape Darwell.

Miss Carroll plays the role of Ruth Brock, a girl who works in the town bank, and is chased by every lad in town because she has a reputation for being fast. Cary Grant, in the role of a wealthy young bachelor, becomes interested in her and invites her out to his summer place. Later, after the crowd has gone to a nearby dance resort on the lake, Ruth is forced to "walk home" from a boat ride, because the youngster has ideas that she doesn't share. Rumors spread to the effect that she spent the night with Grant.

DR. COLLIER COBB MAKES TALK FOR GEOLOGICAL CLUB

Sigma Gamma Epsilon to Hear Lectures by Many Eminent Geologists During Year.

The members of Sigma Gamma Epsilon, national geological fraternity, heard an interesting talk by Dr. Collier Cobb on "Founders of Geology" at the regular meeting last night.

The local chapter Sigma Gamma Epsilon was founded two years ago by representatives from the Bureau of Mines, the Bureau of Standards, and the National Museum. This society is established in universities having outstanding departments of geology, the only other chapter in the southeastern states being at the University of Kentucky.

Educational meetings of the chapter are conducted twice a month, and geologists of wide experience are invited. A number of geologists from other institutions and from the government bureaus as well as local professors are to speak to the group during the year.

SEDALIA SINGERS WILL APPEAR IN MEMORIAL HALL

Famous Colored Choral Group to Be Brought Here by Local
Y. M. C. A. Tomorrow.

The Sedalia Singers, colored choral group from the Alice Freeman Palmer Institute near Greensboro, will appear in Memorial hall, Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. This event is being sponsored by the campus Y. M. C. A. as a part of their interracial program.

"Y" officials have announced that there would be no admission charged, but a silver offering will be taken up in order to defray the traveling expenses of the organization.

Receive Praise

The North Carolina colored singers have received some very flattering comments from the newspapers in cities all over the nation in which they have appeared. The Boston Herald said: "Songs chanted in the hills, echoed in the valleys, stirring in the cotton fields, always on the lips the song, and in the song the plainness. This idea was never more beautifully expressed than by the Sedalia Singers' group at Symphony hall last night."

Alma Gluck and Frieda Hempel, famous Metropolitan Opera stars commended the singers highly. Miss Hempel, after a visit to the school, said: "I have never been so thrilled in all my life. Your singing of Swing Low, Sweet Chariot, made me want to cry."

Carolina Dormitory Club To Be Arbitrator In Student Problem

Complex and Important Problems in University Will Be Handled
By Organization Composed of Dormitory Presidents;
Control of Student Conduct One of Problems.

Who shall have control of student conduct in the University dormitories? To whom shall the residents of the dormitories appeal when seeking adjustments necessary to their comfort and well-being? It was the complexity and importance of these problems that led ten years ago to an attempt at their solution by the organization of the Carolina dormitory club.

As in the case of the solution of the majority of social problems at the University, the formation of this club resulted from the direct demands of the students themselves. The organization, which is composed of the presidents of all campus dormitories, was a natural outgrowth of student responsibility for the conduct of the residents of the University living quarters.

Regulates Dormitory Order

The principal achievement of the club has been the regulation and maintenance of order in the dormitories. The actual control of the situation is placed in the hands of the president of each individual building.

This council receives authority directly from the student council to place on immediate probation any student who violates dormitory regulations. These include the principles of gentlemanliness expounded in the Campus Code and the pursuance of a normal neighborly life. Violation of such probation results in an appeal to the student council for the removal of the offenders.

DEBATE TEAM SECURES MATCH WITH GEORGIA

The University debate group has made arrangements for a debate with the University of Georgia, it was announced yesterday by W. A. Olsen, faculty head of the group. The date has not been set.

Representatives of the University will defend the affirmative side of the subject, "Resolved: That the American Legion be condemned." There will be two speeches of twelve minutes each and a short rebuttal of six minutes. Date for try-outs will be announced later.

Trustees Will Meet To Elect President

A meeting of the trustees of the University will take place November 14. This will be the second meeting of the full board since the consolidation into the Greater University of North Carolina.

It is presumed that at this meeting the trustees will act on the recommendation of the executive committee that President Graham of the University be made head of the Greater University. It is also understood that the Tatum petition will be put before the trustees.

Forum Sponsors Dance

The Union Forum gave the first in a series of informal dances Thursday evening in Graham Memorial. Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra furnished music for the occasion.

Entertainment was provided by a trio made up of Wofford Humphries, Bill Alsbrook, and Claude Freeman.

FORMER CAPTAIN OF OCEAN LINER TO SPEAK MONDAY

Commander Hartley, Formerly
In Command of Leviathan,
Will Address Assembly.

Commodore Herbert Hartley, Commander U. S. N. R., will address student assembly Monday morning at 10:30. The Commodore has had thirty-five years experience on the high seas. For several years he was commander of the Leviathan, formerly the Vaterland, at one time the largest ocean liner afloat. It will be remembered that this ship carried 13,000 American soldiers to France on one trip.

The commander has entertained many world notables, including Will Rogers, Queen Marie of Roumania, "Bud" Fisher, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, with his interesting experiences and humorous incidents of the sea.

The speaker is making several addresses in and around Greensboro, and is being brought to the University through the interest and courtesy of Mr. E. M. Oettinger, of the Oettinger Lumber company.

GLEE CLUB SINGS AT BURLINGTON CONCERT

The University glee club, under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer, presented a concert in Burlington last night. Professor T. Smith McCorkle, and Harry Lee Knox, accompanist, were the soloists.

Members of the glee club who sang were: Clifford, Templeton, J. Parker, Pearson, Somers, Teer, Humphries, Barrett, Noe, Stumpf, Hunt, Stahr, Anderson, Goodwin, Sawyer, Midget, Isley, Wright, Farmer, Davis, Barnett, Davids, Brietz, and Mann.

R. B. HOUSE TO ADDRESS LIBRARY ASSOCIATION

More than fifty librarians and library officials are expected to attend the district meeting of the North Carolina Library association today at the H. Leslie Perry Memorial library in Henderson.

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, will be the luncheon speaker. He will speak on "The Library and The World Today."

DR. FRASER TALKS ON DISARMAMENT

Half of Total Revenue of World
Used for Upkeep of Military Forces, Professor Says.

"One half of the total revenue of the nations of the world is spent for the upkeep of war materials and armaments," declared Dr. K. C. Fraser of the history department yesterday before the student assembly in a speech on the subject of disarming the world.

"Great Britain maintains a great cruiser fleet for her vast colonial empire; the United States bears the burden of a large battleship fleet for communication between the mainland, Honolulu, and Manila; and France is armed to the teeth for the sake of protection," he affirmed.

Continuing he said that the problem of disarming fifty-five nations, each with different interests to consider, was a very difficult one to say the least; and he also mentioned the fact that Seven Biographies.

Phillips Russell's biographical sketches of seven of the most notable men in history made their initial appearance last week under the title of Harvesters, published by Brentano's.

The lives of Frederick Caesar, Leonardo da Vinci, Copernicus, Luther, Thomas Jefferson, Cortes, and James Watt are sketched by Russell.

The Foreword presents the idea that inspired the volume: "The men who figure in this book are those who began, furthered, or completed a harvest; a harvest of thought or deed, or both, in a way to influence human destinies."

Each Chapter a Study

Each of the sketches is at the same time an interesting narrative, a dramatic story of the man's struggles and achievements, and a study of the significance of his career both to his

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS WILL MEET IN RALEIGH

The North Carolina section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will gather for its fall meeting Friday, November 4, at State college.

Dr. E. C. Brooks, president of State college, will open the meeting with an address of welcome to be followed by speeches by some of the leading authorities of the south on electrical engineering. John E. Lear, chairman of the organization, states that approximately 250 members will be present.

TAGS ARE DISTRIBUTED BY SELF-HELP BUREAU

Automobile tags resembling a large copper penny and bearing the picture of Franklin D. Roosevelt are now being distributed to those desiring to become members of the Roosevelt motor club. The tags are priced at one dollar and are being sold by the students' self-help bureau. All money subscribed will go to the national headquarters to aid in financing the campaign.

INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL CONVENES

Red Cross Drive Inaugurated
And Discussion of Rushing Complaints Heard.

An effort to improve the present regulations for rushing season was made last night at a meeting of the Interfraternity council. All fraternities were asked to hand in notes on any complaints they had concerning the regulations as they now stand, and if possible to include any suggestions they may have for improving the faulty rules.

A Red Cross drive was also started at the meeting. It was announced that at the next meeting the fraternities will be given Red Cross cards so that if any members decided to join, they easily could.

A further discussion was held on co-operative buying for the fraternities. It is believed that the lodges can economize a great deal if they buy together in large quantities, and thereby get much cheaper prices.

NEWSPAPER INSTITUTE'S PLANS TO BE DISCUSSED

Plans for the next annual mid-winter Newspaper Institute will be discussed here this morning by members of the executive committee of the North Carolina Press Association and the University Committee on the Institute.

The officers of the Institute are: John A. Park, publisher of the Raleigh Times, president; R. E. Price, publisher of the Rutherfordton Sun, vice-president; and Miss Beatrice Cobb, publisher of the Morganton News-Herald, secretary.

Boyles Appoints New Executive Committee

An entirely new executive committee of the junior class has been selected by Clyde E. Boyles who was appointed president of the class two weeks ago by Haywood Weeks, president of the student body. The appointment was made to fill the vacancy left by Webster Collett who was elected last spring but failed to return to school.

L. O. Tyree is chairman of the new committee which will replace the previously chosen one.

Adams to Deliver Address

Dr. Raymond Adams of the University English department left yesterday for the Flora Macdonald college at Red Springs, where he will deliver the Founders' Day address. The college is observing Scott's centenary, and Dr. Adams, widely known as an authority on the writer, will speak in connection with Scott's influence in the south.

Students And Faculty Recommend Gravel Walk To Graham Memorial

Although Report of Union Forum Committee and Statements by Faculty Ground Experts Favor New Path, All Oppose Paths Worn Elsewhere Across Campus.

That which has been a campus habit has become an official necessity. A drive by the Union Forum for elimination of paths across the campus has caused students and officials to express a desire for a gravel walk connecting Graham Memorial and the entrance to the campus beside Battle on Franklin street. The new walk would do away with the path which has marred the approach to Graham Memorial since the building was opened last year.

The grounds committee of the Union Forum reported recently that it was in favor of such a walk, but that it would continue requesting students not to walk on the grass. The committee, appointed to consider measures to induce students to refrain from creating unsightly paths across the campus, deplored the fact that short-cuts detrimental to the grass are used despite an extensive system of gravel walks. A walk to Graham Memorial, however, was considered imperative.

Lack Funds for New Walk

According to Dr. W. C. Coker, chairman of the faculty committee on grounds, it will be some time before the grounds department will have funds to construct a new walk even if plans to do so are adopted. The matter of a new walk to facilitate access to the union building was discussed last year after its completion, but on account of low finances no concrete proposal was acted upon.

NO ADMISSION TO BE CHARGED FOR BOETHIUS TALK

Famous Archaeologist Will Deliver Illustrated Lecture in Memorial Hall Tuesday.

According to arrangements made yesterday by the Student Entertainment committee, the illustrated lecture to be presented here Tuesday night by Axel Boethius, widely known archaeologist, will be open to the public without charge. This announcement was made by Dean A. W. Hobbs, chairman of the group.

The lecture was originally scheduled as an affair requiring tickets. As it was felt that comparatively few students are willing to pay admission to an entertainment of this type and as little expense is incurred in bringing the lecturer here, the committee decided to make the change.

Students who hold pass books will not be required to bring them for admission to the lecture, which will be the second feature of the series of entertainments sponsored by the Student Entertainment committee.

Boethius, who will speak on the study of archaeology, is recognized as one of the outstanding men in the field today. He is now in America at the invitation of the Archaeological Institute of America and, while here, will deliver a series of lectures on Roman domestic architecture and the problems of the small town of Rome in ancient times.

Made Liberal By Comparison

The University of North Carolina is noted as, to use a very trite expression, the center of liberalism in the south. The fact that "in the south" is invariably a part of this phrase must give rise to the thought that the south must be in some way noted for an unliberal and narrowminded attitude. Wisconsin and California tho in all probability more liberal than Carolina are never spoken of as the centers of mid-western or far-western liberalism. It is an unfortunate fact that the south is laboring under a reputation for conservatism, but it is a reputation that is a just one for we do lag behind in our attitude to education and progress.

The University of North Carolina's career has been one of constant struggle against reactionary forces which have been overcome only thru great bravery and doggedness of purpose of our leaders who have been ever ready and willing to risk their positions in the cause of liberal education. It is their efforts and their success that have earned us the reputation we now enjoy.

There is very little going on in Chapel Hill, however, that would mark us as particularly liberal in the eyes of the nation. There are no courses given nor organizations fostered whose being calls for any tremendous tolerance on the part of our citizens. Free love and atheism, the bogies that haunt the dreams of Tatum and Clark are practically unknown to the student body. There are practically no insidious forces at work intended to alienate the students from the ways of righteousness, the Democratic party or the sanctity of the home. On the contrary there is little here that might ruffle the most reactionary, crabbed, hardshelled, and dyed-in-the-wool, ultra conservative.

The constant attempts of outsiders to purify the University have had two outstanding results. One is the focusing upon them of the publicity they so avidly crave and with it the contempt of educated people throughout the country. The other result is the acquisition of a reputation for the University that is but partly deserved, a reputation for liberalism in the midst of persecution and bigotry.—J.F.A.

Smile And Pray

The frantic efforts of the Republican party to anesthetize the people of the United States with regard to monetary conditions can be understood if not approved of.

Economists throughout the world have agreed generally on many causes of depressions. What is more, they have made suggestions which, if followed, would in a few years leave us practically immune from fluctuations. Removal of tariff barriers at some future date would allow all producers who could not meet competition under free trade to enter a business where competition would be practical. No student of economics can argue against the advantages of mass production in those countries least adapted to the production of those particular products.

Immediate cancellation of war debts would have little effect upon the individual population of the country. The total amount, if divided among our total population, would total a little over two dollars apiece. Were these debts cancelled, changes in exports and imports would be felt here and abroad. The only way that Germany has had of paying her debt has been through increasing her exports over her imports. This has necessarily brought about a lowering of the standard of living among her people in addition to a decrease in every country's exports to her. Where we have gained in direct compensation, we have lost indirectly through a marked decrease in our exports.

Blackett, English economist, suggests long time planning with regard to production. He also approves of price stabilization through control by the government instead of the general trend through producers. Regular occurrences of industrial fluctuation at shorter intervals shows that our present system lacks equilibrium. Why not attempt to change those things which are the causes of such chaos?

Why is it that the major political parties of the country fail to consider such items? There are probably several reasons. Being old parties, they feel that any departures from precedent would cause loss of power. Real changes come about through the younger generations and the new parties. It is very seldom that a political party becomes a turn coat. Instead, its adherents change to a newer party and the older one dies.

Any actual changes must bring results rather slowly. For this reason it is impractical for the political party in power to sow where profits cannot be reaped in the same season. The only thing for them to do is to bolster up credit, instill, if possible, a high pressure area in the nation's financial barometer, assume the prosperity smile, and pray for the confidence of the common people.—L.M.J.

Chip on The Shoulder

In the newspapers of the country reference is repeatedly made to the Socialists as the third major political party of the United States, and on the University of North Carolina campus they have been regarded with equal consideration. Even more, the Socialist party in the straw ballot conducted by THE DAILY TAR HEEL recently has polled a larger vote than ever before—all of which goes to show that people in general not only either tolerate, accept, or sympathize with their views but are becoming increasingly conscious of the potential power of the party.

But the recent attitude of the Socialists on this campus toward newspaper comment has been one of unwarranted belligerency. They misconstrue it for prejudice, keep ear to the ground and chip on shoulder for remarks which they seem to think are to the detriment of the party. No such crusading has been intended by THE DAILY TAR HEEL; it is a student publication which in such matters adopts a non-partisan attitude.

One of the self-professed needs of the Socialist party is to awaken public interest in and knowledge of their principles. Indications show favorably that it is at least on the way toward realizing this need. But until the Socialists here get rid of the idea that no attacking or making-light of their activities is meant by either editorials or news write-ups, they jeopardize the chance of presenting their principles to an unbiased public. Continual cross-fire of editorial opinion and open forum correction will eventually lead to misunderstanding. At any rate, it will gain nothing and it may lose the prestige which the Socialists now enjoy.

Constantly finding fault is one way to stir up trouble, and notoriety is one way to fame. But to accomplish a desirable end by either of these means is impossible without unfavorable publicity.—A.T.D.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

Dancers

Most insistent have been several of our four readers that we write a little piece about the Graham Memorial weekly dances, where democracy runs rampant and fifteen co-eds demolish their formerly inferiority complexes. So we went down to the dance in the lounge room the other evening and report a right good time. Junior politicians stalked about with foolish grins and ready back-slaps, you couldn't dance more than half a step with any one lady, and the dance committee toured the floor with noses alert for the slightest whiff of forbidden nectar. Everyone was pretty sociable and democratic, standing on new furniture and dislocating pictures of past presidents to hear the crooning-trio. We urge that the Young Democrats club sponsor the next soiree of this nature.

Voters

Someone tipped us off to the article in the November Forum dealing with the presidential preferences of some fifty authors, which, annotated by several of the campus political-opinionated, is lodged in the library files. So we hurried down there yesterday at chapel hour and bring you some of our findings. It seems that Forum, desirous of gleaming the political leanings of representative literati (those who had contributed in the past to their magazine) conducted a canvass and listed their contributors with opinions on the coming November fiasco. Such writer-folk as Struthers (I was a Hoover Man) Burt, Henry Seidel Canby, Will Durant, Julia Peterkin, George Jean Nathan, Clarence Darrow, Marcus Duffield and forty-odd others seem to have some pretty conclusive convictions on the affairs of our government.

The annotators, one using a red pencil and the other a stout Rooseveltian 3B black, had added peppy little comments to the political pronouncements of the various writers.

The black pencil gentleman had underlined such as "I am in favor of Roosevelt for president because we have had four years of Hoover," and "once upon a time I was a Republican but because of . . . I have now decided to join the Democratic ranks etc." He even had various programs of the writers numbered and underlined. A good Democrat.

But the red pencil was inclined to be a bit doubtful. He had Randolph Spreckel's "so long as the American people are content to be mere voting cogs in the political machines, I feel no urge to name my choice for president," and another's (guess who) . . . "So far as Hoover and Roosevelt go, I have been able to discern nothing in either that merits the vote of any intelligent patriot . . . I shall therefore deprive myself of the pleasure of attending the polls in November" all lined in red with the notation "me too!"

This we think, is a real way to register protest. Don't vote Thomas, don't vote Foster, but just sneak off and mark up the November Forum with a red pencil.

THESE COLUMNISTS!

This Mayne Stream

If all my readers will listen very close, I will give them some very exclusive scandal about that young man in the red necktie who—but I guess I had better not do it.

Jake Smith, Hank Jones, Fred Johnson, Tommy Watkins were looking in a window down town yesterday. They're my friends and all nice fellows. When they were there, Lucy Jones, Hallie Craven, Nellie Burns, and Kate Brown walked by. My! My!

Since I have been writing my column, many of my friends have dropped into Graham Memorial (Room 100) and told me that they liked it.

Room 100 Graham Memorial is occupied by the manager of our fine new student union this year.

Sour Times

It is doubtful if, and which, howsoever they might thus and henceafter try, that they will, if it may then become evident, that they then will actually then regress. Roosevelt seems a sure thing. Right! Just! But Hoover will have none of these and this. Henceforth (and the Dole must be borne in mind—if not in body) and thereafter.

Uncle Sam (the United States) will shortly build (construct, make) a new bridge with 170,002 tons of steel, 40,000,000 something, and cement. Also a lot of sand and wire and lumber and gravel. My goodness! That will take a lot of men. It will relieve un-employment (the depression) and will help lots of people (citizens of the United States) to financial stability (get back on their feet).

I have read a lot of really good literary books lately. In my next column I will prove it by listing about fifty of the most outstanding ones of today. My friends are always chiding me about reading so many good books and knowing so much about everything!

Lifeless Letters

The little delightful town of Chapel Hill is indeed a sleepy little delightful place in which to live. The soirees in the salons are really bonne et belle. I mean, in all their delightfulness, they are simply too charming!

Swinburne, Hardy, Stevenson, and Kipling are delightful writers. They have charming styles. Literary writing is too fascinating! I adore Schopenhauer. One has simply not lived until one has read Schopenhauer's Essays. As the saying is: abest studia in mores!

I eschew verbosity. The mark of a litterateur is that he confine his vocabulary within understandability by frequent latin quotations.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

A Freshman Speaks On Cheering

Being a freshman, I have some hesitancy in voicing my opinion on any subject that could be dealt with more intelligently by the older men at the University. However, I believe that there are numerous freshmen who feel as I do about the matter of disorganized cheering.

I have noticed that a compact mass of rosters, say three hundred, all cheering in unison, can make more real noise than a whole stadium full of rosters interspersed between alumni, visitors, and other students who have lost interest in rooting for the team. Why can't we have some organization like the "Cheerios"? I can remember that organization, and it always impressed me when I viewed football games here at Carolina. It would appear to me that the freshmen this year could be as cooperative and loyal to the team, and to the University, as any of the preceding classes.

I believe that if the student body would really back up the team to the limit, the team would fight to the last ditch for the school. It is true that we have lost several games this year, but the team has always done its apparent best, and it must be said in fairness that the team has done as well "by" the student body as the student body has done by the team. If we give the team our undivided support, and let them, or "it," know that we are behind it, win, lose, or draw, I believe that we can take State, Florida, and Duke and end the season in a most creditable fashion.

I would not desire to have membership in this proposed organization made compulsory. There are some men in the freshman class who may think it undignified to belong to such an organization. Personally, I am not in favor of too much dignity, as I believe that it causes one to miss plenty of fun. I know that I should like to belong to a team-assisting gang, and I believe that there are many other freshmen (and perhaps sophomores) who would agree with me.

JESSE PARKER.

Consider Him

Nominated, Then

Mr. A. H. Graham, next lieutenant-governor of North Carolina, should be nominated to the Hall of Fame for at least three reasons: for his admirable statement, "I shall not go into the fundamental differences between the Democratic and Republican parties as it would take too much time here"; for his opinion that the Democratic platform is clear-cut and plain in that it definitely proposes repeal of the eighteenth amendment, while the Republican platform suggests resubmission only; for a talk lasting a full hour containing no single constructive idea and saying in substance, "The Republican rule has not been good for the country and we need a change." All present were amazed to discover that wheat has been selling for fifty cents per bushel, that Hoover has a weakness for appointing investigating committees, and that there are 12,000,000 unemployed, some of whom will not live comfortably this winter, which, in the opinion of Mr. Graham, is "pathetic." Mr. Graham further warned us to beware of certain Republican candidates who have nothing to say.

Such vital issues as government ownership and operation of industry for public good rather than for private gain; the "repealing" of unemployment; social insurance; the betterment of industrial labor conditions through the six-hour day, the five-day week, the abolition of child labor and the night shift, government employment agencies; the amelioration of farm problems, by planned farming, government marketing, refinancing of farm debts, lightening land taxes; and all the other critical issues, best summarized in the platform of the Socialist party, were ignored by the speaker; whether deliberately or through ignorance, I do not know.

Mr. Graham's final effort to cover up the kindergarten aspect of his speech was by the portrayal of three young gentlemen, aged six, four, and two, respectively. Mr. Six stands for less castor oil, Mr. Four for less breakfast food, and Mr. Two for more bottle-fed babies, as he gets tired of cigarette ashes falling in his face.

Mr. Graham's speech was well applauded. No doubt the Young Democrats present considered that if Mr. Graham's constructive program were carried out, the millenium would be reached in ten years.

VERNON WARD.

Back Again

I would like to say a few words in reply to the letters by R. B. House, Mary Dirnberger, and R. B. Downs in your Saturday issue.

Mr. Downs' defenses seem to be two in number: first, that a student assistant used some of the working time of himself and his fellows in dispensing Socialist material, including Thomas-for-President badges; and second, that the ban on the wearing of political insignia by assistants while on duty was a non-partisan measure which was not aimed specifically at the Socialists.

With regard to the first of these contentions, the use of University time, I am in accord

Henry Sullivan Victor In Intramural Cake Race

Prominent Member of Sullivan
And Company Leads Field to Win Ninth Annual Race.

CARRAWAY RUNS SECOND

Keeney, Napier, Traverton, Bost
And Vandell Are Others Finishing in the Cakes.

Leading a field of almost a hundred, Henry Sullivan of Phi Delta Theta was installed as victor in the ninth annual intramural Cake Race yesterday during the halves of the State-Carolina frosh grid tilt.

Runs Fast Race

Sullivan turned in the exceptional time of 7:36 for the 1.8 mile course. W. W. Carraway, running for Lewis dormitory, was a full seventy-five yards behind the winner. Carraway was timed at 7:44. Other finishers in the initial ten with organizations, are as follows: Barnaby Keeney, Sigma Chi; Bennett Napier, Best House, William Traverton, Best House; Thomas Bost, Sigma Nu; Bill Vandell, New Dorms; D. B. Fox, Old East; G. Stratford Donnell, Best House; and H. L. Umstead, Mangum. All of these lads who finished in the initial ten will receive passes to the Carolina theatre as a special consideration of E. Carrington Smith, manager; they will receive medals from the intramural department as exhibits of their prowess; and they will be entertained at the home of "Dean" G. H. Paulson Tuesday night at a supper prepared by Mrs. Paulson.

Lewis Has Most Entrants

Lewis Dorm had the largest number of men entered—fourteen—for which they received a cake. Best House received cakes in two departments, one being for the lowest team tally card, the other being for the largest number of men to finish in the initial fifty. Other team placers are given with their positions: second, Lewis; third, A. T. O.; fourth, Phi Kappa Sigma; fifth, New Dorms; sixth, Sigma Nu; seventh, Carolina House. The first five named won cakes.

The remainder of the finishers in the first fifty in order of finishing and their organizations, are as follows:

R. M. Neal, Grimes; Mark Lynch, Sigma Nu; Morton Hillier, Lewis; Richard McPhail, Phi Kappa Sig; L. B. Conte, New Dorms; W. T. Pijanowski, Aycock; R. L. Henson, Old East; A. Mark, Lewis; Alan A. Smith, A. T. O.; H. Garrison, Ruffin; F. Parker, Phi Kappa Sigma; G. Rogers, Chi Psi; J. C. Rob-

LOTT TO CONTEST BERNIE FRIEDMAN IN FINALS MATCH

Minor and Levitan Lose One-Sided Contests in Semi-Finals
Yesterday.

Friedman and Lott will play off the final match of the tennis placement tournament Monday at 3:00 o'clock. The match will be three sets out of five.

Thursday Friedman defeated Levitan, 6-3, 6-1, 6-3. Friedman with his very consistent game, made easy work out of Levitan. From the beginning of the match it was easy to see that Levitan could never hold his own against the easy going Friedman.

The match between Minor and Lott was as one-sided as the one between Levitan and Friedman. In the first set Lott took four games before Minor scored and then after Minor had taken two games Lott tightened up and won the set, 6-2. In the second set Minor did better but fell down in the pinch moments to lose, 6-4. In the last set Lott tightened up and took a love set, winning the match, 6-2, 6-4, 6-0.

Intersectional Day is here at last. Today's games will more than ever display the football talent of one section of the country against another. In the east there are Purdue against New York university, Michigan State-Syracuse, Wake Forest-Delaware, Oglethorpe-Manhattan, and Army-William and Mary, while in the west, Princeton meets Michigan.

Nor will these intersectional games hold the complete spotlight this afternoon with Notre Dame-Pitt, Dartmouth-Yale, Northwestern-Minnesota, and Duke-Tennessee also on the program.

State-Carolina

This is the outstanding grid battle in the state today. After the performances of both teams last week, it's hard to predict a Tar Heel victory. But waiting for Carolina to start going places on the hunch that this trip starts today, one slim vote for North Carolina.

Duke-Tennessee

Off-hand, this game looks like a breeze for the Vols, but Major Bob Neyland thought the Devils were serious enough to merit personal attention. There's no doubting but that our neighbors have a better than average ball club, and the Vols will have to step fast to win the decision. Three cheers for Duke but the verdict for Tennessee.

Anburn-Mississippi

This will be a breeze for the leading scorers in the nation.

Vandy-Georgia Tech

The Commodores are dedicating their new stadium. Usually the school doing the dedicating takes a beating, and there is every chance in the world that this will happen today, especially with the new lease on life that the Jackets have taken. The writer believes that Henderson and Roberts will be a little too strong for Coach Bill Alexander's squad. But it will be mighty close.

Michigan-Princeton

The Wolverines have been improving with every game, and today should find them at their peak. Coupled with the fact that Princeton has been playing erratic ball and that the game will be played in Ann Arbor, one determined vote for Michigan.

Yale-Dartmouth

The Elis have yet to win a game this year, but there is a general feeling that Yale's jinx over the Big Green will prevail again today. In spite of that, we'll take the team from Han-

TWO STATE LUMINARIES

Captain "Red" Espey, left, and Bob Greason, right, two outstanding stars in the Wolfpack forward wall who will be seen in action today. Espey is the center who has monopolized the line play of the Pack this year and will meet stellar opposition today in June Underwood. Greason is the end whom Coach Clipper Smith uses as his star punter.

State and Carolina are all set for the tussle this afternoon on Kenan field at 2:30 o'clock which will bring the two schools together for the twenty-fourth time. This year State is favored to trim the Tar Heels by virtue of their impressive win over the Florida Gators last week in Gainesville.

The Tar Heels have shown a vast improvement during the past week and they will be out to pull the surprise the Wolfpack did last year in the memorable 18-15 contest in Raleigh. Coach Collins said yesterday that the squad was in the best of spirits and that he looked for the Tar Heels to open up today.

New Backs to Play

Martin and Burnett, two of the newly-fashioned quarterbacks, have been showing real drive and power in their work during the week and should see a lot of action today. The starting lineup of the Carolina team was unsettled last night but the one above is probable with the possible exception of the backs and the right end.

Coach Clipper Smith has been running his men hard also and though his team is favored he anticipates a close and excellent game. The Wolfpack will be weakened by the injury to Bob McQuage which may keep the stellar quarterback on the sidelines for most of the fray. It was McQuage that last year caused the Tar Heels so much trouble with his punt returning.

The highly-touted Rex will get a chance to prove his worth this afternoon when he will show the fans whether he can drag such tacklers as Barclay, Smith, Hodges and Underwood around as he has been doing other opposition. The Pack also has a pass combination of Roy to McAdams which will bear watching.

MOHLER'S CAREER ON GRIDIRON CUT SHORT BY INJURY

Famous Southern California Quarterback Drops Football Because Of Injury to Vertebrae.

The football career of Orville Mohler, one of the greatest quarterbacks the University of Southern California ever had, is over. The bane of many great football stars, the old injury jinx has its grip on Mohler. The quarterback who guided Southern California to the mythical championship of the country last year, and led it to five straight victories this year, has been ordered off the field by physicians in order to prevent possible paralysis or even death.

While leading interference in last Saturday's game with Stanford, Mohler was knocked unconscious. The tissues which hold together the fifth and sixth vertebrae in the neck were slightly pulled apart. Last year Mohler was injured in the same place while running the ball against California. He was kept out of the game that time for two weeks.

The injury was explained by Dr. Packard Thurber, team physician, thus: "The injury amounts to a crushing of the intervertebral disc between the two vertebrae. This condition coupled with a certain amount of relaxation of the neck ligaments, make Mohler more susceptible to serious injury."

Mohler commented on the matter in a disappointed manner. "There isn't much a fellow can say," Mohler commented. "I have worked seven years to make my senior year the biggest and best of my college career and it is awful to have to go out like this, but I am convinced it is the right thing to do."

Coach Howard Jones who is ever reluctant to heap praise on any individual player said, "Mohler is one of the greatest quarterbacks I ever coached. I have never seen a better ball carrier any place, but the last thing I would do would be to sacrifice a boy to win a football game. For his sake I hate to see him drop out."

New Goals Erected

Two basketball goals were erected yesterday on the new girls' playground opposite the arboretum. The ground has not hardened sufficiently to allow any games as yet, but it is expected that the court will be in readiness early next week. Surveyors have been at work making a map of the proposed soccer field for use by the committee.

Tar Babies Battle Wolflets To Standstill In Fierce 6-6 Deadlock On Kenan Field

Raines, State Halfback, Intercepts Pass and Gallops 101
Yards for First Score.

TAR BABIES LACK PUNCH

Fail to Score Twice From Inside
Four Yard Line; Arthur Takes Pass for Score.

In a contest which had more thrills for the spectators than they could possibly hope for, Carolina's fighting freshman team scored in the last few minutes of play to tie a much bigger State yearling team 6-6. State's touchdown also came in the last quarter as a result of Raines' 101-yard dash after intercepting a Tar Baby pass.

State's marker came with about five minutes to play after the Wolflets had checked two Tar Baby threats inside the five yard line. Late in the third period Pendelton and McCachern made fifteen and twenty yards on two plays carrying the ball to State's 20-yard line; after two line plays failed, a Tar Baby pass was grounded behind the goal as the quarter ended.

State couldn't gain and punted to Womble who took it on the fifty-yard line and made a beautiful run to State's twenty-yard line. A pass, Phelps to Brown, put the ball on the five-yard line. Here the Wolflets braced and held for downs, kicking out to Pendelton who brought it back to the eighteen-yard stripe. Another pass Phelps to Arthur put the ball on the four-yard marker. Two plays and a penalty gave the ball to Carolina on the one-yard line. Phelps then threw another pass and this time Raines intercepted the ball behind his own goal and dashed down the side lines a 101-yards for a touchdown. The Techlet halfback fell to the ground in a daze at the finish of the great run. A kick for extra point failed.

Tar Babies Come Back

The battle looked like a lost cause as far as the Tar Babies were concerned but the Carolina yearlings still had plenty of fight. After intercepting another pass State started a second drive for a marker but were held for downs and the ball went to Carolina on its own twenty. On the first play, Phelps shot a pass to Arthur on the fifty-yard line. After one line buck, Phelps shot another pass to Arthur who took the ball on State's thirty-yard line and then dashed the remaining distance for the only Tar Baby marker. A pass failed to get the extra point.

State Leads in First Half

The first half was all State's. Twice the Tar Babies held them inside Carolina's ten-yard stripe. State's first rally came early in the contest with the second team playing for Carolina. This rally was featured by the running of Womble, one run being twenty-two yards. The second threat came a little later after the first team had gone in. Warren's passing and running was the feature of this threat. The Tar Babies got only one first down in the first half and this was made just as the whistle blew.

Joyce, Carolina guard, made the outstanding play on defense. Early in the third quarter the Tar Baby guard rushed through the State line and single-handed blocked a Wolflet kick. Evins, Denti, and Arthur also turned in good gains in the Carolina line. Pendelton and McCachern did the outstanding work in the Tar Baby backfield. Pendelton rushed through the Techlet line time after time to mess up State's offensive plays. Besides Raines' run the work of Warren and Womble was best in the Wolflet backfield.

Sport Staff Meets

There will be an important meeting of the sports staff of THE DAILY TAR HEEL this morning at 10:30 in Graham Memorial. Anyone wishing to try out for the staff is asked to attend this meeting.

Brooks to Attend Game

President E. C. Brooks of State college, and party, will be among the prominent spectators at today's annual State-Carolina football game. They will share the guest box at Kenan stadium. Several deans of State will also be in attendance.

TEACHERS BUREAU FINDS POSITIONS FOR GRADUATES

All But Eleven Graduates of Education School Here Are Placed as Teachers.

Although there were fewer vacancies this year than ever before in the history of the state, the Teachers Bureau has succeeded in placing as teachers seventy-nine out of ninety graduates from the school of education last year, twenty-six from other schools of the University, and 165 from summer school, making a total of 260 in all. Of the eleven from the school of education who were not placed some have returned to the law and graduate schools.

Those who were graduated last year and have been placed are as follows: W. W. Angel, Bee Log; Roscoe C. Barrett, Murphy; Paul D. Beam, Calypso; C. W. Blackwood, Saluda; Cloyd E. Blythe, Belmont; Tempe B. Boyd, extension division of U. N. C. library; Thomas Cann, Bryan; M. S. Clary, Littleton; Mary E. Carter, Chiquapin; W. T. Crutchfield, Columbia; Helen Dorch, Southern Pines; Jesse P. Edwards, Paw Creek; W. G. Egerton, Saluda; E. H. Gibson, Long Creek; Annie L. Hudson, Statonburg; M. N. Hunter, Paw Creek; T. S. Jenrette, Greensboro; Betty Jones, Carthage; R. F. Johnston, Burgaw; J. McIver Lane, Southern Pines; C. H. Lennon, Jr., Dillon, S. C.; J. P. Lentz, Wilson; J. D. Linker, Clemens; C. V. McKinney, Yanceyville; M. T. McDaniel, Albemarle; Louise McKinney, Samarcand; W. L. Mason, Jr., Newton; Van Meares, Catawba county; Frances Mercer, Warsaw; L. W. Midgett, Aberdeen; Charlotte Miles, Southern Pines; W. W. Morgan, E. C. T. C.; H. B. Mulkey, Plymouth; Grace Noble, Aurelian Springs; Rose Noble, Aurelian Springs; Jo Norwood, Wilson; E. L. Piver, Warsaw; Julian Raper, Ellerbe; J. J. Sanderson, Asheboro; Mrs. Bess Shewbert, Parson county; J. D. Shields, Siler City; H. E. Stephens, Murphy; Alice M. Stutz, Southern Pines; D. J. Whitener, Granite Falls; B. S. Westall, Fletcher; W. T. Whittett, McLeansville; W. R. Whittenton, Brighton.

GERMAN MOVIE WILL BE SHOWN HERE TOMORROW

The department of Germanic languages has called the attention of its students and faculty to a German talking cinema, "Den Konzert," which will be shown at the Carolina theatre Sunday evening at 9:30 o'clock. In addition to this, two reels of "A Trip Through the Rhine Valley" will be presented.

The showing of German pictures follows the considerable success of the Romance language department in sponsoring "A Nous La Liberte," a French production, last week. All who are interested in German are asked to attend as the audience must be large enough to make further showing of German pictures worth while.

Dr. Hunt Visits Here

Dr. Henry F. Hunt, who was affiliated with the medical school of the University while J. B. Bullitt was on leave of absence, was a visitor in Chapel Hill last week.

Burlington Mills Furnish Material For Forthcoming Playmakers Drama

Costumes in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Play Soon to Be Presented, to Be as Near Exact Replicas of Old-Fashioned Clothes As Possible With Materials on Hand.

Costuming the large number of characters in Uncle Tom's Cabin has proved a big job for the Carolina Playmakers, but under the direction of Mrs. Harry Davis, the costuming department of the organization promises to have every member of the cast correctly attired when the production is presented November 3, 4, and 5.

The costume room, a part of the scene shop located in Person hall, has been the scene of great activity during the past two weeks. Mrs. Davis, assisted by Ellen Stewart of Shreveport, has been busy day and night directing the making of costumes.

Fifty Costumes Used

Uncle Tom's Cabin calls for fifty different costumes, ranging from the rags of the slaves to the lovely period gowns of the ladies. All of these costumes including the wigs, are made on the campus, nothing being rented.

Mrs. Davis has bought a large amount of material in Burlington direct from mills there. She can find materials there which would be hard to find elsewhere.

Much of the material was intended for uses far different from what it will receive in the plays. For instance, one of Marie's dresses is made from plaid cloth intended for men's scarf's while some student may find that his tie is a part of the goods which Ophelia's dress has been made.

Some of the material used has been used in past productions, and some of the period gowns and furs have been donated. The men's costumes are to be made of upholstery material obtained at the mills while top hats will be made to match.

Laurel and Hardy Will Appear Today

Laurel and Hardy will be seen in their latest feature-length comedy, "Pack Up Your Troubles," at the Carolina theatre today.

These popular comedians portray entirely new characterizations. As a couple of vagrants, they are kidded into joining the army, and when once in olive drab, they find themselves involved in numerous predicaments.

They take everything seriously, especially in the army. They are aware of the fact that no questions must be asked. They must obey every command eagerly and enthusiastically. When the kitchen chef in a jocular mood tells them to take the garbage to the general's office, they proceed to do so and land in the guard house.

Still, the comedians are conscientious. They want to help win the war. They also want to become heroes, if possible, either naturally or through sheer luck; so they saunter across No Man's Land, and become entangled in a tank. They come back with a squad of prisoners, but don't know it. The prisoners... but to tell everything would undoubtedly spoil the enjoyment of the picture.

A special ten o'clock matinee program is being presented, so that football fans who are unable to attend the theatre at night may see the cinema.

DR. FRASER TALKS ON DISARMAMENT

(Continued from first page) The major problem at present is the guarantee of safety. The nations must have an absolute pledge from each other that any agreement at which they will arrive will be enforced before they can accept any terms, he said.

Dr. Fraser at Geneva

The speaker was well fitted to discuss the many problems falling within the scope of his subject, having attended the Disarmament Conference in Geneva during a recent trip to Europe.

He made notice of the fact in his address that much of the pessimism prevalent in this country regarding the arms problem was due to ignorance of the true problems and conditions that the delegates faced.

Redhead Club Elects This Year's Officers

At a meeting of the Redhead club, which took place Thursday evening, the following officers were elected: "Red" Rankin, president; "Red" Schumpert, vice-president; "Red" Boyles, secretary and treasurer; "Red" Dibblee, publicity agent, and an executive committee composed of "Red" Boyles, chairman, "Red" Barnard, and "Red" Rosser.

At the gathering Thursday it was decided that the regular meetings will convene every Monday at 8:00 o'clock in Gerard hall, and that they should be entertaining rather than formal in nature. The club has twenty-seven active members including representatives of nearly every athletic team and extracurricular activity on the campus.

The club has one co-ed member, and it is especially anxious to encourage more to join. Before Monday, a committee will draw up a constitution, and present it to the members at the next regular meeting.

HITCH-HIKERS ORGANIZE PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION

The University has been asked to join the Students Protective association, an organization for the protection of students who are trying to reduce traveling expenses to and from college by "hitch-hiking," and of the motorists who give rides to these students.

"Since most motorists do not object to giving rides to students," one of the circulars of the organization says, "the association plans to have its members carry an identification card to assure motorists that the person seeking the free transportation is a college student."

The organization, whose headquarters are located at 810-812 Citizens Bank Building, Norfolk, Virginia, states that the many advantages that may be derived from membership in the association are of greater value than the membership fee.

WEATHERFORD TO TALK AT METHODIST CHURCH

Willis Duke Weatherford, president of the Y. M. C. A. graduate school in Nashville, Tenn., will preach at the Methodist church Sunday morning.

NEW PORTRAITS IN LAW BUILDING

Two new portraits of John Iredell and James Shepard have recently been placed in the first year class room of the law building. The legal careers of these two men are closely connected with the history of North Carolina. John Iredell read law with his famous brother-in-law, Samuel Johnston in 1775. He was judge of the Superior court of North Carolina in 1777, and Attorney-General in 1779. He was an Associate Justice of the first Supreme Court of the United States in 1790.

James Edward Shepard studied law at the University in 1868. In 1894 he became an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina. He was on the faculty of the University teaching law in 1894, and was offered the deanship in 1899, but could not accept the offer.

Speaking Campus Mind

(Continued from page two) with Mr. Downs when he says that such a practice is inexcusable; I am certain that he found nothing in my remarks which might be construed as a defense of it. It is exceedingly ill-advised for students of unorthodox views thus to lay themselves open to attack. Nevertheless, the fact that an assistant misused his time does not offer anything in the way of justification of the ban on the wearing of buttons. The individual alleged to have been the offender in this connection could have been warned to be less zealous, and as for the others, Mr. Downs himself would probably not contend that a badge on the coat lapel of a librarian reduces his ability to find and pass out books.

As to Mr. Downs' insistence that the prohibition was not partisan, let me remind him again of the content of the original order which was so speedily replaced by the more tactful one. The first order notified library assistants that they might be Socialists, but that they were not to display their badges in the building. The order which replaced this one a few hours later informed the men that they are not to display badges of any political party while on duty in the library. Custom in other libraries notwithstanding, the pretension to neutrality in this particular case must be considered on the basis of the import of the first order. And with that I turn to the letters of Mr. House and Miss Dirnberger, both of which sprung from an incidental remark of mine in my discussion of the library situation.—E. E. Ericson, '31.

PHILLIPS RUSSELL WRITES SKETCHES

The chapter at the end of the volume entitled "The Background" is an essay upon the progress of Western thought in the Middle Ages and the modern era. How the advance of science overcame the dominance of the church, how the Crusaders resulted in the infiltration of Eastern ideas, how the intellectual stimulation was reflected in the establishment of schools and universities, mechanical inventions, and the expansion of trade, and the consequences of the amassing of great wealth by a limited class are discussed in this concluding chapter.

Perfect Bridge Hands Becoming Local Epidemic

John Callahan Draws Thirteen Diamonds in Session of Contract at Pika House.

This perfect bridge hand business is getting to be a local epidemic. Unwilling to let the members of the graduate club outstrip them, a quartet of students playing contract at the Pika house yesterday afternoon staged their own version of every bridge player's dream.

John Callahan, of Red Springs, still feels immensely exhilarated, if a trifle faint, at having held thirteen diamonds in one hand. To add to the mixture of emotions is his discomfort at having been the dealer of the perfect hand. However, three fraternity brothers rise to his defense. Hugh Sawyer, Ab Clark, and John Gorrell have all signified their willingness to sign affidavits testifying the complete absence of any foul play. Unless Callahan drugged his associates, their statements are to be considered as definite proof of the genuineness of his amazement at the phenomenon.

In fact all the participants were so stunned by his hoarse announcement of thirteen diamonds that they forgot to bid the hand. It is now a matter of hot dispute as to whether or not Callahan would have shrieked "Seven No Trump," had the experience not temporarily paralyzed his vocal faculties.

NORTH CAROLINA CLUB WILL BEGIN YEAR'S PROGRAM

Professor Coates Will Deliver Address at First Meeting On "Public Affairs."

The North Carolina club will convene for its first meeting Monday, October 31, at 7:30 o'clock in the library room of the rural social economics department. Professor Albert Coates, of the law school, outlining the plan of his Institute of Government, will give the first of a series of talks on public affairs in North Carolina, the topic around which the program of the North Carolina club centers this year.

The program last year dealt with taxation in North Carolina, and the sixteen papers presented before the club are being printed by the University press. The compilation will shortly be available for distribution.

Was Organized in 1914

Monday night's meeting inaugurates the nineteenth year of active service of this organization. It was started by Dr. E. C. Branson in the fall of 1914, and each year since that time the club has adapted some central theme of vital concern to the state and around this theme has developed its year's program. Each year the papers presented before the group have been published in the form of year-books which have been widely circulated over the state, and have been instrumental in bringing about improved economic, social and civic conditions throughout the state. Although most of the research is carried on by students, it has been the custom of the organization to have speakers who are prominent in social, civic, and economic circles.

The club exists to afford a means to become better acquainted with conditions and problems in North Carolina and to present a method whereby these conditions may be bettered.

Membership in the group, which meets bi-weekly during the school year, is open to everyone who is in sympathy with and interested in its programs.

Concerted Action Supports Drive For Better Cheering

Prominent Alumni, Faculty Members, and Students Feel Need for Reorganization of Group Similar to "Cheerios"; Mass Meeting Convened in Memorial Hall Tuesday.

Convinced that the fighting spirit of Carolina is not dead but has been merely dormant for the last few years, prominent alumni, faculty members and students are banding together in an effort to revive the Carolina "pep" of the past.

Much comment has been evoked on all sides for the past two or three years and especially this year by the apparent lack of spirit on the part of the student body. This has led to individual efforts on the part of persons interested in the University.

Will Reorganize Cheerios

The first step in the organized effort, starting last week, will be the remodeling of the once-famous "Cheerios." All students wishing to co-operate in this movement will gather in Memorial hall Tuesday at 7:00 o'clock to discuss plans for the

HILL'S PORTRAIT BY NOTED ARTIST GIFT TO LIBRARY

John Sprunt Hill, prominent alumnus of the University, presented a valuable portrait of himself to the University library this week. This portrait, which was painted by P. A. de Lazio, has been hung in the North Carolina room.

De Lazio is a famous portrait painter of world wide fame. He has studied in Munich and Paris under Liexenmayer and Lefebvre and has spent most of his life painting European royalty. He came to this country primarily to paint a portrait of Edison. However, Edison died before it could be completed, and it was at this time that Hill secured de Lazio's services.

The best known works of de Lazio are portraits of King Edward VII, Queen Alexandra, ex-Kaiser Wilhelm, ex-President Roosevelt, and Signor Mussolini. The University is fortunate to receive such a portrait.

Phi Assembly Will Discuss Three Bills

The Phi assembly will hold a regular meeting Tuesday night at 7:00 o'clock in the assembly hall on the fourth floor of New East building.

The bills that will be discussed are: Resolved: That the property of churches should be taxed and that minister's sons should be compelled to pay tuition at the University. Resolved: That the Phi assembly go on record as favoring the proposed amendments to the constitution which will be voted on in the general election in November. Resolved: That city-county consolidation be effected when it is possible in North Carolina.

H. M. BURLAGE GOES TO WASHINGTON MEETING

Dr. H. M. Burlage of the school of pharmacy will present a paper on "The Assay of Santonin" at a session of the annual meeting of the Association of Agricultural Chemists in Washington, D. C., tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dr. Burlage, who is an associate referee on drugs, will be accompanied by Mrs. Burlage.

Sedalia Singers Will Give Negro Spiritual Concert This Afternoon

Negro Singers From Palmer Memorial Institute Have Attracted Favorable Comment From Many Critics For Their Interpretations of Folk Songs of Their Race.

The Sedalia Singers will appear this afternoon in Memorial hall at 4:30 o'clock in a concert sponsored by the three cabinets of the University Y. M. C. A. Their program will be composed chiefly of negro spirituals for which they have won much favorable comment from newspapers in cities all over the nation where they have appeared.

The entire student body and townspeople are cordially invited to attend. Admission to these concerts is usually one dollar or more but Dr. Charlotte Brown, the manager, is giving the University audience this program without charge, hoping to cultivate friends who will give willingly to the cause which the singers represent, the support of the splendid Negro school at Sedalia founded by her and maintained by her efforts for the past thirty years. A free-will offering will be taken to defray traveling expenses.

Sedalia Is Near Greensboro

The singers come from the Palmer Memorial Institute at Sedalia, ten miles east of Greensboro. The National Theatre in Greensboro presents these singers annually in a public recital in their theatre, presenting them this year at the evening show on Thursday, October 27th. Dean W. C. Jackson of the school of public administration has been one of the patrons and sponsors.

DR. COFFMAN HOST AT RECEPTION FOR DEPARTMENT MEN

English Head Entertains Faculty and Graduate Students in His Department.

Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the English department, was host to the faculty and graduate students of his department at an informal reception in the lounge of Smith building Friday night.

Dr. Coffman first made some necessary announcements concerning departmental work, and spoke briefly on the ideals of the English department. He urged the graduate students to make full use of the facilities the University offers so as to maintain the high standard of scholarly work which has been done in the past.

He further stated that although our library is not as complete as that of Harvard or the University of Chicago, he believes that there is a closer and more beneficial contact between the graduate students and the faculty directors of the research.

Plan Future Meetings

Following this the graduate students entered into a general discussion of several proposed plans for later meetings to promote social contacts and to permit discussion of matters of interest to English students. This was followed by a discussion of humor in which both students and faculty joined.

Refreshments were served from 8:00 to 10:30. The Hal-lowe'en motif was used effectively in decorating the tables on which the refreshments were served.

for this annual program and recommends them to us on the Hill very highly.

The program follows:
The invocation: He shall have Dominion by Wilson which will be rendered by the mixed quartette.

Group I: Soon Ah will be done wid de Troubles of de Worl' a traditional piece, and By the Waters of Babylon, by Coleridge Taylor.

Group II (the male octette): I shall not be Moved and Good News, two traditional renditions.

Group III (the girl's octette): I Got Heaven in my View and You better let that Liar alone, two traditional works, and a spiritual rhythm, Swing Low, Sweet Chariot which is to be interpreted by Lillian Crawford.

Group IV: I Heard of a City called Heaven, composed by Hall Johnson, and Trees (with humming chorus) which will be rendered by Miss Amy Bailey, a soprano.

Group V: Walk Together, Children and O, Southland both of which are arrangements by Hall Johnson. Miss Bailey will sing the latter as a solo.

Group VI (community spirituals interpreted by Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, the manager, with J. C. Austin as a tenor soloist): I couldn't Hear Nobody Pray, Goin' to Build Right on that Shore, and Trampin'.

HEADS OF CAMPUS POLITICAL GROUPS WILL GIVE VIEWS

Next Week's Assemblies Will Be Turned Over to Students Upholding National Parties.

Pursuant to resolutions passed in the Di senate and Phi assembly, the leaders of the local student political organizations will have an opportunity to carry their several cases to the student body next week in assembly. With the rising tide of political thought and emotion, election being only a few days off, these student programs should be interesting to all students.

The Young Democrats will start Tuesday morning. Wednesday is devoted to the deans of the several undergraduate schools. Thursday the Young Republicans will present their case, and Friday the Young Socialists will have their say-so. A thorough and painstaking search by the president of the Phi failed to unearth a "Young Communist."

Rose Will Preside Friday
Speaker Dan Kelly of the Phi will preside Tuesday and Thursday mornings, while President Charles Rose will preside Friday morning.

Hamilton Hobgood will represent the Young Democrats; John Wilkinson, the Young Republicans; Ben Proctor, the Young Socialists. Proctor is at present in a Burlington hospital with a fractured skull incurred in an automobile accident. In case he cannot be present, Alton Lawrence has promised that the Young Socialists will be represented.

It should be noted that all these speakers are bona fide students registered in the University.

LIBRARY RECEIVES CONFEDERATE AND GREEK VOLUMES

The University library was the recipient this week of two valuable collections, one from Mr. William R. Howard of Baltimore and the other from Mrs. George W. Lay of Chapel Hill.

Mr. Howard's donation was a collection of over a hundred volumes on the Confederacy and was made through Dr. J. D. de Roulac Hamilton, who is in charge of the collection of literature relating to the south. It is a valuable addition to the library and contains a number of rare books.

The gift of Mrs. Lay was a collection of more than a hundred Greek books. It belonged to her husband, the late Dr. George Lay, who was a Greek scholar, and includes a number of minor Greek authors not represented in the library before. Both of these donations will be added to the general collections.

Di Senate Will Debate Minimum Wage Next

The Dialectic society will conduct its regular meeting Tuesday night at 7:00 o'clock in the senate hall in New West.

Bills on the calendar for discussion are: Resolved: That the Di senate go on record as favoring the classification of taxation in North Carolina.

Resolved: That the Di senate go on record as favoring the ruling of Secretary of Labor Doak prohibiting foreign students in the country from working in the vacation or parttime periods during the regular scholastic year.

Resolved: That the United States should adopt a minimum wage law.

Resolved: That the Di senate go on record as opposing the Grundy Tariff Measure.

Children's Books Reviewed

Miss Nora Beust, of the school of Library Science, was asked this week to review children's books for the Progressive Education Magazine. She has recently compiled a list of outstanding books for children for the "Bulletin" of the State Parent Teachers' Association.

Union Forum Represents Carolina Student Opinion

Method of Selection of Members Assures Every Student of Voice in Campus Affairs; Board Formed to Advise Graham Memorial Management But Has Assumed Other Duties.

Although the original purpose of the Union Forum was to select from its ranks three students to serve on the board of directors of Graham Memorial, the organization has proven so representative of the student body that it is now functioning as an advisory group to the student council.

The Forum was founded last year by Mayne Albright, then president of the student body and now manager of Graham Memorial. He served as the first president of the new association, but due to excessive duties this year Haywood Weeks has turned the executive office over to E. C. Daniel, vice-president of the student body.

Every Student Represented
It is the system of electing members to the Forum that makes it the most representative body on the campus. One

DR. WEATHERFORD Y. M. C. A. LEADER TO PREACH TODAY

President of 'Y' Graduate School At Nashville Is Guest of Local Organization.

The University of North Carolina Young Men's Christian Association will be host this week-end to Dr. Willis Duke Weatherford, president of the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School in Nashville, Tennessee, and for many years one of the most active "Y" workers in the south.

Dr. Weatherford will be the guest of the three "Y" cabinets during his sojourn here, and all of his appearances will be sponsored by the local association. He will be available for private conferences with any students so desiring. He has acquired a wide reputation as one of the most competent advisors to young men anywhere in the country.

Will Speak in Church

Dr. Weatherford's main appearance of his stay here will be this morning at 11:00 o'clock in the University Methodist church in a sermon to the Y. M. C. A. assembly, the congregation, and the general public. The subject of his sermon has not been announced yet. The Methodist church was chosen on account of its large seating capacity and its central location.

Dr. Weatherford will make several other appearances here over the week-end. He will address a joint assembly of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets, all young people's church societies, and the evening congregation in the Baptist church tonight at 7:45 p. m. The general public is also cordially invited to attend the gathering.

At 8:30 a. m. tomorrow morning he will talk to Professor Guy B. Johnson's class on the subject of "The Negro." Several other classes in the University will also have the privilege of hearing him during the day.

During the remainder of Monday morning and afternoon Dr. Weatherford will welcome any students desirous of personal interviews with him. These will be scheduled.

To Be Regretted

An insinuation was made in an editorial appearing in Friday's issue, which, although made with no idea whatsoever of being offensive or derogatory, has caused considerable indignation among members of the Hebrew race on the campus. THE DAILY TAR HEEL regrets that such a remark was allowed to slip into its columns and hastens to remind the students that the statement is not only not expressive of the attitude of the TAR HEEL, but it is also far from being the feeling of the student body.

The editorial made a somewhat unjust and uncalled-for intimation regarding the Hebrew students. It was meant only as a bit of humor, but it was unthoughtful that this should have been attempted at the expense of certain students on the campus.

The University of North Carolina student body has long been known for its policy of being entirely unprejudiced regarding race questions of this nature. And on no occasion whatsoever has any evidence of race prejudice towards the Jewish students been shown. In fact Carolina has often boasted of the fact that members of the Hebrew race have been attracted to Chapel Hill because of this unprejudiced student attitude.

In many schools throughout the country the Jewish students often find themselves at a handicap when they attempt to take part in student activities. But not so at the University. They take an active interest in activities on the campus, and in no other activity is their interest more pronounced than in THE DAILY TAR HEEL. Several members of the Hebrew race now hold positions of importance on the staff and are in many cases the most valuable men on the paper as well as in other extracurricular activities.

Every student on the campus, regardless of his race, is looked upon and treated as a Carolina gentleman. And the friendships formed here between student members of the Gentile and Jewish races are oftentimes the most lasting and beneficial made during college life.

More Promises

The absence of conscious individual responsibility for student government at the University of North Carolina is responsible for the latency of the system.

In former times, every member of the small student body knew every other student. The student officers, the members of the student council, were known by name and position to everyone. A sense of personal responsibility for campus affairs was impressed upon the students by this intimate relationship. Student government had a tangibility personified in the friend who sat at one's elbow in class and in the student councilman who sat three seats away.

In these times, that intimate contact with campus government is lost in the mass-without-weight of campus acquaintanceships. The student council exists only for the man who gets caught. It is difficult for students to retain faith in an institution which they cannot see.

In recent months, student leaders (especially Mayne Albright and Haywood Weeks) have been seeking means to re-create a feeling of self-governmental responsibility in individual students, to make student government really a government of and by the students. So far, out of their efforts has come little success.

But now that their objective is clear, success is imminent. Out of failure thrice met comes success.—E.C.D.

SPEAKING the CAMPUS MIND

Still Here

(This is the second portion of an open forum letter written by Mr. Ericson in rebuttal on the subject of Socialist discrimination on the University campus.—Ed.)

It is true that Mr. House's denial is correct as far as any formal order is concerned. Until recently the Socialists and many others on the campus were under the impression that Mr. House had issued such an order. The misunderstanding arose in this way. With Mr. Comer's permission, the Socialists were collecting signatures to their ballot petitions in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. At hours when no one of the number was able to be on duty, the Socialists posted a notice directing prospective signers to the Book Market, where Miss Dirnberger had for some time been keeping a petition. As Miss Dirnberger writes in her letter and as she told me last summer when I offered to take up the petition, she always considered it a private matter; furthermore, at no time was the onrush of would-be signers so great as to constitute an interference with Miss Dirnberger's university duties. No Socialists were in the building when Mr. House made the startling discovery that the Book Market "was being used for a partisan, political purpose..." (Headquarters on a scrap of paper in the drawer of a desk! That is surely an item for Ripley's "Believe It or Not!") On a certain day the Socialists found their sign missing and were told of the circumstances of Mr. House's visit. They naturally concluded, not knowing of the nice distinction drawn by Mr. House between the Book Market itself and the remainder of the building in which it is located, that signature-gathering in the Y. M. C. A. was just one more thing for them to add to their list of "Thou shalt nots." This brief account, though not as detailed as I should like it to be, explains the origin of this misunderstanding.

There are numerous other points which lack of space prevents my taking up. Miss Dirnberger's reference to the "trouble the petition was stirring up around this University community," is hard to understand. Many conservative people signed out of deference to fair play. The state papers were almost solidly behind the enterprise; in fact, many people believe that the movement had considerable to do with putting the press into that more than usual liberal frame of mind which aided in overwhelming the speedy canonization [sic!] of the Socialists. And if she is canonized, it will be a self-canonization after an unheroic immolation of her own choosing. As to her hollow affirmation of allegiance to "the administration of this, my University," I will merely remark that principles, rather than administrations, are the basis of my allegiance, and that devotion to the principle of liberalism prompted my original protest. At any rate, the rapidity with books have much in common.

Inchin' Along is a strong attack upon the southern methods of enslaving the negro. It deals with social, agricultural, and industrial injustices through the simple portrayal of the life of one man. A new light is thrown on the vital negro problem, and anyone interested in this subject will want to read this book.

Bernard Shaw, Playboy and Prophet which was to appear last week was postponed until this Friday. Appleton has co-operated with us in arranging a special display for this event. A copy of Dr. Henderson's book will be added to our circulating library shelves.

Other additions are:

Family History, V. Sackville-West (Doubleday-Doran). In which the author gives a penetrating portrait sketch of the members of one family, including the "Obituary Notice of Evelyn Jarrold," and presents a story beautifully fragmented together for the reader.

The Coming of a Third Party. Paul H. Douglas (Whittlesey House). Concerning which John Dewey has this to say, "If I knew any way to make this book compulsory reading for all citizens, especially for all young men and women, whose political minds are not closed to facts and ideas, I would gladly do so. No matter what their final conclusion, those who read the book will be more intelligent, more alert and energetic citizens of whatever parties they choose to join."—MARY DIRNBERGER.

The Ink Well

By Nelson Robbins

Half an hour before the paper goes to press... And eighteen inches, more or less, of column space to be filled... A splitting headache... And not an idea in sight... But the old ballyhoo must go on, ideas or no ideas... Billions of readers—more or less—are waiting, clamoring... Up and at 'em, Aloysius... Quick! Doctor, the chaser!... Blah!...

Those little dots are becoming monotonous, to say the least. They get in the hair. They swim before the eyes at night. They come, magnified to the size of young cannon balls, to torture one in his sleep. They assume arms and legs and malicious grins. They sit upon the bedposts and laugh mockingly at their helpless victim. They crawl upon the pillow and push red-hot irons into the eyes of the sleeper. They pile upon the chest and crush out the very life of their master. They climb to the ceiling and come tumbling down in a deluge of giant black hailstones, until the poor wretched soul awakes screaming in an agony of lunacy.

Would that ideas came as readily as those dots. Why do ideas persist in being so elusive?

Come, dear old Muses, to the rescue! Darling old ladies. Nice girls. Please, just one faint outline of a thought. No, Venus—not you. There is work to be done. Not that! Please, go 'way.

—But, wait. Whom could this be with you? Innocent little wraith of loveliness clinging so shyly to your hand. Break away, child. Run for your life and honour. The beautiful old licentious mistress of the gods is no fit companion for the likes of you.

Dreams. Snap out of it, son. Come down to earth. Light a cigarette, and get to work.

Visions rising in the blue smoke. Girls faces mirrored in the dreamy haze. Blondes, brunettes, and red-heads. Blue eyes and hazel eyes. Red lips. Faces appearing in clear outline from the past and fading to make room for another, until all are gone but one—smiling provocatively. Beckoning. Sweet child-like innocence in a world gone sophisticated. Peggy, don't tempt me. Please leave, Infant. Can't you see there is work to be done? But the cigarette has died, and the dream girl vanishes with the smoke.

Now, the typewriter has decayed to go floey. Hope the thing doesn't go on stryck. Something has happened to the "cay" and the "eye." They are stuck. Oh, the eraser has fallen between the keys.

Fifteen more minutes to go. Tempus fugit at the rate—well, at whatever rate it does. Time and tide shall not wait, tonight. Hold that Curfew. Give a fellow a chance.

Here comes the managing editor. Why does he have to stick out that under jaw like a prize fighter? And what makes that ferocious gleam come into his eyes about this time of day? Calm yourself, old man. No body wants to fight. What if there are no editorials ready yet, and headlines have to be written for umpteen news stories? Sit down and take it easy. The paper will come out, all right. Here, take a sip of this. Doctor! Bring the chaser! Ought to help you. O. K. Go ahead, and write an editorial, then.

Certainly, right away. COPY BOY!

Come on, Berryman—Let's go out and make some more mud pies. Quick! Doctor, the chaser. Burp!..... oh-h-h-h.

THE WEEK

Most outstanding news of the week from a campus standpoint was the Thursday announcement of the national college campaign presidential poll, resulting in victory for Mr. Hoover, Republican candidate for re-nomination. Other main features of the week were: Tau Beta Pi camping, Georgia Tech's 43-14 victory over North Carolina, decrease in deficiency list of students receiving marks at mid-terms, and the now-famous Bert Metzger hoax.

Friday

Raines, freshman griddler of the Raleigh branch of the Greater University of North Carolina, intercepts Tar Baby pass behind his own goal and races 100 yards for a score, tied a few seconds later when Arthur slips around left end for a long pass from Phelps. Score 6-6.

Princetonian nation-wide campus poll announces Herbert Hoover, 28,180; Franklin D. Roosevelt, 17,712; Norman Thomas, 10,490; William Z. Foster, 715. Hoover carries California, Ohio, New York, Wisconsin, Connecticut and other states by formidable majorities.

Dr. K. C. Fraser, of the University history department, tells freshmen at assembly that our interest in disarmament is pessimistic due to ignorance of the true problems and conditions that the delegates face.

Henry Sullivan, Phi Delta Theta entry, wins annual University cake race run between the halves at the freshman game. Winner's time for the 1.8 mile course, 7:44.

Thursday

Tau Beta Pi, national honorary engineering fraternity taps seven: George W. Gorham, Jr., Rocky Mount; Leonard C. Surprenant, Springfield, Mass.; John A. Preston, Lewisburg, W. Va.; Edward Brenner, Hendersonville; Floyd D. Higby, Sterling, Ill.; Paul R. Hayes, Greensboro; and Frederick E. Culvern, Asheville.

Wednesday

Mid-term grades posted in registrar's office indicate decrease in number of deficiencies 291 over last year. Increase in deficiencies reported in history, Spanish, French, commerce, government, and zoology departments.

Order of the Grail announces plans for obtaining new University anthem through the services of Thornton W. Allen, nationally famous song writer noted for his "Spirit of V. M. I." and "The Washington and Lee Swing," famous college melodies.

Tuesday

Unidentified stranger claiming to be Bert Metzger, Notre Dame all-American guard, wine and dined by campus fraternities and football aspirants until hoax is uncovered by coaches. Hoaxer then discovered missing.

Monday

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for president, interviewed after campaign speech in Raleigh, remarks upon being informed of the large number of votes cast for him in THE DAILY TAR HEEL campus poll, "There is nothing I can say, except that I am gratified in the interest and appreciation which the University of North Carolina and the people of the state have accorded."

Carolina Swamps Undeclared State 13-0

Tar Heels Look Right For First Time This Season In Impressive Victory

Kay Thompson and Johnny Phipps Lead Team to Season's First Victory.

TWO FULL TEAMS USED

Coach Collins Runs in Two Complete Elevens to Crush Favored Techmen.

For the first time this season the Tar Heel victory banner rippled gaily over Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon as a fast, hard hitting Carolina eleven inflicted the first defeat upon North Carolina State college, 13-0, before a crowd of about 13,000 persons.

Coach Collins' players did everything right yesterday. That big blue wall held; the backs went places; the forward passing attack functioned beautifully; the blocking and kicking was almost spectacular; in fact, it was an almost unbeatable team that marched off the field yesterday after the final whistle.

The Technicians were outplayed in every department of the game and in comparison to the Tar Heels, were a slow, sluggish outfit, highly over-rated.

Second Team Starts

The large crowd was surprised when Coach Collins started his second team against the Raleigh aggregation, but the Tar Heel substitutes did yeomanlike service, holding a heavier State line to small, insignificant gains. The regulars went in near the close of the first period and played until the half, scoring the first touchdown just before the period ended.

In general, the first half was a punting duel with Woollen and Burnett of Carolina against Greason and McQuage of State, the Tar Heels punting to better advantage. Burnett's kicking in the second period was the highlight of the game. Time after time, the sophomore quarterback kicked out of bounds within State's ten yard line, thus putting the Engineers at a handicap, and forcing them to kick immediately.

First Quarter

Tatum, kicking off for Carolina, booted the ball to State's seventeen yard line where it was taken by McLawhorn and advanced to the forty-four yard marker. The visitors were held for three downs and Greason kicked to Carolina's fifteen yard line. Woollen, on the first down, kicked the ball to State's forty yard line. With Bailey and Cumiskey doing most of the ball carrying, State would rush for two downs and kick only to have the Tar Heels boot the ball right back.

When the regulars entered the game the same tactics were employed with State gradually losing ground on the exchange of kicks, most of the losses being due to Burnett's phenomenal punting.

Second Quarter

Late in the second period, the Tar Heels made two determined bids for a touchdown and were successful on the second attempt. After Burnett kicked out of bounds on State's six yard line, Greason, on the first down, kicked to his own forty-seven yard marker where Burnett ran it back to State's thirty-two. Phipps made five through right tackle. A pass, Phipps to Burnett, was completed and Burnett ran out on the six yard line. State held and the Tar Heels were only able to make five yards in three attempts. On the last

High Spots

OF THE GAME
MORRIS LONG

Lean from previous Carolina defeats, the hungry, snarling Wolfpack from North Carolina State returned last night to its lair minus the choice victory morsel it expected from the Tar Heels. The unexpected elixir of life furnished to the situation by Chuck Collins' fighters gave the University its first taste of gridiron triumph this season while at the same time handed State its sole loss of the current year. Carolina showed the skeptical she can come back—and how.

Collins pulled some of the strategy he learned from his old coach, Knute Rockne, when he started his second team, let them kick on first down, and then instructed the Iron Men to play defensive ball—State's highly touted retinue of ball carriers wore themselves out attempting to puncture Carolina's line . . . and in the final session when the first team took the field again it had more drive and power than the State aggregation. Hats off to our smart coach and our plugging team. They have the stuff that counts.

Yes, sir. Burnett and Woollen certainly did some fine kicking for Carolina as did Greason and McQuage for State. Burnett must have a little reverse English on that left foot of his, the way he placed those punts on the two yard line . . . and the way Tommy Thompson, Johnny Daniels, McCaskill and Phipps drove into the line for numerous ten yard gains was a revelation for sore eyes . . . Hawkeye Barclay led to Carolina's first touchdown when he intercepted a pass deep in State's territory just after the Wolfpack had made a spectacular stand on her one foot marker by holding the Tar Heels for downs.

When asked how he thought next week's game would turn out, Salt, the Florida scout nonchalantly said, "Draw your own conclusions. Look at what State did to us just last week." . . . and Freddie Sington, former all-American at Alabama and now a Duke coach when questioned about the game said, "Looks like Carolina's hitting her stride—It'll be a tough game when Duke and Carolina meet." Which all goes to prove that no matter how poor a showing Carolina makes at certain stages of the season the adversaries always respect Chuck Collins' crew at the end of the year.

Did you notice that Roy Rex, State's beef trust, in five attempts picked up seven yards—that the two bands, directed by Major Price of State, and McCorkle of Carolina formed as colorful a spectacle as has been seen in Kenan stadium—that Bob Froneberger, a senior, playing his first game for Carolina after three years of trying, did some nice tackling . . . the hand Woollen got and the catcalls he received from the 13,000 spectators when he cavorted 69 yards down the side lines though the whistle had already blown—that Carolina needs a stretcher very badly—they're handy things and inexpensive.

SIX PLAYERS WHO STARRED IN YESTERDAY'S BATTLE

SEVEN TEAMS IN FOOTBALL RACE YET UNDEFEATED

Five Fraternity and Two Dormitory Teams Keep Clean Slate Through Week.

Seven teams, five of them representing fraternities and two of them dormitories, came through the fourth week of intramural tag football play with undefeated records.

In the fraternity loop Beta Theta Pi, Chi Psi, Sigma Nu, and Zeta Psi are setting the pace with four wins apiece, while Alpha Tau Omega follows with three victories in three starts. Grimes and Lewis, which are tied for first place in the dormitory circuit, have each won all four of their games to date.

The past week saw Lambda Chi Alpha, Delta Kappa Epsilon, and Tau Epsilon Phi, among the fraternities, and Aycock, among the dormitories, suffer their initial setbacks of the current campaign.

Phi Delta Theta, which had failed to score a victory until that time, rose up and blasted Lambda Chi Alpha from its place among the elite when it gained a 4-3 victory on first downs after the regulation scoring system had decided the contest as a 6-6 draw.

Delta Kappa Epsilon lost out early in the week when it dropped a 5-2 decision to Phi Gamma Delta. Tau Epsilon Phi went down fighting before the barrage of long passes sent out by Sigma Nu's backs. The T. E. P. eleven was outclassed in scoring, but gained a draw, 8-8, in first downs.

The only dormitory outfit to drop from the unbeaten class during the week was Aycock, which fell before Lewis' superior running attack. The

CANZONERI MUST FIGHT PETROLLE

New York State Athletic Commission Orders Champion to Defend Crown November 4.

Tony Canzoneri, lightweight boxing champion, was ordered by the New York state athletic commission to defend his crown against Billy Petrolle in Madison Square Garden November 4.

The fighters had been matched for a battle in the garden but the fight was postponed until next Friday night after Petrolle underwent an operation for an elbow injury. Sammy Goldman, the title holder's manager called the fight off when he was informed by the Garden officials that it could not provide him with 500 seats that they had promised for the match. The commission decided the two fighters must meet under the terms of the contract, but that they could do nothing about the ticket troubles.

A deputy commissioner has been assigned to visit Petrolle Monday to see if the fighter will be able to make the 135-pound class by Friday. Petrolle has been fighting around 140 pounds.

DURHAM HIGH AND RALEIGH LEAD IN CLASS 'A' LEAGUE

Bull City Gridders Have Slight Lead Due to Capital City Team Having Tie.

Durham high school continued its march towards the class "A" football title in eastern Carolina. Yesterday the Bull City gridders defeated Wilmington, 32-0, in Durham. The winning team has not been scored on in conference games this year.

The western North Carolina class "A" race narrowed down a bit as a result of Thursday's and yesterday's games. Salisbury chalked up its second straight triumph at the expense of High Point, 12-0, ruining the latter team's chances as prior to this game it had been undefeated. Gastonia, with another scoreless tie, is virtually eliminated from being a dangerous leader. Last week, the same team was held to a similar no-score game with Greensboro.

The other class "A" game yesterday was between Raleigh and Rocky Mount. The former team won on home ground, 32-0. Its record, however, shows a tie game, leaving Durham as the only undefeated and untied team.

In the 3rd eastern district, class "B," Chapel Hill won the group one championship by beating Oxford orphanage here Friday, 14-6. Apex clinched the group two title by defeating Smithfield, 27-0. The two winners will play next week to decide the championship of the district.

Raines Deserves A Cake, Who'll Be The Donator?

Halfback for State Freshmen Certainly Merits Prize for 102 Yard Jaunt.

Cake races may come and go on throughout the eternal ages at this grand old University, but never will a boy run such a fine race and not even get a cake as did Raines, State freshman halfback, last Friday afternoon.

The long ballyhooed intramural cake race which started during the halves of the freshman game at the bell-tower was ending at the field house in Kenan stadium; the Tar Baby eleven was knocking at the State goal for the fourth time, trying to score. Only one yard was needed, but three tries at the line had availed naught. Phelps was called back to pass; it was a short flat zone pass—but lo, it was intercepted. A tiny mite had the ball under his arm and was gone.

It all happened that quickly. Nobody knew that the State yearlings had scored until the few State supporters went mad as they saw Raines stumble over the goal.

Carolina's first year men finally scored, not to be denied by a determined passing attack, but the cake race was won. Why hasn't somebody, somewhere given Raines a cake? The good Lord knows that he deserves one, and who among all the merchants in Chapel Hill is going to be first?

Duke Imps Beat Baby Deacons In Close Tilt

Duke's freshman football team took their second game in as many starts against Big Five yearling competition when they downed the Wake Forest first-year men 13 to 7 on the Duke field Friday afternoon.

The losers stopped Blue Devil marches toward their goal all afternoon, holding them time after time inside their twenty yard line. Ward, Duke halfback, counted for both of his team's touchdowns, one coming in the second period and one in the final quarter. Wake Forest scored their only marker in the last thirty seconds of play. Hatcher took the ball over on a twenty-five yard pass.

CAROLINA OFFERS 'GRAND HOTEL' AS OPENING PICTURE

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Super-Production Will Run First Two Days of Week.

The closest approximation of a genuine "million dollar" cast is offered by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in bringing to the talking screen Vicki Baum's sensational novel and stage hit, Grand Hotel, which will head the program at the Carolina theatre Monday and Tuesday. Greta Garbo is cast as Grusinskaya, the Russian ballerina. Joan Crawford has the part of Flaemchen, the sex-appealing stenographer who finds that happiness and tragedy often go hand in hand. Wallace Beery essays the most dramatic role of his career as Preysing, the militaristic industrial magnate who trifles with dishonesty and unfaithfulness. Lionel Barrymore has the characterization of Kringlen, a factory clerk who registers at the Grand Hotel to enjoy a brief period of splendor before he dies. John Barrymore, Lewis, Stone, Jean Hersholt, and others are included in the cast.

Wednesday Brings Thriller
"The Old Dark House," Universal's drama of one exciting night in a lonely Welsh manor, is Wednesday's feature. This production gives the story of travelers on a week-end vacation who are caught in a storm and forced to seek shelter for the night in an ancient, bleak house where an inherently insane family lives ruled by a servant of brutal character.

Thursday, Tallulah Bankhead and Robert Montgomery co-star in "Faithless," a story of the penniless rich, based on a novel by Mildred Cram. Hugh Herbert, Maurice Murphy, Louise Closser Hale, Anna Appel, Lawrence Grant and Henry Kolker compose the supporting cast.

A novel type of football picture, "Rackety Rax," is coming Friday. Victor McLaglen and Greta Nissen are starred in this production from Joel Sayre's story of the same name.

Presenting a picture of California in the days of the gold rush, "Wild Girl" plays at the Carolina Saturday, with such stars as Charles Farrell, Joan Bennett and Ralph Bellamy in the lead roles. The story deals with the coming to a remote mining camp of a mysterious stranger in Confederate uniform, with a secret purpose of his own. His arrival awakens the interest of the camp's belle, Salomy Jane, who heretofore has had no patience with the pleas of her various suitors. When he kills the camp's leading politician, the Vigilantes start after him, and despite the girl's efforts, he is captured and sentenced to hang.

Concerted Action Supports Drive For Better Cheering

Henry Betts, the present cheerleaders, and it is felt that there should be a recurrence of the former spirit at this time.

All Work Together

The cheerleaders, together with the aid of Alex Worth of Durham and other prominent alumni, interested students, President Frank P. Graham, Haywood Weeks, the music department and other individuals and groups are laying plans for the formation of this new cheering group.

Graduate Manager C. T. Woolen has promised to purchase megaphones for the use of the group which will sit in a special reserved section of the stadium. The group will wear the distinctive clothing which marked their appearance in the past.

In connection with this movement are the proposals of two new songs to be used at games. One is sponsored by the Grail and the other by an alumnus.

Alumni Opinions

Alumni are particularly urgent in the reorganization of the cheerios. Quoting one: "I would like to see the Cheerios reorganized. Not merely for the support that such an organization gives the team. The rah-rah spirit that ebbs with the score doesn't interest me. I would like to see every student have some way to express himself at games without making himself conspicuous by yelling at the top of his voice while the people around him maintain the silence of the tomb. A student giving encouragement to the team feels that he is a part of that team. By being loyal and faithful in a few things, unimportant or important, he will soon grow and develop into the larger and more noble loyalty to the Greater University, and he will strive to make it the ideal university."

Another says: "Carolina has a good team. It has been up against some the best teams in the south this year, and with one possible exception, has acquitted itself in great style. The student body has not given its best, however. The cheering has been rotten."

A fair young lady from the better one-third of the University, expresses her comment: "Singing and organized cheering add color and excitement to the game. I like to see the people, and to feel the zest of the excitement of the crowd. And, the more excitement, the better."

CAROLINA SWAMPS STATE COLLEGE 13-0

down McCaskill's pass into the end zone was incomplete and the ball went over to State on the twenty yard line.

McQuage attempted a pass and it was intercepted by Barclay, who ran from the twenty-five yard line to the thirteen. On the tackle Barclay was hurt and forced to leave the game. With McCaskill paving the way by carrying the ball twice for eleven yards, Thompson sliced through left tackle for two yards and the first score of the game. Lassiter was substituted for Chandler and kicked the extra point. Score: North Carolina 7, State 0.

Carolina Scores Again

After playing see-saw ball throughout the third quarter, the Carolina regulars entered the game and proceeded to tear the Technician line to shreds. With the ball on State's forty yard line, the Tar Heels were penalized five yards on the first play for backs being in motion, but Daniels offset the penalty by weaving through the State line and secondary defense for twenty yards, carrying the ball to State's twenty-five yard line. Phipps, after losing three yards, passed to Chandler who was run out of bounds nine yards from the visitors' goal. Daniels plunged through center to the five yard line, from which point, Phipps took the ball over right tackle for the remaining distance. So good were the Tar Heels' blocking that on Phipps' run, not a man touched the Carolina back. Phipps failed to convert the extra point, making the score 13-0.

State Threatens

State threatened to score late in the final period when a run by McQuage on fourth down carried the ball from the visitors' twenty-seven to the forty. Here Lady Luck entered when McAdams' pass was juggled by three Carolina players and bounced directly into Espey's hands, giving State possession on Carolina's twenty-six yard line. The Tar Heels held for three downs and Chandler intercepted McAdams' pass to end whatever chance State had for scoring.

Stars Galore

It would be hard to say who starred for the Tar Heels for every player, bar none, played heads up ball, but if commendation went to anybody, it would certainly go to Barclay, Kahn, Philpot, and Hodges in the line and to Phipps, Thompson, Burnett, Woolen, and McCaskill in the backfield. Espey, Cumiskey, and McQuage starred for the Wolfpack.

cabinets at 7:00 p. m. he will be the principal speaker. His subject has not been announced yet.

After his stay at the University Dr. Weatherford will journey to Raleigh for a four day stay at State college.

Brilliant Record

Dr. Weatherford, listed in Who's Who, has a record of many brilliant achievements behind him, both in college and after life. He graduated from Weatherford college in 1895 after distinguishing himself in many student activities and winning a Phi Beta Kappa key. He went to Vanderbilt university in 1899 and later received his master's and doctor's degrees there.

He was the founder and builder of Blue Ridge, southern Y. M. C. A. assembly grounds near Asheville. For many years he has been one of the moving spirits of the association in the south, being for quite a while a traveling secretary of the southern division of the Y. M. C. A.

ity; its capacity is purely to advise, comment, and express campus sentiment on topics of significance.

Studied Honor System

Last year the organization devoted considerable time to a detailed study of the workings of the honor system and attempted to rejuvenate its efficiency. Since the program of this work was not completed, the Forum intends to carry on the investigation this year and hopes to be able to offer concrete suggestions for the improvement of the system.

The founding of the group satisfies a long-felt need on this campus for a body wherein the problems and opinions of the students at large may be heard and receive direct attention. The Forum urges the electors of the representatives to present their sentiments on matters of general import to the members of the organization.

By virtue of its electing three students to the directorate of Graham Memorial, the Union Forum has a direct and sizeable voice in the operation of a building in which the students have manifested their deepest interest. As the association has successfully inaugurated and sponsored the weekly informal dances in the lounge, it aims to assist the manager of the student union in providing a fuller and more stimulating round of activities in Graham Memorial.

DR. WEATHERFORD WILL ADDRESS "Y" CABINETS MONDAY

Abbreviated meetings will be in order for the three "Y" cabinets in their 7:00 o'clock gatherings tomorrow night in the Y. M. C. A. building.

After a short business gathering all of the cabinets will convene jointly to hear an address by Dr. Willis Duke Weatherford, president of the Y. M. C. A. graduate school in Nashville, Tenn. Dr. Weatherford has been identified with the association movement ever since his leaving Weatherford college in 1895, and he is probably the foremost "Y" worker in the south.

Baptists Invite Students

The Baptist Sunday school, through W. G. Pravette, superintendent, has issued a special invitation to all students to attend their Sunday morning meeting.

Loyalty or Demagoguery?

Yelling is too collegiate, says the sophisticated student. Then, after three drinks, his yell becomes more obnoxious than the mumbblings of a movie-mutterer.

Invariably, the man who pronounces his scornful diatribe against college cheering is a stadium killjoy. He either makes his presence objectionable by inebriate growling about the rottenness of the team. Or he spoils his own pleasure and that of others by sitting silently glum, except when he is given the opportunity to display an innocuous knowledge of the game.

There is little sincerity and much hypocrisy in these people. They contribute little to the spirit of the occasion and get little but a chance to gloat and glut.

On the other hand, there is no finer spirit of loyalty than that displayed by a cheering student body which fights with its team up and down the field, helping them to win every yard and encouraging them when they lose.

Cheering is, of course, no end in itself, but it is the only satisfactory means of expressing University spirit. A student it is cooperatively organized. In its most worthwhile form, body that wildly cheers its team in victory and remains silent when the team is losing wears the brand of demagoguery; it has no just claim upon the joys of victory; it deserves the disappointment of defeat.

The Republican party, so the Democrats say, claimed credit for the prosperity of 1928, but they deny responsibility for the depression of 1932. Unless Carolina students give their full support to the movement to reorganize a student cheering section, they will be guilty of the same kind of traitorous hypocrisy as is imputed to the G. O. P. elephant by the Democratic donkey.—E.C.D.

The Widening Breach

While Carolina has advanced in many ways within the last decade there is one feature of educational life in which we are retrogressing. The relation of professors and instructors to the individual members of their classes, while once intimate, is becoming more and more distant. Many of our older professors tell us of days not long passed that saw interested groups of undergraduates gathering at the homes of their teachers to gain some further knowledge of their subject or merely to cultivate a friendship with the men who taught them.

It is unfortunate that this sort of relation is becoming rarer and rarer. Of all the friendships that can be made at college there is none more valuable than friendship with the men whose interest is in education and whose lives are devoted to the advancement of learning and to the instruction of youth. In addition any course one might take becomes far more valuable and interesting when the professor is known not merely as a lecturer and a grade-giver, but as a human being interested in many of the things that interest us. An intimacy of faculty and student body is of great mutual benefit to teacher and student and extremely beneficial as well to the University.

There are many reasons why the last years have witnessed such a change. The increasing size of the University makes it very difficult for the professor with a class of seventy-five to know all of his students. That is one of the penalties that a large college pays for its advantage in size. Another factor is an attitude developed to a great extent in the last few years of viewing any unnecessary relation between teacher and student as "booting" and hence a breach of form for a Carolina gentleman. The greatest cause behind the drifting is a growing indifference on the part of both sides towards the other.

Many students consider members of the faculty as more or less "mean" men whose motto is "they shall not pass" and whose only interest in their class is flunking a certain percentage. On the other hand many of the faculty consider that they are casting pearls before swine who are interested in everything on the campus—studies excepted. These are of course great exaggerations, but do give some notion of the general attitudes on both sides.

While conditions are not changing for the better it is by no means too late to effect a remedy. If either side would take the initial effort the other would be only too glad to reciprocate. It is not too late to return to the charming and valuable relationship that has been in the past. A condition of intimacy between students and faculty has much to offer and once marked this school as a friendly and liberal institution.—J.F.A.

A New Shuffle

The expression, "conservative America," is again the cause of political discrimination. Can the old school of politics be applied to the present economic conditions? The laboring people who constitute a basic cog in the wheel of capitalism, conservative or liberal, have been forced to open their eyes to the shortcomings under the present system. With the existing maldistribution of capital goods men starve while others throw away surplus, the rich grow richer and the poor grow poorer. The most progressive of the conservative group declare, "we need a change."

There will always be those who possess more than others but such people as millionaires are utterly illogical. Admitted that the earning capacity of some people exceeds that of others, ability should be rewarded. But it is useless to receive more than one can spend.

Before inventions and a trend to large scale production, labor was supplied by hand and endured long working hours. As these two factors progressed to meet an increase in demand for produce, men were replaced by machines and huge profits piled up in the laps of a few private producers. Shorter labor hours would tend to balance the labor distribution. To correct wage massing the great surplus which goes to the owner must be turned over to the laborer, with fair amount of profit left to the individual. In this manner the owner retains some, but not all of the profit.

While arguing whether or not to pay the soldiers' bonus, repeal or retain the eighteenth amendment, raise or lower tariff a few cents, some people might find the problem of labor distribution worthy of consideration.—F.N.

OUR TIMES

By Don Shoemaker

More Show-Boats

Mr. Robert Berryman (who slaps off Autopsy in between mud pie sessions with Mr. Nelson Robbins) together with a certain "C.C." in the N. Y. Times, brings back to our memory an impression of the past summer worthy of repetition. Disposing of Mr. Berryman first, for we seek not to cast his prose along side that of "C.C."—out of respect to the latter, an editorial in The Carolina Magazine by this estimable gentleman entitled "Hiss-Trionnics" (note the double "n") expressed the opinion that "... What the American stage mostly needs is a revival of the hiss."

Then Mr. "C.C." expounded briefly in the dramatic section of his newspaper over the efforts of the sponsors of a show-boat craft known as the "Dixiana" and a similar vessel "Billy Bryant's Show-Boat" to introduce this form of entertainment to the good people of Chicago over the protest of Mayor Cermak. It seems that political influence will soon give the latter show boat the upper hand, for Billy Bryant knows a Democrat whose uncle is a Democrat who knows Billy Cermak. Now after all this we're getting somewhere, for it seems that we had the pleasure of witnessing a performance of Hamlet as interpreted by Bryant's company last summer on the Ohio river.

Now here is where Mr. Berryman's hiss-trionics (note the double "n") come in. For three hours or so we sat in the show boat and hissed and booed the acting of the company endeavoring to produce a show-boat Hamlet. It was essential to the spirit of the occasion that the assemblage cheer the hero and hiss the villain, often more violently demonstrating its preferences with a well aimed barrage of peanuts. Here the hiss was predominant. It banished villains and converted to wild cheers, speeded heroes on to their deeds of valor.

Here the hiss, and not the play, was the thing. So could it be with Mr. Berryman's drama. We need more of this "on the American stage, we agree with him. Perhaps the show boat craze will bring back this age-old medium of appreciation or condemnation, whereby the audience may have an active part in determining the success of the production.

Plays

Mr. Paul Green, now working on an adaption for Will Rogers, is soon to turn his pen toward script writing for George Arlis, who it seems has a sudden penchant for playing Voltaire. Production will begin late in November.

And while we are on the subject of Mr. Green, we note that Brooks Atkinson, John Mason Broan, and George Jean (I'll reserve my vote) Nathan, have picked his House of Connelly as one of the dozen or so truly representative plays of the last fifteen years. In the words of Mr. Atkinson "... in the past ten or fifteen years America has produced many plays that should not be lost in the limbo that now engulfs all our past works." Therefore he believes that such as Once in a Lifetime, That's Gratitude, Another Language, Emperor Jones, and others including Mr. Green's latest stage effort could be termed as typical American drama. He includes also in this list Sun-Up, a play of Carolina life and written by a North Carolinian. It would thus seem that North Carolina has a definite if not solitary place in the "typical" drama category, for other than the gang play and the negro-life portrayals, there is little so typical as the House of Connelly type.

SPEAKING

the CAMPUS MIND

There Little Child, Don't Cry

What! More verbose hokey from our verdant campus socialists! How long will it last? Can't Mister Ericson confine the effects of his ideas to his little socialists without driving everybody else crazy?

For weeks now every action that has been taken to make the Socialists less obnoxious to the more rational students on the campus has been misinterpreted with studied care. Mister Ericson even dares recall the University's policy of freedom with the insinuation that his party is being suppressed on the campus.

It reminds one of the editor of a certain Contemptable magazine published locally, whose policy apparently is "Adverse criticism is better, far better, than no criticism." So instead of being ignored, they have, by their skillful misinterpretations, been able to advertise and be advertised (as now) in the "Speaking the Campus Mind" column. It's time to brush aside this nuisance.

Mr. House meant no offense when he placed the natural restrictions he did upon this over-enthusiastic group. No warm-hearted person would take toys away from a baby just to see it cry. But if the baby and toys were in the way, the same person might ask the baby to go to the basement to play so as not to be a nuisance.

A sickly baby suffering from a cold, or some deformity might whimper and cry instead of obeying. Even a very warm-hearted person would grow impatient then and wipe the child's nose, spank him and force him to go play somewhere else.

The Socialists can not keep their toys in the Book Market or the Library, and it is time they quit whimpering about it.

JACK RILEY.

Too Much

Dishwater Soup

There appeared in THE DAILY TAR HEEL of October 22 an editorial by A.T.D. entitled "Too Much Caviar." It is to be feared that Mr. A.T.D. has not yet been engrossed with that magnificent "intangible"—culture—which our universities are supposed to bestow as the "for value received." Certainly a university such as this one should make its students culture-conscious if not ripening products. Mr. A. T. D. by his editorializing cannot be a representative in either of these categories.

There is a very large group on the campus that feels that the Student Entertainment Committee is to be congratulated upon presenting Mr. Spalding and should continue to give to the student body such a high type of entertainment. Mr. A.T.D.'s misconception of the purpose and principles of the Student Entertainment Committee is evidenced when he says that there is a "middle way." One is led to believe that this editorialist would have Cab Calloway's orchestra and Amos and Andy appear on the program. How typically American! To seek a "middle way" would be a betrayal of faith and should bring unending condemnation upon the heads of those who would so stoop. Are we going to lower standards and come down to popular appeal (if we could determine popular appeal), or are we going to seek to elevate the level of this so-called popular appeal? There are many who are optimistic enough to believe that Mr. A.T.D. did not correctly ascertain the pulse of popular appeal. And does this editorialist fully understand the "laic comprehension" about which he speaks?

The "finesse and subtlety of classical composition" have a charm for those of us who least can comprehend its scope. This group together with the many who fully appreciate the higher arts are willing, to be sure, to defend the policy of the Student Entertainment Committee. Education (culture) has served civilization because "it frees people from the shackles of superstition, the bonds of misunderstanding, and points out the great way of Truth and Perfection toward which our Gods intend us." It is the sincere desire of many on this campus to see and hear more entertainment of the Spalding class in an attempt to follow the gleam of the above truth of education.

—E. R. H.

Dux Femina

Facti

Several comments have been made around the campus in regard to the lousy cheering at our varsity games. This, I think, is not the fault of our present cheer leaders, who seem to be putting all that any group could into their work; however, a proposition that is not unpopular among the students might be submitted to Spencer hall.

Judging from the spirit of most of the fraternity members and a few other adventuresome individuals who mentally reside at the co-ed shack, Carolina's feminine beauties have quite a knack for putting pep, vim, and vigor where it is needed most. On these grounds, perhaps a female member of our cheer leading staff could get one good roar out of the crowd before the season is over. Volunteer, girls!

T. R. WARREN.

Constitutional Amendments

There is now available in the library of the law building a pamphlet explaining the amendments to the constitution of North Carolina to be voted on November 8, in order that the voters may be informed as to the nature and the affect of the four constitutional amendments proposed by the general assembly. The text of the present section, and the text of the proposed change is given with an explanation following. There is no purpose either to advocate the amendments or to criticize them, the sole purpose of the pamphlet being to inform the voters of the amendments to be voted on.

Carolina Prepares For Tussle With Strong 'Gator Team Friday

Coach Collins Puts Men Through Light Snappy Workout to Get Ready for Florida.

INJURED WILL BE READY

Barclay, Peacock, and Underwood Will Be Set to Go Against Alligators.

The Tar Heels were out yesterday hard at work for their coming tilt with the Florida 'Gators here Friday. Coach Collins has three days left to whip his charges into shape for this important setto.

The squad was put through the usual setting up exercises and then worked on pass defense, tackling, charging, and blocking. Rough work is on deck for today's workout and then the Tar Heels will taper off tomorrow and Thursday.

George Barclay, Johnny Peacock, and June Underwood, who received injuries in the State tilt, will be ready for the 'Gators, Trainer Quinlan reported yesterday. Barclay wrenched his knee and the other two had charley horses which will clear up by Friday.

The Tar Heels will have full strength to throw against Florida Friday and Coach Collins is anxious to continue the winning ways against State. Florida has a powerful team, though, and the game is going to be a close one unless Carolina plays heads-up ball.

McIver Will Play Saturday
Tom White was out yesterday in light equipment passing in the pass practice and Chuck Quinlan announced that he would be ready for the Davidson game. White took a few laps around the track with Gus McIver who hurt his leg against Georgia Tech and then worked on his passing. McIver's knee injury is clearing up and he will be ready to play against Florida.

CHI PSI SWAMPS PHI ALPHA, 39-6

Sigma Chi and Phi Gamma Delta Win Close Games in Intramural Football.

Chi Psi advanced a notch in the intramural tag football standings yesterday when it gained undisputed control of first place in the fraternity circuit by running roughshod over Phi Alpha, 39-6.

With Don LaBorne and Bob Atwood scoring two touchdowns each, and Ellis Dudley and Wyant Wilday accounting for an additional six-pointer apiece, Chi Psi staged a veritable field day, gaining its victory in five minute quarters. Twilight came long before the end of the second half, and the latter part of the game was played in almost total obscurity.

Phi Alpha took advantage of the poor visibility near the end of the contest to become the first opponent to cross the Chi Psi goal this year. Sam Gidinsky snared a pass out of the dark and galloped fifty yards for his team's only score.

Sigma Chi Scores
In other games of the afternoon's program, Sigma Chi downed Phi Delta Theta, 7-3 in first downs, after the teams had played a 7-7 tie on the basis of regulation scoring; and Phi Gamma Delta overcame Sigma Phi Epsilon, 7-0.

Sigma Chi, led by Wilmer Hines, was clearly superior to the Phi Delta outfit, but when John Barrow blocked a Sigma Chi punt early in the first quarter and Chigger Moffit subsequently dashed around right end for a touchdown, Phi Delta Theta commenced a grim defense of its narrow margin.

AROUND the FIELD

By CLAIRBORN M. CARR

THE TAR HEELS WERE A revelation to their supporters Saturday and for the first time this year something akin to joy resided on the Hill over the week-end. In the field house after the game, Carolina players were jubilant. Each man was tickled pink with the game and those who were hurt forgot their injuries to pat others on the back. George Brandt, who played a fine game at end, said, "I got an awful blow on the head but it doesn't hurt so much when you win." The victory was all the team needed to put it on the right path and Carolina should go to town now.

NORMAN McCASKILL, THE boy Coach Collins changed to a halfback from the fullback post recently, played a brilliant game against the Wolfpack Saturday. McCaskill was running low and hard and slicing off some neat gains through the State tackles. It was Mac's first chance at starting a game in his three-year sojourn on the varsity and he began well. Mac lost a chance to score his first touchdown for Carolina when Red Espey got in the way on the two-yard line.

KAY THOMPSON IS ANOTHER back who played an exceptional game in the first Carolina victory. Kay is a hard working halfback and his running Saturday was a fitting tribute to his diligence. Thompson has been improving steadily and should be bad medicine to Duke when the twain shall meet.

THE GOOD PART ABOUT THE win over State is the fact that Coach Collins tucked away a win and also gave the Duke and Davidson scouts very little to write home about. In the State tussle, Carolina used five line plays and three pass formations, now wasn't that something to come over here to get. Then, too, the Duke coaches had trouble diagraming one of those line plays, that off-tackle thrust that was doing so much damage to State. There were four Duke scouts at the game, two watching State and two "hawkeying" Carolina. The two on State filled a whole notebook while the Carolina scouts could watch the game.

THE DUKE LINE WILL AVERAGE 180 pounds, according to one of the scouts and the Davidson forwards will top about 176 pounds if their scout is reliable. The two Davidson flat-foots said after the State game that the "Tar Heels were playing smarter ball and looking very little like the team that lost to the Yellow Jackets."

THIS DUKE-CAROLINA GAME is going to be another thing. Duke's brilliant stand against Tennessee and their play all season will make them the favorites but the Blue Devils will be up against a tradition that has held against them for a long while. Dr. Foy Roberson, who is one of Carolina's most loyal supporters, told the writer yesterday when asked if the Methodists had ever beaten the Tar Heels, "They say something about having beaten us before I was born, but I don't think there is anything to it."

Women's Basketball

The woman's athletic association met for the second time yesterday for basketball practice, on the field opposite the arboretum, under the direction of Miss Gladys Angel, the co-ed athletic director. All the women students are urged to make use of the tennis courts which have recently been conditioned.

TEN CAKE RACE LEADERS TO BE FETED TONIGHT

Medals Will Be Presented Victors At Dinner Given at Home of "Dean" G. H. Paulsen.

Presentation of medals and a banquet at the home of "Dean" G. H. Paulsen of the laundry department will be in order tonight for the first ten lads who finished in last Friday's Cake Race.

Mrs. Paulsen will prepare the meal, and the medals will be presented by Herman Schnell of the intramural department.

Students who will receive medals are given in the order they finished with the organizations they ran for in the race as follows: Henry Sullivan, Phi Delta Theta; W. W. Carraway, Lewis Dorm; Barnaby Keeney, Sigma Chi; Bennett Napier, Best House; William Traverton, Best House; William Thomas Bost, Sigma Nu; Bill Yandell, New Dorms; D. B. Fox, Old East; G. Stratford Donnell, Best House; and H. L. Umstead, Mangum.

The address of the Paulsens is 405 Ransom street.

HARRIERS READY FOR FIRST MEET

Cross-Country Race With Florida to Be Added Attraction At Game Friday.

An added attraction will be on tap for spectators at the Carolina-Florida grid tilt Friday at Kenan stadium in the form of a race between the cross-country outfits of the two schools during the halves.

The local harriers have been set through a rigorous period of training, and they are all set to take the Gainesville lads for a ride.

Coach M. Dale Ranson, head mentor of the University's runners, says that his charges were gunning for another southern title to add to their string which augments yearly. After Florida, Carolina clashes with Duke, and then comes the Southern conference titular run.

Ranson announced that seven boys would be picked out of the following fifteen to represent the locals in the run: Captain Bob Hubbard, Louis Sullivan, Henry Sullivan, Clarence Jensen, Lou Cordle, Walter Groover, Ed Waldrop, T. H. Curlee, Gerry Goldman, Fabius Haywood, H. W. Gwynn, G. Stratford Donnell, Donald Kimrey, Morton Olman, and W. I. Williams.

Branch's Bantams Win From Ahsokie Gridmen

Some 200 quiet fans sat in the bleachers at El Toro park in Durham Sunday and watched Johnny Branch's Charlotte Bantams take a game from the Ahsokie All-Stars by the score of 13-0.

Both Bantam touchdowns were scored by Maxie Welch, former Clemson star. Only once did Johnny Branch, the shifty Carolina star of last year, break loose, but when he did he gave the fans a good exhibition of the reason he was feared by all Carolina foes.

The Bantams are prohibited from playing ball on their own field Sundays by virtue of the recently enacted Blue Law ordinance in Charlotte.

Material Arrives

The materials for the bowling alleys which have been planned for the game room in Graham Memorial arrived yesterday, and construction will be started immediately, according to P. L. Burch, superintendent of the buildings department. Burch said that he expected to have them completed within the next two weeks.

HIT THEIR STRIDE SATURDAY

Norman McCaskill, left, and George Brandt, right, two players who hit their stride against State and seem headed for bigger things. McCaskill is the new halfback who ripped off so much yardage against the Pack. Brandt played a steady and heady game at end for the Tar Heels and worried the State backs with his hard tackling.

CAROLINA TURNS UP AS CLAIMANT FOR STATE TITLE

Win Over State Places Tar Heels In Championship Running; Duke Leads Race.

Carolina served notice in last Saturday's victory over State that the team was out to take the Big Five football championship.

Duke leads the race at present with two wins against no defeats, but triumphs over Davidson and the Blue Devils, in their two remaining games in the state, will give the title to the Tar Heels. The defeat was the first for State, but as they also have a tie with Wake Forest, the Wolfpack is about counted out of the race.

Cox Leads Scoring

Although he was held scoreless in last Saturday's contest with Tennessee, Cox, Duke back, still led in individual scoring with four touchdowns and three extra points. Rex, State fullback, was also held pointless and as a result was tied for second place by Mason of Duke. Both boys had twenty-four points.

State and Davidson meet this Saturday at Charlotte in the only Big Five clash of the week. This will be of little importance in deciding the championship as Davidson has been beaten by Duke.

Games Moved Up

All intramural grid games will be moved up a half hour, due to shorter days, according to Herman Schnell of the intramural department. Games slated for 5:00 o'clock will be called at 4:30, and contest at 4:00 are scheduled for 3:30. The games this afternoon are as follows:

3:30 p. m.—(1) Carr vs. Swain hall; (2) Delta Tau Delta vs. Sigma Nu; (3) Grimes vs. Manly.
4:30 p. m.—(1) Kappa Sigma vs. Kappa Alpha; (2) Steele vs. Old West; (3) Independents vs. Old East.

TENNESSEE PAPER ASKS PROBE INTO RECORD OF STARS

Vanderbilt "Hustler" Intimates That Records of Players May Show Professionalism.

The Vanderbilt University Hustler, in a blazing editorial which broke into print despite faculty protest, called for a general housecleaning in the conference and a special probe concerning the past records of several prominent football stars. Already Julian Foster, Vanderbilt end, and Nollie Felts, Tulane back, have been ousted from further participation in Southern conference athletic circles.

On top of all this, Colonel Harry S. Berry, member of the Tennessee board of trustees demanded that the status of three Tennessee players be cleared up. Tennessee then revealed that these three men, Feathers, Petruzzie, and Anderson were not guilty of the attacks concerning professionalism.

The editorial, which caused so much disturbance on the Tennessee campus, said that William Beatty Feathers, Leo Petruzzie, Deke Brackett, all of Tennessee; Harold Lemmon, Tulane; Jimmy Hitchcock, Auburn; Aubrey Dotherow, Alabama; and Graham Batchelor, of Georgia; and many others had summer baseball records that "may be well worth considering."

The editorial commended the "sportsmanship of the Vanderbilt officials for disbaring Foster, but we denounce your apt inaptitude regarding the probable ineligibility of a dozen other outstanding athletes in schools of the Southern conference."

FRIEDMAN BEATS LOTT TO CLINCH FALL NET TITLE

Two Fellow Townsmen Engage In Long and Fierce Battle For Tennis Crown.

Displaying the same superb brand of tennis that featured his advance through the lists, to the finals, Bernard Friedman of Philadelphia defeated his fellow-townsmen, Hunter Lott, in straight sets, 6-4, 9-7, and 6-2, yesterday to gain the fall championship.

As could be judged by the scores, the match was the most fiercely played of the entire tournament, play lasting over two and a half hours.

In general, the match was a contest of a terrific service versus a heady, steady game, with the latter triumphing.

Both players started with a (Continued on last page)

PITTSBURGH'S WIN IS MAJOR UPSET

Upsetting the dope bucket with the usual week-end regularity, the nation's gridiron teams went about their business with only a few of the many football contingents emerging unscathed last Saturday.

In the east Pittsburgh's victory over Notre Dame was the major upset, and the result of that triumph places the mighty Pitt coterie in the same rank as Columbia and Colgate.

Turning back Princeton, an intersectional foe, 14 to 7, Michigan still looks the class of the Big Ten, though Purdue and Minnesota loom as possible contenders. Minnesota's victory over Northwestern was the outstanding upset in that league.

Stanford Beaten Again

Replete with action and thrills, the Stanford-U.C.L.A. game gave the 80,000 fans something to rave about for the rest of the football season, the victor, California, now pacing the Pacific coast loop with Southern California.

Tennessee garnered a win at the expense of Duke in the closing minutes of the fray with a field goal to keep the Southern conference converted position along with Auburn, Louisiana State, Virginia Tech, and Vanderbilt.

How To Avoid BONERS

BACCHUS WAS A FAMOUS GREEK BOOTLEGGER

TRY to forgive him. Poor chap, he really means well, even if he does think his posterity is the thing he sits on!

If you're really sorry for Bill Boner, give him a pipe and some good tobacco. That will straighten him out—for a pipe filled with Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco clears the brain for straight thinking. As you know, Edgeworth was proved by a recent investigation to be the favorite smoking tobacco at 42 out of 54 leading colleges.

The college man likes that distinctive flavor that comes only from this blend of fine old burley. It's different. It's a soothing, relaxing sort of smoke that makes the job in hand just a little easier.

EDGEWORTH SMOKING TOBACCO

You can buy Edgeworth anywhere in two forms—Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed and Edgeworth Plug Slice. All sizes—15¢ pocket package to pound humidigr tin. Or—perhaps you'd like to try before you buy. Then write for a free sample packet. Address: Larus & Bro. Co., 120 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va.

FRIEDMAN BEATS LOTT TO CLINCH FALL NET TITLE

cautious brand of tennis, being content to seek each other's weaknesses and trying to outsteady each other. Lott, unable to cope with Friedman's lobs and soft shots resorted to a power game but to no avail. Each alternated on games won until Friedman broke through Lott's service to maintain a lead that he never relinquished.

The second set was the most hectic of the three, each player having set point only to see the other deadlock the set. Lott won the first game on his own service, but Friedman proceeded to rattle off five straight, making the score five games to one. Lott then put on an amazing rally, taking five straight games to lead six games to five. Both players followed service until the fifteenth game when Friedman broke through to make the score eight games to seven. The victor then proceeded to win his own service and with it the set.

Lott's Game Crumbles

After this heart-breaking set, Lott's game crumbled as Friedman put on pressure, and the victor easily took the third set, 6-2, to win the match and championship.

Both players are old rivals, having played against each other in several northern tourneys. Last year, Friedman defeated Lott in straight sets in the finals of the Pennsylvania State championship.
